16. Mr. Michael Jabez Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has to use national insurance numbers as a means of combating electoral fraud in Northern Ireland. [42018]

19. Jean Corston: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has to use national insurance numbers as a means of combating electoral fraud in Northern Ireland. [42021]

22. Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what recent discussions he has had with the Chief Electoral Officer for Northern Ireland on measures to combat electoral fraud. [42024]

Mr. Browne: Government amendments to the Electoral Fraud (Northern Ireland) Bill in the House of Lords enable national insurance numbers to be used in the electoral process in Northern Ireland.

A person applying to the electoral register in respect of an address in Northern Ireland will be required to give their national insurance number (or to make a statement that they do not have one). A person's name will be removed from the register in respect of any address if they return an application for registration in respect of that address without their national insurance number (or without a statement that they do not have one). Any person who provides false information on registration shall be liable on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months; or a fine not exceeding level five on the standard scale, or to both.

An application for an absent vote will be granted only if it states the applicant's national insurance number (or states that the applicant does not have one) and if the Chief Electoral Officer is satisfied that the national insurance number or statement on the application corresponds with the number or statement which the applicant gave on their application for registration.

The Chief Electoral Officer will be able to check the information given to him concerning an elector's national insurance number with the authority responsible for them (currently the Department for Work and Pensions).

Paramilitary Violence

17. Mr. Connarty: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps he is taking to reduce the incidents of punishment beatings and harassment of citizens by paramilitary organisations. [42019]

Jane Kennedy: These attacks are completely the opposite of what the Belfast Agreement was about. Those who sanction them and carry them out are the enemies of a transition to a peaceful society in Northern Ireland. Police investigate all such attacks but their investigations into these offences are often hampered, as the victims generally decline to make a formal complaint. Regrettably therefore prosecutions are therefore extremely rare.

The Government continue to support the police providing them with the resource they require, but it is also important that members of communities from which the perpetrators of these attacks emanate pass on relevant information to the police. This can be done in strict confidence using the Crimestoppers line.

Anti-drugs Campaigns

18. Mr. Hendrick: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what anti-drugs campaigns the police service in Northern Ireland runs in schools; and if he will make a statement. [42020]

24. Phil Sawford: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what anti-drugs campaigns the police service of Northern Ireland runs in schools; and if he will make a statement. [42026]

Jane Kennedy: The PSNI has developed the Citizen and Safety Education Programme (CASE), in an attempt to establish close links between the police and school community. Health education, which is one of the five elements of the CASE Programme, is delivered to Key Stage 2 and Key Stage 3 pupils, and focuses specifically on alcohol and the law, drugs and the law and solvent abuse.

In relation to the area of drugs and the law, students are provided with information on the various names that are given to drugs, the appearance of drugs through the use of a "Drugs Toolkit", which drugs are legal and illegal, the different categories of drugs, the effects that certain drugs can have on the body and which drugs are addictive. Students are also made aware of the penalties incurred for possession, production and/or trafficking of drugs.

Victims

20. Mr. Tom Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what recent discussions he has had with victims of terrorist violence in Northern Ireland; and if he will make a statement. [42022]

23. Mr. Woodward: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what recent discussions he has had with victims of terrorist violence in Northern Ireland on Government support for them; and if he will make a statement. [42025]

Mr. Browne: Since taking up my post as Northern Ireland Victims Minister I have met victims' groups on average twice a month. I am continuing my programme of visits to groups and I also meet regularly with practitioners and academics in the field.

Terrorism (Financing)

25. Mr. Anthony D. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what recent discussions there have been with the Irish Government on tackling the financing of terrorism in Northern Ireland. [42027]

Jane Kennedy: Ministers and officials meet regularly with their counterparts in the Irish Government to discuss issues of mutual concern including the financing of terrorist organisations.

Decommissioning

27. Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he expects the process of decommissioning of illegal weapons and explosives to be completed. [42029]

Jane Kennedy: The Independent International Commission on Decommissioning reported, on 23 October 2001, that it had witnessed an event, which it regarded as significant, in which the IRA had put a quantity of arms completely beyond use.

We now want to see further decommissioning by the IRA, and decommissioning by all other terrorist groups. The timing of any future decommissioning events is a matter for the IICD.

Police Manpower

30. Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the manpower strength is of police in Northern Ireland. [42032]

Jane Kennedy: At 15 February the full-time manpower strength was 9,296 officers. This includes 7,004 regular officers (plus 87 seconded to UN duty in Kosovo etc.) and 2,205 full-time reserve officers. In addition there were 1,014 part-time reservists.

Castlereagh Police Complex

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what action he intends to take in relation to the breach of security at Castlereagh police complex. [45326]

Dr. John Reid: I refer my hon. Friend to the statement I made in reply to the private notice question earlier today.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Unauthorised Pupil Absences

Mr. Moss: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many unauthorised absences there were (a) in absolute terms and (b) as a proportion of all absences, in (i) secondary and (ii) primary schools, broken down by local authority since 1997–98. [43301]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Tables showing the half days missed due to unauthorised absences in (a) absolute terms and (b) as a proportion of all absences in (i) maintained secondary schools and (ii) maintained primary schools by each local education authority in England since 1997–98 have been placed in the Library.

Pupil Information

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) whether her Department obtained the agreement of the Data Protection Commissioner for (a) the Pupil Level Annual Schools Census and (b) the Connexions Service's information gathering; [42132]

(2) under what powers the Pupil Level Annual Schools Census seeks to record the ethnicity of each pupil; and for how long that information may be recorded other than in aggregated form; [42141]

(3) to which (a) Government and (b) other agencies information in the Pupil Level Annual Schools Census may be passed (i) with and (ii) without the agreement of the individual data subject or his parents; [42142]

(4) what right individual pupils and parents have to decline to provide information to schools which may be passed on through the Pupil Level Annual Schools Census; and whether sanctions may be taken by (a) her Department and (b) local education authorities against schools which failed to obtain information from parents; [42144]

(5) which organisations she consulted on the introduction of PLASC; [42331]

(6) to what extent data subjects, their parents, have the right (a) to access to their information, (b) to correct that information and (c) to control access to that information on (i) PLASC and (ii) the Connexions databases; [42333]

(7) what information on (a) PLASC and (b) the Connexions national database is intended only for use by technical staff; [42335]

(8) if she will give instructions that ethnicity data on PLASC-originated database for all those whose ethnicity is identified as Jewish will be deleted on those pupils leaving school. [43350]

Mr. Timms [holding answer 11 March and 14 March 2002]:

Pupil Level Annual Schools Census (PLASC)

All information in PLASC about individual pupils, including their ethnicity, is collected from schools under Regulations laid under section 537A of the Education Act 1996, as amended by section 140(1), paragraph 153 of Schedule 30 to the School Standards and Framework Act 1998.

PLASC information will be used by the Department solely for statistical purposes. It remains of statistical value after pupils have left school—for example to monitor patterns of progression from school into further education and training, higher education and the labour market, and how these patterns vary between different groups of pupils, including different ethnic groups. In order to be able to derive such statistics PLASC information will be retained indefinitely on an individual pupil basis, as allowed by section 33 of the Data Protection Act 1998.

With respect to pupils' ethnicity, the ethnic groups used for PLASC in January 2002 were based on those from the 1991 national population Census, and from January 2003 will be based on those from the 2001 Census. In neither case is Jewish identified as a separate ethnic group, nor is there any other information in PLASC that identifies pupils as Jewish.

Relatively little of the information in PLASC is provided by pupils or parents—much of it will be known by the school from its own interactions with pupils, or will be received from other sources. The main items that are provided by pupils or parents (in addition to name, date of birth and home postcode) are ethnic group and first language. Schools should seek this information, but pupils or parents have the right to withhold it. Most schools already obtain this information routinely.

The White Paper "Excellence in Schools", published in July 1997, highlighted the need for much better pupil level information to be available throughout the schools sector in order to support the drive to raise standards, and also for a national system of "unique pupil numbers" (UPNs) to enable this information to be collated accurately on a pupil by pupil basis. A consultation document was issued in December 1997 with detailed proposals (including PLASC, UPNs and a central pupil database) addressing the issues raised by the White Paper. This document was sent to LEAs, teacher associations, church and religious organisations, governors' and parents' organisations, the Data Protection Registrar (as she was then), leading civil liberties organisations (Liberty and Charter 88), and a range of other interested organisations (including the Commission for Racial Equality). A summary of the document was also sent to all schools.

Before and after this consultation exercise the Department had meetings with the Data Protection Registrar and her officials, and a series of measures were agreed in respect of the issuing of UPNs, and their use in the collection and collation of pupil level data. These measures aimed to ensure compliance with the Data Protection Act, and minimise any possible threat to the privacy of pupils. The Department continues to discuss the use of UPNs and pupil level information with the Information Commissioner's Office as and when issues arise, and is also planning to discuss with her Office security arrangements for the forthcoming central pupil database.

The Department has no interest in the identity of individual pupils as such. Pupil names and UPNs are collected to enable PLASC information to be linked, pupil by pupil, with Key Stage and examination results which are collected separately, and from one year to the next. Technical staff engaged in this data linking will, for that purpose, need to have access to pupil names and UPNs. The linked data (without pupil names and UPNs) will then be used to carry out statistical analyses of attainment levels, and how these vary according to the various pupil attributes identified in PLASC.

Pupils, or in certain circumstances their parents or guardians, will be able to see the information held about them in the central database, and to ask for correction of any inaccurate data. Details of other organisations or individuals who may, subject to certain conditions, have access to data with pupil names were provided in my answer on 28 January 2002, Official Report, columns 109–11W to the hon. Member for Aylesbury (Mr. Lidington). Pupils and parents will not be able to control such access except in the case of the Connexions Service, where access will not be allowed if the pupil or their parent (depending on the pupil's age) has instructed that they do not wish it to happen, and in certain circumstances in the case of access by research organisations.

Connexions

The Department is in discussion with the Office of the Information Commissioner about the collection of information for Connexions.

There is as yet no national Connexions database containing information about individual young people. Connexions is delivered through local Connexions partnerships, of which 15 are operating at present. Each of these is responsible for the information it holds about young people in its area, and provides information to the Connexions Service National Unit in aggregate form only. We are examining what national approaches will be appropriate to support the work of local Connexions partnerships. Feasibility testing is at an early stage.

Young people have the right to see all information held about them by Connexions, and are able to request correction of any inaccurate data. They are not able to control access to Connexions partnerships' databases, but partnerships must ensure that all processing of information about young people complies with data protection principles.

Stolen Equipment

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, pursuant to the answer of 22 January 2002, Official Report, column 818–19W, on stolen equipment, whether the computer equipment stolen from her Department was (a) new and unused and (b) used; and what was the nature of the data stored on such items in each case. [42641]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Of the computer equipment stolen from the Department for Education and Skills since 1997, all but two were used. The remaining two new and unused were laptops stolen from a storeroom and were awaiting issue. None of the data on the computers was of a sensitive or personal nature.

Specialist Schools

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills when she expects to announce the schools which have been successful in their bids for specialist school status in the bidding round which involves bids being submitted before the 15 March deadline; and if she will make a statement. [43992]

Mr. Timms: We expect to announce the names of successful applicants in each of the eight specialisms from the March 2002 specialist school competition in early July.

Congestion Charging

Kate Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what estimate has been made of the effects of congestion charging on the recruitment of teachers in schools within the congestion charging zone in London. [44373]

Mr. Timms: No estimate has been made. We do not collect any information about the number of teachers who travel to work by car.

Kate Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what estimate she has made of the cost to a teacher over a year of the extra costs of congestion charging in London if they use a car to drive to work. [44374]

Mr. Timms: If a teacher were subject to congestion charging, the total cost over a full academic year would be £975.

Kate Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will allow teachers affected by congestion charges to be reimbursed the extra costs. [44375]

Mr. Timms: The School Teachers' Pay and Conditions document already allows schools and LEAs to make payments to teachers for travel expenses incurred in connection with their journey to and from work.

Public Services

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what meetings she has had, and representations she has received from Members of the National Assembly for Wales and the Welsh Assembly Executive regarding the increased use of private sector funding in delivering public services, broken down by date and subject. [43228]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: My Department has not met with representations from the Welsh Assembly Executive or Members of the National Assembly for Wales regarding the increased use of private sector funding in delivering public services.

Public Service Agreements

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will list the Public Service Agreement targets which have been revised and those which have been introduced since the publication of the 2001 departmental report. [43264]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: None of our Public Service Agreement targets have been revised, nor further ones introduced, since the publication of the 2001 departmental report. However, employment related targets have passed to the Department for Work and Pensions following machinery of Government changes last year.

Employment and Social Policy Council

Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the outcome was of the Employment and Social Policy Council held in Brussels on 7 March; what the Government's stance was on each issue discussed, including its voting record; and if she will make a statement. [42706]

Malcolm Wicks: I have been asked to reply.

I represented the UK at the Employment and Social Policy Council in Brussels on 7 March, together with the Minister of State for Employment Relations and the regions, my hon. Friend, the Member for Hull, West and Hessle (Alan Johnson).

The main business of this council was a debate in preparation for the forthcoming European Council in Barcelona. The Spanish Presidency issued its own conclusions. The UK supported the key themes of improved co-ordination of economic and employment policy and the importance of aligning the new European employment strategy with the Lisbon goal of full employment. Member states recognised the need to integrate disadvantaged groups, particularly older workers, into the labour market to achieve this goal and acknowledged the vital role played by life long learning in achieving the Lisbon targets.

Council also held an open debate on violence against women which formed the basis of Presidency conclusions for Barcelona. There was consensus on the need for a multi-disciplinary approach to this issue with broad agreement on the use of good practice guides and annual awareness raising campaigns at a European level. The forthcoming Danish Presidency will take forward this work in the context of the council's annual follow-up of the member states' implementation of their commitments under the Beijing Platform for Action, including discussions on the necessity for, and potential scope of, indicators in this field.

The Presidency sought an outline position on the proposal for a directive updating the existing directive on the protection of workers from the risks of exposure to asbestos, pending the adoption by the European Parliament of its First Reading opinion. After a debate, which hinged on a proposal to include a general ban on asbestos within the directive, the dossier was remitted to COREPER for further work.

The Council also heard a progress report on negotiations for the draft directive supplementing the proposed regulation for a Statute on a European Co-operative Society in respect of employee involvement. Work will continue on this dossier in COREPER.

Among the other agenda items discussed, the Council approved the work programmes for the Employment Committee and the Social Protection Committee for 2002.

The Presidency noted that the UN 2nd World Conference on Aging would be held in Madrid in April. A Commission communication will be produced as a contribution shortly.

The Presidency reported on a series of seminars and events that have taken place since the beginning of their Presidency.

No votes were taken at this Council.

TRANSPORT, LOCAL GOVERNMENT AND THE REGIONS

Gipsy Sites

Linda Perham: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions when he will announce the results of the latest round of the gipsy site refurbishment grant. [45475]

Ms Keeble: 86 bids were submitted by local authorities for round 2 of the gipsy site refurbishment grant. I can today announce approval for the 57 bids. Funding for the successful bids totals £6.1 million.

The existing network of local authority owned gipsy sites represents a valuable resource for gipsies. This injection of funding, following on from round 1 of the programme, will further help local authorities extend the useful life of sites, bring them into full use and improve the quality of life for residents.

I have arranged for a list showing the successful and unsuccessful bids to be placed in the Library of the House.

Disabled Facilities Grants

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what plans he has to exempt disabled facilities grants for children from the test of resources. [43944]

Ms Keeble: We have no plans to change the present arrangements where the disabled facilities grant test of resources is applied to the person or persons responsible for a child or young person.

Liquid Petroleum Gas

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions (1) what the average cost is in the UK of a liquid petroleum gas conversion kit for vehicles; [43092]

(2) how many vehicles registered in the UK run on liquid petroleum gas; [43091]

(3) what training is (a) available and (b) required for people wishing to convert their cars to run on liquid petroleum gas using LPG conversion kits. [43093]

Mr. Jamieson: All vehicles converted to run on LPG must comply with the requirements of the Road Vehicles (Construction and Use) Regulations 1986. Conversions which result in significantly reduced emissions are eligible for Government grants under the Powershift programme, which is administered by the Energy Saving Trust. To be eligible for a grant, conversions must be done by Powershift approved converters, whose competence is tested by the trust. The DTI has recently announced a new £1 million programme, called "LPG Boost", to further enhance the uptake of LPG, including grants to help additional conversion specialists undertake the technical training and meet the competencies for becoming Powershift approved converters, and so increase the network of approved converters.

The additional cost of converting a vehicle to run on LPG is typically between £1,500 and £2,000.

DVLA statistics record 26,694 vehicles as running on gaseous fuels. DVLA statistics do not distinguish between liquefied petroleum gas (LPG) and natural gas vehicles, but most of the vehicles are LPG-fuelled cars—natural gas is used mainly in heavy goods vehicles, and the numbers are smaller. The DVLA figure is also an underestimate, since not all motorists notify DVLA of their vehicle's conversion. There are currently estimated to be around 65,000 LPG vehicles in the UK. Motorists are converting to LPG at an increasing rate, with the number expected to increase by about 35,000 for 2002 and 50,000 in 2003, prompted by the Government grants available, and the fact that low-cost LPG fuel is now available in all areas of the country.

Stolen Equipment

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions, pursuant to the answer of 29 January 2002, Official Report, columns 182 and 184W, on stolen equipment, whether the computer equipment stolen from his Department was (a) new and unused and (b) used; and what was the nature of the data stored on such items in each case. [42648]

Dr. Whitehead: The information requested is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. It is the policy of the Department that thefts of computer equipment should be reported to the police. The Department also records such thefts in the Incident Reporting and Alert Scheme (UNIRAS) at the National Infrastructure Security Co-ordination Centre (NISCC) and encourages its agencies to do likewise.

Management Consultants

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what the cost was to his Department and its predecessor of management consultants in (a) 1997–98 and (b) 2000–01. [43629]

Mr. Byers [holding answer 15 March 2002]: My Department does not hold information specifically on management consultants. To do so would incur disproportionate costs.

Age Discrimination

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what his Department's policy is towards age discrimination. [42579]

Dr. Whitehead: Discrimination on the grounds of age is not permitted under the Department's equal opportunities policy.

British Seafarers

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what impact (a) the Support for Maritime Training Scheme and (b) the Tonnage Tax have had on the training and employment of British seafarers, and by what performance indicators that impact is measured. [44053]

Mr. Jamieson: Since the introduction of the Support for Maritime Training scheme (SMarT) in 1998, approximately 480 cadets a year have received training under the scheme. The forecast for the financial year 2001–02 is 500. In addition a significant of seafarers were also involved in gaining second Certificates of Competency or revalidations.

To date, 58 groups of companies, including the 50 approved by the Inland Revenue for entry into tonnage tax, have received approval by the DTLR of their training commitments. This equates to about 508 training places.

Harbour Boards

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions by what means nominations were sought for places on harbour boards on the Isle of Wight; how many appointments he has made to such bodies since 1997; who the appointees were; and what were their terms of office. [43353]

Ms Keeble [pursuant to her reply, 14 March 2002, c. 1203W]: my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State is not responsible for any appointments to harbour boards on the Isle of Wight. Vacancies on the boards of trust ports are advertised in the local and regional press.

Tonnage Tax Scheme

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what assessment he has made of the terms and conditions of foreign seafarers being switched to the red ensign under the tonnage tax scheme. [44401]

Mr. Jamieson: For ships joining the UK Shipping Register the Maritime and Coastguard Agency checks crew agreements to ensure that they comply with the International Labour Organisation (ILO) convention on articles of agreement, and also comply with relevant UK Merchant Shipping legislation. Guidance is set out in Marine Guidance Note 148.

Maritime Assets

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many national maritime assets have been sold since 1997. [43964]

Mr. Jamieson: The Maritime and Coastguard Agency has disposed of 28 properties, including cottages, redundant garages and small parcels of land since 1997. The total receipts from the sales came to £500,000.

Fishing Boat Accidents

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what investigations his Department has carried out following the two fishing boat accidents in the Irish sea on 31 January and 14 February; what the results have been of those investigations; and what further action will be taken to ensure that action plans are in place in fishing ports to address similar accidents in the future. [44478]

Mr. Jamieson: The Marine Accident Investigation Branch (MAIB) was informed that the first fishing vessel had had an accident on 30 January and initiated an investigation the following day. The branch became aware that the second fishing vessel was missing on 15 February and, using an inspector who happened to be in Northern Ireland at the time progressing the first investigation, initiated inquiries the same day.

Both investigations are on-going. The MAIB aims to publish accident reports within nine months of the event. There is every expectation this will be achieved in the first accident but may well be longer in the second as there has been no sign of the missing vessel since she sailed. Without any direct evidence to explain what occurred, the investigation is likely to take longer.

The MAIB investigates about 3 per cent. of all accidents reported to it. When the decision has been taken to carry one out, inspectors will take whatever action they consider most suitable in the circumstances. This process has stood the test of time and there are no plans to make any substantial changes to the existing arrangements. All investigations result in a report being made publicly available.

It is not be possible to predict what recommendations will arise from the two investigations, but they will be made public.

EU State Aid

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what assessment he has made of the operation of EU state aid rules on the encouragement of national flag shipping and seafarer employment. [43594]

Mr. Jamieson: The Government have made an assessment which will shortly be submitted to the European Commission as part of their consultation on revising the state aid guidelines.

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will make a statement on how EC state aid can be released to benefit regeneration initiatives in renewal areas. [43488]

Ms Keeble: Nearly £130 million of European funding has this week been awarded to large scale regeneration projects in the West Midlands with a further £33 million earmarked for projects in Staffordshire and the north Black Country, once proposals can be worked up.

Regeneration projects—drawn up by local authorities, Advantage West Midlands and various local partners—have been clustered together into "packages", to ensure a co-ordinated, strategic approach to the regeneration of the West Midlands.

Two of the packages—for the north Black Country/south Staffordshire and for north Staffordshire—have had £16.5 million and £16.9 million earmarked for them respectively, while RDA Advantage West Midlands and consultants working on behalf of GOWM help the partnerships get the proposals into final shape.

Additionally, some £30 million of European funding has been approved outside the regeneration packages. This is currently under offer to enable projects to get under way.

Short Sea Shipping

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what steps his Department plans to take to support the United Kingdom short sea shipping sector. [43592]

Mr. Jamieson: The Government recognise that operators in the short sea trades are at a disadvantage compared with those in the deep sea sector. They are, therefore, considering a proposal by the industry for a short sea shipping employment grant to encourage employment in the short sea sector.

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what assessment has been made of the effects of introducing a short sea shipping employment grant. [43591]

Mr. Jamieson: Ministers have considered a proposal for the introduction of short sea shipping employment grant. The parties involved have been requested to forward more information on how such a grant would help to generate more UK seafarer employment.

Crew Relief Costs

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what proposals he has to extend the crew relief costs scheme. [43593]

Mr. Jamieson: We are committed to extending the crew relief costs scheme to cover European ports. This will be implemented by legislation when parliamentary time is available.

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what assessment he has made of the need to extend seafarer income tax concessions and the crew relief cash scheme. [43648]

Mr. Jamieson: Seafarer income tax concessions are a matter for the Chancellor. We are committed to extending the crew relief costs scheme to cover European ports. This will be implemented by legislation when parliamentary time is available.

Transport Grant

Ms Buck: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what level of transport grant he had set for the Greater London Authority for 2001–02. [45268]

Mr. Spellar: GLA transport grant is determined annually, and may be varied from time to time, after consultation with the Mayor of London under section 101 of the GLA Act 1999. The Secretary of State has today redetermined the level of grant for 2001–02 at £720,053,000. This represents an increase of £5,665,000.

Local Transport Plans

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what assessment he has made of individual PTAs' effectiveness in consulting local communities and key stakeholders on development of the objectives and strategies of their LTPs. [44376]

Ms Keeble: Local transport plans (LTPs) for the metropolitan areas in England outside London are produced jointly between the Passenger Transport Authority and the relevant metropolitan district authorities.

Our guidance to authorities on LTPs sets out a range of detailed criteria against which each LTP is assessed. Within the detailed criteria on objective setting and strategy development, we asked authorities for evidence that the public were fully involved in the development of the plans objectives and strategies. We also make clear in our guidance on LTP annual progress reports that authorities should report on their proposals for consultation on the detailed implementation of their LTPs.

We are satisfied that the LTPs for all the metropolitan areas have followed the requirements of our guidance and have involved the public in both the development and implementation of their plans.

Golden Jubilee

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions (1) what initiatives he will take to influence the public to travel via mass transit into London during Her Majesty the Queen's Golden Jubilee weekend; and if he will make a statement; [44601]

(2) what steps will be taken to increase the operation of (a) buses, (b) trains and (c) other forms of mass transport in the week of Her Majesty the Queen's Golden Jubilee; and if he will make a statement. [44600]

Mr. Jamieson: The Government are currently discussing with public transport providers, including those providing services into London, their plans for Her Majesty the Queen's Golden Jubilee weekend. Further information will be announced nearer the time, including any advice to travellers that may be appropriate.

London Underground

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what progress London Underground Ltd. has made in addressing the safety issues the Health and Safety Executive has raised with LUL concerning their proposed railway safety case for the running of London Underground under the proposed public private partnership. [44603]

Mr. Jamieson: I understand that the Health and Safety Executive has received London Underground Ltd.'s formal response on the issues raised. Under the safety case regime, which is an iterative process, HSE will take the time it needs to determine whether the issues have been satisfactorily closed out.

Rail Tracks

Dr. Pugh: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions (1) what information the DTLR holds on the fault and repair reporting procedures in place for the various grades of rail track; [44357]

(2) what information the DTLR holds on the inspection procedures currently followed for the various grades of rail track. [44356]

Mr. Jamieson: These are operational matters for Railtrack plc in Railway Administration, which remains subject to regulation by the Health and Safety Executive in respect of health and safety; and by the Rail Regulator in respect of its network operation, maintenance and renewal practices.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what the Government's responsibilities are with regard to ensuring rail track safety; and if he will make a statement. [44604]

Mr. Jamieson: Railtrack plc (in Railway Administration), as the infrastructure dutyholder, has responsibility for ensuring track safety. The Health and Safety Executive's Railway Inspectorate secures compliance with health and safety legislation. Railtrack's network licence, issued by the Office of the Rail Regulator, requires it to use best practice in its maintenance of track safety on the network.

Railway Research

Dr. Pugh: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions who is responsible for initiating railway research programmes. [44354]

Mr. Jamieson: The Directions and Guidance to the Strategic Rail Authority issued in draft by my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State in June 2001 would require the authority to "encourage and as appropriate commission research related to its purposes and objectives." We expect to issue the final version of the Directions and Guidance very shortly.

Trans European Network

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will list the bids, and their value submitted from Britain to the European Union since 1997 for funding as part of the Trans European Network for (a) road and (b) rail projects. [43048]

Mr. Jamieson: Information on UK bids for funding under the trans-European Network grants regime is commercially sensitive. The attached table shows the amount of grant that has been allocated to the UK since 1997, for the improvement of road and rail infrastructure.

National Air Traffic Services

Mr. Pound: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions, pursuant to the answer of 25 February 2002, Official Report, column 807W, if he will make a statement on financial support to National Air Traffic Services. [45557]

Mr. Byers: A short-term loan facility for National Air Traffic Services has now been agreed. It is for a maximum of £60 million over the period to 30 September 2002, £30 million of which is to be provided by the Government and the other £30 million by a group of four lending banks. Each party will lend on the same commercial terms. Its purpose is to relieve NATS' cash-flow position until arrangements are put in place to secure the long-term financial stability of the company following the unprecedented events of 11 September 2001.

Air Passenger Flights

Mr. Lazarowicz: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many civil passenger flights have taken place to and from each airport in the United Kingdom in (a) 2001 and (b) each of the preceding four years; and who the (i) owners and (ii) operators of each such airport were. [43863]

Mr. Jamieson: Details of civil passenger flights to and from each airport in the United Kingdom in 2001 and each of the preceding four years is contained in Table A which has been placed in the Libraries of the House.

The Department does not hold information about UK airport owners and operators going back over the previous four years. This could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. Table B, which has also been placed in the Libraries of the House, reflects our understanding of the current position, based on data compiled from a wide variety of sources.

Airports (Landing Charges)

Mr. Lazarowicz: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what landing charges (a) are imposed and (b) have been imposed in each of the preceding four years for each civil airport in the United Kingdom operated by (i) BAA and (ii) each of the other airport operators. [43861]

Mr. Jamieson: Those airports subject to economic regulation by the Civil Aviation Authority notify CAA of the different airport charges levied at their airport. Landing charges are one of these. However, they vary for different categories of aircraft (eg by aircraft noise); by aircraft weight categories and sometimes by time of day. They may also include airport navigation charges. The resources required to process and collate the information on landing charges data for all airport operators, and in a form which would allow useful comparisons between airports, would be disproportionate and not show the level of the total airport charge.

The revenue from airport charges is published for about 30 airports by the Centre for the study of Regulated Industries (CRI) in their statistical series "Airport Statistics". This publication also includes passenger number so it would be possible to derive the annual revenue from airport charges per passenger for these airports.

Mr. Lazarowicz: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what factors the Civil Aviation Authority is required to take account of when considering applications from airport operators for increases in landing charges. [43864]

Mr. Jamieson: There are three categories of airport in respect of airport charges.

Airports with more than one million passengers each year are subject to economic regulation by the Civil Aviation Authority (CAA) and require their permission to levy charges. Below this threshold, airports are able to levy airport charges without permission. For the 'designated' airports of BAA's London airports and for Manchester airport, this permission is also subject to conditions regarding the maximum amounts that may be levied.

For the non-designated economically regulated airports with permission to levy charges, CAA are notified of the airport charges to be levied by the airport operator but they do not play a part in determining these.

For the designated airports of BAA's London airports and of Manchester airport, the conditions imposed by CAA are the result of an extensive process every five years to set the maximum annual airport charge for the following five years. In doing this, CAA take account of their statutory objectives listed in Section 39 of the 1986 Airports Act. This price cap has been expressed in terms of the average revenue from airport charges per passenger (revenue yield). Provided the annual airport charges set each year by the airport operator would not be expected to result in the price cap being exceeded, CAA are not involved in their determination.

English Partnerships Review

Geraint Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions when he proposes to announce the outcome of stage one of the review of English Partnerships; and if he will make a statement. [45052]

Ms Keeble: Today we are announcing the outcome of the first stage of the current review of English Partnerships (EP), together with appointment of the new chair of the organisation.

The new chair of English Partnerships is to be Margaret Ford. She has extensive experience in economic development and of working with Government organisations within the UK and internationally. She has particular experience of leading organisations though periods of considerable change. We are confident that Margaret Ford is the right person to lead EP into its new role.

EP will become the Secretary of State's expert adviser on brownfield regeneration, managing a national portfolio of strategic sites, and managing demonstration projects. EP will work with national, regional and local partners, especially the RDAs, and the private sector, to identify strategic brownfield land, prioritise and facilitate its development. There is a continuing remit for EP as a national public sector body and as a vital component of the Government's programme for achieving an Urban Renaissance.

To sharpen the organisation's focus on brownfield regeneration, we intend EP progressively to transfer their non-strategic Commission for the New Towns (CNT) landholdings to other appropriate bodies, for example the local authority.

In the spirit of the two Green Papers we published last year setting out fundamental changes to local government and the planning system, EP will relinquish the use of their planning powers in the former new town areas, bringing control over the development of these areas under the democratic control of their local councils. This will be a staged process.

As part of stage two of review, we want to resolve the problems that have arisen in the past from the dual statutory function of the former Urban Regeneration Agency and the Commission for the New Towns. This will give EP a common purpose and help them in taking forward their changed agenda.

I am today placing in the Library of the House the report on stage one of the review, including the KPMG consultation report and key areas to be addressed in stage two. There is still important work to be done and we will continue to listen to and work with the widest range of interested organisations.

Brownfield Sites

Ms Shipley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what proposals he has to promote the development of brownfield sites. [40355]

Ms Keeble: The development of brownfield sites is a key priority for my Department. It underpins our policy for the revival of our towns and cities and for achieving more sustainable patterns of development.

We are radically overhauling the planning system so it helps promote economic prosperity by delivering land for development in the right place at the right time. Our planning policy guidance for housing (PPG3) sets out an "urban brownfields first policy" as we want to conserve greenfield land.

Planning Policy is directing private sector development towards brownfield land, and measures are in place within the development control and local plan system to ensure this. For instance, local authorities must reassess greenfield sites that have been previously identified in their local plans for development, and they must thoroughly re-appraise applications for the renewal of planning permission on such sites. Regional and local planning strategies are expected to focus new housing development where brownfield sites are available. The Department is also promoting a greater use of Compulsory Purchase Orders (CPOs) to assemble brownfield sites that are in multiple ownership.

The public sector also has a direct role to play, and in this respect the Department has a Public Service Agreement target under which it aims to:

". . Ensure that brownfield land will be reclaimed at a rate of over 1,100 hectares per annum by 2004 (reclaiming 5 per cent. of current brownfield land by 2004 and 17 per cent. by 2010)"

The reclamation of over 1,100 hectares is specifically for the Regional Development Agencies and English Partnerships to achieve. With a forecast output of 1,200 ha for this year, they are on course to exceed it.

Within the Corporate Planning process, an annual target for brownfield land reclamation is being agreed with each RDA. DTLR officials will be monitoring and encouraging progress.

There are many examples of RDA involvement in the successful redevelopment of brownfield sites. For instance, the South East RDA is continuing the earlier work of English Partnerships in redeveloping the former Royal Naval Dockyard at Chatham Maritime in Kent, with a sustainable mixed development at this 140 ha site. The North West Development Agency is to develop a high quality business park in North Manchester, thereby bringing 25 ha of brownfield land back into use. Dursley and Gloucester Docks are sustainable mixed-use developments being undertaken by the South West of England RDA.

The Government are aware that the withdrawal of the Partnership Investment Programme, and its replacement with schemes of a more limited application, has restricted RDAs and EP in their ability to use the private sector in delivering brownfield land regeneration. To improve the flexibility of Government agencies in this regard, the Government:

Have made significant extra resources available to RDAs to take sites into public ownership and develop them directly

Have recently notified to the European Commission a new scheme for involving the private sector in housing schemes

Is engaged in discussions with the Commission and other member states about brownfield regeneration within the context to State Aid rules.

Housing

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions, pursuant to the answer of 13 March 2002, Official Report, column 1082W, on housing, what assessment he has made of whether Birmingham city council's assessment of likely future demand, the rate at which properties will be re-let and proposals for new build is sufficiently robust to ensure that homelessness in the city will not rise as a result of proposed demolitions. [44423]

Ms Keeble: This formed part of the assessment of Birmingham city council's application for a place on the housing transfer programme.

Subsidence (London)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what recent assessment he has made of the threat to buildings and subterranean structures in London posed by sinking ground levels. [43811]

Ms Keeble: The intensity of subsidence reported in the press is very minor and is unlikely to cause damage. It is several orders of magnitude less than that experienced in the coalfields and damage is much more likely to occur from shrinking and swelling of clay subsoils in London than from subsidence at the level reported.

Subsidence from tunnelling operations is well known and it is taken into account in the design of tunnelling operations. Where necessary, such operations include mitigation measures to reduce the effects of subsidence to below the level likely to cause damage. The levels reported from the Jubilee Line extension are consistent with those recorded by monitoring subsidence during and after construction.

Right to Buy

Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will place in the Library copies of the responses to the Housing Green Paper "Quality and Choice: A Decent Home For All" that made reference to the right to buy. [44452]

Ms Keeble: Details of responses to the Housing Green Paper are set out in "Quality and Choice: A decent home for all. Summary of Responses". This is already available in the Library or can be freely downloaded from the DTLR website at the following address: http://www.housing.dtlr.gov.uk/information/consult/responses/summary/pdf/greenpap.pdf.

168 responses made reference to the right to buy. Arrangements are being made for copies of these responses to be collated and placed in the Library, except where the authors requested that their comments should not be released.

Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many former local authority properties sold to tenants under the right to buy scheme have subsequently been bought back by those local authorities in each Government Office region (a) in each year since 1980 and (b) in each quarter since April 1999. [44454]

Ms Keeble: Information reported to the Department on the repurchase of ex-council properties is presented as follows. Information prior to 1995–96 was not collected centrally.

Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of the Local Authorities (Capital Finance) (Amendment) Regulations 1999 (S.I. No. 501) in encouraging local authorities to buy back properties previously sold to tenants under the right to buy scheme. [44455]

Ms Keeble: The incentive is voluntary, and involves agreement being reached between landlords and owners/ leaseholders. We are monitoring the use made by local authorities of the incentive offered by these regulations. Our figures indicate that last year (2000–01) local authorities in England bought back just over 200 properties.

Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what information his Department has collated on the number of ex-local authority properties in London in which the leaseholder is a tenant who originally purchased the lease under the right to buy scheme. [44453]

Ms Keeble: The Department does not collect this information on its regular statistical returns. However, results derived from the 2000–01 Survey of English Housing indicate that some 62,000 householders in flats in London had purchased their present property since 1981 under the right to buy scheme from the local authority.

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what the timetable is for the laying of orders, planning procedures and construction in respect of the A303 (T) relating to (a) Winterbourne Stoke Bypass, (b) the Amesbury to Berwick Down improvement scheme, (c) the Countess Roundabout flyover and Stonehenge Visitors Centre access and (d) the Folly Bottom interchange. [44429]

Mr. Jamieson: The Highways Agency is planning to publish draft orders for the A303 Stonehenge Improvement in December 2002. This scheme, formerly known as the Amesbury to Berwick Down Improvement, incorporates a bypass of Winterbourne Stoke and a flyover at Countess Roundabout. Subject to the making of statutory orders, it is intended that construction will start in the spring of 2005.

The agency proposes to publish the made orders for the Folly Bottom interchange in April 2002. Preliminary works are expected to start in June 2002 and the main works in September 2002.

The Stonehenge Visitors Centre is the responsibility of English Heritage who will in due course be discussing access arrangements with the Highways Agency.

M42

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions when the concrete sections of the M42 will be covered with low noise road surfacing. [44076]

Mr. Jamieson: I have asked the chief executive of the Highways Agency, Tim Matthews, to write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Mr. Tim Matthews to Mr. Brian Jenkins, dated 20 March 2002:

The Transport Minister, David Jamieson has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about resurfacing the concrete sections of the M42 with low noise material.

There are three remaining lengths of concrete surfacing on the M42: junctions 2 to 3A, junctions 9 to 10 and junctions 3A to 4.

The Government's Ten Year Plan for Transport said that all concrete roads would be resurfaced with quieter surfacing materials by 2010 and in line with that we aim to resurface the road between Junctions 2 and 3A early in 2003 and between 9 and 10 in 2004/05.

Resurfacing the road between junctions 3A and 4 will be done after we have introduced the Active Traffic Management Project in 2004. I am afraid I cannot give you a precise date.

If you would like any further information, the Agency's Route Manager for the M42, David Nock, would be pleased to help. He can be contacted at the Agency's office at Broadway, Broad Street, Birmingham, B15 1BL or by telephone on 0121 678 8362.

Buses

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions (1) what regulations there are on the installation of (a) radio, (b) alarm and (c) CCTV systems into buses; [43963]

(2) what steps is he taking to prevent assaults against bus crews on public services; and if he will make a statement; [43960]

(3) what guidance is given to bus operators on offering employees professional counselling after they have suffered work-related violence; [43957]

(4) what requirements are placed on bus operators to keep in good order bus radio and alarm systems; [43962]

(5) what guidance he has issued on risk assessments to be carried out by bus operators on the risk of violence to bus crews. [43955]

Ms Keeble: The Secretary of State will shortly issue guidance to bus operators and other interested parties on reducing crime against passengers and crew, on buses and at stops and interchanges. This will update existing guidance on protecting bus crews and guidelines to operators on personal security on public transport. The new guidance will include advice on the installation, maintenance and repair of on-board equipment, which could help prevent crime. Professional counselling of employees is a matter for the operating companies.

Mobile Phones

Janet Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what measures he plans to take to encourage greater awareness among the motoring public of the dangers of using mobile phones when driving. [44609]

Mr. Jamieson: To reinforce the message in the Highway Code, the Department is currently preparing new publicity to be launched this spring, as part of its "Think!" campaign, to raise awareness of the dangers of using mobile phones when driving.

Janet Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he plans to review the legislative framework regarding the use of mobile phones when driving. [44608]

Mr. Jamieson: The Government are satisfied that current legislation provides the police with sufficient powers to enable them to prosecute irresponsible drivers. However, in accordance with our Road Safety Strategy "Tomorrow's roads—safer for everyone", we will keep the need for new legislation under review.

Janet Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions (1) what assessment he has made of the dangers relating to driving when using (a) hand-held and (b) hands-free mobile phones; [44614]

(2) what research his Department is undertaking into the dangers relating to the use of mobile phones when driving. [44615]

Mr. Jamieson: The Department is satisfied that there is clear evidence of an increased risk of an accident when using any type of mobile phone while driving. International research has established that the increased risk of an accident arises from the distracting effects of holding a telephone conversation rather than from just driving with one hand on the wheel. Further research, commissioned within the Mobile Telecommunications and Health Research Programme towards the end of last year, is under way to measure the distraction from hands-free phones in comparison to other common driver distractions such as talking with passengers or tuning the radio.

BAC Limit

Dr. Ladyman: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what plans he has to change the legal BAC limit for motorists. [45267]

Mr. Jamieson: There are no plans to make a change in the foreseeable future. The limit will stay at 80 milligrams of alcohol per 100 millilitres of blood. The Government consulted on this in 1998 and waited upon proposals from Europe before considering the matter further. No firm legislation was forthcoming from the European Union although the European Commission produced a Recommendation which, among other measures, recommended community wide harmonisation of the legal blood alcohol content (BAC) limit for motorists at 50mg. We have now considered whether it would be desirable to make such a change and concluded that we should maintain emphasis on enforcement and publicity. In reaching this decision the Government were mindful of the fact that our penalties are among the toughest in Europe. But we remain committed to combating drink-driving and support more research and collaboration at a European level.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Criminal Damage

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the cost has been of criminal damage to her Department's buildings in each of the last four years. [44833]

Ms Hewitt: My Department does not keep a separate record of the cost of criminal damage to its buildings. The information requested could be produced only at disproportionate cost.

European Bank for Reconstruction and Development

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when she last met (a) the President and (b) the UK Director of the European Bank for Reconstruction and Development. [40375]

Ms Hewitt: I have had no meetings with the President or UK Director of the European Bank for Reconstruction and Development.

Post Office

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what powers she has to extend the Postcomm consultation on the opening of bulk mail delivery to competition beyond 15 March; and what the policies of other European Union member states are on the opening of bulk mail delivery to competition. [40554]

Mr. Alexander: The timetable for Postcomm's consultation on its document proposals for effective competition in UK postal services is a matter for Postcomm. On 13 March Postcomm announced that it had decided to extend—to Friday 12 April—the date for comments on its proposals.

The policies of other EU member states on market opening are a matter for them, providing they are acting in accordance with EU legislation.

Small Business Service

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry following the recommendation of the Small Business Council report, what plans the Government have for the reallocation of resources (a) to and (b) within the Small Business Service. [36978]

Nigel Griffiths: The Government, in their 2002 Spending Review will consider the level of resources, and broad internal allocation, for the SBS for the period from April 2003 to March 2006. The Spending Review will be informed by the Government's review of services for small business. The allocation of resources within the SBS for 2002–03 is being considered as the Business Plan for this year is developed.

Timber

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will list the companies from which her Department has obtained timber and wood products and the total spent with each firm over the last five years. [43410]

Ms Hewitt: All Departmental furniture is currently purchased through suppliers approved by the Office of Government Commerce. As part of their service level agreement with my Department the OGC undertake that all their approved suppliers comply with all relevant public procurement regulations and directives. More detailed information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Non-Governmental Organisations

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, pursuant to her answer of 8 March 2002, Official Report, column 592W, what information she collates on the funding of non-Governmental organisations by her Department, with particular reference to those operating on a regional basis; and if she will make a statement. [43917]

Ms Hewitt: My Department does not hold information centrally on the amount of funding it provides to the charitable or voluntary sectors by region.

Overall information on Government funding of the voluntary sector can be found in the Home Office research publication "Central Government Funding of Voluntary and Community Organisations 1982–83 to 1999–2000", copies of which are in the Libraries of the House. This includes information on the proportion of that funding provided by my Department.

Patent Office

Derek Twigg: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what targets she has set the Patent Office, for 2002–03. [45051]

Miss Melanie Johnson: I have set the Patent Office the following targets for 2002–03:

Patents

1. To increase performance year on year so that 90 per cent. of search reports are issued within six months of request by 2005–06.

2. To grant 90 per cent. of patents within three years of request.

Designs

3. To register 90 per cent. of correctly filed design applications, to which no substantive objections have been raised, within three months of the date of application.

Trade Marks

4. To register 90 per cent. of processed trade mark class applications, to which no substantive objections are raised or oppositions filed within nine months of application.

5. To reduce to an average of 39 weeks the time taken to issue a decision in trade mark inter partes cases once the case is ready.

Policy

6. To publish details of progress towards key milestones in UK and international policy development in the annual report and on our website.

Efficiency Targets

7. To increase output in relation to current expenditure by an average of at least 2 per cent. per annum over the period 1998–99 to 2002–03.

In addition to these key targets:

Customer Service Standards

To meet our customer service standards as shown in the annual report and on our website at www.patent.gov.uk

Finance

The Office will pay 100 per cent. of bills within 30 days of receipt of goods or services or a valid invoice, whichever is the later.

Questions delegated to the Chief Executive

The Chief Executive will reply within 10 working days to all letters from Members of Parliament delegated to her for reply.

Stolen Equipment

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, pursuant to her answer of 24 January 2002, Official Report, column 1071W, on stolen equipment, whether the computer equipment stolen from her Department was (a) new and unused and (b) used; and what was the nature of the data stored on such items in each case. [42639]

Ms Hewitt: The following table identifies whether the IT equipment identified as stolen from my Department in my previous answer was new or used. In addition and where known, the table also shows the nature of the data held on the stolen equipment.

Where the equipment is shown as not belonging to DTI, it would have held software and data belonging to the owning company rather than DTI.

Scientific and Engineering Institutions

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans she has to review her Department's funding support to the scientific and engineering learned institutions; and if she will make a statement. [43580]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 19 March 2002]: My Department provides an annual grant in aid to both the Royal Society and the Royal Academy of Engineering from the science budget, mainly for fellowships and international exchanges. This funding is reviewed, together with the other components of the science budget, at each Government Spending Review.

My officials also meet the Executive Secretaries and other members of staff of each body approximately quarterly to review progress in respect of grant in aid funded programmes, and to discuss other matters of common interest.

Broadly comparable arrangements cover funding to other learned societies from the Research Councils. However, the sums involved are small, and do not come directly through the science budget. Examples of these would include the Institute of Physics and the Royal Society of Chemistry, which receive funds from the Engineering and Physical Sciences Research Council for workshops, summer schools, and conferences.

My Department is also considering a programme of support for funding projects to be undertaken by the Engineering and Technology Board.

Engineers

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many chartered engineers there are in her Department; and what grade they hold. [43578]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 19 March 2002]: The number of chartered engineers recorded on the Department's personnel database is listed by grade in the table.

Range	Number
Senior civil service	1
Range 11	3
Range 10	10
Range 9	3

The figures do not include any chartered engineers who may be working in the Department who are not currently in the database. This includes staff in the Construction Industry Directorate whose full records have yet to be transferred from their previous Department.

UK Exporters (North and Central America)

Mr. Peter Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many inquiries were dealt with from potential United Kingdom exporters by the trade desks at United Kingdom embassies in (a) the USA, (b) Canada and (c) Mexico in the last 12 months. [41923]

Nigel Griffiths [holding answer 11 March 2002]: Overseas posts in the USA, Canada and Mexico do not record information on the number of initial inquiries for their markets from potential British exporters. However a new information system will record such information in future.

Individual Voluntary Arrangements

Mr. Woodward: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many individual voluntary arrangements commenced in 2001. [43647]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 19 March 2002]: There were 6,298 individual voluntary arrangements commenced in 2001.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Public-private Partnerships (Consultants)

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what the total external spending by her Department was on public-private partnership consultants in each of the last four years; how many full-time equivalent consultants were employed over this period; how many billed consultancy days there were per year; what the implied average cost of each PPP consultant was; how many consultancy firms were used by her Department over this period; and if she will make a statement. [43198]

Hilary Benn: DFID has engaged consultants to help on the public-private partnership with the Commonwealth Development Corporation. Annual spending and the number of consultancy firms are given in the table. The other information requested is not obtainable without disproportionate effort.

Belize

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development for what reasons she has decided not to grant debt relief under the Commonwealth Debt Initiative to Belize; when this decision was taken; for what reasons Belize has not met the criteria under the Commonwealth Debt Initiative; if she has scheduled further discussions between her Department and the Government of Belize on this issue; and if she will make a statement. [43472]

Hilary Benn: Belize was considered for CDI under the three basic CDI criteria—commitment to pro-poor policies, promotion of responsive and accountable government; and application of macro-economic policies to encourage sustainable development. Although some progress had been made in implementing commitments in relation to the first two criteria, on the third criterion my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for International Development shared the concerns set out in the IMF Article IV report from April 2001, particularly in terms of significant increases in external commercial debt levels and the widening public sector deficit. Against this background she concluded that Belize had not fulfilled the CDI criteria. There is provision for a further review later this year.

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will place in the Library a copy of the correspondence sent by her Department on 26 June 2001 to KPMG on its study commissioned by her Department of the regulation of offshore financial services in Belize and the effect of tax exemptions on pro-poor programmes; and if she will place in the Library a copy of the reply from KPMG. [43470]

Hilary Benn: There was no correspondence. The exchange between DFID and KPMG referred to in my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for International Development's earlier answer took place on the telephone.

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development on what dates since 3 August 2001 officials from her Department have held meetings with the Government of Belize to discuss the issue of Commonwealth Debt Initiative and the effect of tax exemptions and public investment companies on pro-poor programmes. [43471]

Hilary Benn: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for International Development met with Prime Minister Musa in October 2001 as referred to in her reply to question 29276. DFID officials also met with Prime Minister Musa and Minister Fonesca in November 2001. A range of issues, including CDI, were discussed on both occasions.

HIV/AIDS (Africa)

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what plans she has to increase spending on tackling HIV/AIDS in Africa. [40663]

Hilary Benn: DFID spent over £55 million in Africa on HIV/AIDS programmes and related health systems strengthening in the financial year 2000–01.

So far this year (2001–02), we have committed an additional £180 million to tackle HIV/AIDS in Africa. A further $200 million (£140 million approximately) has been pledged by the UK to the Global Health Fund to fight AIDS, TB and malaria, of which half is expected to be spent on HIV/AIDS work.

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much money her Department is spending on tackling HIV/AIDS in each country in Africa. [40664]

Hilary Benn: The table shows the amount of money spent by DFID on HIV/AIDS in Africa in 2000–01, and the level of additional commitment for 2001–02, broken down by country.

HIV/AIDS spend (pounds sterling)—includes health systems strengthening and reproductive health programme spend

Health Strategies

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment she has made of the effectiveness of intervention strategies in reducing maternal mortality and morbidity in developing countries. [43998]

Hilary Benn: Making an effective contribution to the Millennium Development Goal of reducing maternal mortality by three quarters between 1990 and 2015 is a key objective in my Department's Public Service Agreement.

WHO are the lead international agency and we are supporting their work to determine the most successful and cost-effective safe motherhood packages. DFID is funding research designed to identify the most effective interventions to help reduce maternal mortality and morbidity in the developing world, including trials of vitamin A supplementation and magnesium sulphate for pre-eclampsia. We are also looking to draw lessons from the large safer motherhood programmes we support in Nepal, Malawi, Kenya, Pakistan and Bolivia.

Evidence to date indicates that increasing and sustaining the quality of midwifery and obstetric services is very likely to result in reduced maternal mortality. Evidence also shows that strengthening health systems is also a key prerequisite for improving safe motherhood. DFID has committed over £1 billion to this work since 1997.

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps she takes to (a) analyse the methods and policies by which low income countries achieve good health outcomes in life expectancy and child mortality and (b) use these countries and the methodology they apply to health policy when formulating health strategies for other developing countries. [43999]

Hilary Benn: DFID attaches great importance to learning and sharing lessons form successful strategies in developing countries to improve health, particularly of the poor. DFID's ability to feed country experience into international policy making, using our network of in-country health experts, is widely recognised as one of its institutional strengths. We are further contributing to the international effort by:

- strengthening WHO's capacity to draw upon country level experience, in order to set standards and disseminate best practice;
- supporting knowledge programmes which examine the effectiveness of interventions and disseminate best practice; and
- supporting the recent work of the Commission on Macroeconomics and Health, which has assessed the global evidence of the effectiveness and cost-effectiveness of interventions to improve health.

Lessons learned as a result of these efforts are used to help developing countries develop and refine their own multi-sectoral national programmes and plans for better health and poverty reduction. This is increasingly done in the context of Sector Wide Approaches and Poverty Reduction Strategies.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

CERRIE

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) if she will list the members of the Working Group established to take forward the Consultative Exercise on Radiation Risk from Interval Emitters; what the remit of CERRIE is; what resources are available to support CERRIE's work; and whether CERRIE meetings are held in public; [15575]

(2) when she expects to reply to written question 15575 on the establishment of CERRIE. [34541]

Mr. Meacher: The membership of the Committee Examining Radiation Risks of Internal Emitters (CERRIE), set up under the auspices of the Committee on the Medical Aspects of Radiation in the Environment (COMARE), has recently been finalized and is:

Chairman:

Professor Dudley Goodhead, MRC Radiation and Genome Stability Unit

Members:

Mr. Richard Bramhall, The Low Level Radiation Campaign

Dr. Chris Busby, Green Audit

Dr. Roger Cox, National Radiological Protection Board

Dr. Philip Day, University of Manchester

Professor Sarah Darby, ICRF Cancer Epidemiology Unit, University of Oxford

Dr. John Harrison, National Radiological Protection Board

Dr. Colin Muirhead, National Radiological Protection Board

Mr. Pete Roche, Greenpeace UK

Professor Jack Simmons, University of Westminster

Dr. Richard Wakeford, British Nuclear Fuels Ltd.

Professor Eric Wright, Ninewells Medical School, Dundee.

The Chairman of COMARE, Professor Bryn Bridges, will attend the meetings as an observer, as will officials from the Department of Health and DEFRA.

The remit of CERRIE is, "To consider the present risk models for radiation and health that apply to exposure to radiation from internal radionuclides in the light of recent studies and any further research that might be needed."

Consultants have been appointed to provide CERRIE with an independent secretariat. Other resources, such as accommodation etc, will be provided by the two sponsoring Departments, DEFRA and DH.

CERRIE's meetings are not held in public.

Environment Agency

Mr. Pond: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what progress has been made towards the completion of the first five-yearly Financial, Management and Policy Review of the Environment Agency. [45324]

Mr. Meacher: I am pleased to announce that the Department is today publishing the second and final stage of this review.

The findings of the review establish a basis for a new and strategic relationship between the Agency and its Sponsors; more effective business planning and performance review; a sharpening of efficiency; and a wide range of actions by both the Agency and its Sponsors towards the improved delivery of environmental functions.

A copy of the report has been placed in the Library of the House.

Easter Eggs

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions she has had with the confectionery manufacturing industry regarding the amount of packaging waste generated by Easter eggs; and if she will make a statement. [43214]

Margaret Beckett [holding answer 14 March 2001]: None. The requirements of the Producer Responsibility Obligations (Packaging Waste) Regulations 1997 (as amended) apply to all packaging. The incentives to minimise and reuse packaging and the targets set for the recovery and recycling of packaging waste apply throughout the year.

Sellafield

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs on what dates, and where, (a) Ministers and (b) officials in her Department have met the Irish Government to discuss the British Nuclear Fuels plant at Sellafield since 5 October 2001; and which Ministers and which Irish Government departments were involved in each meeting. [43473]

Margaret Beckett: Ministers and officials have been involved in a number of meetings since 5 October with Irish Ministers and officials at which the British Nuclear Fuel Plant at Sellafield was discussed, either as the main subject of the meeting, or as part of a wider agenda. The meetings, venues, and participants, were as follows:

Ministers

25 February 2002—British Irish Council meeting (Edinburgh, Scotland)—Michael Meacher, (Minister for the Environment) (Chair), Noel Dempsey TD (Minister for the Environment and Local Government, Ireland), and Joe Jacob TD (Minister of State, Department of Public Enterprise, Ireland)—plus Ministers from Scotland, Wales, Northern Ireland, the Isle of Man, Jersey and Guernsey. 4 March 2002—Environment Council (Brussels, Belgium)—Margaret Beckett, (Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs), Michael Meacher, (Minister for the Environment), Noel Dempsey TD (Minister for the Environment and Local Government, Ireland).

Officials

5 October 2001—OSPAR Arbitration meeting (London)—DEFRA, Other Government Departments, and Department of Public Enterprise (Ireland)

19 and 20 November—International Tribunal on the Law of the Sea (ITLOS) Hearing (Hamburg, Germany)—DEFRA, Other Government Departments, Department of Public Enterprise (Ireland) and Radiological Protection Institute of Ireland (Ireland)

11 December 2001—Compliance with ITLOS Provisional Measures (Dublin, Ireland)—DEFRA, Other Government Departments, and Department of Public Enterprise (Ireland) and Radiological Protection Institute of Ireland.

7 February 2002—British Irish Council pre-meeting (London)—DEFRA, Devolved Administrations, Department of Public Enterprise (Ireland), Isle of Man Government

15 February 2002—UK Ireland Contact Group on Radioactivity (London)—DEFRA, Other Government Departments, Devolved Administrations, Department of Public Enterprise (Ireland), Radiological Protection Institute of Ireland (Ireland), and the Isle of Man Government. This particular group of officials meets every six months.

15 February 2002—Discussion of draft Irish/Isle of Man paper on "Sellafield and Radioactive Waste" (London)—DEFRA, Other Government Departments, Devolved Administrations, Department of Public Enterprise (Ireland), Radiological Protection Institute of Ireland, and the Isle of Man Government.

Radioactive Waste (Irish Sea)

Colin Burgon: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what amount of radioactive waste was discharged into the Irish Sea, broken down between each radionuclide, in each year since 1979. [29244]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 22 January 2002]: Annual radioactive discharge data, for nuclear sites in the UK, for the years in question, are contained in the following Government reports:

Aquatic Environment Monitoring Report, Radioactivity in Surface and Coastal Waters of the British Isles, MAFF. Annual Report, 1977–94

Radioactivity in Food and the Environment, Food Standards Agency and Scottish Environment Protection Agency. Annual publication, 1995–2001.

Copies of these publications can be found in the Library of the House.

Data, in the form requested, from these reports (updated and amplified from other sources for certain years and radionuclides) are reproduced in the tables, copies of which have been placed in the Library of the House. The timespans over which radionuclides have been measured at different contributory nuclear sites varies depending upon the discharge authorisations issued by the relevant UK regulator.

Fluoride

Mr. Syms: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs from which countries the UK imports fluoride. [42975]

Nigel Griffiths: I have been asked to reply.

According to information compiled by HM Customs and Excise, UK imported fluorides[1] from Germany, Spain, Sweden, Canada, Belgium, France, Japan, Italy, China, Netherlands, Brazil, India, Hong Kong, Irish Republic, Czech Republic, Slovenia, Norway and South Korea.

Note:

[1] Fluorides are defined by codes 282611, 282612 and 282619 of the Harmonised System.

Illegal Meat Imports

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what has been the role of her Department in checks on illegal meat imports at coastal ports in the last two years. [44212]

Margaret Beckett: The responsibility for sea ports lies with the local/port-health authority and not with DEFRA. Although we do have a presence in most ports and offer advice and support to the local authorities, it is their function to quality assure legitimate trade and to identify illegal imports.

I am chairing a high level forum on Thursday 21 March 2002 involving all stakeholders, to consider the next steps for intensifying our efforts and to agree further priorities and action. A number of other Government Departments and agencies plus the enforcement bodies will be participating.

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, pursuant to her answer of 12 March, ref. 38842, on which dates members of the State Veterinary Service were involved in joint exercises at Heathrow. [44230]

Margaret Beckett [holding answer 18 March 2002]: Since April 2001, members of the State Veterinary Service have been involved in nine joint exercises at Heathrow. Dates include the 8, 15 and 29 April, 24 June, 30 October, 9 November 2001 and 12, 14 and 17 February 2002.

Winter Wheat/Winter Barley

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will estimate the total amount of sowings of (a) winter wheat and (b) winter barley for the year ending 2001; and what the comparable figures were for 2000. [44103]

Mr. Morley: The December 2001 survey of agriculture results for England were published on 7 March 2002 in DEFRA Statistics News Release 11/02 and are available on the DEFRA website at www.defra.gov.uk. Estimates for the areas of wheat and barley sown by 3 December 2001 are detailed in the table together with comparable figures for December 2000.

	1 December 2000	3 December 2001	Percentage change[1] December 2001–December 2000
Wheat sown by survey date	1,271	1,868	+47.0
Barley sown by survey date	390	486	+24.4

Notes:

1. Includes estimates for minor holdings.
2. For 2000, areas sown by 1 December were affected by poor drilling conditions caused by wet weather.

* Based on unrounded figures

Fish Quotas (Shetland and Orkney)

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the total amount expended by the Shetland and Orkney Islands councils annually for the purchase of fish quotas was from 1995 to 2002. [44099]

Mr. Morley: I understand no moneys have been expended by the Shetland Islands council on the purchase of fish quotas but that £2 million was spent on quota purchase in 1998 by Shetland Leasing and Property Ltd. (SLAP), using moneys lent by Shetland Development Trust, and the Orkney Islands council spent £1.5 million in 1999.

Beam Trawling

Sue Doughty: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the restrictions are on the frequency with which a seabed may be beam trawled; and how such restrictions are enforced. [43880]

Mr. Morley: There are no restrictions on the frequency with which a seabed may be beam trawled.

Large beam trawls are prohibited within 12 miles of the coasts of the United Kingdom and Ireland under EC Fisheries Technical Regulations. Further restrictions have been placed on the use of beam trawlers by some of the 12 Sea Fisheries Committees who are responsible for managing fishing in the 0-six mile zone around England and Wales.

Quarantine Kennels

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she will introduce statutory standards for animal quarantine kennels. [44258]

Mr. Morley: Under the Animal Health Act 1981 and the Rabies (Importation of Dogs, Cats and Other Mammals) Order 1974 (as amended) animal quarantine kennels are regulated with regard to disease security and isolation. There are standard requirements for the design, construction, operation and management of authorised quarantine premises, and it is the responsibility of the Veterinary Superintendent of the premises to ensure that these standards are met, and also to ensure the safe custody and strict isolation of each animal throughout its period of quarantine.

Currently, all approved quarantine premises have undertaken to abide by a Voluntary Code of Practice on the Welfare of Dogs and Cats in Quarantine Premises. But we are determined to improve the welfare standards of animals in quarantine. The Animal Health (Amendment) Act 1998 gives us the power to set statutory welfare standards in quarantine premises. In 2000 we consulted on a draft order which contained, among other things, such statutory welfare standards.

Work on the draft order was suspended during 2001 due to foot and mouth disease. We hope to introduce the legislation later this year.

Agrimonetary Compensation

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, pursuant to her answer of 8 January 2002, Official Report, column 741W, on agrimonetary compensation, how much compensation has been paid to each county in each year since 1997. [43320]

Mr. Morley: The table sets out agrimonetary expenditure between 1997 and 2001, at county level.

Foot and Mouth

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she received (a) the report of the Rural Task Force and (b) Lord Haskins' report on rural recovery after foot and mouth disease. [9919]

Margaret Beckett: I saw the report of the Rural Task Force which was chaired by my right hon. Friend, the Minister of State for Rural Affairs on 15 October immediately after the report had been completed. My noble Friend, the Lord Haskins, sent me a near-final draft of his report on 2 October, but he made some subsequent amendments; the report as printed was also completed on 15 October. The earliest mutually acceptable date for publication was 18 October.

Bio-security

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what measures have been taken to improve bio-security at ports to ensure that foot and mouth disease cannot enter the UK. [43458]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 15 March 2002]: Since April last year initiatives on illegal imports have been co-ordinated by officials in DEFRA, working closely with other Departments such as HM Customs and Excise and Food Standards Agency, as well as the local authorities and port health authorities who are responsible for controls at ports and airports. This joint approach had led to more effective information sharing and improved targeting of activity at ports and airports.

DEFRA is also holding a high level forum on 21 March 2002 involving all stakeholders, to consider the next steps for intensifying our efforts and to agree further priorities and action.

Responsibility for checks on imports of meat and meat products (which might be coming from countries with FMD) are the responsibility of the local or port health authority and it is for the appropriate local authority to deploy staff according to the volume and nature of products imported.

Herd Size

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will estimate the size of the national (a) dairy herd, (b) beef herd, (c) pig breeding herd, (d) fattening pig herd, (e) sheep flock and (f) lamb flock under one year old for the year ending 2001; and what the figures were for 2000. [44102]

Mr. Morley: The December 2001 Survey of Agriculture Results for England were published on 7 March 2002 in Statistics News Release 11/02 and are available on the DEFRA website at www.defra.gov.uk. Estimates for the dairy and beef herd, the pig breeding and fattening herds and the sheep and lamb flocks are detailed in the table with comparable figures for 2000.

Thousand head

Herd[1]	December 2000	December 2001	Percentage change[2] December 2001/ December 2000
Dairy herd	1,581	1,439	–9.0
Beef herd	753	666	–11.5
Pig breeding herd	475	440	–7.4
Fattening pig herd	4,398	4,129	–6.1
Sheep breeding flock	8,188	6,698	–18.2
Lamb flock under 1 year[3]	3,790	3,241	–14.5

[2] Based on unrounded figures.

[3] Excludes ewe lambs already put to the lamb which are already included in the figures for the breeding flock.

Agricultural Shows

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans she and her Ministers have to visit agricultural shows in 2002. [34109]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 7 February 2002]: My right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State and the DEFRA ministerial team will be visiting a range of agricultural shows during 2002 and a programme of visits is being drawn up.

Common Land

Sue Doughty: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she will implement regulations governing rights of vehicular access over common land and limiting the amount a common land freeholder can charge for access rights. [43881]

Alun Michael: The Government are currently considering the many responses made during the public consultation exercise on the regulations undertaken last year. We hope to be in a position to lay draft regulations for England before Parliament soon.

Right of Access Maps

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will publish the draft Right of Access maps for the lower north-west and the south-east of England as they are completed. [43462]

Alun Michael: Draft maps of open country and registered common land for land in the south-east and lower-north west mapping regions were issued by the Countryside Agency in November 2001, with a deadline for comments of 11 February 2002. The Agency will consider the representations which it has received about the draft maps before publishing provisional maps later this year. When the provisional maps are published, anyone with an interest in land may appeal to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State against its inclusion on a provisional map. When any appeals have been dealt with the Countryside Agency will issue a conclusive map. I have indicated that we will consider the case for bringing the right of access into force on a regional basis in the light of progress in the first two regions. I shall make an announcement soon.

Rural Affairs

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the total cost is of the "Your Countryside, You're Welcome" (a) launch and (b) campaign. [43082]

Alun Michael: Rather than a Government advertising campaign, the "Your Countryside, You're Welcome" campaign was owned by some 50 organisations who worked as partners with DEFRA, DCMS, the Countryside Agency and the English Tourism Council. Over 100 other organisations were supportive or involved in a variety of ways. No costs can be ascribed to their time and effort, nor to the high level of activity at local and regional level around the country which has helped to re-engage urban and rural interest in a positive way.

The total cost for the PR activity to support the "Your Countryside, You're Welcome" campaign was £209,000 plus VAT.

This covered all fees and expenses incurred on the campaign including the launch event on 28 January, the public event in Leicester Square on 10 March, and the Daily Mirror promotion in the week commencing 11 March.

Sustainability

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on the Government's definition of sustainability. [43575]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 19 March 2002]: There are a number of definitions of sustainable development. The Government's sustainable development strategy—"A better quality of life" (Cm 4345)—defines it as "ensuring a better quality of life for everyone, now and for generations to come".

Like other definitions of sustainable development, the Government's approach emphasises the need to try to reconcile economic, social and environmental objectives and look for the best alternative that achieves this.

The Government's latest report on sustainable development—"Achieving a better quality of life 2001"—was published on 13 March 2002, and can be found via http://www.sustainable-development.gov.uk.

Stolen Equipment

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, pursuant to the answer of 23 January 2002, Official Report, column 926–27W, on stolen equipment, whether the computer equipment stolen from her Department was (a) new and unused and (b) used; and what was the nature of the data stored on such items in each case. [42645]

Mr. Morley: Further to the details I gave the right hon. Member on 23 January 2002, the Department's records show details of the following items of stolen computer equipment that were either new and unused or used.

Data stored on the stolen computer equipment relates to MAFF/DEFRA's business. It is not possible to be more precise.

Ministerial Transport

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she last used the railway service in connection with her official duties; what station she left from and what was the destination; and whether it is her intention to make greater use of the railways in future. [28100]

Mr. Morley: My right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State last used the railway service in connection with her official duties on 22 January, travelling on the Eurostar service from Brussels to Waterloo. My right hon. Friend will continue to use the railway service where appropriate.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Article 13 Action Programme

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the (a) composition and (b) mission of the article 13 action programme; when it will meet; and what parliamentary scrutiny there will be of its activities. [39646]

Ms Hewitt: I have been asked to reply.

The Article 13 action programme is an activity of the European Community. It was agreed under Article 13 of the European Community Treaty on 27 November 2000, and will run until 2006.

The Programme supports the development of practical solutions to combat discrimination on grounds of racial and ethnic origin, disability, age, religion and belief and sexual orientation. The programme encourages the exchange of best practice on policies and practices which have been shown to work well in combating discrimination across Europe.

The day to day running of the programme is the responsibility of the European Commission under the direction of a Management Committee comprising of representatives of all member states including the United Kingdom. The Committee meets three or four times a year to provide the necessary guidance to the Commission. An evaluation of the programme will be reported to the European Parliament, the European Council, the Economic and Social Committee and the Committee of the Regions. A copy of the evaluation report will be placed in the Libraries of the House once available.

Public Bodies (Chairman)

Mr. Forth: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the appointments made by his Department since 1 May 1997 of chairmen of (a) non-departmental public bodies, (b) commissions, (c) inquiries, (d) agencies and (e) task forces; and if he will list their (i) term of office, (ii) salary and (iii) known political affiliation (A) past and (B) present. [33882]

Mr. Bradshaw: (a) Foreign and Commonwealth Office has 10 Non departmental public bodies. Chairpersons appointed since 1 May 1997 are as follows:

Sir Frank Berman, Chairman, Diplomatic Service Appeals Board

(i) Term of office: three years (appointed November 2001)

(ii) Salary: nil

Baroness Helena Kennedy QC, Chair, British Council

(i) Term of office: three years (Appointed one term August 1999 to July 2001 re-appointed for a second term August 2001–July 04)

(ii) Salary: honorarium 35,000 perannum (agreed by order of the Charity Commissioners)

Sir Andrew Wood KCMG, Chairman, Britain-Russia Centre

(i) Term of office: three years (Appointed November 2000)

(ii) Salary: nil

Mr. Ernie Ross MP, Chairman, Westminster Foundation for Democracy

(i) Term of office: one year (July 1997 and yearly reappointment thereafter)

(ii) Salary: nil

Lady Suzanne Warner, Chair, Wilton Park Academic Council

(i) Term of office: two years (first appointment December 1999 reappointed December 2001).

(ii) Salary: nil

Mr. Jonathan Taylor, Chairman, Marshall Aid Commemoration Commission

(i) Term of office: three years (appointed April 2000)

(ii) Salary: nil

Right hon. Lord Radice, Chairman, British Association for Central and Eastern Europe

(i) Term of office: three years (reappointed October 2000)

(ii) Salary: nil

Sir Ewen Fergusson, Chairman, Government Hospitality Advisory Committee for the Purchase of Wine

(i) Term of office: five years (appointed April 1998)

(ii) Salary: nil

Mr. David Brewer, Chairman, Great Britain China Centre

(i) Term of office: three years (first appointment October 1997, reappointed October 2000)

(ii) Salary: nil

(b) Commissions

Mr. Arthur Wheeler Chairman, Foreign Compensation Commission

(i) Term of office: one year (last appointed December 2001)

(ii) Salary: nil.

Information on Political affiliation is not available.

Territorial Forces

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many members of staff of his Department are members of the Territorial forces; and if he has a strategy to encourage members of staff to become members of the Territorial forces. [44068]

Mr. Bradshaw: The number of staff in the FCO who are members of the territorial forces is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

The FCO supports staff who wish to serve in the reserve forces and allows them paid time off work to take part in these activities.

Civil Servants (Education)

Mr. Davidson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what proportion of recruits to his Department came from Oxford and Cambridge in (a) the last year for which figures are available and (b) for the 10 preceding years. [43857]

Mr. Bradshaw: The last published figures for 2000 are in the 2001 Departmental report. The table shows the percentage recruited from Oxbridge for 2000–1990.

	Policy	Operational

Civil Servants

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will set out for each Civil Service grade within his (a) Department and (b) Department's executive agencies the (i) total number of staff employed, (ii) number aged (A) 16 to 25, (B) 26 to 35, (C) 36 to 45, (D) 46 to 60 and (E) over the age of 60 years, (iii) number of registered disabled and (iv) number of ethnic minorities. [39148]

Mr. Bradshaw: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given on 13 March 2002 by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Secretary for the Cabinet Office, Official Report, column 1071W.

Special Advisers

Mr. Collins: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on how many occasions since 1 May 1997 (a) departmental and (b) non-departmental special advisers have travelled abroad in an official capacity; and if he will list the total cost, including (i) travel, (ii) accommodation and (iii) subsistence allowance, for each occasion. [37980]

Mr. MacShane [holding answer 27 February, 2002]: Between 1 April 2000 and 31 March 2001, special advisers in my Department travelled abroad in an official capacity on eight occasions, at an average cost of £3,039.04 per trip. Information for the period 2 May 1997 to 31 March 2000 is already in the public domain. All travel by special advisers is undertaken in accordance with the rules set out in the ministerial code, and the civil service management code.

Council Proposal 569

Mr. Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the legal basis for Council proposal Com (2001) 569. [39648]

Mr. Bradshaw: The legal base of proposal 569 was article 308 of the EU treaty. The proposal was adopted as a regulation (2580–2001) on 27 December 2001. The legal basis of the regulation was articles 60, 301 and 308 of the EU treaty.

The Government welcome this regulation as an integral part of the EU's measures to implement UNSCR 1373(2001). The UK strongly supported the timely adoption of UNSCR 1373 (2001) as a vital measure in the global campaign against terrorism. The regulation will assist in ensuring full compliance within the EU with the provisions of UNSCR 1373(2001). The Government consider the immediate freezing of assets to prevent their dissipation an essential tool in the fight against terrorism. The regulation does not limit the UK's ability to take autonomous measures against other individuals that we deem to be linked to terrorism.

External Contracts

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) if he will list the 30 largest contracts awarded by his Department from (a) May 1997 to April 1998, (b) May 1998 to April 1999, (c) May 1999 to April 2000, (d) May 2000 to April 2001 and (e) May 2001 to the latest date, indicating in each case the values of the contracts and the companies with which the contracts were placed; [38749]

(2) which non-accounting and non-information technology external organisations which previously held contracts with his Department (a) won new contracts at the culmination of the existing contracts and (b) won new contracts after a period of inactivity with his Department in each of the past five years. [38748]

Mr. MacShane [holding answer 28 February, 2002]: This information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Parental Leave Directive

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what estimate he has made of the (a) financial costs and (b) benefits to his Department of the Parental Leave Directive. [42478]

Mr. Bradshaw: No central records are kept of parental leave taken and so no estimates are readily available of the likely financial costs to the FCO of the introduction of the Parental Leave Directive. This information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

The Foreign and Commonwealth Office is committed to assisting its employees to achieve a better balance between home and work life. The entitlement to parental leave is another element of this.

West Bank

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what aid will be given to help rebuild settlements destroyed on the West Bank; and if he will make a statement. [43220]

Mr. Bradshaw: Through our bilateral aid programme, the European Union and UNWRA we support the short term needs of the Palestinian Authority. It is also critical to address our long-term goal of Palestinian nation building in parallel. The aim of our development assistance programme in the West Bank and Gaza Strip is to help develop the building blocks which will support the creation of a viable Palestinian state. We aim to provide a broad range of technical assistance designed to promote peace, stability and economic and social development. UK bilateral assistance is planned at £14 million this year. In 2001 the UK contributed £25 million to the United Nations Relief and Works Agency to support vulnerable Palestinian refugee communities. The Government have no specific plans to give aid to rebuild Palestinian towns in the West Bank.

Israel

Richard Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Government of Israel about Palestinian child detainees held in Israeli prisons and detention centres. [43484]

Mr. Bradshaw: Our embassy in Tel Aviv has raised with the Israeli Ministry of Foreign Affairs the case of Sausan Abu Turki, a 14-year-old Palestinian girl arrested in late 2001 for allegedly attacking an Israel Defence Force officer, whom we understand the Israeli authorities continue to hold without charge. The embassy also supports the efforts of human rights NGOs and the EU in raising specific cases of alleged abuse against minors by the Israeli authorities.

Ian Lucas: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the role of the United Nations in securing peace in Israel. [43554]

Mr. Bradshaw: United Nations Security Resolutions 242 and 338 remain the basis for a just and lasting settlement in the middle east. We welcome the adoption of UNSCR 1397 on 12 March which sets out the vision of two states within secure and recognised borders. It demands an immediate cessation of all acts of violence and calls on both leaders to co-operate in the implementation of the Tenet plan and Mitchell Committee recommendations with the aim of resuming negotiations on a political settlement.

We support the efforts of UN Secretary-General Kofi Annan and UN Special Co-ordinator Terje Rod Larsen.

Iraq

Mr. Tynan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many times officials from his Department have had contact with Iraqi Government officials in (a) the last month, (b) the last three months and (c) the last six months. [44292]

Mr. Bradshaw: During the periods specified, there have been (a) 0 (b) 3 and (c) 5 meetings between officials from my Department and Iraqi Government officials.

Mr. Tynan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what evidence he has received linking Iraq to the New York terrorist attacks of 11 September 2001. [44293]

Mr. Bradshaw: As we have consistently made clear, we have no reason to believe Iraq was involved in the September 11 terrorist attacks. Nevertheless, we share the concern of all responsible members of the international community about Iraq's support for terrorism and its development of weapons of mass destruction.

Belize and Guatemala

Fiona Mactaggart: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on negotiations between Belize and Guatemala to resolve their territorial dispute. [45325]

Mr. MacShane: The Governments of Belize and Guatemala are working closely under the auspices of the Organisation of American States (OAS), to negotiate a settlement to their long standing territorial dispute. Two facilitators appointed by Belize and Guatemala, aim to present recommendations for an agreed settlement to both Governments shortly.

We firmly support the OAS-facilitated process. We very much hope that Belize and Guatemala will be able to agree a settlement this year. Such an agreement would have great significance for both countries and the region more widely. We are in close touch with both countries and are actively helping the facilitators to secure a final and lasting settlement to the dispute.

Stolen Equipment

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to the answer of 22 January 2002, Official Report, column 776–77W, on stolen equipment, whether the computer equipment stolen from his Department was (a) new and unused and (b) used; and what was the nature of the data stored on such items in each case. [42640]

Mr. Straw: Further to the answer of 22 January, I can confirm that, with the exception of the boxed PC, monitor and keyboard stolen on 22 May 2001, and the seven monitors stolen on 10 January 2002, which were all new and unused items, the remaining items were all used.

As stated in the answer on 6 February 2002 by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, Official Report, column 948W, to the hon. Member for Romford (Mr. Rosindell), data held on the used equipment was of an unclassified nature, and no security breaches occurred as a result of the thefts.

Jamal Uddin

Mr. Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions British officials had with Jamal Uddin in Kabul prior to his detention in Guantanamo Bay, Cuba by the US military authorities. [44320]

Mr. Bradshaw: The British Embassy in Kabul spoke to Jamal Uddin in Kandahar by telephone on 16 January about his movement from Kandahar to Kabul. In the event, before Mr. Uddin could travel to Kabul, he was detained by US forces in Kandahar on approximately 25 January and subsequently moved to Guantanamo Bay on 11 February where he was seen by British officials on 26 February.

British Overseas Territories

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when (a) he, (b) other Ministers and (c) a member of the Royal Family last officially visited each of the British Overseas Territories. [44049]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Secretary of State has not visited any of the Overseas Territories. Visits to the Overseas Territories by other Foreign Office Ministers and by members of the Royal Family over the last two years were as follows:

Visits by Ministers

Territory	Visitor	Date of visit
Visits by Ministers
Cayman Islands	Baroness Scotland	July/August 2000
Anguilla	Baroness Scotland	September 2000
British Virgin Islands	Baroness Scotland	September 2000
British Antarctic Territory	Baroness Scotland	January 2001
Falkland Islands	John Battle	February 2001
Gibraltar	Peter Hain	September 2001
Montserrat	Baroness Amos	December 2001
Turks and Caicos Islands	Baroness Amos	December 2001
Visits by members of the Royal Family
British Virgin Islands	Duke of York	March 2000
Montserrat	Duke of York	March 2000
Anguilla	Duke of York	March 2000
Turks and Caicos Islands	Duke of York	March 2000
Cayman Islands	Duke of York	March 2000
Bermuda	Princess Royal	April 2001

For visits prior to this I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Member for Leeds, West (Mr. Battle) to my hon. Friend the Member for Thurrock (Andrew Mackinlay) on 7 June 2000, Official Report, columns 293–94W.

Gibraltar

Mr. Dodds: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions have been held between the Government and (a) the EU and (b) individual member states of the EU, on the relationship between Gibraltar and Spain. [43431]

Peter Hain: I refer the hon. Member to the Presidency Conclusions from the Barcelona European Council on 15–16 March (copies of which have been placed in the Libraries of the House) in which the European Council:

> welcomes the decision of the UK and Spain to relaunch the Brussels Process on Gibraltar, established in November 1984;
> underlines the EU's support for both Governments' commitment to overcome their differences over Gibraltar, and to conclude a comprehensive agreement before the summer;
> invites the Commission to explore possible ways in which the EU could underpin any agreement reached.

St. Helena (Celebrations)

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs who will represent Her Majesty's Government at the 500 Anniversary celebrations on the island of St. Helena. [44197]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Governor will represent Her Majesty's Government at the 500 anniversary celebrations on 21 May.

SCOTLAND

Stolen Equipment

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to her answer of 22 January 2002, Official Report, column 698W, on stolen equipment, whether the laptop stolen from her Department was (a) new and unused and (b) used; and what was the nature of the data stored on it. [42637]

Mrs. Liddell: The laptop stolen from my Department was used and it contained non-classified information relating to the work of the Department.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Civil Servants

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many new entrants to the civil service were employed in her Department in each of the last five years; and how many in each year were aged 50 and over. [36497]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 25 February 2002]: The information is set out in the following table.

	Entrants	Aged 50 years and over
1997–98	22	1
1998–99	16	3
1999–2000	35	1
2000–01	27	2
2001–02	34	1

Hyde Park

Mr. Mark Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many of the paying concerts and other events planned for (a) 2002, (b) 2003 and (c) 2004 in Hyde Park are contractually committed. [37880]

Mr. Caborn: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 28 February 2002, Official Report, columns 1531–32W.

Export Bars

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) how much money has been spent by (a) her Department and (b) other Government Departments for the purpose of preventing an item being exported, following the placing of an export bar, since 1997; [39409]

(2) for each item that has had an export bar placed on it by the Department since 1997, how long the export bar has remained in place and how many of these items were (a) allowed to remain in the country indefinitely and (b) eventually exported; [39408]

(3) how many export bars have been carried out by her Department for each year since 1997; and if she will list the items and their value. [39407]

Dr. Howells: The information requested is also contained in the last five annual reports of the Reviewing Committee on the Export of Works of Art. Copies are available in the Libraries of both Houses. Information relating to cases considered in the current committee year (from 1 July 2001 onwards) will be available after the year ends on 30 June 2002, in the annual report for that period.

There have been 71 temporary export bars since 1997. Details of the items and their value are provided in the first three columns of the table that has been placed in the Library.

Information the length of temporary export bars and the issue of export licences is set out in the fourth, fifth and sixth columns of the table. Temporary export bars usually take the form of a split period; the first to allow expressions of interest in purchasing the item to be made, and the second to allow the funds to be raised and the invoice paid. If there is no expression of interest by the end of the first period a licence is usually granted. If there is an expression of interest, then the deferral usually continues into the second period.

Items which have been under temporary export bar are usually purchased by UK institutions or private individuals, not by Government Departments. Decisions to purchase are usually made by the trustees of these institutions and they are often assisted by the Heritage Lottery Fund, the Art Fund and the Resource/Victoria and Albert Museum Purchase Grant Fund. Purchase information is shown in the final column of the table, and details of contributions made each year by grant-giving bodies can be found in Appendix G of the Reviewing Committee's annual reports.

Job Sharing

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will make a statement on the extent of job sharing in her Department. [41052]

Dr. Howells: The Department for Culture, Media and Sport has a range of policies intended to help staff to better manage work-life balance, including support for part-time and job-share opportunities. All posts are open to those wishing to work part-time or job-share although there are currently no posts being filled on a job-share basis.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many and what proportion of the staff of her Department are (a) job sharing, (b) term working and (c) engaged in another form of flexible working. [42428]

Dr. Howells: The Department for Culture, Media and Sport has a range of policies intended to help staff to better manage work-life balance, including support for part-time, job-share and other flexible work patterns. All posts are open to those wishing to work part-time or job-share although there are currently no posts being filled on a job-share or term working basis.

New Millennium Experience Company

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if surplus funds have been returned by the New Millennium Experience Company to (a) English Partnerships and (b) other parts of Government. [41741]

Dr. Howells: (a) No. (b) No. Funding for the New Millennium Experience Company (NMEC) has been provided by the Millennium Commission. NMEC is now in voluntary liquidation and a trust holding money that was available to NMEC has returned £883,000 to the commission, relating to expenditure that will not, now, be required. Of the additional £47 million set aside by the Millennium Commission for NMEC in September 2000, £25 million has not been required.

BBC

Mr. Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the Government's policy is on the future relationship of the BBC with Ofcom. [39628]

Dr. Howells: The Government's policy on the BBC and OFCOM is set out in the White Paper "A New Future for Communications". Our aim, within the proposed three tiers of regulation, is to create a more level playing field for the BBC and the commercial public service broadcasters, while recognising the distinctive role of the BBC. At tier one (covering for example standards and subtitling but with impartiality requirements excepted) and tier two (measurable quotas, news in peak time) the BBC will be regulated by OFCOM alongside other public service broadcasters. At tier three, the Governors will continue to regulate the delivery of the BBC's remit, while the commercial public service broadcasters will be given greater freedom in the delivery of their remits.

Mr. Mark Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will set out the past and present party political affiliations of those members of the British Broadcasting Corporation whom the Government are responsible for appointing. [43951]

Dr. Howells: My Department does not collect details of the political affiliation of people appointed to public bodies.

Regulatory Impact Unit

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many members her Department employs in its Regulatory Impact Unit; and if she will make a statement. [42934]

Dr. Howells: In the Department, regulatory impact issues fall to the Policy, Innovation and Delivery Unit. The Unit currently has 6.5 full time posts.

Public-Private Partnerships (Consultants)

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the total external spending by her Department was on public private partnership consultants in each of the last four years; how many full-time equivalent consultants were employed over this period; how many billed consultancy days there were per year; what the implied average cost of each PPP consultant was; how many consultancy firms were used by her Department over this period; and if she will make a statement. [43203]

Dr. Howells: My Department has only engaged PFI consultants, I therefore refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 6 February 2002, Official Report, column 985W.

Departmental Functions

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will list the functions of her Department that have been (a) market tested and (b) outsourced in each of the last five years, specifying the (i) money saving and (ii) percentage saving in each case. [42992]

Dr. Howells: The DCMS is a mainly policy Department and has few activities capable of being outsourced. Some support services functions are able to be outsourced and during the last five years the provision of facilities management services have been contracted out after competitive tendering. The facilities services budget in total amounts to 0.15 per cent. of the total departmental budget and 5 per cent. of the administration budget. The saving of £60,000 annually represents a 4 per cent. saving of the facilities services budget but has also brought unquantifiable quality savings and industrial know-how. No market testing has taken place.

Public Service Agreements

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will list the Public Service Agreement targets which have been revised and those which have been introduced since the publication of the 2001 departmental report. [43258]

Dr. Howells: My Department has not revised or introduced any new Public Service Agreement targets since the publication of the 2001 departmental annual report.

Special Advisers

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will list the number and expected cost to her Department of special advisers in (a) 2001–02 and (b) 2002–03. [43272]

Dr. Howells:

(a) Details of special advisers employed in the Department 2000–02 are shown in the table.

	Special advisers: Full time	Part time	Total
2001	[1]2	0	[1]2
2002	2	0	2

[1] We employed three special advisers to cover the two posts throughout the year.

(b) We expect to employ two special advisers for 2002–3.

The salaries of special advisers are negotiated individually within the stated pay range (£28,328–£82,867). Details of salaries remain confidential in order to protect the privacy of the individuals concerned.

Timber

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will list the companies from which her Department has obtained timber and wood products and the total spent with each firm over the last five years. [43408]

Dr. Howells: The only timber related products purchased in the last five years have been workstations. These are laminate over recycled timber chipboard in construction. The supplier has been Herman Miller Office Systems at a total cost of £105,000 over the five year period.

Film Industry

Jean Corston: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will make a statement on the United Kingdom's contribution to the international film industry. [43500]

Dr. Howells: Between 1997 and September 2001 four British films, "The Full Monty", "Notting Hill", "Chicken Run" and "Bridget Jones's Diary", together grossed around £700 million at the worldwide box office. Recent major budget productions attracted to these shores such as "Tomb Raider", "Harry Potter and the Philosopher's Stone", "Chocolat", "Killing me Softly" and "The Mummy Returns" have contributed to the overall inward investment figure of approximately £539 million in 2000. The Film Council's Premiere Fund has a budget of £30 million of Lottery money over three years for the production of theatrical feature films that have the potential to attract significant audiences at home and abroad. The Film Council's most recent release, Gosford Park, has already won a Golden Globe and has been nominated for seven "Oscars". The UK was one of the earliest signatories of the European Co-Production Convention and has seven bilateral co-production agreements with other countries. The UK also has a massive talent base, providing a major contribution to the world's feature film industry.

Restoration

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will list those publicly funded and grant aided (a) art galleries and (b) museums where items in their collections have been damaged as a result of inappropriate and poorly executed restoration work since 1990; and if she will make a statement. [43497]

Dr. Howells: None of my Department's grant aided museums or art galleries have items in their collections that have been damaged as a result of restoration work carried out since 1990. The science of conservation and restoration is continually improving to ensure that best practices are employed. All conservation and restoration work is carried out by expert conservators.

Press and Public Relations

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many press releases were issued by her Department (a) between 1 May and 31 December 1997 and (b) in each year from 1998 to 2001 inclusive. [40029]

Dr. Howells:

(a) My Department issued 248 press releases between 1 May and 31 December 1997.

(b) In 1998 we issued 319
In 1999 we issued 315
in 2000 we issued 331
in 2001 we issued 325.

Territorial Forces

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many members of staff of her Department are members of the Territorial Forces; and if she has a strategy to encourage members of staff to become members of the Territorial Forces. [44071]

Dr. Howells: The Department does not hold information on which members of staff are members of the Territorial Forces. We encourage staff to become members of the Territorial Forces by allowing up to eight days paid special leave per year for training plus an additional five for special courses or exercises. We also look favourably upon requests for unpaid special leave in connection with these activities.

Radio Broadcasts

Mr. Lazarowicz: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport in what languages other than English radio programmes are broadcast in the United Kingdom; and for how many hours each month in each case. [43860]

Dr. Howells: The following is a list of languages (other than English) which are broadcast on radio in the United Kingdom. Detailed information on how many hours each month, for each language are available only for BBC radio broadcasts.

Languages which are broadcast on independent radio in the UK:

Albanian, Arabic, Bengali, Cantonese, Croatian, French, Gaelic, German, Greek, Gujarati, Hindi, Hindko, Italian, Kashmir, Malaysian, Mirpuri, Pahari, Pathwari, Patois, Punjabi, Pashto, Russian, Serbian, Sinhalese, Somali, Spanish, Tamil, Turkish, Urdu and Welsh.

Stichting Transworld Radio Europe and WRN Euromax are broadcast in multi-lingual European.

The BBC also broadcast a number of languages on radio in the UK. These are:

Radio Nan Gaidheal broadcasts in Gaelic for around 155 hours per month;

Radio Cymru broadcasts in Welsh for around 535 hours per month;

The Asian Network broadcasts in Hindi, Urdu, Bengali, Gujarati, Punjabi and Mirpuri for around 272 hours per month;

Local radio stations offer some broadcasts in languages other than English including over 160 hours per month in Asian languages, four hours of Italian and 12 hours of Cantonese.

A special version of the World Service is currently available via Digital Satellite in Arabic, Bengali, Hindi, Urdu, Pashto and Persian and broadcasts 24 hours a day. Some listeners may also be able to receive foreign language programmes from the main World Service but this service is not of course directed at licence payers in the UK.

Tourism

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many tourism visits there were to (a) the UK, (b) England, (c) west midlands and (d) Staffordshire in each of the last four years to the latest available date. [43959]

Dr. Howells: The numbers of visits by overseas residents and visits with overnight stays by UK residents are given in the table for the latest available four years.

Data for 2001 are not yet available, with the exception of total visits to the UK by overseas residents, of which there were 23.4 million.

Licensing Hours

Mr. Woodward: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what plans she has to review legislation governing hours of licensing for public houses. [42410]

Mr. Caborn [holding answer 18 March 2002]: This issue was thoroughly reviewed between 1997 and 1999. Following our review, the White Paper "Time for Reform: Proposals for the Modernisation of Our Licensing Laws (Cm 4696)", published on 10 April 2000, set out our plans for reforming the alcohol and public entertainment licensing laws, including the hours during which alcohol may be sold or supplied to the public. To counter and minimise public disorder resulting from fixed closing times, we intend to introduce flexible opening hours as a condition of the licences of each venue, with the potential for some to operate up to 24 hour opening on each day of the week, subject to consideration of the impact on local residents. We intend to introduce primary legislation to implement these proposals as soon as parliamentary time permits.

Golden Jubilee

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many non-domestic visitors she estimates will visit London during the week of the Queen's Golden Jubilee; and if she will make a statement. [44590]

Tessa Jowell: No estimate has been made of the number of non-domestic visitors likely to visit London during the week of the Queen's Golden Jubilee.

The Queen's Golden Jubilee is a great opportunity to encourage more people to visit the UK this year and it is central to the British Tourist Authority's current overseas promotional campaigns.

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what steps have been taken to publicise the Queen's Jubilee internationally; and if she will make a statement. [44587]

Tessa Jowell: The British Tourist Authority (BTA) is a member of the Golden Jubilee Communications Group and is working closely with other members to promote the Jubilee abroad.

The Jubilee is central to the BTA's campaigns this year with all its main publications carrying features on the Jubilee. The BTA is undertaking a range of other promotional activities, such as producing a Royal Heritage map highlighting 50 locations throughout the country with royal connections; running a competition with BBC World Service in the US with winners securing tickets for the two Buckingham Palace concerts and bringing travel journalists and tour organisers to the UK to showcase Royal Heritage.

Stolen Equipment

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport, pursuant to the answer of 22 January 2002, Official Report, column 727W, on stolen equipment, whether the computer equipment stolen from her Department was (a) new and unused and (b) used; and what was the nature of the data stored on such items in each case. [42653]

Dr. Howells: The personal computer base units and personal computer monitor were new and unused and contained no departmental data.

The laptop was a recent procurement and contained only a small amount of correspondence, none of which was protectively marked.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Flexible Working

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many and what proportion of the staff of his Department are (a) job sharing, (b) term working and (c) engaged in another form of flexible working. [42413]

Angela Eagle: Home Office staff are able to take advantage of a variety of flexible and non-traditional working patterns, including job sharing and term working. The working pattern is decided in conjunction with local management to suit an individual's preferences and the requirements of their work.

We estimate that 11 per cent. of staff work part-time in a range of ways, for example reduced days per week, working alternate weeks and term time working, but we do not hold central records of the details of these arrangements. Many other staff work full time, but have flexible hours. 38 staff are currently recorded as being job sharers in the Home Office, United Kingdom Passport and Records Service and Forensic Science Service. Information on staff in the Prison Service who are job sharers is not held centrally and could not be provided without disproportionate costs.

Press and Public Relations

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people were employed in a press or public relations function in his Department on 1 January in (a) 1997, (b) 1998, (c) 1999, (d) 2000, (e) 2001 and (f) 2002. [39941]

	Number of press officers at 1 January
1998	14
1999	14
2000	13
2001	23

[1] At April—the nearest figure available.

This includes eight people employed as press officers for the Prison Service whose media relations operation moved to the Home Office in August 2001.

In addition at various times chief immigration officers and policy officials were on six-month attachments to the press office.

No one was employed in a general public relations function.

However as has been explained in previous answers, the expansion of the Home Office press office followed an external consultant's review of its staffing and operation and recommended the increases. Staff levels in the press office had been static for some years despite the enormous changes in the media and their increasing demands for a 24 hours service.

The figures for 1997 through to 2000 of 13 or 14 press officers do not reflect vacancies and the complement would have been nearer 17 or 18. The office was in fact supplemented by secondments, loans and attachments.

Animal Experiments

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will take steps to establish a Royal Commission into animal experiments; and if he will make a statement. [43993]

Angela Eagle: The Government have not ruled out a Royal Commission but strongly believe that resources can best be used to make immediate improvements to the operation of the 1986 Act and to promote the fullest application of the three Rs—replacing the use of animals with alternative methods; reducing the number of animals needed for a particular purpose and refining the procedures to minimise suffering.

In this context, the Animal Procedures Committee is currently considering the responses to a public consultation paper as part of its review of the cost/benefit assessment of applications for authority to use animals in scientific procedures. As part of this work, the committee plans to produce a statement on the validity of animal experiments. I expect to receive its report in the next few months.

The House of Lords has also established a Select Committee on the use of animals in scientific procedures and is currently gathering evidence.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will introduce a programme of investment involving companies that profit from animal experimentation in the development of non-animal experimentation alternatives. [43995]

Angela Eagle: The Government do not believe that setting mandatory requirements for investment into research into alternatives to the use of animals in scientific procedures is either desirable or necessary.

Nonetheless, every year the Home Office makes available to the Animal Procedures Committee (APC) a budget for research aimed at developing or promoting the use of alternatives which replace animal use, reduce the number of animals used, or refine the procedures involved to minimise suffering (the three Rs). Details of completed research projects are published in the annual report of the Animal Procedures Committee, which is available from The Stationery Office.

The amount made available to the Committee for 2001–02 for this specific purpose has increased to £280,000. However, this is not the only money spent by the Government on seeking to develop alternatives, as other Departments also fund such work. It is estimated that the total spent on this by the United Kingdom Government is in the region of £2 million each year. Industry also spends many millions of pounds each year on the search for and development of alternatives. To take this further on an international level, the United Kingdom Government will continue to support the European Centre for the Validation of Alternative Methods (ECVAM) through contributions to the European Union.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what measures are in place to regulate the breeding of animals specifically for experiments; and if he will introduce further legislation on this issue. [43996]

Angela Eagle: Breeding and supply of animals for use in experimental or other scientific procedures are regulated by the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986. Such animals, as described in Schedule 2 of the Act (which lists the commonly used species), may generally only be obtained from designated breeding and supplying establishments.

These establishments are only designated if, on the advice of the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Inspectorate, or my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State (Mr. Blunkett) is satisfied that they meet minimum animal welfare standards. The standards are set out in the Code of Practice for the Housing and Care of Animals in Designated Breeding and Supplying Establishments, presented to Parliament in 1995 under section 21 of the Act (HC 125, available—along with a recently published supplement—in the Library).

There are no plans to introduce further legislation. The Code of Practice will, however, continue to be supplemented and updated as required, to take account of any additions to Schedule 2 of the Act and of any new developments in the field of animal care.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will establish a mandatory control database to stop unnecessary experiments involving animals. [43994]

Angela Eagle: To meet the requirements of section 5(4) of the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986, any application to use protected animals in research must be the subject of a detailed cost/benefit assessment by Home Office inspectors. The likely adverse effects on the animals concerned must be weighed against the benefit likely to accrue as a result of the proposed programme of work. All procedures are strictly regulated and all applications for licenses to use animals are assessed to ensure that the work is necessary.

For that purpose the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Inspectorate, who offer professional advice and recommendations on licence applications made under the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986, use a range of resources to keep abreast of developments and results in animal research, and the scientific community have established and maintained their own databases to the same end.

A mandatory central database would be problematic for a number of reasons. There would, in particular, be significant difficulties in ensuring the completeness and quality of the data and in ensuring that intellectual or commercial confidentiality were not compromised. We do, however, believe that there is scope for further reducing the risk of duplication of animal testing by encouraging companies to engage in data sharing. To this end, in August 2000, we announced an inter-Departmental concordat on data sharing to enable Government Departments to reduce the duplication of tests on animals. The concordat commits United Kingdom regulatory authorities to help resolve legal and other obstacles and encourage data sharing between clients and thereby reduce animal tests. Progress in implementing the concordat will be reviewed in the next few months.

In addition, there are a number of international and national initiatives to encourage data sharing. International assessment programmes have well-established and effective methods for data sharing, ensuring mutual acceptance of data and dissemination of information on chemicals. This also extends to dissemination of data to developing countries.

Football (Policing Costs)

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department to what extent the annual contribution made to the Metropolitan Police by the Football Association is to cover policing costs at football matches. [35378]

Mr. Denham: The Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis has informed me that the Football Association does not make an annual contribution toward the policing of domestic football matches within the Metropolitan Police Service area. Individual football clubs however do contribute toward costs for games at their respective home grounds.

Payments of around £11,000 in each of the years 2000–01 and 2001–02 have been made by the Football Association in connection with investigations or international matches.

Police Houses

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 4 February 2002, Official Report, column 686W, on police houses, if it is his policy to withdraw the right to buy from a police officer who will be entitled to buy his property on 1 July. [34645]

Mr. Denham: We propose in the Police Reform Bill to remove the Metropolitan Police Authority from the secure tenancy regime: but any secure tenant who has acquired the right to buy at the time of Royal Assent of the Bill will have a three month period of grace to exercise that right.

This will allow any secure tenant who has acquired the right to buy before the day on which the Act is passed and has either served a notice claiming to exercise that right before the Act is passed, or serves such a notice within three months of the Act being passed, to complete the purchase process within the framework of the Housing Act 1985.

Police Accident Investigation Officers

Mr. Grogan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police accident investigation officers were employed in the UK in (a) 1992, (b) 1995, (c) 1998 and (d) 2001. [36549]

Mr. Denham: The information set out below is only for England and Wales as my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary (Mr. Blunkett) is not responsible for policing in Scotland or Northern Ireland.

Information is collected annually by Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Constabulary about the deployment of police service personnel.

I understand from the Inspectorate that it is not possible to identify separately the number of accident investigation officers as they are part of a larger traffic support group within police forces that also undertakes other traffic duties such as speed radar operators, vehicle examiners and hazardous chemical experts.

Firearms

Kate Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department in how many instances 22 single shot pistols of the type used in the Commonwealth and Olympic games have been used in (a) homicide, (b) robbery and (c) other indictable offences during the period since the passing of the Firearms (Amendment) No. 2 Act 1997 and for the same period prior to the passing of that Act. [38656]

Mr. Denham: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Prisons

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he last discussed conditions in prison in England and Wales with the Chief Inspector of Prisons. [43014]

Beverley Hughes: My right hon. Friend the Home Secretary meets Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Prisons, Anne Owers, normally on a quarterly basis to discuss current concerns. The most recent meeting was held on 31 October with the next taking place shortly.

Additionally I meet Her Majesty's Chief Inspector on a regular basis. The last meeting was on 14 February.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on his plans to reduce the prison population. [42892]

Beverley Hughes: We need to ensure that we can perform the basic duty to protect the public by punishing people for the crimes they have committed while ensuring we engage in rehabilitation to reduce re-offending and prevent crime. To this end we are committed to a radical re-think of the sentencing framework so as to give clarity and direction to the courts and avoid the damaging effects of prison overcrowding. Prison must be used as effectively as possible and targeted where it is most necessary. It should be used for incapacitating dangerous, violent and other serious offenders but prison sentences should be as long as necessary for punishment and public protection, and no longer.

The reform of the probation service, with its central focus on reducing re-offending means that rigorously enforced community sentences are a real and tough alternative to imprisonment. We want to build on this work to provide sentencers with more than two stark options, imprisonment or a community sentence. We are looking at intermediate disposals such as intermittent custody and a strengthened suspended sentence. On community sentences the courts need to be able to mix and match with a generic sentence so that we can get it right for the individual. As part of the work taking forward the recommendations of the Halliday report on the sentencing framework we are looking at new forms of community penalties that allow the sentencer this flexibility. We aim to encourage greater use of community penalties for some non-violent offenders such as those convicted of theft and handling or fraud.

Home Detention Curfew and a rigorous assessment process plays an important role by enabling some prisoners to be released from prison, while still subject to restrictions placed on their liberty. This facilitates a smoother and more effective integration back into the community and helps offenders to secure employment as soon as possible.

We are addressing the recent increase in female prison population by taking forward the Government's strategy for female prisoners. A cross-Government women's offenders reduction plan is currently being developed by a multi-agency team drawn from across the criminal justice system, which is based in the Home Office. The aim of the programme is to strengthen policy, programme, research and spending partnerships across government to reduce women's offending. This includes linking criminal justice work with broader Government efforts to tackle social exclusion, particularly as it affects women at risk of offending.

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of (a) men and (b) women in prison are lone parents of children under the age of 18 years. [42961]

Beverley Hughes: There are no centrally collated statistics on this issue.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people who have escaped from prison are still at large; and on what dates they escaped from custody. [43019]

Beverley Hughes: Of the 105 prisoners who have escaped from prison establishments since 1 April 1997 and 8 March this year six remain unlawfully at large. The date of each of these escapes is:

30 December 1998

31 January 1999

26 November 1999

30 August 2000

7 February 2002.

Jail Sentences

Mr. Grieve: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many persons are serving a sentence in jail in England and Wales for (a) driving while disqualified and (b) actual bodily harm. [42788]

Beverley [redacted]: Data are not held centrally on those inmates serving sente[redacted] for driving while disqualified.

The number of persons serving sentences for assault on 31 January 2002:

Offence	Number of sentenced prisoners
Other assault (ABH)[1]	190
Assault occasioning GBH[2]	881
All prisoners sentenced for offences of violence against the person.	11,933

[1] Actual Bodily Harm
[2] Grievous Bodily Harm

Mr. Grieve: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many persons were committed to custody in 2000 for (a) driving while disqualified and (b) actual bodily harm; and what were the average sentence lengths. [42789]

Beverley Hughes: Information taken from the Home Office court proceedings database for 2000 showing the number of persons sentenced to immediate custody and average sentence length imposed for driving while disqualified and assaults occasioning actual bodily harm in England and Wales is given in the table.

Persons sentenced[1] to immediate custody and the average sentence length imposed at all courts for driving while disqualified and assault occasioning actual bodily harm, England & Wales 2000[2]

Offence	Sentenced to immediate custody	Average sentence length (months)
Driving while disqualified	12,501	3.5
Assault occasioning actual bodily harm	4,404	8.0

[1] These data are on the principal offence basis.
[2] Staffordshire police were only able to supply a sample of data for magistrates courts proceedings covering one full week in each quarter for 2000. Estimates based on this sample are included in the figures, as they are considered sufficiently robust at this high level of analysis.

Mr. Lammy: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) young offenders were sentenced to serve non-custodial penalties, (b) offenders were sentenced to serve custodial penalties and (c) offenders were sentenced to serve non-custodial penalties in the last 12 months broken down by the Metropolitan police divisional area in which they were arrested. [42769]

Beverley Hughes: Information collected centrally does not allow a breakdown by police division within the Metropolitan police area, nor does it show where an arrest takes place.

The available information, from the Home Office court proceedings database, relating to 2000 is shown in the table. These data give for each inner London magistrates court and outer London borough (a) young offenders (aged 10–17) sentenced to non-custodial sentences, (b) adult offenders (aged 18 or over) sentenced to custodial sentences, and (c) adult offenders sentenced to non-custodial sentences.

Information on court proceedings for 2001 will be available in the autumn.

Legal Proceedings

Mr. Grieve: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the average time taken between arrest and sentencing of (a) young offenders and (b) adult offenders was in the last 12 months; and if he will make a statement. [42505]

Mr. Wills: I have been asked to reply. Information is not available in the exact form requested. Figures are available on the average time between arrest and sentence for 'persistent' young offenders in England and Wales, as used to monitor the Youth Justice Pledge to halve the average time from arrest to sentence. The latest data available shows that for those sentenced in magistrates courts and the Crown court in the 12 months ending 30 November 2001, the latest month available, the average arrest to sentence time was 77 days. For those sentenced in November 2001 the average arrest to sentence time was 67 days compared with the target of 71 days.

From another source of information the time between arrest and sentence can be estimated for all young offenders sentenced in magistrates courts in England and Wales. For the 12 months ending September 2001, this estimate was 60 days. Similarly for adult offenders the time between charge (the closest available date to arrest) and sentence in magistrates courts was 58 days.

Young Offenders

Mr. Grieve: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proportion of young offenders broke the terms of their bail conditions in the last 12 months; and if he will make a statement. [42506]

Beverley Hughes: Regular statistics on the number of young offenders who break their bail conditions are not available centrally, and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. However, Home Office research published in 1998 showed that juveniles breached their bail conditions in 30 per cent. of cases.

Juvenile bail has been strengthened by the Youth Justice Board's bail support schemes and intensive supervision and surveillance programme. And curfews as a condition of bail, monitored electronically, will be available for 12 to 16-year-olds in six areas from 22 April 2002 and nationally from 1 June 2002.

National Probation Service

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the cost to public funds of the National Probation Service information system. [43121]

Beverley Hughes: A full breakdown of the costs of the National Probation Service information systems strategy can be found in the National Audit Office report published on 26 April 2001, HC401 Session 2000–01.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the business benefits derived from the introduction of the National Probation Service information system strategy. [43119]

Beverley Hughes: The National Probation Directorate will conduct a post-contract review of the National Probation Service information systems strategy (NPSISS) contract which will include consideration of benefits delivery to the Service.

I can say in advance of this review that the qualitative benefits to the National Probation Service (NPS) resulting from NPSISS include; the introduction of a network infrastructure which covers 38 of the 42 probation areas; the ability for electronic communication between these areas, the Directorate, Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Probation and the Research and Statistics Unit; and the deployment of Lotus Notes across the Service. In addition this technology has given probation staff the opportunity to develop information technology skills providing the NPS with a computer literate workforce.

Mr. Grieve: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many National Probation Services accredited programmes have been completed, broken down by probation area. [42790]

Beverley Hughes: This information is compiled on a quarterly basis. Figures for the first three quarters of 2001–02 (the most current information available) are:

Road Accidents

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what duties the police have to carry out before an accident site can be cleared from (a) an A-road and (b) a motorway; [42749]

(2) what the average length of time was which it took for the police to clear an accident on (a) a motorway and (b) an A-road, in order to return the road to normal use; [42750]

(3) what the average response times were for the police to reach an accident on (a) a motorway and (b) an A-road in the last three years; [42748]

(4) what is the average length of time it took the police to complete all their official duties at an accident site on (a) an A-road and (b) a motorway in each of the last three years. [42751]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: Information relating to the average time taken to reach accident sites on A-roads and motorways, to clear the site and to complete official duties are not recorded centrally. Individual forces have accident response time targets, of between 10 and 15 minutes. These targets are not uniform across the country to allow for differences in terrain, road infrastructure and police resources.

The main duties performed by the police in dealing with road accidents do not vary substantially between A-roads and motorways. They are:

(a) to gain access to the scene;

(b) to make the scene safe through coning and signing;

(c) to assist any injured party by effecting rescue or through first aid;

(d) to arrange attendance of other agencies to assist in rescue and scene management;

(e) to preserve the accident scene and undertake crash investigation when appropriate;

(f) to manage the traffic around the accident scene;

(g) to protect and recover property;

(h) to manage the handover of scene management to the Highways Agency; and

(i) where there are fatalities, to work in accordance with coroner's procedures in relation to the removal of bodies.

Experience Corps

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many inquiries he has received from residents in the constituency of Buckingham about setting up experience corps in the last 12 months. [43286]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 13 March 2002]: I have not received any inquiries about the experience corps from residents of the constituency of Buckingham in the last 12 months.

Justice and Home Affairs Council (Scottish Representation)

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department for what reason no devolved Administration Minister attended the 2411 European Union Council of Ministers (Justice and Home Affairs) meeting on 28 February, which particular matters of concern from the Scottish Executive were raised by the UK Government delegation; and what information is being provided by his Department to guarantee effective post-council scrutiny by the European Committee of the Scottish Parliament. [42688]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 12 March 2002]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 27 February 2002, reference number 38035.

Arrangements allowing for the attendance of Ministers from the devolved administrations at Council of Ministers meetings are set out in the Concordat on Co-ordination of European Union Policy Issues which supplements the Memorandum of Understanding between the devolved administrations and the United Kingdom (UK) Government. Discussions on the composition of the UK delegation to specific Council meetings are normally conducted on a confidential basis. The Concordat further provides that a single UK negotiating position will be formulated and advanced. It states that the role of Ministers and officials from the devolved administrations will be to support and advance the single UK negotiating line which they will have played a part in developing.

I reported the outcome of the Justice and Home Affairs Council of 28 February 2002, in my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Falkirk, East (Mr. Connarty), Deputy Chairman of the House of Commons European Scrutiny Committee on 15 March 2002, Official Report, column 1258W.

Arrangements for post-Council scrutiny in Scotland are a matter for the European Committee of the Scottish Parliament and the Scottish Executive. The Home Office provides information to Scottish Executive officials as part of that process.

Jury Trial

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the Government's plans to change the rights of defendants to elect a jury trial. [42894]

Mr. Keith Bradley: The removal of the defendant's rights to elect jury trial in either-way cases was one of the recommendations made by Lord Justice Auld in his Review of the Criminal Courts, and the matter remains under consideration, along with the rest of the Auld report.

Domestic Violence

Margaret Moran: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will introduce a national register of injunctions in cases of domestic violence. [43542]

Beverley Hughes: The ministerial group on domestic violence is considering this idea in consultation with practitioners. The Government's conclusions will be announced as soon as possible.

Margaret Moran: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps are being taken by his Department to improve domestic violence services for perpetrators and their partners; and if he will make a statement on the progress of the Probation Service domestic violence Pathfinder scheme. [42664]

Beverley Hughes: Two Pathfinder initiatives on domestic violence are under way. One is to pilot the Duluth Non-violent Men programme. The other is a major piece of research to identify the criminogenic needs of domestic violence perpetrators, in order to establish an evidence based way of addressing this type of offending.

The research into the pilot phase of the Duluth programme is due to finish in October 2002, and a report on it will be available over the winter of 2002–03. The research project is due to be completed in August 2002.

The National Probation Service is committed to completing the Pathfinders and to using the knowledge gained to review services to domestic violence perpetrators, in order to maximise reductions in abusive behaviour and develop services to enhance victim safety.

Margaret Moran: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects the results of the Duluth domestic violence Pathfinder evaluation to be published. [42659]

Beverley Hughes: The pilots are due to finish in September 2002 and interim evaluations will be available approximately three months after that. Longer term evaluations linking the programme to reconvictions will follow subsequently, but it is not possible at this stage to say when they will be available.

Margaret Moran: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department under what circumstances the Duluth domestic violence Pathfinder will be rolled out before the results of the evaluation are known. [42663]

Beverley Hughes: The Duluth programme will not be rolled out nationally unless it can be demonstrated that it meets the criteria for accreditation laid down by the Joint Prison/Probation Accreditation Panel.

Drug-related Crime (Bristol)

Dr. Naysmith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what further schemes the social exclusion unit is planning for Bristol, with specific reference to policies which might help combat drug-related crime. [40128]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth [holding answer 13 March 2002]: There are a number of programmes in place in Bristol to tackle drug-related crime and anti-social behaviour.

The Home Office fund a number of initiatives, some of which include:

an Arrest Referral Scheme based at Trinity Road police station, specialising in providing for crack cocaine treatment; an 'Off the Street' initiative, working to disrupt the drug/sex market; and Avon and Somerset Constabulary's Operation Atrium, working to disrupt the supply system of importation of crack cocaine.

My right hon. Friend the Home Secretary (Mr. Blunkett) has also announced a policing priority area in Bristol which will help police tackle drug-related crime.

Overstayers

Fiona Mactaggart: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people who applied under the regularisation scheme for overstayers have had their cases (a) decided, (b) granted, (c) refused and (d) not yet considered; and what the target date for completing consideration of applications is. [42960]

Angela Eagle: A total of 17,120 applications were received by the closing date. In response to a ministerial commitment caseworking staff have been asked to consider applications in a phased way. Resources have been invested during the current financial year to sift all applications in order to speedily identify all those cases where leave to remain can be granted under existing policy concessions. Indications are that this target will be met, and so far approximately 1,200 cases have been granted indefinite leave to remain.

During the next financial year (2002–03) more caseworkers and resources will be devoted to substantive consideration of the remaining cases. The target date for the consideration of all cases is April 2003.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Malins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many asylum seekers are being held in Prison Service accommodation. [43038]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 14 March 2002]: The latest available information on the number of persons detained under Immigration Act powers relates to 29 December 2001. The total number of asylum seekers detained in prison establishments as at that date is given in the table.

Place of detention	Asylum seekers detained as at 29 December 2001[1,2]
Dedicated Immigration Service wings[3]	295
Other prison establishments[4]	170
Total persons detained in prison establishments[4]	465

[1] Figures rounded to the nearest five.
[2] Persons detained under Immigration Act powers who are recorded as having claimed asylum at some stage.
[3] Persons detained at the dedicated Immigration Service wings at Haslar, Lindholme and Rochester.
[4] Includes 125 persons detained under dual immigration and other powers.

The temporary use of spaces in a number of local prisons ended in mid-January 2002, as did the use of the accommodation at Her Majesty's Prison Rochester. In addition, the dedicated detention facilities at Her Majesty's Prison Haslar and Her Majesty's Prison Lindholme were redesignated formally as immigration removal centres on 8 February 2002, thus requiring them to operate under detention centre rules rather than prison rules. These changes will not be reflected fully in the statistics until the information on Immigration Act detainees as at 30 March 2002 is published on 31 May 2002 on the Home Office Research, Development and Statistics Directorate website at http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/immigration1.html.

Following the incident at Yarl's Wood removal centre on 14–15 February 2002 a number of detainees held at that centre and others have been transferred to prison accommodation. This is consistent with our policy on the use of prison accommodation for detainees who pose particular control and security risks.

Mr. Malins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he has changed his policy on his commitment not to house asylum seekers in prisons; and if he will make a statement; [43031]

(2) if asylum seekers who have not had an initial decision on their case are being held in Prison Service accommodation. [43030]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 14 March 2002]: Our policy on the detention of asylum seekers in prison remains as set out in our White Paper "Secure Borders, Safe Haven—Integration with Diversity in Modern Britain". We made it clear that, although the routine use of prison accommodation for immigration detainees had ended, there would remain a need to hold small numbers of individuals, including asylum seekers, in prison for reasons of security. This would, for example, include individuals transferred to prison accommodation following the incident at Yarl's Wood removal centre on 14–15 February 2002. Such individuals would be identified on the basis of the security risk they are assessed to pose rather than on the progress of any asylum or other claim they may have made. As such, individuals who are assessed to pose a security risk and who have yet to receive a decision on their asylum application may be held in prison accommodation.

Julie Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if asylum seekers with dependent children will be eligible for subsistence benefits for them and their children if they choose to live with family or friends in the UK under his immigration and asylum proposals. [40681]

Angela Eagle: The White Paper "Secure Borders, Safe Haven—Integration with Diversity in Modern Britain" (Chapter 4 Paragraph 53) makes it clear that for the future, the case for abolishing the subsistence only option will be looked at and a power to allow this will be taken in forthcoming legislation. As yet we have not set any timetable for ending the subsistence only support option.

Paragraph 4.33 of the White Paper makes it clear that asylum seekers who refuse the offer of a place in one of the accommodation centres being trialled will not be offered any alternative forms of support. There is no reason why these proposals should lead to greater destitution among asylum seekers. We will be offering both accommodation and subsistence support to those who need it.

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Mid-Worcestershire (Mr. Luff) of 13 February 2002, Official Report, column 461W, on asylum seeker accommodation centres, when the final criteria for selection of the four accommodation centres will be decided; who will draw up the final criteria; and how this information will be announced. [42747]

Angela Eagle: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Mid-Worcestershire (Mr. Luff) on 11 March 2002, Official Report, column 718W.

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Banbury (Tony Baldry) of 5 March 2002, Official Report, column 160W, on asylum seeker accommodation centres, what education facilities will be made available to asylum seekers; and what role (a) local schools, (b) colleges and (c) other education institutions will be expected to take in the provision of education. [42727]

Angela Eagle: The trial accommodation centres will offer education facilities. We are working with key stakeholders to establish the range of facilities that will be available to children on-site and what if any role local schools, colleges and other educational institutions will be expected to take.

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many asylum seekers are detained; and of these how many are (a) awaiting an initial decision on their asylum claim and (b) awaiting an appeal. [42947]

Angela Eagle: The latest available information on the number of persons detained under Immigration Act powers relates to 29 December 2001. As at that date, 1,410 persons (to the nearest five) were being detained who had sought asylum at some stage.

I regret that the requested information on how many of these persons were awaiting an initial decision on their asylum claim and how many were awaiting an appeal on 29 December 2001, is not available and could be obtained only by examining individual case files at disproportionate cost.

Information on Immigration Act detainees as at 30 March 2002 will be published on 31 May 2002 on the Home Office Research, Development and Statistics Directorate website at http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/immigration1.html.

Mr. Caton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department who will serve an asylum seeker's appeal dismissal when it is served personally on the other parties and the appellant's representative, if he has one, under the rules that came into force on 7 January. [42907]

Angela Eagle: An official of the Immigration and Nationality Directorate (IND) serves the appeal determination, either in person, by post or by facsimile. If the asylum seeker's representative is present at the time of personal service, they will receive simultaneous notification from the official serving the determination on their client. If the representative is not present, it is usual practice for an IND official to provide notification, normally by facsimile, within 24 hours.

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many asylum seekers have been dispersed to areas in Scotland in the last 12 months, broken down by local authority; and what percentage of these have had their asylum applications approved. [42737]

Angela Eagle: The only cluster area to which the National Asylum Support Service (NASS) disperses asylum seekers in Scotland is Glasgow.

As at the end of December 2001, 4,750 asylum seekers (including dependants) were being supported in NASS accommodation in Glasgow. The cumulative number dispersed to Glasgow over the last 12 months is not currently available.

This information broken down by local authority is not currently available.

NASS does not currently hold statistics on the asylum status of supported asylum seekers.

Commission for Racial Equality

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has for making Commissioner appointments to the Commission for Racial Equality. [45702]

Mr. Blunkett: I am pleased to announce that I have today appointed seven commissioners for the Commission for Racial Equality.

The appointments are:

Khurshid Ahmed, who is currently a non-executive director of Dudley Group of Hospitals National Health Service Trust;

Ian Barr, who will represent the interests of the Confederation of British Industry and is the co-founder and managing director of Astar Management Consultants Ltd;

Jagdish Singh Gundara, who is currently Professor of Education at the Institute of Education, University of London;

Kay Hampton, who will represent Scottish interests and is currently a lecturer in sociology at Glasgow Caledonian University;

Gloria Mills, who will represent the interests of the Trade Unions Congress and is currently the Director of Equalities at UNISON;

Cherry Short, who will continue to represent Welsh interests at the Commission, and Sarah Spencer who is the Director of Citizenship & Governance at the Institute for Public Policy Research.

The appointments will initially be for four years.

The role of the commission is central to the drive for securing equality for all our citizens, and cohesion between diverse communities of our country. I want the commission to make a real difference to community relations in the years ahead.

In addition to these seven new appointments I will be recruiting two further commissioners with significant experience of working in the community to help support the commission's priority of building links with communities and particularly with young people.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Census (1901)

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how much of the work to transcribe the 1901 Census returns on to computer was carried out outside the United Kingdom; and if she will make a statement. [38543]

Ms Rosie Winterton: QinetiQ Ltd. appointed Enterprise and Supply Services (ESS) to undertake the transcription of the data from the 1901 Census returns. A proportion of this work was sub-contracted by ESS after full competitive tendering to a commercial data input company based in India and Sri Lanka (Hays Document Management). The proportion of transcription work undertaken outside the United Kingdom was 78 per cent.

Social Diversity

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how he proposes to ensure social diversity among JPs. [41549]

Mr. Wills: I know that my hon. Friend is concerned about this issue. My noble and learned Friend the Lord Chancellor is determined that the social composition of the magistracy reflects the community it serves, subject to all magistrates fulfilling the merit criteria for appointment. He will consider any suggestions from hon. Members how this can be achieved. Separated the national strategy for the recruitment of magistrates will supplement the efforts already being made by the Lord Chancellor's local advisory committees to deliver this aim. It will be published in the spring. I would be happy to meet my hon. Friend to discuss any ideas he may have for ensuring social diversity.

Magistrates Courts

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will make a statement on his plans to reform the structure of the magistrates court system. [43459]

Mr. Wills: Sir Robin Auld's Review of the Criminal Courts in England and Wales makes wide-ranging recommendations in respect of the magistrates courts. The period for comment closed on 31 January. The Government have taken no decisions on the report and is now considering the recommendations in detail, taking account of the comments received. The Government will announce its conclusions by way of a White Paper in the spring.

Consultants

Mr. Edward Davey: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department (1) if he will place in the Library copies of the consultancy work purchased by the Greater London Magistrates Court Authority in drawing up their Strategic Plan, 2002 to 2006; and if he will make a statement; [43796]

(2) if he will place in the Library copies of the consultancy work purchased by the Greater London Magistrates' Court Authority in drawing up their proposals to close the Magistrates court at the Guildhall, Kingston-upon-Thames; and if he will make a statement; [43797]

(3) which consultants have been employed by the Greater London Magistrates Courts Authority since it was established; how much has been spent by the GLMCA on consultants; and what the remits were for each of the consultancy projects the GLMCA has procured. [43798]

Mr. Wills: Decisions on the number, location and future of magistrates' courts in the Greater London area are for the Greater London Magistrates Courts Authority to determine, in consultation with its local paying authorities. The issues raised in these three questions are, therefore, matters for that authority.

Constituency Duties (Data Protection)

Bob Spink: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department (1) if he will take steps to make available to all hon. Members a pro forma standard consent form, for use in discharging their constituency duties, giving legal authority and protection when personal information has to be made available to an hon. Member by a statutory body; [42504]

(2) if he will make it his policy to review data protection legislation to allow personal information held by statutory bodies to be shared with hon. Members strictly in connection with their duties in helping constituents. [42503]

Mr. Wills: I am aware of the hon. Members' concern about the effect of the Data Protection Act 1998 on their constituency work. In consultation with my right hon. Friend the Leader of the House, I am considering what changes might be needed to the present arrangements.

Court Sittings

Mr. Edward Davey: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will list the monthly court sitting hours for (a) 1998, (b) 1999, (c) 2000 and (d) 2001 for the magistrates courts in (i) Kingston-upon-Thames, (ii) Merton, (iii) Richmond-upon-Thames, (iv) Sutton and (v) Croydon. [43799]

Mr. Wills: Court sitting hours are collected annually for the Magistrates Courts Committees (MCC) areas rather than individual courts. The figures for the five MCC areas in the question are contained in the table. Figures for 2001–02 are not yet available for the single entity of the Greater London Magistrates Courts Authority (GLMCA) which was formed in April 2001 and incorporates the previous 22 Greater London MCCs including the five courts in question.

Court sitting hours

	1998[1]	April 1999 to March 2000[1]	April 2000 to March 2001
Kingston upon Thames	2,915	2,960	2,718
Merton	3,426	3,670	4,148
Richmond upon Thames	2,920	2,606	3,134
Sutton	2,622	2,628	2,780
Croydon	7,273	6,658	7,098

[1] At the end of 1998, the system was amended to collection based upon financial rather than calendar years.

Community Court Orders

Mr. Grieve: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many warrants in respect of breach of community court orders have been outstanding for (a) less than 12 months, (b) 12 months to two years, (c) two to three years, (d) three to four years, (e) four to five years and (f) five years or more. [42792]

Mr. Wills: Lead responsibility for execution of community penalty breach warrants was transferred from the police to Magistrates Courts Committees on 1 April 2001. Prior to the transfer, statistics on community penalty breach warrants were not routinely kept. LCD is now collecting data but complete figures are not yet available. Of the community penalty breach warrants issued since the transfer, 10,034 were outstanding as at 28 December 2001.

As a result of the transfer, the courts now control the whole enforcement process and can give the work higher priority. From April 2002, the courts will be given almost £10 million extra—ring-fenced for enforcement. I have also announced challenging performance targets for next year which will highlight performance on community penalty breach warrants.

Persistent Offenders

Vernon Coaker: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what powers are available to the courts to detain persistent offenders under 16 years who are (a) charged with and (b) guilty of non-violent offences; and if he will make a statement. [42244]

Mr. Wills: The decision whether to grant bail or not is a judicial decision taken within the statutory framework provided by the Bail Act 1976. The court may refuse to grant bail where it finds there are substantial grounds to believe that one or more of the statutory exceptions in the Act apply. Where the court finds such grounds and refuses bail, it must then decide where the youth shall be remanded. The courts' powers and the restrictions on those powers are set out in section 23 of the Children and Young Persons Act 1969

The courts' powers to order custody in respect of persistent offenders under 16 who are convicted of non-violent offences are set out in the Powers of Criminal Courts Acts (Sentencing) Act 2000. Section 100 sets out the courts' powers to impose a detention and training order of up to two years. Section 91 sets out the Crown Court's powers to order a youth to be detained for certain serious offences for a period not exceeding the maximum term of imprisonment with which the offence is punishable in the case of an adult aged 21 or over. These powers are subject to the general restrictions in section 79 of the 2000 Act on imposing discretionary custodial sentences.

Territorial Forces

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many members of staff of her Department are members of the Territorial forces; and if her Department has a strategy to encourage members of staff to become members of the Territorial forces. [44064]

Ms Rosie Winterton: We have staff who are members of the Territorial forces, although we keep no central record of numbers. We actively support members by providing eight working days paid special leave for training (of 15 days or more), as well as unpaid leave if they are required to undertake a period of mobilised service.

Magistrates Courts

Mr. Edward Davey: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department (1) what indicators and methods his Department uses to measure the satisfaction of magistrates courts' users; and if he will make a statement; [43776]

(2) what measures his Department uses to assess the quality of service and facilities provided by a magistrates courthouse; and if he will make a statement. [43777]

Mr. Wills: Quality of service in magistrates courts areas is assessed bi-annually by questionnaire and survey. Users are asked to rate their satisfaction with court facilities and the information given to them. The methodology and results are explained fully in LCD Information Bulletin 1/2002, copies of which are lodged in the Library of the House. This latest bulletin, issued on 7 March, covers the survey results for 2001.

Mr. Edward Davey: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what performance measures his Department uses to judge the financial efficiency of magistrates courts; what the performance of each courthouse against those measures was in Greater London in (a) 1998, (b) 1999, (c) 2000 and (d) 2001; and if he will make a statement. [43778]

Mr. Wills: Cost per unit of weighted caseload is the financial efficiency performance indicator for magistrates courts. This indicator uses the gross expenditure in a year divided by the total unitary value of completed caseload. The measure is collected and assessed at the administrative level of the magistrates courts committees (MCCs), as set out in the table for 1998–99, 1999–2000 and 2000–01. Figures for 2001–02 are not yet available, and when they are produced they will only be available for the single entity of the Greater London Magistrates Courts Authority, (GLMCA), which was formed in April 2001 and incorporates the previous 22 Greater London MCCs.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Rehabilitation Leave

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what recent representations he has received on the introduction of rehabilitation leave after trauma or sudden infirmity. [44264]

Maria Eagle: At their conference on 7 March the Royal National Institute for the Blind, in their employment strategy document Work Matters, raised the issue of disability leave to allow people losing their sight to get time off work for intensive rehabilitation, mobility training and the opportunity to learn new skills.

The Disability Rights Task Force considered this and concluded that the reasonable adjustment provisions of the Disability Discrimination Act provide adequate arrangements for employees affected. We are continuing to work with the Disability Rights Commission and employers to promote the retention and rehabilitation of people who become disabled.

Stolen Equipment

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, pursuant to the answer of 23 January 2002, Official Report, columns 851–52W, on stolen equipment, whether the computer equipment stolen from his Department was (a) new and unused and (b) used; and what was the nature of the data stored on such items in each case. [42643]

Malcolm Wicks: The information is not available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. From May 1997 to March 2001 there have been no reported cases of equipment stolen containing protectively marked data.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) whom he has appointed to his Regulation Scrutiny Group; and what is its remit; [42253]

(2) what plans he has to introduce changes to the housing benefit and council tax benefit schemes twice a year. [42254]

Malcolm Wicks: The Regulation Scrutiny Group is made up of officials from the Department and representatives appointed by the local authority associations. Its remit is to consider proposed changes to housing benefit and council tax benefit and to make recommendations on the timing of such changes, taking account of local authorities' capacity to implement them.

We have already made a commitment to the local authority associations that changes to regulations will only be introduced in April and October of each year apart from in very exceptional circumstances. This, combined with the Regulation Scrutiny Group, will go a long way to improving the handling of essential changes to the housing benefit and council tax benefit schemes.

Incapacity Benefit

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) how many claimants for incapacity benefit underwent a medical examination in (a) 1999, (b) 2000 and (c) 2001; and at what cost to public funds; [40783]

(2) what the policy of his Department is towards claimants for incapacity benefit who do not attend an appointment for a medical examination; [40791]

(3) how many claimants for incapacity benefit did not attend the medical examination arranged for them in (a) 1999, (b) 2000 and (c) 2001; and at what cost to public funds. [40792]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: People who have been receiving incapacity benefit for more than 28 weeks normally undergo a personal capability assessment (PCA). The purpose of the PCA is to determine that a person meets the threshold of incapacity to continue receiving benefit. In addition, in selected pilot areas, examining doctors are able to produce a capability report for the person's personal adviser. The capability report helps those who wish to return to work by shifting the emphasis from disability to ability.

As part of the PCA process, a person may be called, where appropriate, to attend a medical examination. The importance of keeping an appointment along with the potential consequences of not attending are clearly highlighted in the supporting documentation sent to the person.

When a person fails to attend an appointment he or she is asked to provide written details of their reasons for non-attendance. The reasons, along with any other relevant information, are presented to a decision maker for consideration of whether there was good cause for not attending the appointment. The good cause provision acts as a safeguard for vulnerable people and those with genuine difficulties.

A decision maker decides good cause by considering all the evidence and applying the law to the facts of the claim. Each case is considered on merit and all relevant circumstances, including the person's state of health, are taken into account. If it is decided to withdraw entitlement, then the person can ask for the decision to be reconsidered or referred to an independent appeal tribunal.

The available information is in the tables.

Number of medical examinations

Year	Number of medical examinations	Cost of incapacity benefit examinations (£)
1999[1]	432,210	22,004,978
2001	455,454	[2]28,654,598

[1] Figures for the number of medical examinations performed are not available until the beginning of the 1999–2000 financial year. Therefore, figures for the period 1 January to 31 March 1999 have been estimated.

[2] A restructuring of prices took place during 2001. As a result of this, the cost of incapacity benefit examinations increased, but this was offset by a reduction in the cost of Incapacity Benefit scrutiny reports.

Press Office

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many staff in his Department's press office have received (a) termination and (b) redundancy payments in each of the last four years. [41079]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: None.

Pensioners Tax Credit

David Hamilton: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assessment has been made of the impact of the pensioners tax credit on pensioners in receipt of modest occupational pensions who are being taxed. [31353]

Mr. McCartney: Pension credit, which is not a tax credit, will have a positive impact on the small proportion of recipients with modest occupational pensions who also pay tax, as pension credit itself is tax free.

Retired People (Tooting)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many retired people in the Tooting constituency are in receipt of the minimum income guarantee. [38205]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: The information requested is in the table.

Jobcentre Plus

Ian Lucas: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will direct the Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus to consent to referring the current dispute with the Public and Commercial Services Union to ACAS for arbitration. [33531]

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if the PCS Union has agreed to refer the dispute over safety at work in the Benefits Agency and jobcentres to arbitration; and what the view is of Her Majesty's Government on this process. [32872]

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether the recent dispute between the Public and Commercial Services Union and the Benefits Agency over screening in benefits offices will be referred to ACAS; and if he will make a statement. [32763]

John McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions for what reason in the course of the industrial dispute over safety in Jobcentre Plus the involvement of ACAS has been specifically excluded as a means to bring this dispute to a resolution. [40503]

Mr. Nicholas Brown [holding answers 5 and 6 February 2002]: While conciliation and arbitration can be of value, it would not be appropriate in this instance to refer the current dispute to ACAS as the Public and Commercial Services Union has proposed. The fundamental principles underpinning the delivery of Jobcentre Plus are at the heart of the welfare modernisation and customer service improvement to which the Government are committed. They are not ones about which it is appropriate to seek arbitration.

John McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) if he will list the (a) subject matter, (b) dates and (c) times of (i) discussions, (ii) telephone conversations and (iii) meetings, (A) he and (B) the Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus has had between 1 January and 28 February with (1) Mark Serwtoka, (2) Barry Reamsbottom, (3) Alan Churchyard and (4) Eddie Spence; [40500]

(2) if he will list the (a) subject matter, (b) individuals involved, (c) dates and (d) times of (i) discussions, (ii) telephone conversations and (iii) meetings he has had with the TUC in connection with the current trade dispute between his Department and the PCS Union; [40501]

(3) if he will list the dates and times of discussions, telephone conversations and meetings (a) he, (b) the Chief Executive, (c) Kevin White and (d) other senior managers in his Department have had with the PCS Union with regard to the Jobcentre Plus industrial dispute over safety; and which PCS Union senior officials those meetings and conversations were held with, between 4 September 2001 and 1 March 2002; [40502]

(4) what the overall cost arising from industrial dispute over safety in Jobcentre Plus is; and what expenditure has resulted. [40504]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: Managers have had over 60 hours of discussions with PCS. There have been numerous other contacts and approaches but we have been asked to treat these as confidential.

We estimate that around £5.5 million has been saved in staff salaries since September.

Pensions

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what plans he has to promote understanding of the importance of pension provision among young people. [37117]

Malcolm Wicks: The Government are committed to promoting the importance of pension provision to young people—as well as other groups.

The Government's pension education strategy includes providing information to people about their pension provision through pension forecasts, raising awareness of retirement planning through a publicity campaign. This includes activity aimed at young people, such as: advertising in publications and during TV programmes whose readership or viewers include a high number of young people; specific direct marketing activity for young people such as a targeted newspaper insert and direct mail to young people, and testing new ways to get information out to the public, for example through an interactive digital television pilot—due to launch this spring, which will have a section dedicated to a younger audience.

In addition, my Department continues to liaise with other Government Departments, the Financial Services Authority, employers, private pension providers and other organisations and groups to improve the way we provide pension information to consumers—including young people.

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will estimate how much exists in purchase pension pots that were annuitised in each of the last five years; and how much he expects will be annuitised in the next five years. [37031]

Maria Eagle: The information is not available as requested.

The latest available information on the value of annuities sold is in the tables. This information is from the Association of British Insurers (ABI), and the values quoted are in cash terms prices. The figures are for all annuities purchased—which will include those purchased by pension funds which are not money purchase. However most annuities will have been sold to money purchase occupational pension funds and to individuals converting personal pensions.

We do not have any information as to how much we expect will be annuitised in the next five years.

Pension Credit

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the marginal benefit withdrawal rate will be from October 2003 for a pensioner on the pension credit who also receives (a) council tax benefit, (b) housing benefit and (c) council tax benefit and housing benefit. [24234]

Mr. McCartney: The information requested is shown in the following tables. The tables show the marginal deduction rates applied to people under minimum income guarantee or pension credit regimes who also receive any combination of housing and council tax benefits.

Pension credit recipients with income above the guarantee credit who are also entitled to housing and council tax benefits will experience higher withdrawal rates than under the minimum income guarantee. However, these people will see gains from the introduction of the savings credit, the fairer treatment of capital and the extension of the applicable amounts in housing and council tax benefit due to our proposals for pension credit. This means that a single pensioner over 65 with marginal deduction rates of 91 per cent. will gain at least £11 a week (couples will gain at least £15.81). It also means that almost 1.9 million pensioner households will get more help, or get help for the first time, with their rent or council tax.

Notes for all tables:

1. It is assumed that a pensioner with HB and/or CTB entitlement was entitled to these benefits before the introduction of pension credit.

2. Although single pensioners with income under £77 and pensioner couples with income under £123 face 100 per cent. marginal deduction rates their final income will be raised to the amount of the guarantee credit as a result of the introduction of pension credit.

3. Tables 3 and 4 show gains due only to the savings credit and the extension of the applicable amounts in housing and council tax benefits by the maximum savings credit. Some pensioners will gain more because of the changes to the treatment of capital and the more generous income assessment.

Mental Health

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what plans he has to increase the level of in-patient care for those spending over a year in mental health hospitals above the present weekly allowance. [40651]

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions at what level the personal allowance for mental health patients requiring in-patient care is set; and if he plans to review it. [41469]

Maria Eagle: There are no plans to change the amount by which benefits are reduced for hospital in-patients who have been in hospital for more than 52 weeks.

The hospital downrating rules prevent double provision from public funds as the publicly funded NHS maintains people while they stay in hospital as well as providing free treatment. Social security maintenance benefits are also paid from state funds. They are therefore not paid in full indefinitely where a person is in a NHS hospital and having their day to day living expenses met through the NHS.

The double provision principle is a key cornerstone of the system of national insurance introduced over 50 years ago.

However, we also recognise that people have on-going financial commitments while in hospital, and although we consider the six week rule strikes a fair balance between what the state should provide financially and the provision individuals should make for themselves, we have none the less decided to extend the period before benefits are downrated by a further seven weeks to the 13 week stage. This will mean that people previously affected by the six week rule will be able to keep their benefits untouched if their period of stay in hospital is under 13 weeks. Benefit is generally then not downrated again until after 52 weeks.

Benefit is adjusted in this way because, generally speaking, the national health service will have assumed the responsibility of providing for patients who have spent more than 52 weeks in hospital. The personal requirements allowance is regarded as a reasonable amount to cover small personal items not already provided by the hospital.

Incomes

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will list the (a) mean and (b) median income of (i) single men aged 65 to 74 years, (ii) single men aged 75 years and over, (iii) single women aged 65 to 74 years and (iv) single women aged 75 years and over, (v) pensioner couples aged 65 to 74 years and (vi) pensioner couples aged 75 years and over for the latest year for which figures are available. [39545]

Mr. McCartney: The information requested is given in the table.

Net weekly income before housing costs 1999–2000

	Mean	Median
Single men aged 65 to 74 years	183	134
Single men aged 75 years and over	162	131
Single women aged 65 to 74 years	144	123
Single women aged 75 years and over	134	121
Couples aged 65 to 74 years	299	234
Couples aged 75 years and over	245	201

Notes:
1. Income is defined here as net income before housing costs.
2. Amounts are in £ per week at July 1999 prices and are rounded to the nearest £1.
3. A pensioner couple is defined as a married or cohabiting couple.
4. Pensioner couples are allocated to age categories according to the age of the head. The head of a couple is defined as the man.

Departmental Advertising

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what advertising campaigns his Department is (a) running and (b) planning for the future; what the committed spend on marketing is for the 2001–02 financial year; and what estimate has been made of the final cost of all his Department's marketing in the 2001–02 financial year. [7898]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: We are currently (February/March) running the following advertising campaigns: Pensions education, Inherited SERPS, New Deal 25 Plus, and DDA awareness.

Between October 2001 and February 2002 the following campaigns ran: New Deal 25 Plus, Targeting Benefit Fraud, New Deal for Disabled People, Winter Fuel Payment awareness, Pensions education.

Major campaigns costing over £250,000 for the financial year 2001–02 are as follows:

New Deal for Disabled People—£850,000: A national campaign to launch NDDP, covering press advertising in national and regional titles, supported by a helpline, website and publicity material.

New Deal 50 Plus—£500,000: A regional campaign to encourage more of the over-50s into work and to increase their awareness of the local help available.

New Deal 25 Plus—£500,000: A national campaign to inform the public about changes to the programme through radio advertising, a video and printed materials, supported by research.

Age Positive—£500,000: PR (including direct mail and partnerships with regional newspapers, sponsoring an award, exhibitions, research and promotional material) to raise employers' awareness of the business benefits of employing an age-diverse work force.

Work Incentives—£450,000: Advertising campaign on local radio to raise awareness of the range of financial initiatives available to those moving from benefits into employment if they meet the qualifying criteria.

Pensions Education—£7,520,000: A publicity campaign to encourage people to save for their retirement and understand the pension options available to them.

State Second Pension—£500,000: Development and implementation of publicity to inform carers about how new state pension rules could help them—linked to the overall pensions education campaign.

Pensioners' Guide—£1,058,000: Production and distribution of a guide on cross-Government help and services for pensioners.

Winter Fuel Payments—£716,000: Information for people aged 60 plus and advisers about winter fuel payments and activity reminding them to claim and telling them how to claim for winter 2001 and for relevant previous winters.

Changes to rules on inherited SERPS—£453,000: Publicity about the change to the rules on inheriting the State Earnings-Related Pensions Scheme.

Targeting Fraud—£9,000,000: A national advertising campaign on television, radio, press and posters to deter dishonest behaviour, reinforced by regional press advertising showing that benefit fraudsters are regularly caught and punished.

Disability Discrimination Act Awareness—£3,000,000: A national, regional and trade press advertising campaign to raise the public's awareness of the DDA and specifically to encourage service providers to ensure that disabled people have access to their services.

Other activity is being considered but nothing has been finalised.

Allocations, and therefore spend, are not set in stone at the beginning of the financial year, but remain flexible throughout the year responding to need as and when required.

Mr. Tom Mann

Mr. Blunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will issue advice to decision-makers for (a) attendance allowance and (b) disability living allowance to give full weight to the definition of virtually unable to walk as given in Cassinelli v. Secretary of State for Social Services, Times Law report 6.12.91, following the Chairman's ruling on 11 February at the reconstituted tribunal set up by the Sutton Benefits Agency office concerning Mr. Tom Mann. [39412]

Maria Eagle: The 1991 judgment of the Court of Appeal in Cassinelli v. Secretary of State for Social Services was concerned only with the meaning of the test of "severe discomfort" in relation to whether the manner in which a person could make progress on foot out of doors was so limited that he could be taken to be virtually unable to walk for the purpose of entitlement to mobility allowance. The court held that the test is one of severe discomfort rather than of severe pain or distress. This is not relevant to (a) attendance allowance, for which entitlement depends upon a severely disabled person's need for personal attention, supervision or watching over from another person; but (b) it continues to be relevant to the higher rate mobility component of disability living allowance, which replaced mobility allowance in 1992, and the guidance to decision makers about that component in the Decision Makers Guide cites the meaning of "severe discomfort" given in the Cassinelli judgment as the one to be followed when considering whether a person is virtually unable to walk.

Legal Costs

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what legal costs have been incurred by his Department in each of the last four years. [34285]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: The Department for Work and Pensions was formed in June 2001 from the former Department for Social Security and parts of the Department for Education and Employment.

Legal costs for the new Department are not yet available for the current financial year (2001–02).

New Deal

Mrs. Helen Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will make additional funding available to New Deal providers to help trainees with (a) basic skills and (b) English speaking. [36403]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: Long-term unemployed people who need help with basic skills or the English language are identified by personal advisers during the Gateway period of the New Deal. Those with a need can then be referred to help within the Gateway, including short basic skills courses. People who need more intensive, longer-term assistance are offered help through the Education and Training New Deal option which can provide courses lasting up to 26 weeks.

Basic skills or English for Speakers of Other Languages (ESOL) training is provided in response to an individual's needs. The Employment Service contracts locally with New Deal providers to meet the needs of their particular client group and provides sufficient funding for this to be achieved.

The help provided through the New Deal is an important part of the Government's strategy to improve literacy and numeracy skills. A new curriculum in ESOL was launched in February and will further improve the quality of language provision available to those who need it. We will be working to embed the new curriculum into our employment programmes.

Minimum Income Guarantee

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what proportion of pensioners who are entitled to support claim the minimum income guarantee. [36407]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: Estimates of the proportion of pensioners who are entitled to and claim the minimum income guarantee are published in Income Related Benefits Estimates of Take-Up. A copy of the latest publication covering financial year 1999–2000 is in the Library. Estimates of take-up of the minimum income guarantee are subject to greater uncertainty than other published take-up estimates; research is under way to improve the precision of estimates.

The take-up campaign launched in May 2000 attracted over 127,000 successful claims for the minimum income guarantee.

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what percentage of pensioners in (a) the North Norfolk constituency and (b) England claim the minimum income guarantee. [43696]

Mr. Nicholas Brown [holding answer 15 March 2002]: The information requested is in the table.

MIG claimants in North Norfolk and England by percentage relevant population—November 2001

Area	Number of MIG claimants (Thousand)	Percentage population aged 60 and over
North Norfolk parliamentary constituency	3,400	—
North Norfolk LA	3,400	11.0
England	1,459,200	14.3

Area	Number of MIG beneficiaries (Thousand)	Percentage population aged 60 and over
North Norfolk parliamentary constituency	3,900	—
North Norfolk LA	3,900	12.5
England	1,622,800	15.9

Mrs. Irene Adams: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many pensioner households are benefiting from the minimum income guarantee. [43979]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: As at November 20001, there were 1,741,300 pensioner households benefiting from the minimum income guarantee in Great Britain.

Income Support Statistics Quarterly Enquiry, November 2001.

State Second Pension

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if self-employed people will be required to join the State Second Pension. [24228]

Mr. McCartney: As with SERPS self-employed people cannot join the State Second Pension because they do not pay class 1 national insurance contributions.

Civil Servants

Mr. MacDougall: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many new entrants to the civil service employed in his Department were aged 50 years and over in each of the last five years. [42399]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: The Department for Work and Pensions was formed in June 2001 from the former Department for Social Security and parts of the Department for Education and Employment.

The statistics relating to the number of staff aged 50 or over on their recruitment to the new Department are not yet available for the current financial year (2001–02).

Unemployed People (Lanarkshire)

Mr. Roy: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what plans he has to help unemployed people in Lanarkshire over 50 years of age back to work. [42617]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: People over 50-years-old on benefits can also take advantage of the help and support available through our New Deal 50 plus. By the end of January over 61,000 people had moved off benefits and into work nationally through New Deal 50 plus and 906 people have been helped into work in the Lanarkshire Employment Service district.

We have made a firm commitment to tackle the high levels of inactivity among people over 50 by increasing choice and opportunities for employment. We are doing this by setting the standard for non-ageist approaches to recruitment, training and development, promotion, redundancy and retirement through the Code of Practice on Age Diversity in Employment.

Our policies are having a positive effect and the national employment rate of older workers has risen for the fourth year running.

Pension-related Benefits

James Purnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what estimate he has made of the increase in the MIG per pensioner if money accrued through delaying the payment of pension-related benefits by increasing the retirement age to 67 years were put into funds for the minimum income guarantee. [43650]

Maria Eagle: We have no plans to increase the state pension age to 67. It is not possible to estimate how such a change would affect the MIG in future as it depends upon the level of MIG at that time, on pensioner income growth (which itself is affected by the increase in retirement age) and on pension credit that is being introduced in October 2003.

Occupational Pensions

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what information his Department collates on the value of occupational pensions available (a) in payment to current pensioners, (b) as assets for future pensioners and (c) in connection with the overall incomes of retired people. [41999]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: The Department of Work and Pensions collects information on the value of occupational pensions available in payment to current pensioners and in connection with the overall income of retired people via the Family Resources Survey. The Family Resources Survey (FRS) is a continuous survey, interviewing approximately 25,000 private households in Great Britain each year. The FRS asks a wide range of questions about people's incomes and other living circumstances, including sources of pension income.

Information on assets of private pension funds, including occupational pensions, is published in the National Statistics MQ5 publication. The Office for National Statistics have stated that they expect to publish figures in April.

Benefit Application Forms

Mr. Roy: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what plans he has to simplify benefit application forms, with particular reference to (a) elderly and (b) disabled claimants. [37080]

Maria Eagle: All our forms are constantly reviewed and regularly researched. We frequently adopt suggestions made by members of the public as well as organisations such as the Social Security Advisory Committee.

A radically changed minimum income guarantee (MIG) form was introduced last October after consultation with pensioners and their organisations. The new form cut the number of pages pensioners had to complete from 40 to 10 and removed questions irrelevant to the vast majority of pensioners. The Department also established a MIG helpline to enable pensioners to claim over the telephone.

Improvements have been made to our standard size claim forms, particularly those relating to disability benefits. They include using a larger type size, increasing the size of answer boxes and using a background tint that gives the best possible contrast to improve legibility.

We are also currently testing a new shorter and simpler attendance allowance claim form aimed at claimants aged 75 or over. If this 16 page form, which replaces the existing 34 page form, is successful in obtaining the information we need we will be looking to apply the lessons learned to other groups of disabled people applying for disability living allowance and attendance allowance.

Pensioners Earnings

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what (a) proportion and (b) number of pensioners have income from earnings, broken down in both cases into five-year age bands. [44226]

Maria Eagle: The information requested is in the table.

Age	Proportion of pensioners with income from earnings (percentage)	Number of pensioners with income from earnings
60–64	20	80,000
65–69	19	320,000
70–74	8	130,000
75+	2	60,000
All	9	580,000

Income Support

David Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people in Telford are in receipt of income support payments. [41424]

Malcolm Wicks: As at November 2001 there were an estimated 6,900 income support recipients in Telford parliamentary constituency.

Notes:

1. Number is rounded to the nearest 100.

2. Estimate is based on a 5 per cent. sample of the income support computer system, and is subject to sampling variation.

Asbestosis

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people receive industrial injury benefit as a result of suffering from asbestosis. [37112]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: Asbestosis is a generic term for all asbestos-related diseases. The prescribed diseases (PDs) relating specifically to those suffering from the effects of exposure to asbestos are diffuse mesothelioma (PD3), primary carcinoma of the lung (PD8) where there is evidence of asbestosis and diffuse pleural thickening (PD9). In addition pneumoconiosis (PD1) can relate to asbestosis but also to silicosis (which is not an asbestos-related disease).

The available information is in the table.

Number of cases where industrial injuries disablement benefit was in payment as at 1 April 2000

Disease	Number
Pneumoconiosis (PD1)	[1]11,000
Diffuse mesothelioma (PD3)	1,000
Primary carcinoma (PD8)	[2]200
Diffuse pleural thickening (PD9)	2,000

[1] This figure also includes cases of silicosis which is not an asbestos-related disease. Separate figures for asbestos-related disease only in this category are not available.

[2] As this figure is less than 500 it should be treated as an indication of the number of cases only.

Figures are from a 10 per cent. sample of IIDB assessments in payment, and are rounded to the nearest 1,000.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Fair Trade

Mr. Weir: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister, pursuant to his answer of 26 November 2001, Official Report, column 703W, on fair trade goods, if he will review during Fair Trade Fortnight the amount of fairly traded goods used in his Department. [35456]

Mr. Leslie: My Department's purchasing policy is based on value for money principles and purchases are considered on the basis of fitness for purpose and whole life cost. Where these considerations are equal the choice of goods is then influenced by ethical and environmental factors and fair trade goods will be considered in that context.

My officials will consider with the new service provider for the Department's London offices the availability of fair trade goods in its refreshment facilities. Our contracted catering providers have assured us that wherever commercially practicable and viable they trade with companies who have their own ethical or fair trading initiatives.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister whether fair trade products are sold in his Department. [39828]

Mr. Leslie: Yes; our contracted catering providers have assured us that wherever commercially practicable and viable they trade with companies who have their own ethical or fair trading initiatives.

As I mentioned in my reply to the hon. Member for Angus (Mr. Weir) on 26 November 2001, Official Report, column 703W, the Cabinet Office will consider with the new service provider for the Department's London offices the availability of fair trade goods in its refreshment facilities.

Civil Servants

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what was the (a) percentage and number of rail journeys undertaken on first class tickets, (b) average cost of a first class journey by rail and (c) total cost of rail travel in each of the past four years broken down by grade of civil servant. [37504]

Mr. Leslie: Section 8 of the Civil Service Management Code, paragraph 8.2.1, requires Departments and agencies to ensure that staff use the most efficient and economic means of travel in the circumstances, taking into account any management benefit or the needs of staff with disabilities.

The information requested is not held centrally, and could be obtained only at disproportionate costs.

Sponsorship

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister, pursuant to his answer of 25 February 2002, Official Report, ref 32799, on which date the Cabinet Office guidelines on sponsorship took effect; and if he will make a statement. [39729]

Mr. Leslie: The Cabinet Office document "Guidance to Departments on Sponsorship of Government Activities" was published in July 2000 as part of the Government's response to the Sixth Report from the Committee on Standards in Public Life (Cmnd 4817). These guidelines updated the previous internal sponsorship guidelines that had been circulated to Departments in March 1999.

Radio Advertising

Ms Abbott: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how much the Central Office of Information spent on radio advertising on behalf of other Government Department agencies and NDPBs in the last year; what percentage of this was spent on black minority media advertising; and what the five main campaigns that the Central Office of Information financed that involved radio advertising were. [41341]

Mr. Leslie: For the year 2000–01 the total spend on radio advertising was £16 million, with 1.25 per cent. spent on black minority stations.

The top five campaigns, by value which featured radio advertising were:

University for Industry autumn campaign,
Vehicle car crime,
Think! (road safety),
Police recruitment and Children's tax credit.

Women and Equality Unit

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many staff are employed in the Women and Equality Unit of the Cabinet Office. [43112]

Mrs. Roche: The Women's Unit was created in 1998. Its staff for the first financial year of its existence (1998–99) was 45. The unit was renamed the Women and Equality Unit following last year's general election in order to recognise its new policy responsibilities across the United Kingdom for gender equality, co-ordination of sexual orientation policy and its sponsorship of the Equal Opportunities Commission. Its current staffing level stands at 68.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the findings were of the joint benchmarking study of the Women and Equality Unit of the Cabinet Office and the Swedish Government. [43111]

Mrs. Roche: The publication "Women as Entrepreneurs in Sweden and the UK: Different Perspectives" built upon a bilateral initiative between Sweden and the UK on women's entrepreneurship.

The publication identified the sharing of good practice and supporting joint projects between the two countries, as effective tools to encourage female entrepreneurship.

The study showed that, in the UK, the reasons for starting a business, the type of business run and the chosen method of accessing finance were markedly different between men and women. The reasons for these differences need to be reflected in the support provided.

Employers' Forum on Disability

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister which Government Departments are members of the Employers' Forum on Disability. [44266]

Mr. Leslie: The following civil service Departments and agencies are all members of the Employers' Forum on Disability:

Cabinet Office
Court Service
Crown Prosecution Service
Department for Education and Skills
Department for Transport, Local Government and the Regions
Department for Work and Pensions
Department of Health Department of Trade and Industry
Employment Service
Foreign and Commonwealth Office
Highways Agency
HM Customs and Excise
HM Land Registry
Home Office
Inland Revenue
Insolvency Service
Lord Chancellor's Department
Ministry of Defence
Ministry of Defence Police
National Assembly for Wales
Office for National Statistics
Ofgem
Ofsted
Oftel
Patent Office
The Public Record Office
Companies House
Defence Science and Technology Laboratory
The Meteorological Office
Financial Services Authority
Qualifications and Curriculum Authority
Scottish Office
Health and Safety Executive
Prison Service
Child Support Agency and Benefits Agency
The Rent Service.

Sickness Absence

Tony Cunningham: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what was the overall level of sickness absence in the civil service in 2000. [45327]

Mr. Leslie: The report "Analysis of Sickness Absence in the Civil Service 2000" prepared for my Department by Biomathematics and Statistics Scotland (BioSS) shows that by applying the same methodology as in previous years the average level of sickness absence was 9.9 days per staff year. This represents a small decrease over the equivalent figure of 10.1 days set out in the report for 1999. The report contains a comprehensive analysis of the 2000 figures.

Calculated on the basis of absence per person, the figure for the civil service was 8.5 days. According to the CBI survey for 2000, this compares favourably with a figure of 10.2 days for the public sector as a whole and is only slightly more than the average rate of 7.8 days for all sectors.

Departments have published Service Delivery Agreements which contain their individual targets for reducing sickness absence. Overall the civil service has been targeted to reduce sickness absence by 30 per cent. (to 7.2 days per staff year) by 2003 against the 1998 baseline. My Department is continuing to work with other Departments and agencies as they take forward their plans to reduce sickness absence.

I have placed copies of the BioSS report in the Libraries of the House.

HEALTH

Unlicensed Medicines

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what joint strategies have been agreed between the Medicines Control Agency and the United States Government Food and Drug Administration's Office of Criminal Investigation to combat the online sale of licensed and unlicensed medicines; and if he will publish them. [39018]

Ms Blears: The Enforcement Group currently has no specific joint strategies with the Food and Drug Administration Office of Criminal Investigations. However, it does maintain close informal contact, on a case by case basis, shares intelligence, conducts joint investigations including visits where appropriate.

Anti-TB Vaccinations

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the level of supply of anti-TB vaccinations to the NHS is. [38681]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 28 February 2002]: Current central stock holding (as at 12 March 2002):

	Number
BCG	2,126,550
Tuberculin PPD	201,920

Capita Group

Mr. Boris Johnson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the contracts that have been awarded to the Capita Group by the Department. [39343]

Ms Blears: Since April 2001 five separate business areas within the Department have commissioned various pieces of work from companies operating within the Capita Group.

The total value of work commissioned by each of the business areas varied between £10,500 and £87,700. The overall value of work was £271,700. In each case the work involved services to support a number of recruitment exercises to fill posts within the core Department and membership of committees.

Press and Public Relations

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many press releases were issued by his Department (a) between 1 May and 31 December 1997 and (b) in each year from 1998 to 2001 inclusive. [40034]

Ms Blears: The information requested is shown in the table.

Year	Number
1 May 1997 to end of year	230
1998	556
1999	742
2001	552

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people were employed in a press or public relations function in his Department on 1 January in (a) 1997, (b) 1998, (c) 1999, (d) 2000, (e) 2001 and (f) 2002. [39940]

Ms Blears: The information requested is shown in the table.

Technologies Advisory Group

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 26 February 2002, Official Report, column 1064W, if he will list the names of the members of the Technologies Advisory Group and their declared interests. [40542]

Ms Blears: At present, most members of the Technologies Advisory Group are officials in the Department or in the National Assembly for Wales, who serve on the group as part of their responsibilities within the two Departments rather than in a personal capacity. The officials who attend meetings may also vary depending on their availability and the topics under discussion. For these reasons we do not consider it would be appropriate to list individual names. We are currently consulting on proposals to extend the membership of the group and we will consider, in the light of replies to consultation, whether there would be a case in future for listing the names of individual members.

NHS Communication (E-mail)

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if it is his policy that there should be one e-mail system through which NHS employees can communicate with each other; and if he will make a statement. [40790]

Ms Blears: Yes. Our programme for modernising the national health service (NHS) as set out in the NHS plan will rely on the provision of efficient and effective information systems to enable the benefits for patients and the public to be achieved. A common e-mail system is one component of this; by opting for a common system across the NHS the maximum benefits of value for money will be obtained. To this end, the NHS information authority is currently conducting a formal open procurement exercise for e-mail and directory services for the NHS. It is expected that subject to successful completion of negotiations a preferred bidder will be announced shortly.

Accommodation Costs

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the cost was of hotel accommodation for departmental staff working away from home in each of the last four years. [41067]

Ms Blears: The Department does not keep separate information about the cost of hotel accommodation but I am able to provide information about the cost of night subsistence for departmental staff working away from home. This will include hotel accommodation, meals and some incidental expenses. The cost of night subsistence, including overseas, for the last four financial years for which information is available is as follows:

Year	Hotel and subsistence costs (£)
1997–98	871,756
1998–99	861,352
1999–2000	1,099,249
2000–01	1,338,967

Alcohol Misuse

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the Government expect to publish their alcohol misuse strategy. [40878]

Ms Blears: The NHS plan says that the Department will be implementing the national strategy to tackle alcohol misuse by 2004. The Department is on course to achieve this target and we expect to publish a consultation paper for the strategy this summer.

Healthy Living Centres

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many healthy living centres there are in Northumberland. [40879]

Jacqui Smith: The healthy living centre initiative is managed by the New Opportunities Fund (NOF). There are currently no healthy living centres in Northumberland, however, there are a number of applications under consideration and a decision on one from the Northumberland area is expected from the NOF Healthy Living Centre Committee shortly.

Children in Care (Education)

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of children leaving care have had five or more GCSEs, grades A-C, in each of the past five years. [40874]

Jacqui Smith: The information requested is only available for the past two years, and is shown in the table.

Proportion of children leaving care who had five or more GCSEs at grade A to C for the years ending 31 March 2000 and 2001*

England	Percentage
2000	4

Cannabis

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the relationship between cannabis smoking and the risks of (a) schizophrenia and (b) lung cancer. [40841]

Ms Blears: The "'Dangerousness of drugs'" report published last year by the national addiction centre states that there is evidence of an association between cannabis use and schizophrenia, but the significance of this association is unclear. Cannabis can exacerbate the symptoms of schizophrenia in affected individuals and is linked with relapse in schizophrenia.

The report also states that there is no conclusive evidence that cannabis causes cancer in humans, but may be an important risk factor for the development of respiratory cancer. However, smoking tobacco as well or using tobacco as a vehicle for smoking cannabis resin is a confounding factor.

National Radiological Protection Board

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Health to what extent the work and advice of the NRPB is independent of Government. [41185]

Yvette Cooper: The National Radiological Protection Board (NRPB) was set up in 1970 under the Radiological Protection Act as a corporate body with functions concerning the protection of people from radiation hazards. It is a non-departmental public body. The chairman and members of the statutory board are appointed by Health Ministers, following Nolan/Neill principles, to ensure an appropriate mix of independent experts. Responsibility for setting the overall strategic direction of the work of NRPB, for monitoring the programme and ensuring that advice is impartial, authoritative and independent of Government and others bodies, rests with the chairman and the appointed members.

The board benefits from the advice of three independent advisory groups composed of non-NRPB experts. The Advisory Group on Non-ionising Radiation and the Advisory Group on Ionising Radiation review the evidence on the biological and medical effects of radiation. They also advise the board on future research priorities. A new advisory group—the Radiation, Risk and Society Advisory Group—has been set up to help NRPB to improve its communication in a practical way.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what evidence underlay the NRPB's judgment that a magnetic field exposure of 1600uT is unsafe. [41187]

Yvette Cooper: The considerations underlying the National Radiological Protection Board's guidance on exposure to electromagnetic fields is contained in Documents of the NRPB Volume 4 Number 5, 1993 and Documents of the NRPB Volume 10 Number 2, 1999.

Insofar as magnetic fields are concerned, the exposure guidelines are developed to prevent adverse effects of induced current in the body. The current density level given in the above NRPB advice to avoid adverse biological effects on the central nervous system is 10 milliamperes per square metre.

Calculations were made to relate the external magnetic field to the induced current density using a dosimetric model. The model chosen was considered to be conservative hence exceeding the investigation level (1600T) does not necessarily imply an "unsafe" level.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether it is within the remit of the NRPB to present to the public a statement of the effects of (a) ionising and (b) non-ionising radiation. [41186]

Yvette Cooper: The Radiological Protection Act 1970 provided for the establishment of a National Radiological Protection Board (NRPB) with functions concerning the protection of people from radiation hazards; and for connected purposes. The Act defines "radiation hazards" as the dangers of ionising radiations emitted by radioactive substances or other sources and radiations which are electromagnetic but not ionising. The reference to non-ionising radiation was added by Statutory Instrument 1974 No. 1230.

It is, therefore, within NRPB's remit to comment on ionising and non-ionising radiation; NRPB's website www.nrpb.org contains much material on both types of radiological hazard.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what decision the NRPB has made with respect to its magnetic field exposure threshold. [41188]

Yvette Cooper: The National Radiological Protection Board advice on electromagnetic field (EMF) exposure guidelines is contained in Documents of the NRPB Volume 4 Number 5, 1993 and Documents of the NRPB Volume 10 Number 2, 1998.

A further review of the scientific basis for the EMF exposure guidelines is currently in progress. The terms of reference for the review are:

To produce a comprehensive assessment of the science covering the areas of biology, epidemiology and dosimetry and provide guidance on limiting exposure of people to electromagnetic fields in the range of 0 Hz to 300 GHz.

To consider where information may be lacking, discuss any need to invoke a precautionary approach and what that might be.

The results of the review will be published as a consultative document in 2002.

Mesotherapy

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the mesotherapy treatments which are available from the NHS; and if he will make a statement. [41213]

Ms Blears [holding answer 7 March 2002]: I understand that while mesotherapy has a number of applications, it is of most relevance to the NHS as a method of pain relief. Mesotherapy is a treatment where local anaesthetic is injected in small amounts to an area of pain. Chronic pain relief is provided throughout the NHS in different forms, and includes the use of local anaesthetic. However, pain relief is a short-term measure and it is important that the underlying cause of the pain is identified and treated.

The decision on the type of pain relief treatment provided to patients is made on a case by case basis. The Department does not collect details of the different types of pain relief available on the NHS.

Autism

Brian Cotter: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how the additional money for research into autism will be spent. [41463]

Jacqui Smith: The additional funds provide the opportunity for the Medical Research Council (MRC) to accelerate research on autism, building on existing strengths and addressing gaps which were identified in the report of their review of the epidemiology and causes of autism. It will complement and add to the MRC's current support for research in this field. It is likely that the range of research supported will be broader than that of the MRC review and may include research to develop and evaluate interventions.

The MRC will shortly be setting up a steering group which will offer detailed advice on implementation. Building on the success of lay involvement in the MRC review, the membership of this group will importantly include lay people. The Department will have an observer on the group. We will continue to pursue our constructive dialogue with the MRC on autism research.

Dentistry

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many children are registered with an NHS dentist in the East Riding of Yorkshire; and what the figures are for each year since 1997. [41309]

Jacqui Smith: Arrangements are now in place to ensure that patients can gain access to NHS services simply by calling NHS Direct. This means that even if a patient chooses not to register with a dentist it will still be possible for that patient to access all forms of dentistry that are provided by the NHS.

The number of child patients registered with a general dental service (GDS) dentist in East Riding and Hull health authority (HA) at 30 September for each of the years 1997 to 2001 is shown in the table.

In September 1996, the registration period for new child registrations was shortened to 15 months. Previously child registrations expired at the end of the following calendar year. This affected registration numbers from December 1997 onwards. Data for 1997 is not comparable with later years.

Some patients that are not registered with a GDS dentist choose to attend occasionally.

Data for the East Riding area is unavailable.

General dental service: number of child registrations, 1997 to 2001

East Riding and Hull health authority	Thousands
Year	Number
1997[1]	85.6
1998	79.2
1999	80.7
2001	81.8

[1] Registration number is not comparable to later figures because of the change in the registration period to 15 months.

Mental Health

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans the Government have to support NHS staff dealing with the mental health problems of older people; and if he will make a statement. [40828]

Jacqui Smith: Following publication of national service frameworks (NSF) for mental health and for older people, the Department has established a number of multi-agency care group workforce teams, including one focused on older people and one on mental health, to support national workforce development.

Standard 7 of the Older People's NSF concerns the promotion of good mental health in older people and the provision of treatment and support for older people with dementia and depression. Work undertaken to implement the framework standards, and within the care group workforce teams, will help to strengthen training and education for existing staff and support recruitment, consistent with the proposals in the NHS plan for new staff to support people of all ages with mental health problems.

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what proportion of the hospital budget was spent on mental health services in each year since 1997; [41709]

(2) what proportion of the community health budget has been spent on mental health nursing services in each year since 1994–95. [41706]

Jacqui Smith: The proportion of the hospital budget spent on mental health services in each year since 1996–97 and the proportion of the community health budget spent on mental health nursing in each year since 1994–95 is shown in the table.

Percentage

	Community	Hospital	Total
1994–95	9.5	10.9	10.7
1995–96	9.5	10.9	10.7
1996–97	12.2	12.2	12.2
1997–98	13.6	12.0	12.3
1998–99	13.3	11.8	12.1
1999–2000	13.3	12.3	12.5

However the figure given for 1999–2000 is not comparable to previous years or future years, 1999–2000 represents the first year that primary care group expenditure was included in the calculation and the formula used to apportion the expenditure was based on estimated data. In future years the data for primary care groups will be more detailed and the resultant figure for percentage spend will be more accurate.

Domiciliary Care

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people are receiving domiciliary care; and if he will make a statement. [41601]

Jacqui Smith: An estimated 1.3 million adult clients received a package of community-based services (following assessment), by councils with social services responsibilities, in England, during the period 1 April 2000 to 31 March 2001. A client may be recorded more than once during the year.

Hospital Service Availability

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what his policy is towards acceptable travel distances between (a) maternity hospital services, (b) paediatric hospital services and (c) general hospital services. [41404]

Yvette Cooper: The Department set up a Maternity and Neonatal Workforce Group last year to examine the best way to provide high quality maternity services which will provide safe, effective, evidence based and accessible care to mothers and babies.

We are also committed to producing the acute module of the new children's national service framework which will, among other issues, consider access to appropriate care and facilities for children.

Women's Hospitals

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what his policy is on providing specialist maternity and obstetric services in stand-alone dedicated women's hospitals. [41408]

Yvette Cooper: The national health service provides a variety of types of care for women during pregnancy and childbirth including care in stand-alone dedicated women's hospitals, general hospital maternity units, as well as midwife-led units. We expect this variety to continue and do not support any one single model of maternity service provision in preference to all others.

It is for health authorities and NHS trusts to decide on the pattern of service provision taking into account the needs of local service users, evidence of effectiveness and available resources.

The Department has set up a Maternity and Neonatal Workforce Group to make recommendations through the Children's Taskforce on workforce issues and various models for configuration of maternity services.

National Care Standards

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has (a) made and (b) received of the cost of upgrading establishments to meet his national care standards; and if he will make a statement. [40888]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 7 March 2002]: The full Regulatory Impact Assessment for the Care Homes Regulations and national minimum standards for care homes for older people and younger adults estimated that the cost of meeting the environmental standards from 1 April 2002 would be £68 million over five years.

A and E Services (Shropshire)

David Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average waiting time is for patients at the accident and emergency units at (a) Princess Royal Telford and (b) Royal Shrewsbury hospital. [41420]

Ms Blears: The average waiting time in accident and emergency (A&E) units in not collected.

The NHS plan set new targets to reduce the maximum wait in A&E from arrival to admission, transfer or discharge to four hours by 2004. The interim milestone is to achieve 75 per cent. of A&E attendees waiting four hours or less by March 2002.

In line with this, from August 2001, the Department has collected data on total time in A&E from arrival to transfer, admission or discharge. Information suggests that the NHS is on track to meet the March 2002 milestone with currently 77 per cent. of all people attending A&E waiting four hours or less.

NHS Reorganisation

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the cost of office moves resulting from NHS reorganisation in the last three years. [42214]

Ms Blears [holding answer 11 March 2002]: The Department has not collected any data which would enable an assessment to be made of the cost of office moves resulting from NHS reorganisation. For example, mergers of NHS trusts may involve the need to consolidate at one of those merged, or new offices entirely. The cost of this is not readily identifiable from trust accounts.

MMR Vaccine

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to review the target payments paid to general practitioners for MMR vaccination rates. [42269]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 11 March 2002]: There have been calls for a moratorium on the target payment system in the wake of the public debate on the MMR vaccine. We recognise the hard work of general practitioners and health visitors in responding to parents' concerns around MMR and trying to sustain high rates of immunisation in the current climate. However, we consider it would be inappropriate and counter-productive to change the target payment system at this time.

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of children in the Cynon valley have been immunised before their fifth birthday against measles, mumps and rubella in the last year for which figures are available; what the national average is; and what steps his Department is taking to ensure that the Government reach their target rate for vaccination. [39521]

Mr. Paul Murphy: I have been asked to reply. These are matters for the National Assembly for Wales. I am, though, aware that the Assembly has taken a number of steps over the past year, aimed at improving uptake of the MMR vaccine.

In April 2001, they launched the Mythbuster initiative, to assist health professionals in counselling concerned parents and dispelling myths surrounding the safety of MMR. This was followed up with a comprehensive information programme which included an in-depth technical pack, leaflets, posters and videos.

Correspondence

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he will reply to the hon. Member for West Chelmsford's letter of 22 November, with reference to Mr. Raybould (Ref column: POH (3) 5499/G). [42969]

Ms Blears: A reply was sent on 15 March.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 11 March 2002, Official Report, column 843W, on parliamentary questions, if he will give details of the work that has been re-prioritised in order for the backlog of outstanding Questions to be answered. [43904]

Ms Blears [holding answer 18 March 2002]: Clearing the backlog of outstanding parliamentary questions has been handled without the need for a major re-prioritisation of work. It has been cleared either through staff working extra hours, by using staff between postings or by temporarily seconding a member of staff whose duties were covered by colleagues.

NHS Widowers' Pensions

James Purnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what estimate he has made of the cost of including women doctors' pension contributions prior to 1988 in the calculations for NHS widowers' pensions; [43652]

(2) if he plans to include the contributions paid into NHS pensions by women doctors prior to 1988 in the calculations for NHS widowers' pension provision. [43651]

Mr. Hutton: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the former Member for North Norfolk (Mr. Prior) on 13 January 1999, Official Report, column 212.

DEFENCE

Porton Down Volunteers

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 15 October 2001, Official Report, column 936W, regarding the 1973 report prepared at Porton Down, on what dates the Ethics Committee overseeing the human experiments at the Chemical Defence Establishment scrutinised this experiment; and if he will place in the Library copies of the papers of the committee which relate to the discussion of this experiment. [43477]

Dr. Moonie: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will place in the Library a copy of the report produced by the Chemical Defence Establishment, Porton Down in 1985 entitled "Pyridostigmine pre-treatment and neuromuscular transmission in man—a study using single fibre electromyography". [43445]

Dr. Moonie: Yes. This technical note reports preliminary results and analysis. The full results and final conclusions of the work in which Service volunteers who had been exposed to a low dose of Sarin and monitored over a number of years using single fibre electromyography have already been published entitled: "Single fibre electromyographic changes in man after organophosphate exposure" (Human and Experimental Toxicology 1996, 15, 367–75).

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will place in the Library a list of the common and chemical names of the vesicants which have been tested on Service volunteers at the Chemical Defence Establishment, Porton Down during the Service volunteer programme; and if he will list the numbers of Service volunteers who were tested with each of these vesicants. [43452]

Dr. Moonie: At present there are no definitive figures detailing the numbers of Service volunteers who have been exposed to vesicant agents or all the agents which were used. However, it is believed that some 8,000 individuals have participated in studies which have involved the use of the following two vesicants:

Sulphur mustard; chemical name 2–2'-di(chloroethyl) sulphide

Lewisite; chemical name 2-chlorovinyl dichloroarsine.

In addition, a small number of volunteers may have been exposed to the following two vesicants during the Service volunteer programme:

Phosgene oxime; chemical name dichloroformoxime

Nitrogen mustard; chemical name 2–2'-2''-tri(chloroethyl)amine.

Test and Evaluation Centres

Mr. Charles Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the future of the BUTEC and Rona test and evaluation ranges, and if he will make a statement. [44428]

Dr. Moonie: The BUTEC and Rona ranges are Ministry of Defence facilities operated by QinetiQ under contract to MOD. They provide a comprehensive range of test and evaluation facilities, for which the MOD has a continuing requirement.

Munitions

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the quality difference between shells manufactured in (a) the USA and (b) the UK by BAE Systems. [43392]

Dr. Moonie: All munitions, irrespective of the country of manufacture, must meet the Department's same high quality requirements and rigorous safety standards before entering service with the UK armed forces.

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence by what means he plans to apply benchmark prices to munitions. [43394]

Dr. Moonie: Benchmarking is already an integral part of the Framework Partnering Agreement (FPA) between Royal Ordnance Defence (ROD) and the MOD. A specific Benchmarking Working Group, comprising both MOD and ROD staff, has been established within the FPA and currently uses two techniques to monitor benchmarking. These techniques are comparative analysis and performance analysis.

Explosives

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how long-term security of supply for explosives is defined in the Framework Partnering Agreement between his Department and ROD. [43396]

Dr. Moonie: The Department entered into a Framework Partnering Agreement with Royal Ordnance Defence in 1999. Long-term security of supply is not specifically defined within the agreement; however, both parties are committed to a long-term relationship and continuous dialogue on matters of mutual interest, including security of supply.

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much explosive used by his Department was bought from the USA in the last 12 months for which figures are available. [43393]

Dr. Moonie: In the last 12 months, the Ministry of Defence has not bought explosive substances from the USA.

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if the ROD Framework Partners Agreement includes the plant in Bridgwater; [43399]

(2) pursuant to the answer of 11 March 2002, Official Report, column 656W, on explosives, which plants controlled by BAe are (a) included and (b) not included in the Framework Partnering Agreement between his Department and ROD. [43427]

Dr. Moonie: The Royal Ordnance Defence (ROD) facility at Radway Green is explicitly included in the Framework Partnering Agreement because of the organisational structure of the Company. Beyond this, individual ROD facilities are not specifically included or excluded from the Agreement.

Depleted Uranium

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the training exercises that have taken place on the Eskmeals and Kirkcudbright training areas over the last five years and the regiments that have been involved. [43424]

Dr. Moonie: The training exercises (broken down by type of training) that have taken place on Kirkcudbright training area within the last five years, and the formations or units that have been involved are shown in the table:

Formation training (non-firming exercises)	Formation/unit	Year and frequency

Eskmeals is not used in support of training activities for any of the three services. The site is owned by the Ministry of Defence and operated by QinetiQ who provide test and evaluation services in support of the UK armed forces on a variety of medium to heavy calibre weapon systems.

MOD Land (Access)

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment has been made of the changes necessary to open up his Department's land to disabled people; and if he will make a statement. [44639]

Dr. Moonie: A pilot audit was undertaken using the BT millennium miles scheme that led to the upgrading of a track and path to improve wheelchair access, and more are planned. New paths have been constructed at Sennybridge, including one that will permit wheelchair access. This, together with paths at Lulworth, and Elstead Common, Longmoor, is promoted as "Easy-going Trails" in the fourth edition of "Walks on MOD Lands" and in the "Access" section of the DE website.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many members of the public annually used the public access areas on his Department's land in the last year for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [44638]

Dr. Moonie: No comprehensive surveys have been carried out to establish the numbers of visitors who access the defence estate, However, in January 2002, as a first step in meeting the targets set by the estate strategy "In Trust and on Trust" (published in June 2000), pilot visitors surveys were carried out at the Aldershot training area and Willsworthy Ranges. These provided promising results, but need to be developed further before they are used elsewhere at suitable Ministry of Defence sites.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent assessment has been made of public access to his Department's land; and if he will make a statement. [44637]

Dr. Moonie: There is a presumption in favour of access to the defence estate wherever this is compatible with operational and military training uses, public safety, security, conservation, and the interests of Ministry of Defence's tenants. This policy was set out in 2000 in the estate strategy "In Trust and on Trust" together with a number of objectives in respect of access and recreation.

A number of pilot studies have been carried out in furtherance of those objectives: at Willsworthy Ranges and Aldershot training area on visitor numbers, and two at Lulworth, on path conditions and applying the BT millennium miles scheme. This led to the upgrading of tracks at Lulworth to improve wheelchair access. Similar studies will be carried out elsewhere. A fourth edition of the booklet "Walks on MOD Lands", was published and the updated "Access" section of the defence estates website went live in November 2001.

These initiatives have been developed in conjunction with a variety of external stakeholders, and reflect the Ministry of Defence's continuing commitment to improving public access to the defence estate.

MOD Housing

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what steps are taken to ensure that complaints from service personnel and their families about the suitability or condition of his Department's housing is investigated and dealt with; what targets the DHE has in dealing with complaints; what the level of achieving these targets was in the last year; what steps are being taken to improve the complaints procedure; and if he will make a statement. [44967]

Dr. Moonie: The Defence Housing Executive (DHE) has a formal procedure for investigating and resolving complaints about Service Families Accommodation (SFA), which is publicised in the Occupants Handbook. A copy is available in each family quarter. The current targets are to acknowledge written complaints within one working day and to send a full response within 10 working days.

In the first nine months of the current reporting year, which started on 1 April 2001, the DHE responded to 95 per cent. of all written complaints within the target times. Complaints procedures are currently under review as part of the development of DHE's customer care strategy.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how many cases of suspected property fraud in the provision of his Department's housing have been taken to court in each year since 1997; and if he will make a statement; [43006]

(2) what incentives have been provided for private companies to (a) detect and (b) report fraud in his Department's housing; and if he will make a statement; [42980]

(3) what assets have been frozen in suspected property fraud cases in the provision of his Department's housing in each year since 1997; and if he will make a statement; [42981]

(4) how many cases of suspected property fraud in the provision of MOD housing have been successfully prosecuted in each year since 1997; and if he will make a statement. [45442]

Dr. Moonie: No cases of suspected fraud relating to the provision of housing by the Defence Housing Executive (DHE) have gone to court since 1997. However, a case of property fraud has been referred to the Crown Prosecution Service for advice, with a view to criminal prosecution. Two additional cases of suspected fraud have been referred to the Defence Fraud Analysis Unit (DFAU) for investigation and may come to court in the future.

No incentives are paid to private companies to detect and report suspected fraud. The Ministry of Defence has a policy of zero tolerance to fraud and this is impressed upon contractors. Companies are expected to produce their own anti-fraud policy statement when tendering for contracts.

To date, for the period beginning 1997, the MOD police have no record of any assets having been frozen in suspected property fraud cases associated with the provision of accommodation by the Department.

Golden Jubilee

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many military officers are expected to be present at the Queen's Golden Jubilee festivities; of that number, how many will be there for the purpose of (a) protection/security, (b) marching in the parade and (c) performing music; and if he will make a statement. [44583]

Dr. Moonie: I am withholding details of protection or security operations in accordance with Exemption 1 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information. A Golden Jubilee Festival is due to take place in central London on the afternoon of the 4 June 2002 at which the armed forces will play an appropriate part. However the details are still being finalised with the organisers.

Israel

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence for which MOD contracts Israeli companies are bidding as (a) prime contractors and (b) as teaming partners; and in the case of the latter, with which companies they are teamed. [45185]

Dr. Moonie: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Service Personnel Memorial

Dr. Vis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what progress has been made with the memorial to service personnel killed since the Second World War; and if he will make a statement. [44480]

Mr. Hoon: Pursuant to the answer I gave on 20 March 2002, Official Report, column 313W, I regret that a paragraph was omitted from the answer in error. The answer should have included the following paragraph. Those members of the Royal Fleet Auxiliary and the Merchant Navy who were killed in conflict zones while in direct support of the armed forces will also be included on the memorial.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Parliamentary Commissioner for Standards

David Winnick: To ask the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire, representing the House of Commons Commission, if submissions are being made by the House of Commons Commission to the review being carried out by the Committee on Standards in Public Life on the future appointment of the Parliamentary Commissioner for Standards and related matters; and if he will make a statement. [44996]

Mr. Kirkwood: The House of Commons Commission has been invited to contribute to the inquiry by the Committee on Standards in Public Life, and will do so.

PRIME MINISTER

Energy Costs

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make a statement on energy costs incurred by his office in each of the last 10 years. [42446]

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs on 19 March 2002, Official Report, columns 267–68W.

Local Elections

Mr. Kevin Hughes: To ask the Prime Minister what advice has been given to civil servants on the conduct of Government business during the forthcoming elections to local councils on 2 May. [46033]

The Prime Minister: The Government have issued guidance to civil servants on the principles which they should observe in relation to the conduct of Government business in the period before the forthcoming elections.

The guidance stressed that civil servants should conduct themselves in accordance with the Civil Service Code and is based on the need to maintain the political impartiality of the civil service and the need to ensure that public resources are not used for party political purposes.

The guidance will come into force on 11 April.

Copies of the guidance have been placed in the Library of the House, and are also available from the Vote Office.

Surveillance Commissioners

Mr. Miller: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make an announcement about the appointment and re-appointment of surveillance commissioners under Part III of the Police Act 1997. [46090]

The Prime Minister: In accordance with Section 91 of the Police Act 1997, after consultation with the Scottish Ministers, I have agreed to appoint and re-appoint the following surveillance commissioners to assist Sir Andrew Leggatt, the chief surveillance commissioner. There are three commissioners for England and Wales, two for Scotland and one for Northern Ireland. However, the remit of each commissioner covers the whole of the United Kingdom so that any commissioner can act in jurisdictions other than his own.

I have appointed from 1 November 2001, as a commissioner the Right hon. Lord Sutherland, who served as a judge of the Court of Session from 1985 to 2001, for a period of three years.

I have also re-appointed as commissioners:

Sir Charles McCullough who was appointed as surveillance commissioner in 1998 and is re-appointed for a further three years from 1 November 2001. He served as a High Court judge of the Queen's Bench Division from 1981 to 1998;

The right hon. Sir Michael Hutchison who was appointed as surveillance commissioner in 1998 and is re-appointed for a further three years from 1 November 2001. He served as a Lord Justice of Appeal from 1995 to 1999;

Lord Bonomy who was appointed as surveillance commissioner in 1998 and is re-appointed for a further three years from 1 November 2001. He has been a judge of the Court of Session since 1997;

The right hon. Sir John MacDermott who was appointed as surveillance commissioner in 1998 and is re-appointed, 1 November 2001, until 1 October 2003.

The commissioners are appointed under the provisions of Part III of the Police Act 1997. The Regulation of Investigatory Powers Act 2000 extended the commissioners remit. Since the authorisation of intrusive surveillance operations forms a key component of the Government's response to serious and organised crime, I attach considerable importance to these appointments and I am delighted that the commissioners have accepted their appointments. In conjunction with Sir Andrew Leggatt, their substantial judicial experience, particularly of the criminal justice system, will provide independent oversight of surveillance operations, which although operationally important, must also be subject to stringent safeguards.

Golden Jubilee

Mrs. Fitzsimons: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make a statement on plans for celebrating the 50th anniversary of Her Majesty the Queen's accession to the throne. [46091]

The Prime Minister: I announced on 29 January 2002, Official Report, column 205W, the programme of visits and other events throughout the United Kingdom from May to August this year, which will be undertaken by Her Majesty and His Royal Highness the Duke of Edinburgh, to mark the Golden Jubilee.

I am, therefore, pleased to be able to announce further details of the programme of Jubilee visits to the London boroughs which they will carry out during the summer of this year. Although the Queen and the Duke of Edinburgh will not be able to visit every borough, their itinerary will enable them to meet as many Londoners as possible.

East London

9 May—The Queen and the Duke of Edinburgh will visit Newham, Redbridge and Waltham Forest. The Queen will also visit Barking and Dagenham.

North London

6 June—The Queen and the Duke of Edinburgh will visit Barnet, Brent and Haringey.

West London

25 June—The Queen and the Duke of Edinburgh will visit Bushy Park, Gunnersbury Park, Hillingdon and Kingston-upon-Thames.

South London

4 July—The Queen and the Duke of Edinburgh will visit Croydon, Crystal Palace and Lewisham.

These details, together with further information about other confirmed Golden Jubilee celebrations and events can be found on the searchable calendar of events on the official Golden Jubilee website at http://www.goldenjubilee.gov.uk/. The British Monarchy website at http://www.royal.gov.uk/ also has details of the Queen's programme and other royal engagements. These will be updated throughout the year as confirmation of events is received.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Arms Deals

9. Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what proposals she has to stop bribery and corruption in arms deals involving UK firms. [42855]

Nigel Griffiths: This Government are not prepared to treat corruption as a necessary part of doing business, whether the deal involves arms or not.

Social Enterprise

11. Margaret Moran: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what measures she intends to take to assist social entrepreneurs. [42858]

Mr. Alexander: A range of measures to support and develop social enterprises, and the people who work in them, will be included in the Social Enterprise Strategy I intend to publish after Easter.

Construction

12. Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make a statement on the Government's policy on the construction industry. [42859]

Ms Hewitt: Government and industry are taking forward three policy initiatives designed to increase the overall productivity and competitiveness of the UK construction industry.

First, Rethinking Construction. In partnership with the industry we are using demonstration projects, case studies and best practice dissemination to prove the business case for change and to provide practical means by which companies can improve their productivity and competitiveness and clients can demand products that actually enhance their own performance. We have agreed to continue the initiative until April 2004.

Second, my Department supports a substantial programme of construction-related innovation and research. Sir John Fairclough, a former Government chief scientist, has recently conducted a review for us of how we should best provide that support in the future. The report establishes an excellent framework for improving the effectiveness of construction research. We are consulting the industry on how we can work with them to take forward the recommendations.

Finally, the Quality Mark Scheme, which will enable builders to demonstrate their competence and to distinguish themselves from their less reputable rivals. The scheme will be rolled out across the country over a three to four year period.

These three closely connected initiatives are being taken forward against a backdrop of continuing work with the industry to understand the various issues it faces, especially in relation to wider Government policy, to ensure we develop polices and regulations that recognise the competitiveness issues in the industry while meeting Government's broader objectives on the environment, safety and so on.

Paid Leave

13. Mr. Watts: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make a statement on her policy on entitlement to payment for bank holidays. [42862]

Alan Johnson: Entitlement to time off on bank holidays depends on an employee's contract of employment. However, under the Working Time Regulations, employees are entitled to a minimum of four weeks' leave per year with pay. They may use part of this entitlement to take time off on bank holidays, subject to their employer's agreement.

Scott Report

14. Ms Drown: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will implement the recommendations of the Scott report on export licensing. [42863]

Nigel Griffiths: The Bill responds to the Scott report's key recommendations that the existing export control should be replaced with legislation that:

Sets restrictions on the Government's power to control exports;

Gives Parliament the power to scrutinise orders introduced under export control legislation.

In addition the Bill gives the Government important new powers to control trafficking and brokering in arms, and the transfer of sensitive technology by intangible means.

Lord Scott has welcomed the Bill, commenting that "for the first time in some 50 years there are proposals for export controls which will have constitutional and democratic respectability." (Lord Scott made this comment during the Bill's Second Readings in the House of Lords—Hansard, 8 January column 482).

Knowledge Transfer

15. Kevin Brennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps she is taking to promote knowledge transfer between the university sector and British industry. [42864]

Ms Hewitt: The Government's two White Papers, "Excellence and Opportunity", published in July 2000, and "Opportunity for All", published in February 2001, set out our science and innovation policy for the 21st century, and include a comprehensive range of measures to help promote knowledge transfer between the university sector and British industry. We are making excellent progress.

We are considering, as part of the Government's spending review, how to further develop these initiatives to build on universities' potential as drivers of growth in the knowledge economy.

Steel Industry

16. Julie Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans she has to help the Welsh steel industry. [42865]

Ms Hewitt: My Department and the National Assembly for Wales work closely with the steel industry to provide support to improve the sector's competitiveness. The Welsh Assembly co-ordinates the All-Wales Steel Task Force with the aim of promoting the industry as well as dealing with the consequences of restructuring.

My Department has supported a number of industry-led initiatives which benefit companies in Wales and elsewhere in the UK. The Metals Industry Competitive Enterprise (MICE) aims to introduce lean manufacturing techniques throughout the sector. Welsh companies are among those who have already taken advantage of this important initiative. In February I announced funding for the new National Metals Technology Centre (NAMTEC) which I hope will play an important role in ensuring the UK metals industry as a whole remains a world leader in innovation.

22. Andrew Selous: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make a statement on the British steel industry. [42873]

Ms Hewitt: The UK steel industry has experienced difficult trading conditions in recent years and many jobs have been lost through restructuring and cost cutting. However, the industry has an excellent productivity record, produces a wide range of high quality products and has a well trained work force helping it compete against international competition at home and overseas. We are determined to stand by the industry in combating the recent unjustified US action to impose prohibitive import tariffs.

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many people were employed in the UK steel industry in each of the last 20 years. [44777]

Ms Hewitt: The number of people employed in the UK steel industry in each of the last 20 years was:

	[1]Thousand
1982	74.5
1983	63.7
1984	61.9
1985	59.0

Post Office Network

17. Vernon Coaker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps she is taking to publicise the services available at local post offices. [42867]

Mr. Alexander: This is an operational matter for Consignia.

I have however been informed by Post Office Ltd. that extensive marketing and advertising are undertaken to raise awareness of new and existing products offered through the post office network.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent representations she has received on the rural postal network. [43846]

Mr. Alexander: I refer the hon. Member for the Vale of York to my answer on 11 February 2002, Official Report, column 69W.

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what action she is taking to maintain the network of sub-post offices in urban neighbourhoods. [42872]

Mr. Alexander: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry to the hon. Member for Hertsmere earlier today.

Broadband

19. Jonathan Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what she is doing to increase use of broadband technology. [42869]

Mr. Alexander: The Government strategy to drive broadband rollout and take up was set out in the UK Online annual report published in December 2001.

The report includes a number of actions to stimulate demand, by making it easier to access broadband services, and stimulating the demand and supply of new broadband content and applications.

23. Mrs. Humble: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many homes and businesses have a broadband connection. [42874]

Mr. Alexander: Oftel's broadband brief published in February 2002 reported that there were over 146,000 ADSL end-users and 196,000 cable modem end-users. Take-up is growing rapidly, with a growth of over 500 per cent. over the last year.

Menswear Exports

20. Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans she has to raise with the WTO the tariff on exports of menswear from the United Kingdom to the United States; and if she will make a statement. [42870]

Ms Hewitt: This issue will be addressed as part of the market access negotiations within the WTO Doha Development.

Clean Coal Technology

21. Mr. Bill O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations she has received following the publication of the energy report by the performance and innovation unit on clean coal technology; and if she will make a statement. [42871]

Ms Hewitt: To date we have received no representations following the publication of my Department's review on Government support for cleaner coal technology demonstration plant.

Trade Sanctions

24. Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans she has, in coordination with European partners, for targeted trade sanctions on US products. [42875]

Ms Hewitt: The Government fully support the European Commission's request for consultations with the US, including seeking compensation for the damage to EU trade by the US measures. We will await the outcome of these consultations before reaching any final view on other responses to the US measures.

Philippines

25. Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry pursuant to her statement of 15 November 2001, Official Report, column 1000, on the WTO, what progress has been made in consultations with the Philippines on trade issues in relation to Mindanao. [42876]

Ms Hewitt: Although the Government do not have a bilateral aid programme with the Philippines, the Philippines does receive considerable support from other donors and from multilateral organisations, including the World bank and the Asian Development bank, both of which receive funds from the Government. These multilateral resources should enable the Government of the Philippines to tackle poverty and achieve faster growth, provided that a sound policy environment can be maintained.

If the Mindanao train project is sound and requires concessional resources, multilateral finance should be available.

Vibration White Finger

26. John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make a statement on the decision to set a deadline on new claims to the compensation scheme for current and ex-miners suffering from vibration white finger. [42877]

Ms Hewitt: The number of new claims registered under the scheme is declining and this has led to reduced opening times for many testing centres. The Department is keen to ensure that existing claims are assessed and settled as soon as possible. In consultation with the Claimants' Solicitors Group the Department has agreed a cut-off date of 31 October 2002. This has been advertised in local and national press.

Once the scheme is closed, claims may still be accepted by solicitors and processed as personal injury claims.

Climate Change Levy

27. Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent representations she has received about the cost impact of the climate change levy on the competitive position of manufacturing industry in the United Kingdom. [42878]

Ms Hewitt: The Department has received a number of representations from business about the climate change levy.

The Government are keeping in touch with business on the levy to monitor initial experience with its operation. Primary responsibility for the levy lies with my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer.

Environmental Policies

28. Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps she takes to integrate environmental concerns into her Department's policies. [42879]

Ms Hewitt: DTI's aim is to ensure that environmental concerns are brought into the mainstream of the Department's policy-making and operational management, within the wider context of promoting sustainable development.

The effectiveness of DTI's procedures for environmental screening and appraisal of policies were reviewed last year by a member of the Foresight Environmental Appraisal Task Force and the Department's internal audit. New guidelines are being finalised which will be published on DTI's website.

DTI's Estates and Facilities Management Directorate run an environmental managements system accredited to ISO 14001 covering DTI's HQ Buildings. It incorporates monitoring, control and regular audits to ensure the continued effectiveness of the system and to track progress towards targets.

Science

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make a statement on her policy on British science. [42868]

Ms Hewitt: Our policy is to ensure that we continue to maintain and develop a world class science and engineering base for the UK, and take steps to ensure that it makes the greatest possible contribution towards economic growth, productivity, sustainable development and improved quality of life.

Shipbuilding

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make a statement on shipbuilding. [42860]

Ms Hewitt: My Department continues to work closely with the shipbuilding industry to assist it in its efforts to improve its international competitiveness, employment and training.

Nigel Devereux

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the responsibility has been of Mr. Nigel Devereux during his secondment to her Department; what policy formulation Mr. Nigel Devereux has been involved in; and if she will make a statement. [43687]

Ms Hewitt: Mr. Nigel Devereux has held the position of Head, Downstream Oil since May 2000 in which role he deals with issues relating to the refining and marketing of petroleum products, including the formulation of policy in these areas.

All secondments into the Department are undertaken within the principles of the Civil Service Commissioners' Recruitment Code and are subject to formal contractual arrangements covering detailed terms including issues of conflict of interest.

Labelling

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what regulations there are to ensure that retail products are labelled to indicate if animal experimentation had taken place in the production process. [43997]

Miss Melanie Johnson [holding answer 20 March 2002]: Animal testing is only carried out in the UK where it is necessary to ensure the health and safety of consumers i.e. before a new pharmaceutical product is placed on the market. Even in these cases some of the world's most stringent requirements for laboratory animal welfare and licensing must be fully complied with.

The UK does not test finished cosmetic products or their ingredients on animals and has not done so since 1998. The Cosmetic Products (Safety) Regulations 1996, which implement the European Cosmetics Directive have a voluntary measure which allows claims about animal testing to be made if a manufacturer so chooses. There are no other regulations on product labelling with regard to animal testing.

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans she has to update labelling laws on animal testing to ensure consumers can make informed purchasing decisions. [43971]

Miss Melanie Johnson: I have no such plans.

Under the Cosmetic Products (Safety) Regulations 1996 manufacturers may refer to testing on animals in the labelling but any reference must state clearly whether the tests carried out involved the cosmetic product itself or its ingredients.

Government Technology Policy

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will set out the Government's policy on (a) nanotechnology, (b) biotechnology and (c) manufacturing industry; and if she will make a statement. [43579]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 19 March 2002]: (a) Nanotechnology—This Government recognises that nanotechnology has the potential to transform the UK industry base. We are focusing on strengthening the research base through new collaborative programme in our leading universities. Our current spend through the Research Councils on nanotechnology is worth over £30 million a year.

We are also encouraging industry to use this investment to underpin its own research. We particularly wish to see dynamic new firms being spun out from the research base through the use of the £100 million support for seed capital funds, entrepreneurship and incubation that we have made available to the universities and public sector research establishments.

(b) Biotechnology—The Government's policy on biotechnology is to maintain the UK as the leader in Europe in biotechnology by maximising the potential for commercial developments arising from the UK's excellence in the science base and promoting a supportive regulatory and fiscal environment in the EU and UK, such that the UK is seen as the best place in Europe for:

(i) biotechnology enterprises to start up, operate and grow; and

(ii) inward investment in biotechnology.

(c) Manufacturing—The Government's policy on manufacturing industry is to ensure its future competitiveness and productivity through the stable macro-economic environment we have established, together with our policies to encourage investment, to promote enterprise, innovation, and knowledge transfer, to raise skills, and to provide an effective and competitive framework.

Claims Direct

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make a statement as to her Department's inquiries into the (a) flotation and (b) collapse of Claims Direct. [41166]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Department has powers to conduct confidential inquiries into companies and these are exercised when there is good reason to do so in the public interest. The Department does not comment on the affairs of companies that are or have been the subject of inquiries under the Companies Acts. However Claims Direct Plc issued a press notice on 23 July 2001 confirming that it was providing information to the DTI under Section 447 of the Companies Act 1985.

The Department does not know of any reason to suggest Claims Direct Plc has "collapsed".

Export Licensing

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what account she takes of sustainable development issues in export licensing. [42861]

Nigel Griffiths: All relevant export licence applications are considered on a case by case basis against the Consolidated EU and National Arms Export Licensing Criteria. This includes the compatibility of the arms exports with the technical and economic capacity of the recipient country, taking into account the desirability that states should achieve their legitimate needs of security and defence with the least diversion for armaments of human and economic resources.

Unsolicited Faxes

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what research she has undertaken on systems which allow people to opt out of receiving unsolicited faxes; and if she will make a statement. [42856]

Miss Melanie Johnson: We consulted widely about this when we were considering how to implement the Telecommunications Data Protection and Privacy Directive in 1999.

No-one may send an unsolicited fax for direct marketing purposes to an individual subscriber without the subscriber's prior consent. Nor may anyone send such a fax to corporate subscribers if they have registered with the Fax Preference Service, or if they have told the direct marketer not to send them any further faxes. These regulations are enforced by the information commissioner.

EC State Aid Rules

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) which schemes submitted to Advantage West Midlands in the last 12 months have been ruled ineligible as a result of EC state aid rules; [43487]

(2) what recent representations she has received in respect of EC state aid rules. [43486]

Alan Johnson: No projects have been ruled ineligible on state aid grounds alone. Some have given rise to state aid concerns which require them either to be amended so that they do not constitute aid or so that they fell within the block exemption regulations. Other schemes, or their UK funding streams, may need to be or are being notified to the commission so that their compatibility with the EC treaty can be determined. I have received representations from Members of Parliament and businesses about the state aid rules. It is important that the rules are respected but also that they should not inhibit unnecessarily regeneration of urban centres.

MINISTER FOR WOMEN

Ministerial Duties

32. Michael Fabricant: To ask the Minister what proportion of her time she spends in each week on matters relating exclusively to women; and if she will make a statement. [42885]

Ms Hewitt: My roles as Secretary of State for Trade and Industry and Minister for Women are inextricably linked, since women are almost half the workforce, account for a third of new business start-ups and make the majority of decisions as consumers. As Minister for Women I concentrate on issues of work: life balance, narrowing the gender pay gap and women's entrepreneurship, working closely with my hon. Friend the Minister of State for the Cabinet Office.

Science and Engineering

33. Tony Cunningham: To ask the Minister what steps she is taking to encourage women to take up careers in science and engineering. [42886]

Ms Hewitt: We are raising awareness of the opportunities for women through promotional material such as SPARK magazine, ambassador and role model campaigns and by encouraging girls to try for themselves science, engineering and IT in several ways: computer clubs, the WISE Campaign Outlook programme and endorsing the "take our daughters to work" day on 25 April. We are also looking at DTI schemes to ensure that they do not inadvertently exclude women who want to return to science and engineering careers.

Flexible Working

34. Ann McKechin: To ask the Minister if she will make a statement on the impact of flexibility at work on productivity growth in Britain. [42887]

Ms Hewitt: Greater flexibility at work can boost productivity by enabling employees to balance work and family responsibilities, thus improving recruitment, retention and motivation and reducing absenteeism. More flexible working hours also enable the business to meet customers needs more effectively, for instance through longer opening hours.

Equal Pay

35. Vernon Coaker: To ask the Minister what recent assessment she has made of the effectiveness of the Equal Pay Act 1970. [42888]

Ms Hewitt: The Equal Pay Act had a significant impact in reducing the pay gap from 37 per cent. in 1975 to 18 per cent. today. It has been effective in providing legal protection against pay discrimination but also in challenging the culture of undervaluing women.

We are taking forward action to tackle the complex underlying factors behind the pay gap including promoting a voluntary approach to pay reviews among employers through the Castle Awards and with the help of the Fair Pay Champions, carrying out pay audits in Government Departments, and taking forward recommendations from the Kingsmill Review.

Gender Pay Gap

Helen Jones: To ask the Minister for Women what research her Department is undertaking on the gap between men and women's pay. [42881]

Ms Hewitt: The Women and Equality Unit published a comprehensive report called "The Gender Pay Gap" on 5 December 2001. It found that the key causes of the gender pay gap were: women having less work experience and lower levels of qualifications; part-time work; differences in travel patterns; and occupational and workplace segregation.

International Women's Day

36. Mr. Amess: To ask the Minister what representations she has received about celebrating International Women's Day. [42889]

Ms Hewitt: On International Women's Day I spoke at a conference and exhibition in Leicester which was attended by women from the many different communities across the city.

I also received invitations from the London borough of Waltham Forest and the UK Association for the UN Development Fund for Women.

My hon. Friend the Minister of State for the Cabinet Office marked the occasion by announcing the Castle Awards which will reward employers work in tackling equal pay issues and help narrow the gender pay gap.

Mothers (Return to Work)

Lynne Jones: To ask the Minister for Women what assessment she has made of the obstacles preventing those mothers who want to return to work from doing so. [42882]

Ms Hewitt: The Government have identified a number of obstacles which may deter mothers who want to return to work, including the difficulties of balancing work and family life, access to child care facilities, difficulties making work pay, skills becoming out of date and lack of confidence. We are promoting a range of measures to tackle these issues.

SCOTLAND

Access to Government Information

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many requests have so far been received in 2001–02 for information in accordance with the Government's Code of Practice on Access to Government Information. [24780]

Mrs. Liddell: For the period 31 January 2001 to 28 February 2002 seven requests have been received for information in accordance with the Government's Code of Practice on Access to Government Information.

Memorandum of Understanding

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if she will make a statement on the resource implications in 2001–02 of the Memorandum of Understanding and supplementary agreements. [24777]

Mrs. Liddell: There are no separately identifiable costs relating to the Memorandum of Understanding and supplementary agreements. Any work would be carried out by staff as part of their normal duties and I would expect the costs to be small.

Newspaper Advertising

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what has been the expenditure of her (a) Department, (b) agencies and (c) non-departmental public bodies on newspaper advertising by title in each year since 1997. [26983]

Mrs. Liddell: The Scotland Office was established in its present form on 1 July 1999. Since that date, expenditure on newspaper advertising was as shown in the following table:

Most of the advertising costs relate to electoral registration publicity and information on postal voting.

Departmental Payments

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if she will list the instances in which her Department, agencies and non-departmental public bodies failed to pay valid invoices within 30 days or after the agreed credit period in the financial year 2000–01. [32024]

Mrs. Liddell: In the financial year 2000–01 my Department received 3,716 invoices in respect of goods and services and 3,709 (99.7 per cent.) were paid within 30 days.

Departmental Rebranding

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what the total cost was of rebranding her Department following its name change after devolution. [31960]

Mrs. Liddell: The Scotland Office was established in its present form on 1 July 1999. Costs of £2,140 were incurred for changes to signage at Scotland Office buildings in Edinburgh and London and there were minor additional costs for stationery items.

IT Contracts

Richard Younger-Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what has been the total expenditure of her Department on IT systems and support in each year from May 1997 to date; how many IT contracts have been let in each of those years; of the other main contracting party in each of those contracts, how many have been (a) companies whose registered office is in (i) England and Wales, (ii) Scotland and (iii) Northern Ireland and (b) foreign companies; and what are the names of the companies falling within category (a). [33671]

Mrs. Liddell: The Scotland Office was established in its present form on 1 July 1999. The Department's IT systems and support is provided by the Scottish Executive. Costs were as follows:

1 July 1999 to 31 March 2000: £63,046

2001–02 (to date): £142,174.

The Scotland Office has let no IT contracts during this period.

Publications

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if she will list the publications issued by her Department in each of the last four years; and what the (a) circulation, (b) cost and (c) purpose of each was. [34198]

Mrs. Liddell: The Scotland Office was established in its present form on 1 July 1999. Since then, the Department has issued the following publications:

	Title	Circulation	Cost (£)	Purpose

Accountancy Services

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what the total cost to her Department was for accountancy services in each of the last four years. [34171]

Mrs. Liddell: The Scotland Office was established in its present form on 1 July 1999.

Accountancy services to the Department are provided by the Scottish Executive, as required, and detailed costs are not available. The Scotland Office has not used external accountancy services.

Mobile Telephones

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if she will list, for 1997–98 and for each subsequent financial year, the amount spent (a) in the United Kingdom and (b) abroad by (i) her Department, (ii) its agencies and (iii) its non-departmental public bodies on (1) providing mobile telephone equipment, including handsets and other associated equipment, (2) telephone calls made using such equipment and (3) telephone calls made using privately owned mobile telephones but subsequently reclaimed by (x) Ministers and (y) staff. [34405]

Mrs. Liddell: The information is not held in the form requested and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Entertainment Costs

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if she will list for 1997–98 and for each subsequent financial year, including the current year to date, the amount spent by (a) her Department, (b) its agencies and (c) its non-departmental public bodies on (i) food and (ii) alcohol, indicating how much was spent on guests, and how much in respect of (A) Ministers and (B) staff, broken down to show how much was provided directly by her Department and how much reclaimed. [34457]

Mrs. Liddell: The information requested is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Departmental Events

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if she will list the (a) conferences, (b) seminars, (c) workshops, (d) exhibitions and (e) press conferences which have been sponsored by her Department and which took place on non-Departmental premises in each of the last four years giving the title, purpose, date and cost of each. [34295]

Mrs. Liddell: The information requested is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Working Conditions and Practices

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what assessment has been made of the effect of the Working Time Directive on her Department's employees; how many employees are working in excess of 48 hours per week; what steps she is taking to reduce this number; and if she will make a statement. [35895]

Mrs. Liddell: The standard terms and conditions of service for staff in the Scotland Office fall within the limits set by the working time regulations. At present I have no staff who have opted to sign a waiver disapplying the 48 hour limit. Persistent working in excess of 48 hours per week would be discouraged and my Department advocates flexible working patterns in line with the Government's work-life balance policies.

Fair Trade

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to her answer of 22 November 2001, Official Report, column 407W, on fair trade goods, if she will review during Fair Trade Fortnight the amount of fairly traded goods used in her Department. [35454]

Mrs. Liddell: My Department did not participate directly in Fair Trade Fortnight. The Government are contributing through the Department for International Development, which is providing £120,000 to the Fair Trade Foundation over three years (2001–2003) in support of its efforts to target new groups through its annual Fair Trade Fortnight campaigns. When the opportunity arises, fair trade goods are used.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Third World

Mrs. Irene Adams: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what action the Government are taking to help eradicate (a) debt and (b) child poverty in the third world. [43932]

Clare Short: The UK has played a major role in tackling the unsustainable debt burden of the poorest countries. We led the way in securing the revision of the Heavily Indebted Poor Countries (HIPC) Initiative, which was agreed in September 1999. Up to US$100 billion debt could be written off for the 42 HIPC countries. So far, 26 countries have qualified for this exceptional relief. These countries will receive more than US$60 billion worth of debt relief, reducing their debts by more than two-thirds on average. We hope that more countries will qualify for debt relief but substantial further progress will be difficult, as many of the remaining HIPC countries are either affected by conflict or have severe governance problems.

The UK goes further than is required under the HIPC Initiative and provides 100 per cent. relief on its bilateral debts to countries once they qualify, and holds any debt repayments 'in trust' in the meantime. The Government have already cancelled their aid debts to all the poorest countries, not just HIPC. The UK is also the second largest contributor (US$306 million) to the HIPC Trust Fund to help international financial institutions meet their share of HIPC costs.

We seek to reduce the poverty of children, which causes suffering to today's children and jeopardises the well-being of future generations, by working to address the cause of poverty and deprivation in the families and communities in which they live. Support for children's rights to basic health care, education, nutrition, shelter, protection from violence and abusive labour, along with sustainable livelihoods for their parents, is central to our work towards the millennium development goals.

We are working to energise the international system to achieve the goals. The goals include the target of, by 2015, lifting 1 billion people out of abject poverty, universal primary schooling, and reducing under-five child mortality by two thirds.

Heavily Indebted Poor Countries

Mrs. Irene Adams: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what action the Government are taking to persuade the World bank to change loans to heavily indebted poorer countries to grants. [43933]

Clare Short: We are firmly opposed to any suggestion that World bank highly concessional loans should be converted to grants. The International Development Association (IDA) of the World bank provides very concessional loans which are paid back over 40 years with a 10 year grace period and low service charge. Such loans are highly effective in helping countries to reduce poverty and are complemented by grant resources provided by other agencies. Any move to change IDA loans to grants would undermine the effectiveness of IDA and its future financial integrity.

Pakistan

Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what financial aid her Department has provided to Pakistan in the current financial year; and what she plans to allocate in the next financial year. [45864]

Clare Short: By the end of the financial year, 31 March 2002, my Department will have provided £20 million of budget support to Pakistan. Next year, I plan to allocate £40 million. This is a slight change from the planned disbursement I announced to Parliament last December, and reflects the pattern of resource availability in my Department. Our overall commitment to provide £105 million financial aid over three years remains unchanged.

Iraq

Mr. Tynan: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if her Department is in a position to make an assessment about the likely humanitarian impact of military action against Iraq before any military action is taken; and if she will make such a study prior to military action. [44299]

Clare Short: No decisions have been taken on any military action against Iraq.

Mr. Tynan: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development which organisations have provided her Department with reports on the current humanitarian situation inside Iraq. [44298]

Hilary Benn: DFID has access to reports on the current humanitarian situation from a number of agencies working in both northern and central/southern Iraq. These include the United Nations Childrens Fund (UNICEF), the International Committee of the Red Cross (ICRC), the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP), and the World Health Organisation (WHO), as well as a number of NGOs.

Cluster Bombs

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development, pursuant to her answer of 13 March 2002 ref. 40655 on cluster bombs, what estimates she has received from UNMAS on the number of (a) cluster bombs used and (b) unexploded bomblets located at the sites where cluster bombs were used in Afghanistan. [44391]

Clare Short: UNMAS estimate that 1,152 Cluster Bomb Units have been used in Afghanistan. (b) UNMAS estimate that there are up to 14,000 unexploded bomblets as a result. The accuracy of this estimate cannot be confirmed until more clearance work is undertaken and/or actual weapons used and target information is received from the Coalition.

Mine Clearance

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will list the organisations to which the Government have given money for the purposes of mine clearance in 2001–02, specifying the amount given in each case. [43876]

Clare Short: The table gives the figures requested.

Estimated final outturn 2001–02

Organisation	£
The HALO Trust (bilateral)	1,150,000
Mines Advisory Group (MAG) (bilateral)	1,000,000

Organisation of American States (Nicaragua de-mining)	189,000
BACTEC de-mining (Kosovo)	15,000
DSL (Kosovo)	750,000
ELS (Kosovo)	22,000
QinetiQ	100,000
UNDP	2,100,000
Geneva International Centre for Humanitarian De-mining (GICHD)	1,000,000
Cranfield Mine Action	221,000
Landmine Monitor	30,000
DISARMCO (Research and Development)	61,000
ERA (Research and Development)	117,000
	12,605,000

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what Government expenditure was on humanitarian mine clearance in 2001–02, broken down by country. [43877]

Clare Short: Estimated Government expenditure for 2001–02 on mine action programmes by country is indicated in the following table:

Country	Amount (£)
Afghanistan	3,150,000
Eritrea	694,540
Nicaragua	189,000
Cambodia	1,000,000
Northern Iraq	206,137
Jordan	197,402
Laos	300,000
Georgia	500,000
Bosnia	500,000
Croatia	326,529
Kosovo	2,000,000
Global contribution to UNMAS and UNDP	2,600,000

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much was spent by the Government on (a) humanitarian mine clearance, (b) commercial mine clearance, (d) military initiative mine clearance, (d) mine awareness, (e) victim assistance and (f) research and development for mine clearance in 2001–02. [43878]

Clare Short: Estimated disbursements for 2001–02 are as follows:

	2001–02
(1) Humanitarian Mine Clearance	[1]10.2
(2) Mines Awareness	0.5
(3) Research and Development	1.3

[1] Also includes some integrated mine awareness activities. As programmes are often integrated separate costs of awareness are not available. Specific mine awareness activities are undertaken with UNICEF as shown at item two.

United Nations Conference on the Least Developed Countries

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps the Government (a) have taken and (b) plans to take to respond to the Action Plan of the Third United Nations Conference on the Least Developed Countries. [44360]

Clare Short: The Government are working to implement the action plan of the Third United Nations Conference on the Least Developed Countries in a variety of ways both through out bilateral programmes and our multilateral work. Over the past four years, we have increased the proportion of aid allocated to least developed countries, as a proportion of our bilateral country resources, from 33 per cent. to 45 per cent.

We are supporting the Commonwealth Secretariat's Trade and Investment Access Facility to deliver a range of activities designed to strengthen the capacity of least developed Commonwealth countries to address trade issues. We also continue to work with multilateral organisations including the United Nations and the European Commission to ensure that the momentum generated by the third United Nations Conference on the Least Developed Countries, on key issues such as trade, aid untying and financial issues is maintained in follow-on international conferences. These include the current Financing for Development conference in Monterey (18–22 March) and the forthcoming World Summit on Sustainable Development in Johannesburg.

We consider it important to see the third United Nations Conference on the Least Developed Countries as part of an on-going process of developing a partnership for poverty eradication between developing countries, including least developed countries, and the international community. We will therefore continue to work with our partners to build on the positive achievements made on recent initiatives such as the European Union's "Everything But Arms" agreement and the Development Assistance Committee's recommendations on untying, both of which were strongly supported by the UK, to ensure that least developed countries can achieve sustained economic growth and development.

St. Helena

Mr. MacDougall: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what recent discussions she has had with the Government of St. Helena; and if she will make a statement. [43865]

Hilary Benn: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for International Development has had no recent discussions with the Government of St. Helena. DFID officials do have regular contact and last met members of St. Helena's Executive and Legislative Council earlier this month during their visit to the UK to discuss air access.

Mr. MacDougall: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what aid was given to St. Helena in each of the last six years for which figures are available. [43870]

Clare Short: Expenditure figures for UK development assistance to St. Helena in each of the last six years for which figures are available were:

£ million

	Total DFID programme
1995–96	9,267
1996–97	7,990
1997–98	8,765
1998–99	8,805
1999–2000	9,362

Mr. MacDougall: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement on progress towards the construction of an airfield on St. Helena. [43871]

Clare Short: A "Comparative Study of Air and Sea Access" was published last July. A copy of the report was placed in the House of Commons Library. It identified various options, which have since been under consideration by the St. Helena Government. As part of that process, the views of the islanders have been sought. The outcome has been a majority preference in favour of possible air access in future, as an alternative to replacing St. Helena's dedicated passenger and supply ship. Island representatives have recently visited the UK to discuss air access and will be reporting their discussions to the St. Helena Government at the beginning of April.

Territorial Forces

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many members of staff of her Department are members of the Territorial forces; and if she has a strategy to encourage members of staff to become members of the Territorial forces. [44070]

Hilary Benn: This information is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. We have no particular plans to encourage members of staff to become members of the Territorial forces.

Justices of the Peace

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many members of staff at her Department are Justices of the Peace; and if she has a strategy for her Department to encourage members of staff to become Justices of the Peace. [44553]

Hilary Benn: This information is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. We have no particular plans to encourage members of staff to become Justices of the Peace.

Staff (Locally Elected Representatives)

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many members of staff at her Department are locally elected democratic representatives; and if she has a strategy for her Department to encourage members of staff to become locally elected democratic representatives. [44542]

Hilary Benn: This information is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. We have no particular plans to encourage members of staff to become locally elected democratic representatives.

Tanzania

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development when she was informed of the application for an export licence for the sale of an air defence system to Tanzania. [39830]

Clare Short [pursuant to her reply, 8 March 2002, c.684W]: I apologise for the error contained in my reply. The answer should have read:

> The applications were first drawn to my attention in October 2000, not October 2001.

CHURCH COMMISSIONERS

Ethnic Community Religious Groups

Mr. Cox: To ask the hon. Member for Middlesbrough, representing the Church Commissioners, what discussions he has had with the Church Commissioners about possible financial assistance to ethnic community religious groups in England and Wales; and if he will make a statement. [43942]

Mr. Bell: My hon. Friend will know from my answer of 30 November 2001 that in 2000—the latest year for which audited figures are available—the Commissioners made available £160 million to support the work of the Church of England, including a share to support the stipends of the serving ministry, targeted particularly on areas of need and opportunity. Within the Church of England there are many parishes with ethnic community religious groups that the Church seeks to serve.

The Church of England cultivates its connection with minority faith communities through its Inter Faith Concerns Group and has also contributed financially to the work of the Inner Cities Religious Council.

The Commissioners do not have a remit for Wales.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Courts Martial

Mrs. Brooke: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people are serving prison sentences imposed by courts martial; and which prisons they are held in. [41363]

Beverley Hughes: Provisional data show that on 31 January 2002 27 prisoners were serving prison sentences imposed by courts martial.

Entitlement Cards

Mr. Letwin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what work on development of an entitlement card, other than for asylum seekers, is being conducted in his Department; and what measures have been adopted to co-ordinate this work with the Department of Social Security. [40863]

Mr. Blunkett [holding answer 7 March 2002]: A small unit has been established in my Department to draft the consultation paper which I announced on 5 February 2002 and to manage the consultation exercise. Some of the detailed work on how a scheme might operate is being undertaken in partnership by the United Kingdom Passport Service and the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency.

My officials are working closely with colleagues in a number of Government Departments including the Department for Work and Pensions which is represented on a group of senior officials chaired by the Cabinet Office which has overseen the work at official level.

Fees

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which fees his Department, its agencies and associated public bodies collect; how much has been raised or is anticipated will be raised from each of these fees from 1998–99 to 2004–05; which of these fees count as negative expenditure; and if he will make a statement. [41312]

Angela Eagle: The fees collected by the Home Department are summarised in the table. All of the fees are classified as negative expenditure within the Departmental Expenditure Limit (DEL), unless otherwise shown.

Retail Crime

Mr. Leapper: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what support his Department has given to the British Retail Consortium to (a) establish and (b) manage retail crime partnership; and what contribution his Department makes to the British Retail Consortium annual retail crime survey for England and Wales; [39863]

(2) if he will make a statement on the number of meetings he has had with representatives of the retail industry to discuss retail crime prevention in the last 12 months; [39864]

(3) what studies have been made of the effects of retail crime partnerships on crime reduction; and if he will publish a list of the locations of retail crime partnerships in the UK. [39865]

Mr. Denham: My hon. Friend (Mr. Ainsworth) addressed the launch of the British Retail Consortium annual crime survey on 27 June 2001. I also visited a number of retailers in the St. Leonards areas of Hastings on 6 February 2002 when the Small Retailers in Deprived Areas scheme was launched.

Home Office officials are in regular contact with several retail representative bodies to discuss a range of issues, including retail crime prevention. Home Office Ministers and officials will continue to hold meetings with retail representatives such as the British Retail Consortium to ensure that their concerns are heard and understood by Government.

My Department has supported the work undertaken to establish partnerships by funding development work by a consultant for the past two years. This has resulted in the production of a definitive guide on how to establish and run a retail crime partnership, and we have encouraged retailers and other stakeholders in main shopping centre areas to establish partnerships to tackle retail and related crime. We are aware of the following retail crime partnerships currently in existence in England and Wales and registered with Business Crime Check.

Lancet Inquiry

Mr. Frank Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will consider referring the issues raised by the Lancet inquiry back to the Crown Prosecution Service. [36516]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 25 February 2002]: This is a matter for Cleveland Police.

Burglar Alarms

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what measures his Department is taking to co-operate with the private security industry to reduce the number of false burglar alarm call outs in England and Wales. [37429]

Mr. Denham: The principal link for the security industry in the matter of false alarm calls is the Association of Chief Police Officers (ACPO) through their Research and Development Committee. Home Office involvement includes an alarm technology programme which aims to define new ways in which the police service uses alarm systems to tackle burglary and volume crime. In addition, the Police Scientific Development Branch of the Home Office has published a number of papers on the subject and will carry out a study into false alarms in partnership with ACPO. This will investigate the causes of false alarms and highlight the need for best practice throughout the security industry. In the meantime Police Scientific Development Branch will continue work on alarm verification, expanding it to include all of the latest types of sensor devices and audio and imaging techniques.

Active Community Unit

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what initiatives are planned for the constituency of Buckingham funded by the Active Community Unit; and what target he has for involvement in volunteering of residents in the constituency. [43285]

Angela Eagle: The Active Community Unit is not currently funding any projects based in the constituency of Buckingham. However the Unit funds a wide range of national voluntary and community sector organisations which benefit every area of England.

The Active Community Unit aims to achieve a step change in people's voluntary involvement in their communities. We want to encourage and enable more people to volunteer. My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister (Mr. Blair) has laid down a challenge to one million more people getting involved in their communities, and the Home Office is committed to making significant progress towards this goal by 2004. This figure is not broken down by constituency.

Criminal Records Bureau

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what rent will be paid for the premises of the Criminal Records Bureau in Shannon Court, Liverpool [21705]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 10 December 2001]: I understand that the rent payable by Capita, the private sector partner in the Criminal Records Bureau (CRB) programme, for the Shannon court premises is £1,015,000.

Prison Service

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if the Prison Service will implement the recommendations of the Independent Review Body concerning pay for operational managers, prison officers and related grades. [40714]

Beverley Hughes: The report of the Prison Service Pay Review Body (PSPRB) on the pay of governing governors and operational managers, prison officers and related grades in England and Wales in 2002 was published on 30 January 2002 and copies placed in the Library.

The PSPRB has recommended a basic rise of 6 per cent. over a 15 month period. This is a significant award which my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary (Mr. Blunkett) has decided will be implemented in full. The locality allowances to Prison Service staff in eligible areas in London and the south-east will be increased immediately by the full amount recommended, with effect from 1 January 2002. The general award will be paid in two steps, 3.5 per cent. backdated to 1 January 2002; the remainder in January 2003.

The key recommendations are:

a 6 per cent. increase to basic pay rates over the 15 month period covered by the report; rates of local pay allowance paid to staff in London and parts of the south-east will be increased with effect from 1 January 2002 by:

£500 to £3,500 per annum for the top rate

£400 to £2,300 per annum for the middle rate

£200 to £1,000 per annum for the lower rate.

Current arrangements for the performance pay of operational managers will remain unchanged. Various special allowances will be raised in line with the basic award.

Prison Population

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he is taking to deal with the rise in the prison population. [45391]

Beverley Hughes: The Halliday review of the sentencing framework has given us a unique opportunity to examine what we should do to prevent, tackle and punish offending behaviour. The recent rise in the prison population suggests that sentences are not currently being targeted as effectively as they could be. Prisons are focusing on housing more and more prisoners for whom it is not demonstrably the right option. The Government is currently considering how to take the sentencing reforms forward with a view to publishing our conclusions in a White Paper to be published in the Spring. Whatever the population pressures, the Government is uncompromising in its response to serious and dangerous offenders. Where there is a need to protect the public, this should take place in a secure environment. Communities must be protected from such offenders.

As part of this I am very keen to look imaginatively at alternatives to full time custody, and in particular would like to explore options for piloting intermittent custody and introducing a new suspended sentence (custody minus). These sentences, alongside the tougher and more flexible community sentences we already have, as well as those being proposed, will give sentencers the confidence to explore alternatives to short custodial sentences. Easing pressure on the shorter-term population will enable the Prison Service to focus on providing longer term prisoners with the regimes, training and programmes they need to correct their offending behaviour.

Home detention curfew (HDC) is a key resettlement tool which gives us the opportunity to monitor an offender during their transition back into the community. It is also a useful tool in helping us manage the prison population by reducing over-crowding at the same time as improving the resettlement and rehabilitation opportunities for less serious offenders. From the beginning of May prisoners serving sentences of between three months and under 12 months, with the exception of those convicted of violent or drugs offences within the previous three years, and prisoners who have any history of sexual offending, will be released on home detention curfew for the latter part of their sentence unless there are compelling reasons not to do so. All offenders not statutorily excluded will be subject to a risk assessment and released on HDC only where it is safe to do so. Under the HDC scheme released prisoners serve the remainder of their custody period at home under electronic curfew usually from 7pm to 7am. At any one time we expect that this measure will remove up to 1,350 prisoners from prison accommodation, in addition to the 1,800 who are already on the scheme. The impact of these arrangements and any further extensions of the HDC scheme will be kept under close review.

Yarl's Wood

Alistair Burt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether Lloyds Syndicate 962 D. J. Pye is acting for the Home Office in relation to a claim for compensation for damage following the incidents at Yarl's Wood Remand Centre on 14 and 15 February. [38778]

Angela Eagle: Insurance in respect of the Yarl's Wood Removal Centre and any claims arising from it is the responsibility of Group 4 Amey Immigration Ltd. in accordance with the contract for the management and operation of the centre. The insurance provisions are in the joint name of the Home Office and the contractor.

Bedfordshire Police Authority

Alistair Burt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he is taking to ensure the Bedfordshire Police Authority will not suffer a loss to its budget in the event of a successful claim against it by loss adjusters. [38779]

Mr. Denham: Any claim would be against the Bedfordshire Police Authority. Whether the authority is liable for compensation will depend on the circumstances. My right hon. Friend the Home Secretary made the Government's position clear in respect of any claims against the Bedfordshire police by the insurers for compensation in his statement of 25 February 2002, Official Report, column 445 and at columns 450–51. We will work with the police to protect their interests and those of the people they serve in Bedfordshire.

Police Complaints

Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if an investigator independent of the Metropolitan police has been appointed to investigate complaints by members of the public against officers below the rank of commander in Operation Helios; [39363]

(2) what complaints by (a) members of the public and (b) others against police officers involved in the Operation Helios investigation of (i) Superintendent Ali Dizaei and (ii) Chief Inspector Leroy Logan have been recorded in accordance with police discipline regulations; [39358]

(3) how many police officers involved in Operation Helios have formally been given regulation 9 notices specifying the nature of complaints against them. [39359]

Mr. Denham: The Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis informs me that, in light of the on-going proceedings involving Superintendent Ali Dizaei, the views of the Crown Prosecution Service (CPS) have been sought. The issue of complaints will be a matter for consideration in the disclosure process within the criminal proceedings.

As the relevance and admissibility of these matters may well be an issue at the trial it is the view of the CPS, which has been accepted by the Commissioner, that to disclose information at this time would risk possible prejudice to the trial process.

Private Medical Insurance

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 11 February 2002, Official Report, column 57W, on private medical insurance, what plans (a) Norfolk, (b) Thames Valley, (c) Hertfordshire and (d) Bedfordshire police authorities have to make private medical insurance available to their staff; what assessment his Department has made of the potential effects on police officer availability of such plans; and if he will make a statement. [37190]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 28 February 2002]: None of these police forces make private medical insurance available to police officers and support staff.

We are currently developing an occupational health strategy for the police service which will encourage measures which will help to reduce sickness absence rates and increase police officer availability.

Best Value

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what police forces are the subject of best value assessments. [39235]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 28 February 2002]: All police authorities in England and Wales are defined as best value authorities under the Local Government Act 1999. This requires them to secure continuous improvement in the way their functions are exercised, having regard to a combination of economy, efficiency and effectiveness.

Police Community Consultative Groups

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what guidelines he has issued on the appointment of chairmen of police community consultative groups; [39234]

(2) how many chairmen of police community consultative groups (a) are and (b) are planned to be nominated from (i) the relevant police authority and (ii) non-police members of PCCGs. [39236]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 28 February 2002]: Section 96 of the Police Act 1996 places a duty on police authorities to make arrangements for obtaining views of people in the force area about matters concerning the policing of the area.

The Act does not specify that this duty should be fulfilled through the establishment of police/community consultative groups which have no formal status set out in statute, and whose constitution and membership is not governed by any binding directives or guidance. My right hon. Friend the Home Secretary (Mr. Blunkett) has issued no specific guidelines on the way in which the chairs of any such groups should be appointed. Information about them is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

In its report published in December 2001, the Community Cohesion Review Team, chaired by Ted Cantle and set up following the disturbances in the north of England last summer, recommended that a good practice guide to community consultation should be developed, and that work is being taken forward.

Sexual Abuse Investigations

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the definition is of trawling, in relation to sex abuse cases; and what research has been done by the HMIC to ascertain the effectiveness of the trawling process. [35957]

Mr. Denham: I refer to a letter sent by my predecessor (Mr. Clarke) in February of last year which addressed this subject.

The term "trawling" has been used by critics of the police to describe the process by which police investigations into serious allegations of historical sexual abuse in children's homes and other institutions trace potential witnesses. As such, it is not for my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary to provide a definition of a term he considers unhelpful and pejorative and is not normally used by the police.

The process referred to by the term is an investigative method which involves sampling from an often long list of potential witnesses who may have information that can be used to corroborate or rebut an allegation of sexual abuse which may have taken place a considerable time beforehand. Due to the very complex nature of these investigations, witness evidence is often paramount due to the lack of forensic and other evidence after the passage of time since the alleged offences.

The Code of Practice issued under Part II of the Criminal Procedure and Investigations Act 1996 sets out general responsibilities for officers conducting investigations into allegations that a crime has been committed. Under the code, police officers conducting an investigation should pursue all reasonable lines of inquiry, whether these point towards or away from the suspect. The practice referred to is established practice as the best use of police resources in eliciting information to assist an investigation.

Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Constabulary (HMIC) undertook a thematic inspection into child protection in 1999 and is currently taking a major part in an inspection of safeguards for children's welfare led by the Social Services Inspectorate. HMIC also routinely conduct detailed force inspections, which include arrangements for child abuse and major crime investigations. None of these has, thus far, thrown doubt over the quality of investigation into institutional child abuse allegations; nor has any evidence to support concerns into the sampling of historic institutional child abuse allegations been brought to the attention of HMIC or the Association of Chief Police Officers.

Anti-terrorism, Crime and Security Act

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many court cases have been determined without a jury since the Anti-terrorism, Crime and Security Act 2001 came into force. [41367]

Mr. Keith Bradley [holding answer 11 March 2002]: Information relating to the outcome of cases under the Act began to be collated centrally from 1 January 2002. Information about cases completed in 2002 will not be published until the autumn of next year.

Domestic Violence

Margaret Moran: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what advice is available to probation areas on changing their domestic violence services from established perpetrator programmes with central partner support services in favour of the Duluth Pathfinder. [42662]

Beverley Hughes: Until a nationally accredited programme is available we will not be advising areas to change to a centrally determined programme.

Crime Statistics

Mr. Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many crimes were recorded by each police authority in England and Wales in each category of crime for each year since 1997. [37903]

Mr. Denham: The requested data have been published in table 2.5 in the 1997, 1998, 1999 and 2000 editions of "Criminal Statistics England and Wales", which are available in the Library. It should be noted that there was a change in counting rules for recorded crime on 1 April 1998, which expanded the offences covered, and placed a greater emphasis on counting crimes in terms of numbers of victims. Numbers of recorded crimes after this date are therefore not directly comparable with previous years.

Road Traffic Accidents

Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of emergency police call-outs in the last 12 months for which figures are available were to road traffic accidents, broken down by police authority; and what estimate he has made of the saving to police authorities which a (a) 5 per cent., (b) 10 per cent. and (c) 20 per cent. reduction in road traffic accidents represents. [37462]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 26 February 2002]: In 2000–01 there were 668,549 calls to the police in England and Wales that related to road traffic crashes. These accounted for 3.8 per cent. of the total number of nearly 17.5 millions calls. Data are not available by police force area, and there is no central record of the number of traffic incidents attended by the police as the result of calls or of how many police attended on any occasion.

The latest information on the value of road accident prevention is given in "Highways Economics Note No 1", published by the Department for Transport, Local Government and the Regions, in October 2001. This estimates that the total reduction in police costs if all road traffic accidents in 2000 could have been prevented would have been approximately £30 million.

TRANSPORT, LOCAL GOVERNMENT AND THE REGIONS

Press Office

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions (1) what this year's budget is for his Department's (a) press office and (b) Directorate of Communication; [41997]

(2) what the establishment level is of his Department's press office; and for how many months that level has been achieved since June 2001; [41989]

(3) how many staff there are within his Department's press office. [41990]

Mr. Byers [holding answer 11 March 2002]: Resource allocations for 2001–2002 are as follows:

		£ million
(a)	Press Office	2.487
(b)	Directorate of Communication	5.842

Within these resource allocations, the press office has an indicative establishment provision for 35 posts. Since June 2001, the press office has averaged 4.5 vacant posts per month.

I also refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 19 March 2002, Official Report, column 220W.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will list the vacancies in his Department's press office. [40107]

Mr. Byers [holding answer 4 March 2002]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given above to questions 41997, 41989, and 41990.

International Travel

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how much his Department spent on international travel in 2000–01. [41681]

Dr. Whitehead: My Department spent £1,868,846 on international travel from April 2000 to end of March 2001.

Communications Costs

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what the annual budget for communications activities, including press, public relations, marketing and internal communications, was for his Department for each financial year from 1997–98 to 2001–02. [39908]

Dr. Whitehead: Annual expenditure in the years requested was as follows:

£ million

	Director of Communication administration expenditure[1]	Departmental external publicity and marketing expenditure	Total
1997–98	6.3	12.5	18.8
1998–99	7.0	11.2	18.2
1999–2000	6.5	20.4	26.9
2000–01	6.3	25.7	32.0
2001–02[2]	5.8	20.2	26.0

Passenger Cars

Helen Southworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will make a statement on the Government's proposal to consult on piloting a comparative, colour-coded label for passenger cars. [45714]

Mr. Jamieson: I have today published a consultation paper on piloting a comparative label for passenger cars. The consultation sets out the Government's proposals on a possible new form of label, which would be based on the environmental performance categories used in the Graduated Vehicle Excise Duty system. We believe this would make an effective label, consistent with and reinforced by the environmental message given through the new taxation regimes. The proposal at this stage is to begin piloting a comparative label later this year, with a view to making any further decision following that pilot. Any proposal to make the label mandatory, would be subject to further consultation. I have placed copies of the consultation document in the Library.

Access to Information

Charlotte Atkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what plans he has to amend the rules regulating the provision of access to information by local authorities. [46163]

Mr. Raynsford: I have today laid before the House two statutory instruments: the Local Authorities (Executive Arrangements) (Access to Information) (England) Amendment Regulations 2002 and the Local Authorities (Access to Meetings and Documents) (Period of Notice) (England) Order 2002.

Our aim in modernising local government is to make local decision-making more accountable. We have listened very carefully to the responses we received to the consultation on access to information in local government which we launched in April 2001. We believe it is right that local people should have earlier warning of the important decisions that local authorities take and of the meetings where these decisions take place. In line with this the statutory instruments will have the effect of increasing the notice period authorities have to give of such decisions or such meetings from three to five days.

This reform will encourage greater participation by local people in the democratic process. Decisions that local authorities take will benefit from the transparency that public debate brings. Decision-making will be brought closer to those affected by those decisions.

Our consultation also asked views on two other issues—proposals to revise the definition of "exempt" information given by Schedule 12A of the Local Government Act 1972 and the framing of guidance on financial thresholds for key executive decisions.

We currently have no plans to make changes to the definition of exempt information, but we will consult further in the planned review of the access to information regime, planned for summer 2002.

We announced in the local government White Paper, "Strong Local Leadership Quality Public Services", published in December 2001, that local authorities were best placed to define what constitutes a key decision.

Rail Strikes (Disabled People)

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what steps he has taken to ensure full access of people with disabilities to transport facilities during industrial action by staff of train operators. [42216]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer 11 March 2002]: On 6 February the Strategic Rail Authority published its revised Code of Practice, "Train and Station Services for Disabled Passengers". All licensed operators on the national rail network are required to review their Disabled Peoples Protection Policies to reflect the revised code. The code requires that any buses or other substitute transport arranged on a pre-planned basis must be accessible to disabled people and the SRA will expect that to be reflected in the revised policies which the operators put forward for approval.

Railways

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what the public sector administration cost associated with the rail sector was in each of the last five years. [44988]

Mr. Byers: The table shows the gross administration costs of the railways related public sector bodies and the total staff costs of the British Railways Board (BRB) over each of the last five years.

On 1 February 2001 the SRA legally assumed all the functions of OPRAF, most of the residual functions of the BRB and some functions of the DTLR railways directorate and of the ORR. The SRA administration figure includes staff costs for the British Transport Police that were previously paid by the BRB and for the Rail Passenger Councils that were previously paid by the ORR.

	1996–97	1997–98	1998–99	1999–2000	2000–01
Gross administration costs
DTLR (railways directorate)	2.1	2.5	2.6	2.7	2.7
Office of Passenger Rail Franchising (OPRAF)[1]	8	7	8	11	14
Strategic Rail Authority (SRA)[2]	—	—	—	—	15
Office of the Rail Regulator (ORR)	8	8	8	12	13
Total staff costs
British Railways Board[1]	762	102	85	77	69

Notes:
1. The 2000–01 figures for OPRAF and BRB cover the 10 months to 31 January 2001.
2. Staff costs for the two months to 31 March 2001. Taken from table 4, page 92 of the SRA annual report 2000–01.

Railtrack

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what discussions he or his Department have had with the Rail Regulator on the structure and funding of the successor company to Railtrack in administration. [43638]

Mr. Byers [holding answer 15 March 2002]: The successor for Railtrack is a matter for the administrator. Bidders need to put forward their proposals on structure and funding to him.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions (1) what powers Railtrack plc has while in administration, to be involved in any bid for another company, or part of another company; [44207]

(2) while it remains in administration, under what powers money could be provided to Railtrack plc by

(a) the Secretary of State, (b) the Office of the Rail Regulator, (c) the Strategic Rail Authority or (d) other financier, for the purchase of another company or part of another company including Global Crossing UK. [44208]

Mr. Byers: Copies of the loan agreement were placed in the House Library on 17 October 2001. The loan provides sufficient funding to continue on a 'business as usual' basis during the administration period, before the loan is replaced through commercial debt. Under the terms of the loan agreement, Railtrack plc cannot enter into any contract or obligation requiring expenditure or the undertaking of a liability in excess of £10 million without my prior written consent.

The Rail Regulator has no power to provide funding to Railtrack plc for the purchase of assets outside of the regulatory framework.

Section 211 of the Transport Act 2000 provides powers for the Strategic Rail Authority to provide financial assistance to secure the provision of railways services or assets. This function must only be exercised in the manner outlined in section 207 of the Act.

Finance raised through other sources is a matter for the administrator.

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what steps he is taking to ensure that companies bidding for Railtrack pay equal bid costs. [44801]

Mr. Jamieson: This is a matter for the respective bidders.

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how he will ensure that Ernst and Young obtain the best deal for Railtrack shareholders. [44799]

Mr. Jamieson: This is a matter for the administrator.

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what steps he is taking to ensure that private companies have an equal opportunity to bid for Railtrack. [44798]

Mr. Jamieson: The bidding process is a matter for the administrator. For its part, the Government have taken steps to ensure both that all potential bidders are aware of the principal issues my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State would consider in exercising his powers in respect of any transfer scheme proposed by the administrator and that the bid based on the concept of a company limited by guarantee is not unfairly advantaged in terms of access to information from Government.

Details were given in my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State's reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Gedlin (Mr. Coaker) on 31 October 2001, Official Report, columns 669–71W and in my reply to the hon. Member for Epsom and Ewell (Mr. Grayling) on 25 February 2002, Official Report, columns 790–91W.

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions who is paying the bidding costs of the company limited by guarantee for Railtrack. [44800]

Mr. Jamieson: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the Minister for Transport to the hon. Member for Epsom and Ewell (Mr. Grayling) on 12 February 2002, Official Report, column 214W.

Global Crossing

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions (1) what representations he has received from Railtrack plc or its administrators with regards to the possible purchase of the whole of Global Crossing UK or part of it by (a) Railtrack plc on its own, (b) a bid involving Railtrack plc or (c) other companies or bodies; [44204]

(2) what assessment he has made as to the possibility of establishing a special purchase vehicle for the purpose of purchasing, or being involved in any purchase of, Global Crossing UK or part of it; and if he will make a statement; [44210]

(3) what powers the SRA has to purchase or be involved in the purchase of Global Crossing UK or part of it; and if he will make a statement; [44209]

(4) what representations he has received from the Health and Safety Executive with regard to the possible purchase of Global Crossing UK, or any part of it, by (a) Railtrack plc (b) the SRA and (c) other company, either on their own or as part of a joint bid; [44211]

(5) what assessment he has made as to the possibility of Railtrack plc, while in administration, purchasing or being involved in the purchase of Global Crossing UK or part of it; and if he will make a statement; [44206]

(6) what representations he has received from SRA with regards to the possible purchase of the whole or part of Global Crossing UK by (a) the SRA on its own, (b) a bid involving the SRA or (c) other companies or bodies. [44205]

Mr. Byers: No representations have been received from the Health and Safety Executive, the Strategic Rail Authority (SRA), or Railtrack or its administrators on this subject. I have not made any assessment of either the use of a special purpose vehicle for purchasing any part of Global Crossing UK or of Railtrack in administration doing so. Section 211 of the Transport Act 2000 sets out the SRA's powers in relation to the provision of railway services and assets.

Maritime and Coastguard Agency

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions when the current IT system was implemented into the Maritime and Coastguard Agency. [44973]

Mr. Jamieson: The current Maritime and Coastguard Agency's (MCA) IT system was implemented in June 2000.

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions for what reason there is not a central database of Maritime and Coastguard Agency registered vessels in the UK. [44972]

Mr. Jamieson: The Maritime and Coastguard Agency (MCA) has a central database of vessels registered in the UK. It is managed by the agency's Registry of Shipping and Seamen (RSS) in Cardiff and is one of the oldest and most prestigious shipping registers in the world.

The agency is implementing an information integration programme that will allow staff to view, simultaneously, related information about UK registered vessels from other sources as well as the RSS, making more effective use of the information at the agency's disposal.

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how long it has taken to install the current IT system into the Maritime and Coastguard Agency. [44980]

Mr. Jamieson: The current Maritime and Coastguard Agency's (MCA) IT system was installed during May and June 2000.

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what the cost was of implementing the most recent IT system into the Maritime and Coastguard Agency; and which outside organisations advised its implementation and helped introduce the system. [44979]

Mr. Jamieson: The Maritime and Coastguard Agency's (MCA) current IT system was procured using Government competitive tendering procedures. A five-year contract was awarded to BT at a total cost of approximately £2.8 million. BT advised on installation and the introduction of the system.

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many non-UK owned, UK registered vessels were inspected by the Maritime and Coastguard Agency in each of the last five years; from which countries they came; and what categories of vessels were inspected. [44981]

Mr. Jamieson: The Maritime and Coastguard Agency's (MCA) database for recording ship inspections does not have sufficiently comprehensive details on vessel ownership to provide this information.

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many vessels are registered with each Maritime and Coastguard Agency office in the UK. [44971]

Mr. Jamieson: The Maritime and Coastguard Agency (MCA) manages the UK Shipping Register at its Register of Shipping and Seamen (RSS) office in Cardiff. The Register is being computerised in a process that will continue into 2003. The number of merchant and fishing vessels recorded on the Register at the end of February 2002 was:

	Number
Merchant[1]	3,789
Fishing[1]	7,059

[1] Vessels

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what systems are in place for port authorities to provide the Maritime and Coastguard Agency with information concerning vessels entering each port in the UK. [44974]

Mr. Jamieson: A variety of arrangements are place for each Maritime and Coastguard Agency (MCA) Marine Office to obtain information from port authorities on vessels entering each port in the UK. The Agency is working with port authorities to ensure that information received is timely and consistent.

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what plans he has to implement the proposals outlined in the 19 report from the Committee on Public Accounts on Ship Surveys and Inspections (HC608), that inspectors check of all areas of ships inspected; and what plans he has to install all the data concerning vessel inspections into a central database. [44975]

Mr. Jamieson: My Department and the Maritime and Coastguard Agency are actively considering the recommendations set out in the Committee's 19th Report and will prepare a formal response in accordance with the usual procedures and timetables.

Multi-modal Studies

Mrs. Fitzsimons: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he has considered the recommendations of the North West Regional Assembly following completion of the South East Manchester Multi Modal Study; and if he will make a statement. [45713]

Mr. Spellar: I have today written to the Leader of the North West Regional Assembly and a copy of this letter has been placed in the House of Commons Library.

The South East Manchester Multi Modal Study was commissioned by the Government as part of their 10-year Plan for Transport. The study looked at ways to improve all forms of transport in the area to reduce congestion, make roads safer and modernise public transport services.

I have today written to the North West Regional Assembly and agreed to:

the provisional acceptance of the Alderley Edge bypass

the provisional acceptance for a £35 million Quality Bus Corridor to improve bus services in South East Manchester provide an extra £7.445 million for Greater Manchester and £1.5 million for Cheshire to spend in 2002–03 on improvements to include:

- Improvements to bus and rail facilities
- Improved signing, management and maintenance of the road network to improve journey reliability
- More facilities for cyclists and pedestrians
- Better management of freight
- Investment to support urban regeneration ask the Highways Agency to draw up plans to improve the M60/M67/A57Denton interchange.

invite the Greater Manchester Passenger Transport Executive and local authorities to continue the detailed development of other schemes, which will include:

A6 bypass

Poynton bypass

A555 MALRW (Manchester Airport Link Road West)

Possible Metrolink Extensions

ask the Strategic Rail Authority to continue to work with Greater Manchester Passenger Transport Authority and local authorities to develop detailed assessments of the benefits of expanding the rail system and explore funding through existing mechanisms.

invite local authorities to develop transport change proposals, including:

A campaign to encourage the use of public transport

A strict enforcement of Land Use Policy to promote development decisions which reduce car dependency

Urban regeneration that maximises the attractiveness and potential of existing centres as places of employment, retail and leisure opportunities to reduce car dependency and promote social inclusion.

An announcement on a further extension of the Metrolink System to Stockport will be made as soon as possible.

The outputs of the study will be balanced across transport modes and across the South East Manchester area. The most deprived neighbourhoods and more affluent car owning neighbourhoods are all set to benefit from the additional transport investment involved. Improvements are designed to help reduce road congestion and accidents; increase rail use by up to 50 per cent. in peak periods and 100 per cent. off peak; increase bus use by 8 per cent. in peak periods and 30 per cent. in off peak periods and increase use of the Metrolink. I am also pleased to say that proposals for encouraging the use of public transport and improving air quality through the reduction of greenhouse gas emissions have also been welcomed by environmental groups.

I welcome the solutions proposed by the study. It is an excellent example of how multi-modal transport solutions can be devised to address complex and deep seated transport problems. We have seen that a wholly roads based solution would have added to, rather than alleviated, the long-term traffic problems in the area. Instead the study has identified a balanced strategy which will deal with congestion problems for motorists, but which does so by investing across all modes of transport and in a sustainable way.

Slot Allocations

Mr. David Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what plans he has to review the European Union rules on slot allocation and protection; and if he will consider changing the PSO criteria to take more account of vulnerable geographically isolated rural locations. [45139]

Mr. Jamieson: A proposal by the European Commission to amend EC Regulation 95–93 which sets out the rules for allocating airport slots was published last year. This is currently being discussed by member states. The UK Government has consulted with interested parties and is currently developing its strategy with regard to the Commission's proposals. Any changes to the rules for imposing public service obligations will need to be agreed at the European level.

Planning

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions when the Government will be issuing a White Paper on Planning. [44726]

Ms Keeble: The consultation period for the Planning Green paper closed on Monday 18 March. To date this department has received around 13,000 representations. Following careful consideration of these responses the Government intends to make a policy statement on the planning system before the summer Parliamentary recess.

Social Landlords

Geraldine Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what plans he has to engage social landlords in tackling antisocial behaviour. [46092]

Ms Keeble: My Department will publish a consultation paper shortly.

Council Housing

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will list the changes to Government methodology for calculating empty or vacant council housing since 1997. [44987]

Mr. Byers: Local authorities are asked each year via annual Housing Investment Programme (HIP) returns to give the number of their own dwellings that are vacant at 1 April, whether they are within the authorities area or not. For 1 April 2001, rather than explicitly asking for their vacant dwellings outside their area, this figure was obtained by subtracting the number of their vacant dwellings in their area from the total number of their vacant dwellings.

There have been no other changes.

Homelessness

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many households there were in bed and breakfast accommodation arranged by local authorities under the homelessness provisions of the 1985 and 1996 Housing Acts, for each English region and for Wales, in the first quarter of 1997 and the last quarter of 2001. [44986]

Mr. Byers: Information reported by local authorities in England on the number of households accommodated in bed and breakfast hotels under statutory homelessness provisions on 31 March 1997 and 31 December 2001 is presented.

National information on the number of households in various types of temporary accommodation, including bed and breakfast, is provided in a quarterly Statistical Release published by the Department; corresponding information at local authority and regional level is set out in associated Supplementary Tables. Copies covering recent quarters are available in the Library, and also via the Department's website. The latest editions, published on 14 March, present statistics up to the end of December 2001.

I recently announced a new commitment to ensure that by March 2004 no family with children will be placed in B&B other than in an emergency. This was accompanied by changes in housing benefit subsidies to make leasing self-contained temporary accommodation more cost-effective, and an additional £35 million from DTLR to help local authorities find alternatives to B&B.

Homeless households resident in bed and breakfast accommodation[1]

	As at 31 March 1997	As at 31 December 2001
North East	80	60

For corresponding information about Welsh authorities, I refer the hon. Member to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales.

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what the average cost of placing a family in bed and breakfast accommodation is; and what the total cost was in each of the last 10 years. [44714]

Ms Keeble: Information reported to the Department by local authorities about expenditure on accommodation provided under homelessness legislation does not identify average unit costs. Latest available information is published by the Chartered Institute of Public Finance and Accountancy (CIPFA) in their report "Homelessness Statistics 1999–2000 Actuals". Based on information supplied by local authorities in England, the average gross weekly charge (before deduction of any rent rebate) per B&B unit during 1999–2000 was £276.92.

Total estimated expenditure by local authorities in each of the past 10 years, based on information supplied to CIPFA, was as follows:

Local authority expenditure on bed and breakfast provision: England

	Gross	Net
1990–91	135,695,391	80,624,379
1991–92	144,496,027	73,219,805

Notes:

1. B&B accommodation includes privately owned or managed hotels/guest houses with some shared facilities, but excludes hotel annexes of self-contained accommodation where meals are not provided.
2. Expenditure excludes any apportionment of central or departmental administration.
3. Net expenditure takes into account income arising from charges to clients, and housing benefit subsidy.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Regulatory Impact Assessment Report

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister when he intends to reply to the National Audit Office report entitled "Better Regulation: Making Good Use of Regulatory Impact Assessments". [43101]

Mr. Leslie: Officials are continuing discussions with the National Audit Office about progressing recommendations in their report ("Better Regulation: Making Good Use of Regulatory Impact Assessments"). The Public Accounts Committee heard evidence on the National Audit Office Report on 26 November 2001. When the Public Accounts Committee's report and recommendations are published the Government will subsequently respond by Treasury Minute in the normal way.

Public Service Agreements

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will list the Public Service Agreement targets which have been revised and those which have been introduced since the publication of the 2001 departmental report. [43253]

The Deputy Prime Minister and First Secretary of State: There has been only one agreed change or revision to the Cabinet Office's public service agreement targets as listed in the Cabinet Office 2001 departmental report "Cabinet Office—The Government Expenditure Plans 2001–02 to 2003–04 Cm5119".

The service delivery agreement target number 8 which covered 'securing successful delivery of the Government's anti-drugs strategy and targets' was transferred along with UK Anti-Drugs Co-ordination Unit to the Home Office as a result of the post-election machinery of Government changes.

A copy of "Cabinet Office—The Government Expenditure Plans 2001–02 to 2003–04 Cm5119" is held in the House of Commons Library and is available via the Cabinet Office website.

The Cabinet Office departmental report for 2002 which will be published before the summer recess will also detail the Department's performance against its agreed public service agreement targets.

Departmental Benchmarking

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what his Department's response is to the recommendation of the NAO report on modern policy making that ongoing benchmarking of Departments should be undertaken. [43113]

Mr. Leslie: Benchmarking is a powerful tool to support performance improvement, which can be applied in a wide range of ways. One approach is to compare the performance of an organisation against an ideal, in order to identify areas for improvement. This approach has been adopted for he Departmental Change Programme, being developed by the Office of Public Services Reform in the Cabinet Office. Departments will be reviewed against a model of high performance, which includes a module on policy making, to inform he generation and implementation of an integrated change programme.

Centre for Management and Policy Studies

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many staff are employed in the Centre for Management and Policy Studies; what their roles are; and what liaison they undertake with other Departments. [43118]

Mr. Leslie: 366 staff are employed in the Centre for Management and Policy Studies (CMPS). This figure includes 261 staff from the Civil Service College which ceased to be an executive agency on 1 April 2000 and now is a directorate of CMPS.

The staff in CMPS work with other units in the Cabinet Office and Departments to help government to learn better, ensure that the civil service is cultivating the right skills and culture for effective delivery, and promote new ways of developing and delivering policy through the sharing of knowledge and evidence from here and abroad.

CMPS is also the largest single provider of open training programmes for Government.

Energy Costs

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will make a statement on energy costs incurred by his Department in each of the last 10 years. [42447]

Mr. Leslie: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him by my right hon. Friend the Member for Cardiff, South and Penarth (Alun Michael) on 19 March 2002, Official Report, column 268W.

Legal Costs

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what legal costs have been incurred by his Department in each of the last four years. [34291]

The Deputy Prime Minister and First Secretary of State: Estimated legal costs incurred by the Department over the last four years can be broken down as follows.

1997–98	43
1998–99	53
1999–2000	69
2000–01	[1]173

[1] This includes expenditure of £111,500 incurred for residual HMSO liabilities, Security Facilities Division restructuring costs and Cross Cutting CMF—contractual work for the Government 'Gateway' project.

Catering Services

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the cost was of (a) in-house canteen and (b) other catering services provided by his Department in each of the last four years. [38924]

Mr. Leslie: For the financial year 2001–02, Eurest (formally known as Sutcliffe Catering) provide departmental in-house canteen services at an estimated cost of £161,000. In-house canteen costs for previous financial years are not held centrally, and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

The expenditure figure of £161,000 does not include expenditure undertaken by the Centre for Management and Policy Studies, the Government Office for the Regions and the Central Office of Information as this information is not held centrally, and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

European Union Directives

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will list the European Union directives and regulations relating to his Department that have been implemented in each of the last four years, specifying (a) the title and purpose of each, (b) the cost to public funds of each and (c) the cost to businesses of each. [39120]

The Deputy Prime Minister and First Secretary of State: The Women and Equality Unit in the Cabinet Office has been responsible for implementing the Burden of Proof Directive (EC Directive 97/80/EC) . However, the relevant statutory instrument, which came into force on 12 October 2001, was laid before Parliament by the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry and Minister for Women, who has overall responsibility for women and equality issues.

Directive 97/80/BC has effect in UK law by Council Directive 98/52/BC and is implemented in the UK through the Sex Discrimination (Indirect Discrimination And Burden of Proof) Regulations 2001. Its aim is to ensure that any measures implementing the principle of equal treatment are made more effective, thereby providing victims of sex discrimination with effective access to justice. The directive also defines the concept of indirect discrimination.

We do not hold cost information in the form requested in part (b) of the question and that information could be assembled only at disproportionate cost.

Departments are required to produce regulatory impact assessments (RIAs) for all proposals, including those originating in European legislation, likely to impose significant costs on business, charities or voluntary organisations. DTI prepared an RIA for the regulations in question, which showed the cost to an employer who is not discriminating should be nil. A copy of the RIA has been placed in the House Libraries.

Accommodation Costs

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the cost was of hotel accommodation for departmental staff working away from home in each of the last four years. [41061]

Mr. Leslie: Estimated expenditure on hotel accommodation incurred by departmental staff while on official business since 1997 is as follows:

Year	£000
1997–98	132
1998–99	122
2000–01	206

The Department is responsible for meeting the subsistence costs for staff who necessarily incur expenses while away from their office on official business. All hotel accommodation expenditure incurred meets the value for money criteria as set out in Chapter 9 of the Cabinet Office Management Code.

The rise in hotel accommodation expenditure is mainly a result of the Cabinet Office's widening span of responsibilities in recent years. There has been a corresponding rise in necessary travel on official business by an increased staff resource. See following table:

Year	Percentage increase in staff numbers[1]
April 1997 to April 1998	3.4
April 1998 to April 1999	47.0
April 1999 to April 2000	12.0
April 2000 to April 2001	5.0

[1] Agencies staff numbers excluded

The increases in staff numbers have been in existing units whose roles have expanded and in new management units that have been introduced through new Government initiatives. In particular the increase between April 1998 and April 1999 is due to expansion of existing policy units such as the Social Exclusion Unit and Performance and Innovation Unit; and the transfer of units to the Cabinet Office such as the Women's Unit and the UK Anti-Drugs Co-ordination Unit.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Individual Learning Accounts

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will conduct a new tendering process for (a) advice on the shape of a new ILA scheme and (b) delivery of a new ILA scheme. [40317]

John Healey [holding answer 4 March 2002]: I confirmed to the House on 6 November 2002 that there will be a replacement for the ILA programme. We are currently using Segal Quince Wickstead to conduct a stakeholder consultation exercise seeking views on the shape and delivery mechanism of the new scheme. The new scheme will build on the strengths of the ILA and take into account the findings of the current consultation exercise which are due in early April. In relation to the delivery of the new scheme we are currently considering a number of options. We will announce our plans in due course.

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills who her Department's advisers were on the establishment of the ILA; and what advice they gave on the need for validation on accreditation of learning providers. [37536]

John Healey: The Department appointed KPMG Consulting to assist in the design and development of the national framework of individual learning accounts. KPMG sought a range of views from stakeholders, including learning providers, to help inform the policy-making process of the Department.

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many complaints about ILA money being illicitly drawn down were passed by Capita to her Department for investigation in each month since January 2000; how many of those investigations have been completed in each month; and how many of her staff worked on the investigation of complaints. [37538]

John Healey: The individual learning account national framework was launched in September 2000. Prior to the national framework launch, each Training and Enterprise Council had responsibility for the operational nature of the programme in their area. The Department does not hold complaint information during this period.

Between 4 September 2000 and 31 January 2002, the Individual Learning Account Centre received some 18,000 complaints, many stemming from issues relating to the operational policy of the programme. Of this number, some 8,000 complaints involved potential abuse of the programme and were referred by Capita to the Department for investigation. Included in the 8,000 are some 5,900 complaints received relating to money taken from an ILA account without the individual's knowledge or consent.

No monthly breakdown relating to complaints requiring investigation is available from commencement of the programme. All allegations about money being illicitly drawn down are followed up by the Department and where evidence of potential fraud is found the complaint is passed to the Department's Special Investigation Unit for further investigation and referral to the police if appropriate. One investigation has been completed. Currently, there are 37 staff involved in work relating to investigations.

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many complaints involving potential fraud in the ILA scheme were received by her Department in each month since January 2000; and how many investigations of those complaints were (a) undertaken and (b) completed in each month. [37540]

John Healey: On the number of complaints received involving potential fraud in the ILA scheme, I refer to my answer given to Parliamentary Question 37538. All serious complaints are subject to follow-up and where evidence of potential fraud is found the complaint is passed to the Department's Special Investigation Unit (SIU). The SIU are currently dealing with 105 registered learning providers against whom 3804 complaints have been received. One further case was completed in February 2002. The table gives the information requested on investigations.

	Cases logged
November 2000	1
July 2001	5
August 2001	9
October 2001	2
November 2001	30
December 2001	6
January 2002	31
February 2002	19
Total	106

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many complaints about the quality of ILA learning providers were received by her Department in each month since January 2000; and how many investigations of those complaints were (a) undertaken and (b) completed in each month. [37539]

John Healey: Information specific to the quality of learning is not collected separately. As at 31 January 2002, 517 complaints had been recorded, expressing dissatisfaction with learning providers and a further 47 relating to general learning provider issues. During the early months of the programme complaints were few and as such, no complaint categorisation system was put in place. The figures quoted are as a result of a system introduced in March 2001.

Complaints received about the quality of learning in themselves do not result in an investigation. Investigations are put in place to deal with potential abuses of the programme.

Public-Private Partnerships (Consultants)

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the total external spending by her Department was on public-private partnership consultants in each of the last four years; how many full-time equivalent consultants were employed over this period; how many billed consultancy days there were per year; what the implied average cost of each PPP consultant was; how many consultancy firms were used by her Department over this period; and if she will make a statement. [43201]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 1 February 2002, Official Report, column 634W. The only Private Finance Initiative with which my Department is involved is a Public Private Partnership to deliver the Connexions Card. Therefore the same figures apply. In addition, since 25 January, my Department has spent an additional £56,183.03 on public private partnership consultants. This equates to one full-time equivalent, and consisted of 49 billed consultancy days, at an average cost per consultant of £1,146.59. We have again used four consultancy firms.

Private Medical Insurance

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many employees in (a) her Department and (b) her Department's agencies and non-departmental public bodies have had private medical insurance provided for them in each year since 1997–98; what the total cost is; and if she will make a statement. [32317]

Mr. Ivan Lewis [holding answer 6 February 2002]: The Civil Service Management Code specifically precludes the provision of private medical insurance as a part of any structured remuneration package for civil servants. Consequently, private medical insurance is not a feature of the Department for Education and Skills' (DfES') terms and conditions of employment.

The employees of DfES' non-departmental public bodies (NDPBs) are not civil servants. Four of DfES' NDPBs—the Adult Learning Inspectorate (ALI), Construction Industry Training Board (CITB), Engineering Construction Industry Training Board (ECITB) and Learning and Skills Council (LSC)—offer private medical insurance to some employees.

Neither the CITB nor ECITB are publicly funded. The ALI and LSC are both obliged to offer private medical insurance to some employees under the Transfer of Undertakings (Protection of Employment) regulations. The total number of employees covered and the annual costs of private medical insurance provision since 1997–98 is as follows:

Year	Employees	Cost (£000)
1997–1998[1]	8	6.7
1998–1999[1]	9	9.0
1999–2000[1]	8	8.5
2000–2001[1]	9	9.4
2001–2002[2]	1,215	514.0

[1] CITB and ECITB.
[2] ALI and LSC. Figures for the CITB and ECITB are not yet available.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Leigh: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what additional support is given to local education authorities to meet the costs resulting from the requirement to educate the children of asylum seekers. [44488]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Local education authorities receive financial support, through the Education Standard Spending Assessment, for the cost of educating children of asylum seekers in the same way that it does for all pupils on school rolls. The Ethnic Minority Achievement Grant, part of the Department's Standards Fund, is available to help schools address the needs of minority ethnic pupils at risk of underachievement and support pupils, including children of asylum seekers, for whom English is an additional language. All LEAs are eligible for this funding, which in this financial year is providing around £154 million of support.

In addition, in 2000–01, £1.5 million was made available to support the education costs of the children of asylum seekers dispersed to Home Office designated "cluster areas". This funding was rolled forward into this financial year and increased to £2,377,000.

Congestion Charging

Kate Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many schools, broken down by (a) primary, (b) secondary and (c) special, are within the congestion charge zone in London. [44372]

Mr. Timms: There will be 40 maintained nursery/primary schools, nine maintained secondary schools and five maintained special schools within the proposed congestion charge zone in London.

These figures are estimated using postcode details of schools and the proposed central zone described in the Transport for London Street Management website on 18 March 2002.

School Accidents

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) how many (a) deaths and (b) serious accidents have occurred in practical lessons in schools in England in each of the last 10 years; and if she will make a statement; [44719]

(2) what guidelines exist on class sizes for practical lessons in schools. [44720]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: My Department does not collect information on deaths and serious accidents in practical lessons in schools.

Sizes of practical groups and pupil-teacher ratios are matters for local education authorities and schools. They should take account of assessments of potential hazards; the ages, abilities, aptitudes and any special educational needs of the pupils; and relevant safety regulations. My Department's "Area Guidelines for Schools" (Building Bulletin 82), published in 1996, carries recommendations for classroom area/pupil space. Further recommendations can also be found in the Department's "Design and Technology Accommodation in Secondary Schools" (Building Bulletin 81), "Art Accommodation in Secondary Schools" (Building Bulletin 89), "Guide to Safe Practice in Art and Design" (1995), and "Safety in Science Education" (1996). The Association for Science Education has published guidance, and advice is also available on request from the Consortium of Local Education Authorities for the Provision of Science Services.

Departmental Expenditure Limits

Mr. Mike O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, pursuant to her answer of 14 February 2002, Official Report, columns 607–08W, what changes have since been made to the departmental expenditure limit. [45865]

Estelle Morris: The Departmental Expenditure Limit (DEL) for the Department for Education and Skills (DfES), including the Office for Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Schools (OFSTED), which has a separate Estimate, has been decreased by £210,000 from £20,304,478,000 to £20,304,268,000.

The impact of this reduction on the resources element of the DEL is set out in the following table:

		Resources				Capital
	Change	New DEL	Of which: Voted	Non-voted	DEL	Of which: Voted	Non-voted
RfR 1	–210	17,014,918	6,675,052	10,339,866	2,820,374	1,851,123	969,251
Total change	–210	—	—	—	—	—	—
Ofsted	0	152,019	152,019	0	12,581	12,581	0

The DfES Spring Supplementary Estimate included a transfer of provision from the Department for Transport, Local Government and the Regions (DTLR) for Neighbourhood Surveys. It was subsequently discovered that this transfer was not included by DTLR in their Spring Supplementary or in their parliamentary answer announcing changes to their DEL.

The administration costs limits remain unchanged as follows:

Original

	£000
DfES (RfR1)	219,730
Sure Start (RfR3)	3,890
Children and Young People's Unit (RfR4)	2,491
Ofsted	27,095

Stolen Equipment

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, pursuant to her answer of 22 January 2002, Official Report, columns 818–19W, on stolen equipment, what criminal proceedings have been undertaken for cases of theft against her Department, stating in each case (a) whether the proceedings (i) led to a criminal conviction and (ii) were unsuccessful, (b) the cost incurred by her Department in pursuing a conviction and (c) the value of items recovered; and if she will make a statement. [41506]

Mr. Ivan Lewis [holding answer 18 March 2002]: My Department has not undertaken any criminal proceedings for cases of theft since 1 May 1997.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Bovine Tuberculosis

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what further steps she is taking to combat the rise of bovine tuberculosis. [43980]

Mr. Morley: On 31 January movement restrictions were placed on cattle herds which had missed a six or 12-month TB test after the lifting of movement restrictions, in annually tested parishes. This measure was introduced in response to a veterinary risk assessment which has shown that herds undergoing these kinds of tests have historically had the greatest risk of bovine TB infection. In addition the backlog of TB tests that have arisen during the foot and mouth outbreak are being prioritised and where possible extra resources are being diverted to carry out this work.

Foot and Mouth

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what non-domesticated animals other than brown rats have been implicated in the spread of foot and mouth; and what steps were taken to destroy them on infected farms. [39490]

Mr. Morley: There is no direct evidence that wildlife contributed to the spread of foot and mouth last year, either as mechanical carriers, or through contracting and carrying the virus. Pest control activities on infected premises and farms considered to be dangerous contacts was limited to baiting for rats.

National Forest

Mr. Dhanda: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether a conclusion has been reached on the review of the National Forest Company. [46215]

Mr. Morley: The quinquennial review of the National Forest company has been completed. It has concluded that the company, a non-departmental public body sponsored by the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, should continue to be responsible for delivering the National forest Strategy which is contributing strongly to the government's sustainable development agenda. Since its creation in 1995 the Company has for example achieved an expansion of woodland cover in the National Forest area, covering 200 square miles in Derbyshire, Leicestershire and Staffordshire, from 6 per cent. to 12 per cent. Detailed changes to the company's operations will be made in order to maximise effective delivery and value for money. A full report of the review is available at www.defra.gov.uk.

Fish Quotas

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, pursuant to the statement by the Under-Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs on 27 February 2002, Official Report, European Standing Committee A, column 25, whether the levy for the over-quota fish was paid to the producers' organisations whose members were recently prosecuted in Plymouth; whether the Department has undertaken the correct checks to ensure that the relevant procedure has been followed, pursuant to the requirements laid down in the Council Regulations governing the operations of producers' organisations; and whether correct procedures have been followed to ensure that these organisations are protected should the Commission carry out external checks. [44101]

Mr. Morley: From evidence we have in the form of sales notes, it appears that levy was paid to the South Western Fish Producers' Organisation on the landings both declared and undeclared. In the first instance, any remedial action regarding such levy payments is a matter for the PO.

Food Prices

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what information she collects on changes in farmgate and supermarket prices; and if she will make a statement; [43834]

(2) if she will list the monthly changes over the last 24 months of (a) the farmgate price and (b) the supermarket price of a 35 lb lamb. [43835]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 15 March 2002]: Information on farmgate prices is collected from a variety of sources including my Department's own surveys of milk and egg processors, DEFRA Agricultural Market Reports, the Home Grown Cereals Authority, the British Potato Council and the Meat and Livestock Commission.

Price indices based on these data are published monthly as "Agricultural Price Indices, United Kingdom".

Retail prices are estimated from data on expenditure and volume of purchases as collected in the Expenditure and Food Survey (formerly the National Food Survey). These data are not published monthly as the sample size is insufficient. Approximate prices for selected commodities can be estimated from expenditure and consumption data that are published in the quarterly Statistics News Release. Annual average prices are given in the annual report on the survey (NFS 2000 is the latest).

Monthly movements in retail prices for food, as with other items, are best monitored by reference to the Retail Price Index published by the Office for National Statistics.

Information for the API for sheep and the RPI for home-killed lamb for the period January 2000 to December 2001 is given in the following table in terms of three-month moving averages. Agricultural producer prices were 7 per cent. lower at the end of the period than at the beginning while retail prices were 2.8 per cent. higher.

Retail prices lag several months behind producer price movements and show less volatility.

All foods as purchased by consumers will differ to some extent from the ex-farm commodity. Meat as retailed will have been de-boned, cut, trimmed of most fat and packaged. These additional processes affect the validity of a direct comparison between the consumer and farmgate prices.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Accountancy Contracts

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will list the contracts agreed by her Department with the five largest accountancy firms since May 1997; and what was the total value of contracts with each. [42097]

Dr. Howells: I refer my hon. Friend to the answers given to the hon. Member for Bath (Don Foster) on 7 February 2002, Official Report, column 1116W and to the hon. Member for Perth (Annabelle Ewing) on 15 March 2002, Official Report, columns 1279–80W.

Justices of the Peace

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many members of staff at her Department are justices of the peace; and if she has a strategy for her Department to encourage members of staff to become justices of the peace. [44546]

Dr. Howells: The Department keeps no central records of the number of staff who are justices of the peace. Staff involved in magisterial duties are granted up to 18 days special leave with pay each year.

Regeneration Schemes (English Heritage)

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) which English Heritage supported regeneration schemes have (a) applied for EC state aid, (b) been successful and (c) been refused in the last 12 months; [43513]

(2) if she will make a statement on EU state aid rules and English Heritage-supported projects. [43514]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 15 March 2002]: English Heritage's main historic buildings, monuments, parks and gardens programme, which supports the repair of individual buildings, parks and gardens, was notified to the European Commission as possible state aid in July 2001. We are awaiting the Commission's assessment of the programme's compatibility with the EC Treaty. Grants to individual enterprises from English Heritage's Heritage Economic Regeneration schemes do not require notification as they are compatible with the de minimis block exemption regulation.

Golden Jubilee

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) how much money has been received in the form of donations to fund the Golden Jubilee events in each of the past three years; and if she will make a statement; [44578]

(2) if she will list (a) the donors sponsoring the Golden Jubilee events and (b) the amount of money each donor has contributed in each of the past three years; and if she will make a statement. [44579]

Tessa Jowell: I refer the hon. Member to my reply of 5 March 2002, Official Report, column 265W. These are matters for Lord Sterling, who started fundraising last summer and has so far raised over £4.5 million.

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will list the groups expected to march in the Golden Jubilee procession on 4 June; and if she will make a statement. [44591]

Tessa Jowell: The Queen's Golden Jubilee Weekend Trust, chaired by Lord Sterling, announced the details on 13 March 2002.

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what plans have been made for cleaning up after major Golden Jubilee events; and if she will make a statement. [44581]

Tessa Jowell: For events taking place in the Royal Parks during the Jubilee Weekend of 1 to 4 June, cleaning up will be the responsibility of the event organisers and the Royal Parks Agency. For events in Westminster and the City of London, responsibility will fall to Westminster city council or the Corporation of London as appropriate.

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many visitors are expected to attend the (a) fireworks display on 3 June, (b) ceremonial procession from Buckingham Palace on 4 June, (c) Golden Jubilee Festival in the Mall on 4 June and (d) Queen's balcony appearance at Buckingham Palace on 4 June; and if she will make a statement. [44566]

Tessa Jowell: Previous experience of similar events shows that it is impossible accurately to predict the numbers that will attend, but many tens of thousands are expected.

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what steps have been taken to encourage neighbourhood street parties to celebrate the Queen's Golden Jubilee; and if she will make a statement. [44586]

Tessa Jowell: The Golden Jubilee Office distributed 20,000 Golden Jubilee Celebrations Toolkits to councils, Citizens' Advice Bureaux, libraries, a wide range of organisations across England, Scotland and Wales and the media. A further 13,500 copies have subsequently been requested and demand continues to be high.

The Celebrations Toolkit is also available to be downloaded from the official Golden Jubilee website (www.goldenjubilee.gov.uk).

In addition, representatives from Buckingham Palace and the Golden Jubilee Office are delivering joint briefings across the United Kingdom. To date, they have briefed over 1,200 organisations. More briefings are planned.

On 6 March, the Department for Transport, Local Government and the Regions issued guidance to local authorities in England about their powers to close roads for events such as street parties and suggesting ways of ensuring that undue burdens are not placed on event organisers. This was announced in a joint press release from the Department for Transport, Local Government and the Regions and the Department for Culture, Media and Sport.

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what plans she has to commission statues in commemoration of the Queen's Golden Jubilee; and if she will make a statement. [44567]

Tessa Jowell: The Government have no plans to commission statues to mark the Queen's Golden Jubilee. The Government are working closely with Buckingham Palace to facilitate the celebrations in a way that embraces the six themes for the Jubilee: celebration; giving thanks; service; involving the whole community; looking forward as well as back; and the Commonwealth, while adhering to Her Majesty's wish that there should be no undue expenditure from public funds. It is for local communities to decide how they wish to celebrate the Jubilee.

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport, pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for South Suffolk (Mr. Yeo) of 6 February 2002, Official Report, column 986W, on the Golden Jubilee, what the objectives are of each initiative for the celebrations; if she will outline the project plans; how many people are working on each of these initiatives and plans; and if she will make a statement. [44565]

Tessa Jowell: The objective of each of the 61 initiatives that are being delivered through 12 project plans is to facilitate the celebrations for the Queen's Golden Jubilee in a way that embraces the six themes for the Jubilee: celebration; giving thanks; service; involving the whole community; looking forward as well as back; and the Commonwealth, while adhering to Her Majesty's wish that there should be no undue expenditure from public funds. It is for local communities to decide how they wish to celebrate the Jubilee.

Some of the initiatives have yet to be announced and I will, therefore, write to the hon. Member outlining them in due course.

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport, pursuant to the answer from the Secretary of State for the Home Department to the hon. Member for Twickenham (Dr. Cable) of 14 February 2002, Official Report, column 622W, on the Golden Jubilee, what plans she has to apply for a special grant for exceptional additional costs which could not be met from within existing budgets for the Queen's Golden Jubilee and for how much; and if she will make a statement. [44562]

Tessa Jowell: I have no such plans.

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much the Department has spent on the Queen's Jubilee in each of the past three years; how the money was allocated; and if she will make a statement. [44589]

Tessa Jowell: No DCMS expenditure was incurred before 2001–02 for which £4.017 million was transferred to my Department by the Home Office from their existing vote.

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport, pursuant to her answer of 13 March 2002, Official Report, column 1156W, ref. 41453, what the definition is of employment with the 999 emergency services for the purpose of eligibility for the award of the Queen's Golden Jubilee Medal. [44253]

Tessa Jowell: To be eligible for the medal, emergency personnel must have completed five years' service on 6 February 2002 with one of the '999' emergency services which include the police, ambulance and fire services, the Coastguard, mountain rescue and the RNLI.

Mr. Stinchcombe: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport for what reasons prison officers will not be awarded the Golden Jubilee Medal. [44421]

Tessa Jowell: The medal is being issued to members of the armed forces and Royal Fleet Auxiliary and to the '999' emergency services. As the Prison Service is not an emergency service, prison officers will not be eligible for the medal.

BBC News 24

Mr. Pope: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the terms of reference will be for the review of BBC News 24. [45863]

Tessa Jowell: The independent review of News 24 which I have asked Richard Lambert, formerly editor of the Financial Times, to conduct will have the following terms of reference:

The independent reviewer shall:

consider whether, in delivering its News 24 service, the BBC is acting in accordance with the facts and assurances upon which approval to proceed with the service was given;

have regard, in reaching any conclusions, to:

(a) the BBC's own report on the performance of News 24 and to any subsequent evidence provided by the Corporation; and

(b) views submitted by any other interested parties in response to the BBC's report;

submit a report to the Secretary of State, in publishable form, by the end of June 2002, setting out his conclusions and, if appropriate, making any recommendations he believes necessary to ensure that News 24 is operated in line with the original approval.

I am today placing on my Department's website, www.culture.gov.uk, the BBC's own report on the operation of News 24: this sets out the basis on which the service was approved. I am arranging for copies to be placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Richard Lambert is writing to a range of organisations who may wish to comment to him. I would encourage all those with an interest to contribute their views.

Free Television Licences

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will estimate the number of households (a) entitled to and (b) receiving the free TV licence for the over-75s in each year since its introduction. [43365]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 14 March 2002]: The Government introduced free television licences for people aged 75 or over on 1 November 2000. An estimated 3.4 million households previously paying the full licence fee are now entitled to a free licence. Three million free licences were issued in the financial year 2000–01. 3.2 million free licences were issued between April and December 2001 and the forecast take-up of the concession for the year as a whole is 99 per cent. In addition, approximately 500,000 people living in residential homes and sheltered housing, who previously qualified for the £5 Accommodation for Residential Care concessionary fee, now receive their licence free of charge; we believe this represents the great majority of those eligible, though precise figures are not available.

Mrs. Irene Adams: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many pensioner households in Paisley, North are benefiting from free television licences for the over-75s. [43930]

Dr. Howells: TV Licensing, which administers the free television licence scheme for the BBC as Licensing Authority, is not able to provide geographical breakdowns of the number of free licences issued. However, estimates based on the 1991 Census indicate that there were approximately 3,800 people aged 75 or over in the Paisley, North constituency.

Communications Bill

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when she will publish the Communications Bill. [43330]

Dr. Howells: The Government intends to publish the draft Communications Bill around the end of April.

Art Market

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assessment her Department has made of the impact of (a) resale artists' rights, (b) taxation and (c) EU regulations on the European and UK art markets. [43052]

Miss Melanie Johnson: I have been asked to reply.

The latest Government assessment on artists' resale rights was contained in Explanatory Memorandum 5665/01, of 1 March 2001. The EU Directive of artists' resale rights will not be implemented in the UK until 1 January 2006 and the implementation process will include updating of this assessment.

No other assessments of the art market have been made.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what representations she has received concerning the impact of taxation and EU regulations on the European and UK art markets; and if she will make a statement. [43051]

Miss Melanie Johnson: I have been asked to reply.

The Department has received no representations about the impact of taxation and EU regulations on the European and UK art markets since negotiations on the artists' resale rights in 2001. The Government's response to these representations was covered in Explanatory Memorandum 5665/01, of 1 March 2001.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what estimate her Department has made of the size of the UK's share of the international art market in each of the last five years. [43053]

Miss Melanie Johnson: I have been asked to reply.

The Department has made no such estimates.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Zimbabwe

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the suspension of Zimbabwe from the Councils of the Commonwealth. [46034]

Mr. Straw: I refer my hon. Friend to the statement I made earlier today in the House.

India (Ian Stillman)

Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many times the UK high commissioner for India met the Stillman family during their recent stay in Delhi to discuss the case of Ian Stillman. [44807]

Mr. Bradshaw: Our high commissioner in New Delhi did not meet Ian Stillman's family during their recent visit. However, Mr. Stillman's family did meet senior officials at the high commission on 1 March and 5 March 2002.

We are doing all we can to assist Mr. Stillman's family. My noble Friend Baroness Amos met Mr. Stillman's sister on 5 February 2002 to discuss the case. The Head of our consular division in London also met Mr. Stillman's family on 14 January 2002 and 14 May 2001.

Celebrations

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what arrangements his Department has made to celebrate (a) St. Patrick's Day, (b) St. George's Day, (c) St. Andrew's Day and (d) Her Majesty the Queen's Golden Jubilee; and how his Department celebrated St. David's Day. [42303]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 11 March 2002]: There were no special arrangements made for St. David's Day or St. Patrick's Day. Neither are there special arrangements being made to celebrate St. George's Day and St. Andrew's Day.

The FCO is sponsoring the tour of The Queen's Golden Jubilee Baton through 23 Commonwealth countries. It left London on Monday 11 March, Commonwealth Day, and will return to the UK on 5 June. Our missions overseas will arrange events and encourage publicity to support the Baton's passage, supported by local Commonwealth Games associations and the British Council.

Additionally, there will be eight open days from April to October when the FCO will be open to view by members of the public. It is one of the "String of Pearls" historic public buildings that will be open to the public, along the banks of the Thames in central London.

We have issued general guidance to all our missions overseas on the celebrations of the Golden Jubilee. Many of our embassies and high commissions will use the occasion to enhance their annual Queen's birthday party. Missions will also hold additional events using publicity materials specifically prepared for the Jubilee in the FCO, taking into account The Queen's desire that there should be no undue expenditure from public funds.

Ministerial Visits

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) if he will list the official visits within the UK outside London made by each Minister in his Department in 2001, giving for each (a) the origin and destination and (b) the mode of travel used; and what guidance is provided to Ministers in his Department on choice of mode of travel for official visits; [38194]

(2) if he will list the official visits to (a) Paris and (b) Brussels made by each Minister in his Department in 2001 and the mode of travel used; and what guidance is provided to Ministers in his Department on the choice of mode of travel for such visits. [38156]

Mr. MacShane: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Secretary at the Cabinet office on 6 March 2002, Official Report, column 421W.

Age Discrimination

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what his Department's policy is towards age discrimination. [42577]

Mr. Bradshaw: In line with the recommendations of the Performance and Innovation Unit Report "Winning the Generation Game", the FCO has examined its retirement ages. As a result, clerical and support staff are now able to work until 65 and junior and middle managers to 63.

Equipment Leasing

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the equipment leasing arrangements entered into by his Department in each of the last four years; and what the cost is to public funds in each case. [39080]

Mr. MacShane: This information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

External Contracts

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which non-accounting and non-information technology external organisations have won new contracts with (a) his Department and (b) executive agencies in each of the past five years. [38747]

Mr. MacShane [holding answer 28 February 2002]: This information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

PRIVY COUNCIL

European Union Directives

Mr. Bercow: To ask the President of the Council if he will list the European Union directives and regulations relating to his Department that have been implemented in each of the last four years, specifying (a) the title and purpose of each, (b) the cost to public funds of each and (c) the cost to businesses of each. [39116]

Mr. Robin Cook: My Department has been required to implement the working time directive. The regulations give workers rights relating to total hours worked, breaks between days worked and over a working week or fortnight, and a meal break during the working day. This directive has been implemented at no cost to public funds, as it is part of both line manager and personnel responsibilities. There has been no cost to business.

Criminal Damage

Mr. Bercow: To ask the President of the Council what the cost has been of criminal damage to his Department's buildings in each of the last four years. [44847]

Mr. Robin Cook: No such damage has been reported during the period mentioned.

Crèche Facilities

Mr. Bercow: To ask the President of the Council what crèche facilities are provided by his Department; and at what cost. [44868]

Mr. Robin Cook: My Department has no crèche facilities.

Public Service Agreements

Mr. Bercow: To ask the President of the Council (1) if he will list the public service agreement targets which have been revised and those which have been introduced since the publication of the 2001 departmental report; [43249]

(2) which public service agreement targets scheduled to be met in 2002 will not be achieved by the due date. [44821]

Mr. Robin Cook: Like other small Departments, the Privy Council Office is not required to have a public service agreement.

Human Rights Act

Mr. Bercow: To ask the President of the Council how many cases have been brought against his Department under the Human Rights Act 1998; and what has been the cost in (a) legal fees to defend cases and (b) compensation payments. [45070]

Mr. Robin Cook: No cases have been brought against my Department under the Human Rights Act 1998.

Age Discrimination

Mr. Bercow: To ask the President of the Council what his Department's policy is towards age discrimination. [42576]

Mr. Robin Cook: My Department is planning to review its policies and procedures to integrate age discrimination and has a commitment that there should be no unfair treatment of staff on the basis of age. The Privy Council Office has implemented the recommendations of the Performance and Innovation Unit report 'Winning the Generation Game' in particular that permanent staff can stay on up to the age of 65 subject to operational requirements.

My Department currently employs two staff who are beyond retirement age: bot are fee paid and employed for their skills and to meet the needs of the department. My Department has also taken advantage of the New Deal for Over-50s.

Energy Costs

Mr. Bercow: To ask the President of the Council if he will make a statement on energy costs incurred by his Department in each of the last 10 years. [42448]

Mr. Robin Cook: Energy costs for my Department are as follows:

2001–02 (costs to date)—£9,436.70.

Figures for the other years requested can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

My Department monitors weather conditions when deciding whether to switch the heating on or off and has reduced its gas consumption by 10 per cent. for 2001 as stated in our service delivery agreement.

Government Bills

Norman Baker: To ask the President of the Council if he will list the average number of days of consideration for Government Bills in (a) the House of Commons and (b) the House of Lords in each parliamentary Session since 1997; and if he will make a statement. [42125]

Mr. Robin Cook [pursuant to his reply, 11 March 2002, c. 706W]: I regret to say that there was an error in that I had understood the times given for consideration of Bills in the Lords to include time spent in Grand Committee, which they did not. I give a corrected version[1] of the entire answer as follows, which I hope will be for the convenience of Members.

SOLICITOR-GENERAL

Publicity

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Solicitor-General if she will list the publicity and advertising campaigns run by her Department in each of the last four years, specifying the (a) purpose, (b) cost to public funds, (c) number of staff involved and (d) method of evaluation in each case. [39094]

The Solicitor-General [holding answer 4 March 2002]: In my own Department, the Legal Secretariat to the Law Officers, there have been no publicity or advertising campaigns in each of the last four years.

In the Departments for which the Attorney General is responsible, details are as follows:

Crown Prosecution Service

The Crown Prosecution Service has not run any publicity or advertising campaigns in each of the last four years.

Details of the publicity costs incurred by the Crown Prosecution Service in each of the last four years were provided in my reply to PQ number 36156.

Treasury Solicitor's Department

The Treasury Solicitor's Department has not been involved in any specific publicity and advertising campaigns over the last four years. However, the Department does incur advertising and publicity costs in its normal course of business. Details of these costs over the last four years were given in my reply to PQ number 36156.

Serious Fraud Office

The Serious Fraud Office has not run any publicity or advertising campaigns in each of the last four years. Details of the publicity costs incurred by the Serious Fraud Office in each of the last four years were provided in my reply to PQ number 36156.

Public Appointments

Fiona Mactaggart: To ask the Solicitor-General how many appointments to public bodies have been made through her Department (a) from April 2000 to March 2001 and (b) since 31 March 2001; and how many of these were (i) men and (ii) women. [42156]

The Solicitor-General [holding answer 12 March 2002]: My own Department, the Legal Secretariat to the Law Officers has not made any appointments to public bodies (a) from April 2000 to March 2001 or (b) since March 2001.

In those Departments for which the Attorney General is responsible, details are as follows:

Crown Prosecution Service

The Crown Prosecution Service has not made any appointments to public bodies (a) from April 2000 to March 2001 or (b) since 31 March 2001.

Treasury Solicitor's Department

The Treasury Solicitor's Department has not made any appointments to public bodies (a) from April 2000 to March 2001 or (b) since 31 March 2001.

Serious Fraud Office

The Serious Fraud Office has not made any appointments to public bodies (a) from April 2000 to March 2001 or (b) since 31 March 2001.

EU Directives

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Solicitor-General if she will list the European Union directives and regulations relating to her Department that have been implemented in each of the last four years, specifying (a) the title and purpose of each, (b) the cost to public funds of each and (c) the cost to businesses of each. [39129]

The Solicitor-General [holding answer 4 March 2002]: My own Department, the Legal Secretariat to the Law Officers has not been responsible for the implementation of any EU directives or regulations in the last four years.

In the Departments for which the Attorney-General is responsible, details are as follows:

Crown Prosecution Service

The Crown Prosecution Service has not been responsible for the implementation of any EU directives or regulations in the last four years.

Treasury Solicitor's Department

The Treasury Solicitor's Department has not been responsible for the implementation of any EU directives or regulations in the last four years. Members of the Department have however assisted in the implementation of directives and regulations which are the responsibility of the Departments they advise.

Serious Fraud Office

The Serious Fraud Office has not been responsible for the implementation of any EU directives or regulations in the last four years.

Catering Services

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Solicitor-General what the cost was of (a) in-house canteen and (b) other catering services provided by her Department in each of the last four years. [38930]

The Solicitor-General [holding answer 4 March 2002]: My own Department, the Legal Secretariat to the Law Officers does not provide an in-house canteen, or other catering services for staff.

In the Departments for which the Attorney-General is responsible, details are as follows:

Crown Prosecution Service

The Crown Prosecution Service has one in-house canteen, which is located at its headquarters building in London. The service is contracted out to a commercial firm, following a competitive tender. The annual cost to the CPS of this facility during the last four years has been as follows:

Year	£
1997–98	42,182
1998–99	56,527
1999–2000	49,193
2000–01	57,865

Costs are reviewed by regular contract management meetings with the contractor and by competitive tender.

Treasury Solicitor's Department

The Treasury Solicitor's Department does not have an in-house staff canteen. The total amounts spent on catering services for hospitality, training and meeting refreshments in each of the last four years were are follows:

Treasury Solicitor's Department

£4,263.19 in 1998–99

£6,537.34 in 1999–2000

£6,041.71 in 2000–01

£5,376.63 in 2001–02 (to date).

Government Property Lawyers

£84.73 in 1998–99

£7.62 in 1999–2000

£0 in 2000–01

£0 in 2001–02 (to date)

Crown Prosecution Service Inspectorate

£0 in 1998–99

£0 in 1999–2000

£1,461.35 in 2001–02 (to date).

Serious Fraud Office

The Serious Fraud Office does not provide an in-house canteen, or other catering services.

Rail Journeys (Staff)

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Solicitor-General if she will make it her policy that rail journeys undertaken by staff in her Department should ordinarily be on standard class tickets. [40440]

The Solicitor-General [holding answer 7 March 2002]: In relation to my own Department, the Legal Secretariat to the Law Officers and the Departments for which the Attorney General is responsible, section 8 paragraph 8.2.1 of the civil service management code requires Departments and agencies to ensure that staff use the most efficient and economic means of travel in the circumstances, taking into account any management benefit or the needs of staff with disabilities.

The Legal Secretariat to the Law Officers is fully committed to ensuring that staff use the most efficient and economic means of travel commensurate with meeting operational needs.

Crown Prosecution Service

The Crown Prosecution Service's travel and Subsistence policy already makes it clear that official travel should always be conducted in the most effective and economic manner and normally by public transport.

The main principles of the Crown Prosecution Service's travel and subsistence policy are:

No reimbursement is appropriate when no extra expense is incurred;

All official journeys must be necessary, duly authorised, and undertaken in the most economical manner consistent with the efficient conduct of official business;

Payment from public funds will normally be based on the cost of the journey by the most economical route and the most reasonable mode of conveyance;

The Department may refuse claims for unreasonable expenses, or expenses which could have been avoided if the journey had been better planned.

The Crown Prosecution Service grants entitlement to first class travel to all staff at Level C, Pay Bank C2/ Level B, Pay Band B3 and above. This entitlement is a contractual right that forms part of the terms and conditions of service for those Crown Prosecution Service staff members. On a number of occasions, the Department has considered the removal of this right but has withdrawn from that approach because of the cost associated with a buy-out of the contractual right.

Furthermore, staff entitled to standard class travel only, may be allowed to travel first class in the following circumstances:

When required to travel overnight;

When necessarily travelling with a civil servant entitled to first class travel or a non-civil servant travelling first class;

When the Department is satisfied that it is not practicable for the member of staff to obtain a seat in standard class.

Treasury Solicitor's Department

It is departmental policy in the Treasury solicitor's Department that all staff, regardless of grade, must have full regard to the need for economy in travelling and must always consider using standard class on trains. Only more senior staff may travel using first class, though junior staff may accompany them if they need to work together during the journey.

Serious Fraud Office

It is departmental policy in the Serious Fraud Office that all staff, regardless of grade, must have full regard to the need for economy in travelling and must always travel standard class unless they can obtain better prices for first class travel, or there are compelling reasons not to travel standard class.

Department of Public Prosecutions for Northern Ireland

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Solicitor-General what the size is of the annual caseload of the Department of Public Prosecutions for Northern Ireland in each tier of court in the last year for which figures are available; and what her estimate is of the annual caseload based on the full implementation of proposals relating to the office set out in the Justice (Northern Ireland) Bill. [44451]

The Solicitor-General: In 2001 the numbers of persons appearing per tier of court in Northern Ireland in proceedings prosecuted by the Director of Public Prosecutions for Northern Ireland were as follows:

Court	Number of cases
Magistrates court	4,664
Crown court	753
County court appeals	776
Court of appeal	59
Case stated	4
Judicial review	6

Information currently available from the Police Service of Northern Ireland estimates that a caseload of some 80,000 files per year will require to be considered by the Public Prosecution Service which is to be established under the terms of the Justice (Northern Ireland) Bill.

TREASURY

Internet Service Providers (VAT)

Mr. Hawkins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) how much VAT he estimates his announcement on 14 March means will not have to be paid by AOL; and how much VAT for identical services will have to be paid by (a) BT Open World and (b) Freeserve; [45009]

(2) with reference to his announcement of 14 March concerning the VAT treatment of internet service providers, if he will place in the Library a list of the (a) consultations Customs and Excise and the Treasury made with UK ISPs, together with copies of the responses to the consultation and (b) meetings which Her Majesty's Customs and Excise and Treasury Ministers and officials had with persons employed by or on behalf of AOL. [45157]

Mr. Boateng: As part of their review of the VAT treatment of internet service packages, Customs sought input from a range of interested bodies, including major internet service providers. However, this process was not undertaken as a formal consultation exercise, and there are therefore no formal consultation responses available for publication. Customs are debarred by statute form disclosing details of individual taxpayers' or companies' affairs.

Statistics

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proportion of the population of the travel to work areas covering (a) the Isle of Wight, (b) Bournemouth, (c) Southampton and (d) Portsmouth work outside their travel to work area. [45010]

Ruth Kelly: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Mr. Len Cook to Mr. Andrew Turner, dated 21 March 2002:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your Parliamentary Question about travel-to-work-areas. (45010)

The Labour Force Survey (LFS) provides estimates of employment rates according to the travel-to-work-area (TTWA) in which people are resident. Although information about people's workplace is available from the LFS also, this could only be analysed by TTWA at disproportionate cost.

Employment Statistics (St. Helens)

Mr. Woodward: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what percentage of the work force in (a) St. Helens, South, (b) the St. Helens metropolitan borough council area, (c) Merseyside, (d) Manchester, (e) the north-west, (f) other regional development area regions and (g) England in (i) 1996, (ii) 1997, (iii) 1998, (iv) 1999, (v) 2000 and (vi) 2001, were employed in (A) manufacturing, (B) hotel and catering, (C) retailing, (D) finance and business services, (E) IT, (F) wholesale and distribution, (G) construction and (H) other services. [44490]

Ruth Kelly: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Mr. Len Cook to Mr. Shaun Woodward, dated 21 March 2002:

As National Statistician I have been asked to reply to your recent question about the percentage of the workforce in various industries and geographies. (44490)

The available figures are for employee jobs and cover the years 1996 to 2000. Estimates are arranged according to the Standard Industrial Classification, 1992 (SIC92). SIC92 industries do not correspond exactly to those specified in the question and regional development areas are not available.

I am placing an extract from the Nomis database that provides a close match for your requirement in the House of Commons library. You should note, however, that this does not cover the whole economy. The Nomis database is available to Members and is accessible by library staff.

Governor of the Bank of England

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer by what date he intends to announce the appointment of the next Governor of the Bank of England; and if he will make a statement. [44404]

Ruth Kelly: The term of office of the current Governor of the Bank of England runs until June 2003. The appointment of the next Governor will be announced in good time to ensure a smooth transition.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Benefits (Administration)

Phil Hope: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what steps he is taking to improve the performance of local authorities in administering housing benefit and council tax benefit. [46218]

Malcolm Wicks: Improving the administration of housing benefit and council tax benefit is a key part of our reform programme.

We are today launching a set of comprehensive performance standards covering the full range of administration. For the first time local authorities will know exactly what it is we are expecting them to achieve. A copy of the product has been placed in the Library and this month two copies of the package will be sent to every English, Welsh and Scottish authority administering these benefits.

Local authorities will now be able to undertake a comprehensive self-assessment against the standards, to determine how far they deliver these benefits effectively and securely.

The standards cover seven functional areas and deliberately address the full range of administrative activity, not just speed, accuracy and security. They will provide a basis for measuring performance in administering housing benefit and council tax benefit, enabling local authorities to conduct a self-assessment to determine their own level of performance and to work in an environment of continuous improvement.

In addition, the Benefit Fraud Inspectorate will assess performance against these standards using an authority's self-assessment as part of the inspection process.

The performance standards demonstrate our determination to improve the standard of housing benefit and council tax benefit administration, as part of our wider drive to reduce barriers to work, promote dignity and security in retirement and to protect the system against fraud and error.

Benefit Fraud

Phil Hope: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions when he will publish the inspection report of the Benefit Fraud Inspectorate in respect of the city of Salford council. [46217]

Malcolm Wicks: The Benefit Fraud Inspectorate's report on the city of Salford council was published today and copies of the report have been placed in the Library.

The report finds the city of Salford council to be a poorly performing authority in almost all aspects of benefits administration and counter fraud activity.

BFI reports finding evidence of good policies and procedures, but these were undermined by inadequate implementation or monitoring. For example, a benefit take-up policy existed but there was limited evidence of implementation.

The report identifies a range of examples of poor administration. This includes an inadequate management checking regime, poor standards for verifying claims for benefit, and failure to process all new claims within 14 days of receiving all the necessary information.

Procedures for dealing with changes to claimants' circumstances were found to be flawed and a failure to apply the law was likely to lead to over and under-payments of benefit.

The council had no policy on overpayments. The lack of quality management information and a lack of managerial or supervisory involvement contribute to poor overpayment recovery. In March 2000 the council's recorded overpayment debt stood at almost £5 million and was rising year on year.

While the city of Salford council had a positive counter fraud strategy and had provided officers with a good procedures manual, investigation quality was found to be inadequate. There was no control over investigations, nor over the workload of each investigator which was found to be excessive.

The report makes recommendations to help the council address weaknesses and to improve the administration of housing benefit and council tax benefit, as well as counter fraud activities.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State is now considering the report and will be asking the council for its proposals in response to the findings and recommendations of the BFI.

Kirklees Metropolitan Council

Phil Hope: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions when he will publish the inspection report of the Benefit Fraud Inspectorate in respect of Kirklees metropolitan council. [46216]

Malcolm Wicks: The Benefit Fraud Inspectorate's second report on Kirklees metropolitan council was published today and copies of the report have been placed in the Library.

The BFI first inspected and published a report on the performance of Kirklees metropolitan council on 29 May 1999. It found that the council was performing poorly. Following publication of this first report, the council accepted the recommendations and drew up an action plan to improve performance. BFI's second report finds that Kirklees has largely failed to implement its own action plan and has not fully addressed any of the major recommendations included in the first BFI report. Inspectors consider that the council's performance in administering benefit and countering benefit fraud has got worse since the first inspection.

Poor performance was identified in many areas of benefit administration. A failure to improve the verification of benefit claims; no improvement on previously slow processing times for new and renewal claims; a deterioration of procedure for dealing with the overpayment of benefit; and a lack of supervisory management were all reported by inspectors. At the time of the inspection there was a backlog of around 7,000 cases awaiting assessment and 65,000 documents awaiting filing.

On counter fraud work, the report notes failures by the council to introduce and implement a counter fraud strategy and to introduce and implement a prosecution policy. There was also increased potential for internal fraud, fewer fraud staff and a lack of management within the counter fraud teams.

The BFI considers that Kirklees metropolitan council's inadequate response to the findings of the first inspection casts grave doubts on its commitment to provide an efficient and secure benefits system.

The report makes recommendations to help the council address weaknesses and to improve the administration of housing benefit and council tax benefit, as well as counter fraud activities.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State is now considering the report and will be asking the council for its proposals in response to the findings and recommendations of the BFI.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions when he plans to implement the recommendations on housing benefit reforms set out in the Housing Green Paper, "Quality and Choice: A decent home for all". [32620]

Malcolm Wicks: We have a three-stage strategy for reforming housing benefit and dealing with the legacy of neglect we have inherited. The first stage, which is now well under way, is to radically improve HB administration and bear down on fraud.

The HB help team is working in partnership with local authorities to support them in improving the administration of HB. We are already seeing real improvements in administration as a result of the team's work and the on-going programme of inspections by the Benefit Fraud Inspectorate. We also want to help more authorities deliver a high standard of HB service by sharing good practice. We are developing a dedicated website to do so and we plan to make available shortly on CD a "toolkit" which the help team has developed.

In April we will publish performance standards for the full range of HB administration. These standards offer local authorities practical guidance on effective and secure administration of benefit. Local authorities will be able to self-assess their performance against standards.

We have already increased HB administration subsidy for the year 2001–02 to £166 million, in 2002–03 it will increase to £170 million and to £174 million in 2003–04. This three-year settlement provides local authorities with stability, enabling them to plan more effectively for the future administration of HB and council tax benefit.

With the introduction of the pension credit, we are removing the need to reclaim HB every year for pensioners aged 65 and over. For those over 65, we will be making awards for five years. The HB income threshold will also be raised by the maximum amount of the pension credit savings reward, to an expected level of £113.80 for single pensioners in 2003 and we will treat pensioners' capital more generously.

Introduced nationally from April 2002, our new anti-fraud incentive scheme, puts more emphasis on prevention of fraud, as well as its detection. And we are working to get an accurate and robust measurement of fraud in the system, through the HB reviews begun last April. In time we expect to gain sufficiently reliable information from the reviews of the level of loss in the system to be able to measure progress against an agreed target.

The second stage, which is already beginning, is to restructure rents. This is an essential prerequisite to the third stage of reform, instituting fundamental changes to the structure of HB. Fundamental reform of HB has to be built on the platform of the first two stages if it is to succeed, as was clearly set out in the Housing Green Paper.

Relocation Expenses

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what his policy is on the payment of relocation expenses to staff in his Department. [41023]

Maria Eagle: Relocation expenses are available to DWP staff in the event of a compulsory and permanent transfer which necessitates a move of home. In determining whether these expenses are available to individual staff, alternative options such as local recruitment or redeployment are considered first to ensure that these transfers are cost effective.

The financial assistance available would normally cover all necessary legal, removals and estate agents' costs. Assistance from a specialist relocation company in marketing homes is also available. On-going assistance may also be forthcoming if a member of staff relocates to a dearer housing, as determined by the use of Valuation Office data, resulting in increased housing costs. All new housing costs are closely compared to those at the original home to ensure that comparable property types are used. These expenses and controls are in line with the central guidance in section 8 of the Civil Service Management Code.

Employment (Disabled People)

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many (a) private companies, (b) charitable and voluntary and (c) public sector organisations based in the Buckingham constituency have adopted the two ticks symbol. [43296]

Maria Eagle: Employers who wish to apply for two ticks status are assessed by our disability employment advisers. The two ticks disability symbol helps employers show that they are committed to employing people with disabilities, and also helps people with disabilities to identify which employers have a positive attitude to their abilities.

The information requested is in the table.

Age Discrimination

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, pursuant to his answer of 4 March 2002, Official Report, column 28W, on age discrimination, how much money has been allocated to the Age Positive Campaign; how many (a) companies, (b) academic institutions and (c) research or lobby organisations have signed up to the campaign; how many workers are employed by the companies that have signed up to the campaign; how many companies expect to sign up to the campaign; how he monitors organisations that have signed up to comply with the campaign; how many people are employed to monitor organisations that have signed to comply with the campaign; and how many companies have been removed from the Age Positive Campaign after being found to be not maintaining the campaign's code. [41842]

Maria Eagle [holding answer 12 March 2002]: The Age Positive budget for 2001–02 is £1 million and is used to develop and promote the business case for non-ageist employment practices to all employers and individuals across Great Britain.

Those who wish to actively support the Age Positive campaign do not formally sign up to it. They are encouraged to provide positive case studies and may apply to become age positive champions. To become an age positive champion, a potential applicant must submit strong evidence of commitment to age positive practice. Officials of this Department vet applications from potential champions.

Organisations that do not have in place a wide enough range of age positive practices to be accepted as champions are still often able to provide useful case studies illustrating particular age positive aspects of their employment policies. Age positive champions play a vital role in the campaign. By promoting their own best practice and highlighting the practical business benefits of a mixed age workforce they encourage other employers and individuals to tackle age discrimination in the workplace. There are currently 32 age positive champions and around 50 case studies, although both figures are steadily increasing. The newest feature of the campaign is the age positive website www.agepositive.gov.uk

Civil Servants

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, if she will set out for each civil service grade within her (a) Department and (b) Department's executive agencies the (i) total number of staff employed, (ii) number aged (A) 16 to 25, (B) 26 to 35, (C) 36 to 45, (D) 46 to 60 and (E) over the age of 60 years, (iii) number of registered disabled and (iv) number of ethnic minorities. [39151]

Ms Rosie Winterton: I refer the hon. Member to the written answer given to him by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Secretary, Cabinet Office on 13 March 2002, Official Report, column 1072W.

Solicitors

Mr. Cameron: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, if he will make a statement on the Office for the Supervision of Solicitors and its role in reviewing complaints against solicitors. [44393]

Mr. Wills: Solicitors are members of a self-regulating professional body, the Law Society. The Office for the Supervision of Solicitors (OSS) is a separate organisation set up by the Law Society to handle complaints against members. The Government have warned the OSS that failure to make significant improvements in performance could result in the powers to appoint a Legal Services Complaints Commissioner being activated.

Mr. Cameron: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what steps he is taking to review the self-regulation of solicitors; and if he will make a statement. [44392]

Mr. Wills: The legal profession is independent of Government and as such it is the professional bodies which, in the first instance, are responsible for the regulation of their members. The Government have no current plans to alter this. However, we are aware of concerns about the standard of complaints handling by the Office for the Supervision of Solicitors (OSS). For this reason, the Government have already taken reserve powers to impose standards for complaints handling on the legal professional bodies. These powers would allow for the establishment of a new post, the Legal Services Complaints Commissioner, whose function would be to set targets for the handling of complaints by failing bodies. The Lord Chancellor is considering the OSS's performance against targets and any decision about the appointment of the Commissioner will be made in due course.

HEALTH

Nursing Home Residents

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how his figure for self-financing residents of nursing homes in England and Wales was arrived at. [8333]

Jacqui Smith: I apologise to the hon. Member for the delay in responding to this question. I refer the hon. Member to the reply that my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Blackpool, North and Fleetwood (Mrs. Humble) on 5 March 2002, Official Report, column 192W.

The Department of health conducted a survey of nursing homes, via health authorities' registration departments, in June and July of last year to establish the number and location of those paying their nursing home fees from their own resources (self funders). The results of the survey are available on the Department's website at www.doh.gov.uk/jointunit/freenursingcare/index.htm. A total of 42,700 self-funders were identified through this survey.

Lymphoedea

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement about the treatment in the NHS available to sufferers of lymphoedea. [9815]

Jacqui Smith: I apologise to the hon. Member for the delay in responding to this question. I refer the hon. Member to the reply that my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Blackpool, North and Fleetwood (Mrs. Humble) on 5 March 2002, Official Report, column 192W.

Treatment, and where it is delivered, will depend on whether the patient has primary or secondary lymphoedema. Health authorities, in partnership with primary care groups/trusts, have the responsibility for deciding what services to provide for their populations including those with lymphoedema. They are best placed to understand local health needs and commission services to meet them.

Maternity Units

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research he has commissioned into the difference in morbidity rates between mothers who have given birth in midwife-led maternity units and those who have given birth in other types of maternity units; and if he will make a statement. [10014]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 29 October 2001]: I apologise to my hon. Friend for the delay in responding to this question. I refer my hon. Friend to the reply that my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Blackpool, North and Fleetwood (Mrs. Humble) on 5 March 2002, Official Report, column 192W.

The Department has not commissioned any such research.

The Maternity and Neonatal Workforce Group is considering different models of care, including midwife-led units, in order to inform the maternity services section of the Children's National Service Framework.

Psychiatric Nursing

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the factors underlying the fall in the number of community psychiatric nursing episodes from 1996–97 to 1999–2000. [12718]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 6 November 2001]: I apologise to the hon. Member for the delay in responding to this question. I refer the hon. Member to the reply that my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State gave my hon. Friend the Member for Blackpool, North and Fleetwood (Mrs. Humble) on 5 March 2002, Official Report, column 192W.

The factors underlying the fall in the number of community psychiatric nursing episodes from 1996–97 to 1999–2000 include the number of new professional community based roles; increase in the number of people with mental illness receiving first assessment and initial therapeutic interventions in primary care settings; and mental health service users and carers using NHS Direct and Walk-in Centres for advice and in a crisis.

Adoption and Children Bill

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what and how many representations he has received from individuals and voluntary adoption agencies regarding his proposed changes of access to birth information records as set out in the Adoption and Children Bill. [19206]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 29 November 2001]: I apologise to the hon. Member for the delay in responding to this question. I refer the hon. Member to the reply that my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State gave my hon. Friend the Member for Blackpool, North and Fleetwood (Mrs. Humble) on 5 March 2002, Official Report, column 192W.

We have received many representations from individuals and organisations on access to information in relation to adoption and the provisions in the Adoption and Children Bill. As the hon. Member is aware, the Government have responded to the representations made to it and to the Special Standing Committee for the Bill by amending the provisions for access to birth record information.

Stoke Mandeville Hospital

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he now intends to announce a decision on the proposed merger of the Stoke Mandeville Hospital and the South Buckinghamshire NHS trusts. [25504]

Ms Blears [holding answer 9 January 2002]: I apologise to the hon. Member for the delay in responding to this question. I refer the hon. Member to the reply that my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State gave my hon. Friend the Member for Blackpool, North and Fleetwood (Mrs. Humble) on 5 March 2002, column 192W.

The merger of Stoke Mandeville Hospital NHS Trust and South Buckinghamshire NHS Trust has been proposed by the Trusts and Buckingamshire health authority. Ministers have agreed, in principle, that the public should be consulted on the proposal before any decision is made. The timing of the consultation is currently being finalised.

Emergency Services (Midlothian)

David Hamilton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the Government are doing to deter callers from dialling for an ambulance when there is no emergency; and how many hoax calls were made in the Midlothian constituency from 1995 to date. [27179]

Ms Blears: I apologise to my hon. Friend for the delay in responding to this question. I refer my hon. Friend to the reply that my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State gave my hon. Friend the Member for Blackpool, North and Fleetwood (Mrs. Humble) on 5 March 2002, Official Report, column 192W.

NHS ambulance trusts in England continue to undertake work to inform their local population about appropriate use of emergency ambulance services.

Ambulance services do not have to send an ambulance vehicle in response to 999 calls which do not require emergency care. Such calls will continue to receive a consistent and appropriate response based on national clinical standards. A fully crewed frontline ambulance will always be sent to life-threatening emergencies.

Responsibilities for Scotland are a matter for the Scottish Executive.

Delayed Discharges

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the average time patients experiencing delayed discharges were delayed for each of the last three quarters. [27253]

Jacqui Smith: I apologise to the hon. Member for the delay in responding to this question. I refer the hon. Member to the reply that my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State gave my hon. Friend the Member for Blackpool, North and Fleetwood (Mrs. Humble) on 5 March 2002, Official Report, column 192W.

No information was collected centrally about the length of delay for patients with delayed discharge until the first quarter of 2001–02. The information on the breakdown in length of delay for patients of all ages in Q1 of 2001–02 has been placed in the Library. No information was collected centrally about the length of delay for patients with delayed discharge until the first quarter of 2001–02. The information on the breakdown in length of delay for patients of all ages in the first and second quarters of 2001–02 has been placed in the Library. For equivalent information for the third quarter I refer the hon. Member to the response I gave the hon. Member for Sutton and Cheam (Mr. Burstow) on 18 March 2002, Official Report, column 159W.

Surgery (Cancellations)

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average percentage of operations cancelled for non-clinical reasons as a proportion of admissions was in the last 12 months. [40049]

Mr. Hutton: Data on the number of patients whose operations are cancelled by hospitals for non-clinical reasons at the last minute are shown in the table.

Year	Cancellation as a percentage of elective admissions
2001–02 Q2	1.6
2001–02 Q1	1.6
2000–01 Q4	1.7
2000–01 Q3	1.4

Care Homes

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimates he has made of the number of (a) residential, (b) nursing and (c) dual registered homes beds that will be (i) available and (ii) required in the (A) private and (B) public sector in each of the next five years. [39441]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 4 March 2002]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply which I gave to the hon. Members, the Member for Cheadle (Mrs. Calton) and the Member for Portsmouth, South (Mr. Hancock) on 12 March 2002, Official Report, column 1009W.

The extra funding which we are making available to councils is designed to enable them to ensure that there is sufficient capacity in the system to meet individual long-term care needs.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health on which date he agreed to test new private finance initiative employment models; if he will set out the model of facilities employment which is being tested; and if he will identify the pilot sites where the model is under test. [40560]

Mr. Hutton: In December 2001 an agreement was reached with Unison, private sector contractors and the Department on the terms under which portering, domestic, catering, laundry and security at three private finance initiative pilots (Queen Mary's hospital Roehampton, Barking/Havering and Stoke Mandeville hospital) will continue. The pilots are for staff in these five facilities to retain all their national health service employment terms, but be managed by the private sector.

Hospital Appointments

Mr. Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many hospital appointments were not attended in England in each of the last four years; and what measures are in place to reduce this number. [40462]

Mr. Hutton: The number of patients who did not attend consultant out-patient appointments from 1997–98 to 2000–01 are given in the table. Information up to quarter 2 of 2001–02, is available on the Department website at www.doh.gov.uk/hospitalactivity.

Total number of did not attends (DNAs) at all consultant out-patient clinics, England, 1997–98 to 2000–01

Year	Total number
2000–01	5,954,819
1999–2000	5,882,510
1998–99	5,648,971
1997–98	5,629,429

Note:
Did Not Attends (DNAs) are counted for those patients who gave no advance warning for their non-attendance.

Department of Health form KH09

The Department has introduced the national booked admissions programme to offer patients a pre-booked appointment and a choice of date and time that is suitable to them. Booking systems have proven to significantly reduce the number of patients who do not attend appointments.

As stated in the NHS plan, by the end of 2005 all out-patient appointments will be pre-booked, allowing patients to book convenient appointment times. Since March 2001 every acute NHS trust has been offering booked appointments in at least two specialties or high volume procedures. £50 million was allocated to the national booked admissions programme in 2001–02.

Foreign Referrals (Southampton University NHS Trust)

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the scope of current pilot schemes for foreign referrals will be extended to include Southampton University NHS Trust; and if he will make a statement. [40794]

Mr. Hutton: Since rulings of the European Court of Justice in July last year it has been clear that national health service bodies, including health authorities, primary care trusts and acute trusts, may commission treatment for NHS patients overseas. However, given that commissioning treatment overseas involves a number of difficult clinical, quality and legal issues the Department has advised NHS bodies contemplating sending patients abroad to contact the pilot sites first to obtain the benefit of their experience.

The pilot scheme for foreign referrals concludes next month. Further guidance on overseas treatment will be sent to the NHS, drawing on the experience of the pilot.

We are exploring the possibility of a small number of NHS bodies putting in place arrangements to commission overseas care on behalf of the rest of the NHS in England.

Health Spending

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans the Government have to bring United Kingdom health spending into line with the EU average; and if he will make a statement. [40814]

Mr. Hutton: The European average for health spending has remained at between 7.9 and 8 per cent. of gross domestic product for a number of years. My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister has stated that, as long as the economy remains strong, we will reach the European Union average by 2005. Current spending plans will raise the level of United Kingdom total health expenditure to 7.6 per cent. of gross domestic product by 2003–04. Spending beyond this period will be decided in the coming spending review.

A and E Safety Equipment

Dr. Evan Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health against what agents the (a) personal protective equipment and (b) decontamination shelters provided to hospital accident and emergency departments can protect. [40812]

Mr. Hutton: The chemical personal protective equipment (PPE) currently being made available to hospitals (and ambulance service staff) fully meets the NHS specification (NHSCPPE/2001) which was developed to ensure that health services personnel are protected during the decontamination of chemically contaminated casualties and able to provide life saving first aid during the decontamination process. The PPE has been tested against 15 liquid industrial chemicals in a standard test battery (ATSM F1001–99a) chosen to represent a broad range of liquid classes and properties. It has also been tested against a representative sample of chemical warfare agents.

The purpose of the mobile decontamination facilities currently being made available to hospitals (and ambulance service staff) is to provide privacy and shelter for chemically contaminated casualties during the decontamination process. These facilities are not intended to provide protection against chemical agents for either health service personnel or the chemically contaminated casualty. Health service personnel will be protected by wearing PPE, while casualties will be given appropriate medical treatment once they have been decontaminated.

Dr. Evan Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much the provision of (a) personal protective equipment and (b) decontamination equipment to hospital accident and emergency departments has cost in each of the last three years [40811]

Mr. Hutton: A total of £150 million has been invested in the Accident and Emergency (A&E) Modernisation Programme in three waves since 1998. It is the biggest investment in A&E services since the start of the national health service. The final wave of funding was made available to the NHS in January 2001.

The investment has provided various improvements to A&E services which include decontamination facilities. However, there is no complete breakdown in terms of cost as to specific details within a scheme.

A £5 million capital allocation has been made in 2001–2002 to secure, through national contracts, the provision of mobile decontamination units and personal protective equipment (PPE).

Leukaemia

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much has been spent on treating chronic myeloid leukaemia with a combination of cytosine therapy and interphon alpha by health authority year by year since 1997; and if he will make a statement. [41603]

Yvette Cooper: The information requested is not available.

Hospices

Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what his estimate is of the number of beds freed within the NHS by the transfer of patients to hospice care in the last 12 months; [41731]

(2) how much of the money at present allocated for the treatment of terminal cancer patient care will be directed to hospices; and if he will make a statement. [41732]

Yvette Cooper: In the NHS Cancer Plan we pledged that the national health service contribution to the costs of specialist palliative care (including hospices) would increase by £50 million by 2004. This investment is intended to help tackle inequalities in access to specialist palliative care and enable the NHS to increase their contribution to the cost hospices incur in providing agreed levels of service. The level of funding voluntary hospices receive is a matter for local decision based on a strategic view of local palliative care services. We have required all cancer networks to develop costed strategic investment plans for palliative care, which will inform the wider NHS planning process through Health Improvement Programmes and Service and Financial Frameworks for 2002–3.

Information on the number of beds freed within the NHS by the transfer of patients to hospice care is not available centrally. There are approximately 2,000 hospice beds in the voluntary sector and over 400 beds in the NHS in England. About 120,000 people die annually from cancer in England; approximately 50 per cent. of these die in hospital, 13 per cent. die in hospices and 25 per cent. die in their own homes.

NHS Vacancies

Dr. Evan Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many NHS vacancies there were for (a) medical and dental staff, (b) qualified nurses, (c) professions allied to medicine and (d) administration and estates staff in (i) England and (ii) each health authority in (A) each year since 1997, (B) 1979 and (C) 1992. [40068]

Mr. Hutton: The information requested has been placed in the Library.

Waiting Times

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the waiting time for occupational therapy for arthritis sufferers at (a) the Southampton University Hospital NHS Trust, (b) the Royal Bournemouth and Christchurch Hospitals NHS Trust and (c) the Poole Hospital NHS Trust. [41691]

Ms Blears: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the waiting time is from referral to first appointment with a consultant rheumatologist at (a) the Southampton University Hospital NHS Trust, (b) the Royal Bournemouth and Christchurch Hospitals NHS Trust and (c) the Poole Hospital NHS Trust. [41644]

Ms Blears: The information requested is shown in the table.

Out-patient average (median) waiting times for rheumatology—December 2001

Code/Trust name	Average (median) waiting time (in weeks)
RD3
Poole Hospital NHS Trust	6.10
RDZ
Royal Bournemouth and Christchurch Hospitals NHS Trust	6.33
RHM
Southampton University Hospitals NHS Trust	6.32

Notes:
1. The average waiting time is calculated as the median waiting time of those patients seen during the quarter for a first out-patient appointment in rheumatology specialty following GP referral.
2. Data are for quarter ended December 2001.

Source:
QM08 waiting times return.

Bladder Cancer

Brian White: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what national guidelines exist to govern the procedures and follow up intervals for patients treated for primary cancer of the bladder; [41466]

(2) what research he has conducted into the guidelines followed by other EU countries on the treatment of primary cancer of the bladder. [41465]

Yvette Cooper: The National Institute for Clinical Excellence (NICE) is commissioning a comprehensive package of guidance on cancer services covering all cancers which health authorities and NHS trusts will be expected to implement.

NICE guidelines are based on the best available research evidence and expert professional advice. Research may be commissioned by NICE, or consist of existing material, including guidelines and best practice in other countries.

NICE is expected to issue service guidance on urological cancer this summer.

Redundancy Packages

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 12 February 2002, Official Report, column 327W, on the costs of staff redundancy packages arising as a consequence of organisational change in the NHS, if he will make it his policy to collate details of these costs by region; and what data his Department collates on the costs of staff redundancy. [44086]

Mr. Hutton: In accordance with Her Majesty's Treasury financial reporting guidelines, information on provisions for premature retirement pensions are separately identified in the published annual accounts of national health service trusts and health authorities. There are currently no plans to extend these reporting requirements or routinely collate data by region as this would unduly add to the administrative burden for the NHS.

Free Nursing Care

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 13 March 2002, Official Report, column 1138W, on free nursing care, what estimate he has made of the number of assessments a person in receipt of free nursing care will need in the time they are in a care home. [44676]

Jacqui Smith: Based on an average length of stay in a nursing home of 30 months, one would expect three to four reviews to be made following the initial assessments.

Correspondence

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when his Department intends to respond to the letter of 23 January from the hon. Member for Aylesbury (ref. PO 003020). [45141]

Ms Blears: A reply was sent on 21 March.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he expects to reply to the letter of 17 December 2001 from the hon. Member for North Shropshire on funding for the minor injuries unit at the RJ and AH Orthopaedic hospital, Gobonea. [44681]

Yvette Cooper: A reply was sent on 6 March.

Written Answers to Questions

Monday 25 March 2002

NORTHERN IRELAND

Fair Trade

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether fair trade products are sold in his Department. [39832]

Dr. John Reid: No fair trade products are sold in the Northern Ireland Office.

Community Integration

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what measures the Government have taken in Northern Ireland to assist in the integration of the Catholic and Protestant communities. [41588]

Mr. Browne: Section 75(2) of the Northern Ireland Act 1998 states that

> "... a public authority shall, in carrying out its functions relating to Northern Ireland, have regard to the desirability of promoting good relations between persons of different religious belief, political opinion or racial group."

As an example of this the Government are committed to the implementation of the Patten recommendations, which are designed to make the police service more widely accepted throughout the community and more representative of the whole community.

A cross-community Policing Board has been established; recruitment to the new Police Service of Northern Ireland is now taking place on the basis of 50 per cent. Catholic and 50 per cent. non-Catholic. A new badge for the police service has been agreed, containing symbols which show parity of esteem for both sides of the community.

Press and Public Relations

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people were employed in a press or public relations function in his Department on 1 January in (a) 1997, (b) 1998, (c) 1999, (d) 2000, (e) 2001 and (f) 2002. [39943]

Dr. John Reid: Information is not held in the format requested.

The number of people employed in the Information Service Division of the Northern Ireland Office between 1997 and 2002 is as follows:

	Number
1 April 1997	37
1 April 1998	40
1 April 1999	52
1 April 2000	52
1 April 2001	36
1 January 2002	35

VIP Police Protection

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people in Northern Ireland receive VIP police protection; how many officers are involved in providing this service; and what the annual cost of providing this service is. [22920]

Jane Kennedy: The Chief Constable has advised me that 91 persons receive some level of police protection. This involves approximately 400 police officers whose duties range from escorting, close protection, to static security at private homes.

The annual cost of providing this level of protection is approximately £21 million. This figure comprises basic police pay and allowances, overtime and vehicle costs as applicable.

Decommissioning

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what recent progress has been made towards decommissioning. [43845]

Jane Kennedy: IICD reported, on 23 October 2001, that it had witnessed an event, which it regarded as significant, in which the IRA had put a quantity of arms completely beyond use. It also confirmed that the weapons decommissioned included arms, ammunition and explosives.

We now want to see further decommissioning by the IRA, and decommissioning by all other terrorist groups.

Northern Ireland Prison Service

Margaret Moran: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when the NI Prison Service will publish its 2002–05 Corporate and Business Plan; and what performance targets have been set for 2002–03. [46331]

Jane Kennedy: The Northern Ireland Prison Service's Corporate and Business Plan for 2002–05 was published today and I have placed copies in the Library of the House. The following key performance targets have been set for the 2002–03 year:

1. 100 per cent. security for top and high risk prisoners.
2. 99.7 per cent. security for medium and low-risk prisoners.
3. The number of staff assaulted by prisoners is less than a ratio of six per 100 prisoners.
4. The number of prisoners assaulted by prisoners is less than a ratio of 8.8 per 100 prisoners.
5. An average of at least 18 hours constructive activity per week for each sentenced prisoner.
6. An average of at least 9.5 hours constructive activity per week for each remand prisoner.
7. To ensure an average minimum of 70 per cent. of prisoners serving six months or more, including 90 per cent. of life sentence prisoners, is working to a sentence plan.
8. Deliver at least 85 per cent. of the planned training days associated with the agreed corporate training priorities.
9. Achieve an average minimum of five days development and training per member of staff.
10. Expenditure is within the budget allocated.
11. Lay the Annual Report and Audited Accounts before Parliament prior to the summer recess.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

PFI/PPPs

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what the difference was between the price offered in reaching preferred bidder stage and the final contract price for the five largest PFI contracts let by her Department in each of the last four years; and if she will make a statement. [45599]

Clare Short: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 29 January 2002, Official Report, column 224W.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what the difference was between the price offered in reaching preferred bidder stage and the final contract price for PPP contracts let by her Department in each of the last four years; and if she will make a statement. [45614]

Clare Short: DFID has not offered any public-private partnerships in the last four years. The public-private partnership for CDC has not yet been launched or bids invited.

Unpaid Advisers

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will list the names of the unpaid advisers appointed by her since she took office, stating in each case (a) the date of their appointment, (b) the duration of their appointment and (c) the project or projects on which they have been engaged. [43389]

Clare Short: No unpaid advisers have been appointed by me since taking office.

SOLICITOR-GENERAL

Non-governmental Organisations

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Solicitor-General if she will list non-governmental organisations operating in the south-west region that receive public funds from her Department; and what amount of annual funding they received in the most recent year for which figures are available. [39183]

The Solicitor-General [holding answer 4 March 2002]: The Legal Secretariat to the Law Officers, and the Departments for which the Attorney-General is responsible, namely, the Crown Prosecution Service, the Treasury Solicitor's Department and the Serious Fraud Office, do not provide funding for non-governmental organisations in the south-west region.

Flexible Working

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Solicitor-General how many and what proportion of the staff of her Department are (a) job sharing, (b) term working and (c) engaged in another form of flexible working. [42429]

The Solicitor-General [holding answer 14 March 2002]: In my own Department, the Legal Secretariat to the Law Officers, there is currently no job sharing, term working or staff engaged in any other form of flexible working.

In the Departments for which the Attorney-General is responsible, details are as follows:

Crown Prosecution Service

The numbers and proportion of Crown Prosecution staff currently engaged in job sharing, term working and other forms of flexible working are as follows:

Job sharing—14 staff (0.2 per cent.)

Term working—24 staff (0.4 per cent.)

Part-time—1,292 staff (20 per cent.).

The Crown Prosecution Service recognises the need for all staff, particularly those with care responsibilities, to try to find the right balance between work and domestic commitments.

Job sharing and term time working are just a couple of the alternative and flexible working patterns that employees are welcome to take up.

The Department operates a flexible working hours scheme that is open to both full and part-time members of staff. The scheme allows staff to vary their times of arrival and departure, subject to management needs.

The Department also considers applications for term time working by members of staff. In addition, although not recorded as term time working, the Department considers sympathetically any requests for unpaid special leave and/or change in working pattern during school holidays.

In addition to part-time working, job sharing and term time working, the Department will shortly be issuing policies on working compressed hours and home working. Although these policies have yet to be formally promulgated, a number of staff already practise these forms of flexible working.

When advertising vacancies, Crown Prosecution Service area branches are encouraged to welcome applications from people working different patterns. However, there are some instances where this is not possible due to the nature of the work.

Treasury Solicitor's Department

The numbers and proportion of Treasury Solicitor's Department staff currently engaged in job sharing, term working and other forms of flexible working are as follows:

Job sharing—2 staff (0.4 per cent.)

Term working—1 person (0.2 per cent.)

Part-time—37 staff (7 per cent.)

Flexi-timers—46 staff (8.8 per cent.).

The Treasury Solicitor's Department recognises the need for all staff, particularly those with care responsibilities, to try to find the right balance between work and domestic commitments.

Serious Fraud Office

The Serious Fraud Office does not currently have any staff working on a job share or term basis, although these options are available. However, the Department currently has four members of staff working compressed hours (ie five days in four, or ten days in nine). Three of the Department's members of staff work part-time and six work on a part home/part office basis. The Serious Fraud Office also operates a flexi-time system which enables the majority of staff to structure their working day to suit their own circumstances.

The Serious Fraud Office recognises the need for all staff, particularly those with care responsibilities, to try to find the right balance between work and domestic commitments.

Accommodation Costs

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Solicitor-General if she will list for 1997–98 and each subsequent financial year the amount spent by (a) her Department, (b) its agencies and (c) its non-departmental public bodies in respect of hotel and other similar privately-provided accommodation (i) in the UK and (ii) abroad for (A) Ministers, (B) staff and (C) other persons; if she will list the proportion of this cost incurred in respect of (x) food and (y) alcohol in each case; and if she will list the average cost per hotel room or similar unit of accommodation provided in each case. [34385]

The Solicitor-General [holding answer 11 February 2002]: In my own Department, the Legal Secretariat to the Law Officers, the following sums were spent on hotels and other similar privately provided accommodation in 1997–98 and subsequent financial years.

Subsistence UK

£11,791 in 1997–98—of which sum £9,192 arose from the additional costs created by the review of the CPS carried out by Sir Iain Glidewell.

£3,641 in 1998–99

£2,843.04 in 1999–2000

£5,107 in 2000–01

£3,975.63 in 2001/02.

Subsistence abroad

£1,043.82 in 1997–98

£610.32 in 1998–99

£2,037.55 in 1999–2000

£996.62 in 2000–01

£260.80 in 2001–02.

The accounting system used by the Legal Secretariat to the Law Officers does not divide these costs to show the amounts spent on hotels, food and alcohol. It would not be possible to provide details on the cost of hotels without incurring disproportionate cost.

Crown Prosecution Service

In the financial year 1997–98 and each subsequent financial year the Crown Prosecution Service has spent the following amounts on hotels and other similar privately provided accommodation:

£261,000 in 1997–98

£290,000 in 1998–99

£395,000 in 1999–2000

£623,000 in 2000–01.

This expenditure relates only to CPS staff.

The CPS also reimburses prosecution witnesses who have to stay overnight in order to give evidence at court. The rates applied to such reimbursement are the same as the rates applied to staff expenditure. Expenditure since 1997–98 has been as follows:

£294,000 in 1997–98

£324,000 in 1999–2000

£354,000 in 2000–01.

The Department does not maintain separate records for expenses incurred in the UK and abroad. It would not be possible to identify the cost of food without incurring disproportionate cost. Staff may claim a meal and incidental travel cost allowance of £25 and a personal incidental expenditure allowance of £5 per night, while away from home on official business.

The Department does not pay for alcohol for members of staff who travel on official business.

It is not possible to list the average cost per hotel room. From November 1999 new maximum rates were applied to the cost of bed and breakfast of up to £95 per night in London and other metropolitan areas and £65 per night elsewhere.

The marked increase in staff expenditure in 2000–01 compared with the previous years was a result of the aftermath of the Hatfield rail crash and the consequent disruption to public transport. Because of the extended journey times, particularly between the two headquarters' sites in London and York, officers were required to stay overnight more frequently.

Treasury Solicitor's Department

The total amounts spent on both travel and subsistence by the Treasury Solicitor's Department, HM Crown Prosecution Service Inspectorate (since April 2001) and the Government Property Lawyers' Agency in the last four years were as follows:

Treasury Solicitor's Department

£308,000 in 1997–98

£327,000 in 1998–99

£202,000 in 1999–2000

£318,000 in 2001–02 (to 31 December)

Crown Prosecution Service Inspectorate

£130,000 in 2001–02 (to 31 December)

Government Property Lawyers' Agency

£13,000 in 1997–98

£10,000 in 1998–99

£37,000 in 1999–2000

None in 2001–02.

The contract management and financial analysis systems currently in place at the Treasury Solicitor's Department mean that the Department could not provide the detailed information requested without incurring disproportionate cost. These systems are being upgraded as part of the improvement in financial management on which the Department has embarked. Most of the improvements should be concluded in the course of the financial year 2002–03.

Serious Fraud Office

In the financial year 1997–98 and each subsequent financial year the Serious Fraud Office has spent the following amounts on hotel and other similar privately provided accommodation:

Staff UK

£81,454.47 in 1997–98

£72,168.63 in 1998–99

£62,899.98 in 1999–2000

£91,391.53 in 2000–01

113,500.55 in 2001–02 (to date)

Staff abroad

£48,252.72 in 1997–98

£20,459.23 in 1998–99

£34,664.19 in 1999–2000

50,528.58 in 2001–02 (to date)

Witnesses UK

£21,607.48 in 1997–98

£93,015.87 in 1998–99

£11,880.96 in 1999–2000

£5,879.36 in 2001–02 (to date).

The Serious Fraud Office does not have either agencies or non-departmental public bodies and does not provide financial support to Ministers.

The Department does not pay for alcohol for members of staff who travel on official business.

Details of the breakdown between expenditure on food and accommodation and the average cost of such accommodation could not be made available without incurring disproportionate cost.

Appointments

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Solicitor-General if she will list the appointments she has made since 7 June 2001. [46171]

The Solicitor-General: I have made no appointments as Solicitor-General during the period in question.

Stolen Equipment

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Solicitor-General, pursuant to her answer of 23 January 2002, Official Report, column 878W, on stolen equipment, what criminal proceedings have been undertaken for cases of theft against her Department, stating in each case (a) whether the proceedings (i) led to a criminal conviction and (ii) were unsuccessful, (b) the cost incurred by her Department in pursuing a conviction and (c) the value of items recovered; and if she will make a statement. [41512]

The Solicitor-General [holding answer 18 March 2002]: In relation to my own Department, the Legal Secretariat to the Law Officers, I am not aware of any equipment having been stolen from the Department since 1 May 1997.

In the Departments for which the Attorney General is responsible, details are as follows:

Crown Prosecution Service

Since May 1997 no criminal proceedings have been brought by the Crown Prosecution Service in connection with the stolen equipment listed in reply to Mr. Menzies Campbell's question. No items have been recovered.

Treasury Solicitor's Department

No criminal proceedings were undertaken in any of the cases of theft against the Department detailed in response to Mr. Menzies Campbell's question, and no items were recovered. Three of the thefts were reported to the police, and the remainder were investigated internally. The internal investigations did not identify any individuals against whom proceedings could be taken, and the stolen items could not be traced.

Serious Fraud Office

No criminal proceedings were undertaken in relation to any of the cases of theft against the Serious Fraud Office listed in response to Mr. Menzies Campbell's question, and no items were recovered.

Parental Leave Directive

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Solicitor-General what estimate she has made of the (a) financial costs and (b) benefits to her Department of the Parental Leave Directive. [42492]

The Solicitor-General [holding answer 14 March 2002]: In my own Department, the Legal Secretariat to the Law Officers all staff are on secondment from other Departments. Matters relating to parental leave are dealt with by their parent Departments.

In the Departments for the which the Attorney-General has responsibility, details are as follows.

Crown Prosecution Service

With effect from 1 April 1998, the Crown Prosecution Service's policy on special leave was amended to allow three months parental leave on the grounds of the birth or adoption of a child to all staff who have been employed by the Department for 12 months or longer. This entitlement is available for each child, and can be taken before the child's 8th birthday. In relation to adoption, the leave can ben taken up to eight years after the child is first placed with the family for adoption, or until the child's 18th birthday if that is sooner.

In relation to a child with a disability, parental leave may be taken up to the child's 18th birthday.

At present, the Department does not retain data relating specifically to parental leave and is therefore unable to quantify the financial costs of the Parental Leave Directive.

It is known that during the period from 1 April 2000 to 31 March 2001, 11 members of staff took paternity leave, which amounted to approximately 120 days absence. However, the grades of the staff taking paternity leave were not recorded and therefore the Department cannot give an estimated cost for that period.

Treasury Solicitor's Department

The Treasury Solicitor's Department estimate that there will not be a material financial cost to the Department as a result of the Parental Leave Directive. The cost to the Treasury Solicitor's Department since December 1999 has been £3,083.85.

The benefits of parental leave to the Department have been to reinforce the Department's policy of assisting staff in maintaining a balance between work and home life.

Serious Fraud Office

The Serious Fraud Office has yet to receive an application for parental leave from any of its staff. However, the Department considers the financial implication of granting parental leave to be minimal, as the leave is unpaid.

The Serious Fraud Office sees the benefits of parental leave as being (i) to offer staff more family friendly options and thus improve morale and motivation within the Department, (ii) to improve recruitment and retention, (iii) to promote Government policies and (iv) to comply with legislation.

Age Discrimination

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Solicitor-General what her Department's policy is towards age discrimination. [42564]

The Solicitor-General [holding answer 14 March 2002]: My own Department, the Legal Secretariat to the Law Officers, is a small department of fewer than 35 staff. Staff are seconded to LSLO from other Government Departments and so the age range from which LSLO draws its staff depends upon the age policy of other Departments. Within that limitation, LSLO does not discriminate on grounds of age and there is no age bar in relation to recruitment. Currently the ages of staff at LSLO ranges from under 25 to over 60.

In the Departments for which the Attorney-General is responsible, details are as follows:

Crown Prosecution Service

The Crown Prosecution Service is currently in the process of a complete review of Departmental policy on age, with a view to issuing revised policy later this year. The revised policy will take into account the current need for all employers to adopt a flexible approach to the recruitment and retention of older workers.

Historically the CPS has welcomed all job applications regardless of age, but has maintained a less flexible policy on age retirement. Guidance issued by the Cabinet Office (based on the non-statutory Code of Practice published by the former DfEE) encouraged the review of current policies on recruitment, conditions of service based on age or length of service, and retirement. The CPS review aims to bring all age-related policies in line with the code of practice.

Treasury Solicitor's Department

The Treasury Solicitor's Department does not discriminate on grounds of age and there is no age bar in relation to recruitment.

The minimum age at which staff can retire and receive an immediate pension payout is 60. The Treasury Solicitor's Department includes age equality in its diversity programme and allows staff to stay on at work to the age of 65, subject to satisfactory performance and the business needs of the agency.

Serious Fraud Office

There are no age restrictions placed upon applicants for Serious Fraud Office positions. However, applicants are asked to note that the Department's normal retirement age for staff at all grades is currently 60.

DEFENCE

Correspondence

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what was, for each year since 1995, the total number of (a) letters from hon. Members, (b) letters from members of the public and (c) parliamentary questions from (i) hon. Members and (ii) Lords dealt with by his Department; what percentage took (A) more than one month and (B) more than three months to provide a substantive answer; and if he will make a statement; [7029]

(2) what was, for each year since 1995, the average response time for providing a substantive answer to (a) hon. Members' correspondence, (b) correspondence from members of the public and (c) written parliamentary questions in the (i) Commons and (ii) Lords. [7028]

Dr. Moonie: The information is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

General information on the volumes of correspondence received across Whitehall and on overall performance is published by the Cabinet Office. Figures for 2000 were published on 6 April 2001, Official Report, columns 324–28W and on 19 July 2001, Official Report, columns 454–56W.

The Ministry of Defence aims to answer all ordinary written parliamentary questions within five working days, and named day written parliamentary questions on the day named.

Staff Retirement

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many staff left the service of his Department and its agencies in the year ended 31 March 2001; how many left before attaining the formal retirement age of 60 years; and in respect of how many his Department and its agencies assumed responsibilities for making payments until retirement age. [37555]

Dr. Moonie: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Secretary, Cabinet Office on 13 March 2002, Official Report, column 1071W.

During the period 1 April 2000 to 31 March 2001, 798 employees left the Ministry of Defence on grounds of either early retirement or early severance for which benefits were paid under the civil service compensation scheme.

Official Visits

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he will list the official visits within the UK outside London made by each Minister in his Department in 2001, giving for each (a) the origin and destination and (b) the mode of travel used; and what guidance is provided to Ministers in his Department on choice of mode of travel for official visits; [38183]

(2) if he will list the official visits to (a) Paris and (b) Brussels made by each Minister in his Department in 2001 and the mode of travel used; and what guidance is provided to Ministers in his Department on the choice of mode of travel for such visits. [38147]

Dr. Moonie: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Secretary, Cabinet Office (Mr. Leslie) on 6 March 2002, Official Report, column 421W.

International Security Assistance Force

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what programme he has made for identifying the successor lead nation for the international security assistance force for Kabul and its surrounding area under the terms of Annex 1 to the Bonn agreement; and if he will make a statement. [41896]

Mr. Hoon: We continue to negotiate with Turkey for the handover of the International Security Assistance Force lead nation.

Parental Leave Directive

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what estimate he has made of the (a) financial costs and (b) benefits to his Department of the Parental Leave Directive. [42474]

Dr. Moonie: It is the Ministry of Defence's policy to encourage civilian staff, at all levels, to take full advantage of family-friendly and work-life provisions such as the Parental Leave Directive. Records on the grant of special leave under the Parental Leave Directive are not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. However, since this category of special leave is unpaid, then, administrative costs aside, there are no direct financial consequences to the MOD.

External Advisers

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much he has spent on external advisers in connection with the transfer of parts of DERA to the private sector. [42340]

Dr. Moonie [holding answer 11 March 2002]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 8 March 2002, Official Report, column 577W, to the hon. Member for North Thanet (Mr. Gale).

Celebrations

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what arrangements his Department has made to celebrate (a) St. Patrick's Day, (b) St. George's Day, (c) St. Andrew's Day and (d) Her Majesty the Queen's Golden Jubilee; and how his Department celebrated St. David's Day. [42302]

Dr. Moonie [holding answer 11 March 2002]: The Ministry of Defence does not make any formal arrangements for National Saints' Days except for the flying of flags from certain Government buildings where the facility to do so exists. On such occasions the Union flag is hoisted, and where there are two suitable masts the National flag may be flown together with the Union flag on buildings located in England, Scotland and Wales on the appropriate "named day". St. Patrick's Day is not a "named day". The armed forces have similar arrangements, though in addition certain units may unofficially acknowledge a particular Saint's Day for historical or traditional reasons.

With regard to the arrangements for the Queen's Golden Jubilee I refer the hon. Member to the reply my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport gave on 11 February 2002, Official Report, columns 58–59W, to the hon. Member for South Suffolk (Mr. Yeo).

Regulatory Impact Unit

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many members his Department employs in its regulatory impact unit; and if he will make a statement. [42920]

Dr. Moonie: As a non-regulatory Department, the Ministry of Defence does not have a dedicated regulatory impact unit. However, issues relating to regulatory impact are addressed by two civilian members of staff as part of their wider remit to assess the potential impacts of EU legislation on the MOD.

Defence Agency Staff (Scotland)

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how many people work for the Central Data Management Authority; how many are employed in Scotland; and what the personnel costs of the agency are; [27824]

(2) how many people work for the Central Data Management Authority; how many are employed in Scotland; and what the personnel costs of the agency are. [27821]

Dr. Moonie: The Central Data Management Authority is not an agency, but a branch within the Director General Information organisation, which is itself part of the Ministry of Defence headquarters.

The CDMA branch has a complement of 14 staff.

The annual personnel budget is £0.528 million (financial year 2002–03), calculated using current MOD capitation rates.

None of the CDMA branch staff are employed in Scotland.

Public Service Agreements

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the public service agreement targets which have been revised and those which have been introduced since the publication of the 2001 departmental report. [43247]

Dr. Moonie: The Ministry of Defence's service agreement remains as published in the 2000 Spending Review White Paper (Cm 4808, July 2000).

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which public service agreement targets scheduled to be met in 2002 will not be achieved by the due date. [44823]

Dr. Moonie: Information about progress on PSA targets was published in the Ministry of Defence Performance Report 2000–01 (Cm 5290, November 2001). A summary of progress made since then will be included in the Government's Expenditure Plans 2002–03 to 2003–04 for the MOD, due to be published in the spring.

Nuclear Tests

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what estimates he has made of the number of cancer cases caused by radioactivity released from nuclear bombs in testing in the 1950s and 1960s. [43402]

Dr. Moonie: The Ministry of Defence has commissioned epidemiological studies into the health of those British personnel who participated in British atmospheric nuclear tests which took place in the 1950s and 1960s.

The National Radiological Protection Board carries out studies into the exposure to radiation of the population of the United Kingdom as a whole, including fallout from weapons testing, and publishes reports on this subject. This does not include estimation of the rates of cancer that might arise.

Aviation Repairs

Mr. John Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to review the competition process for deep aviation repair work within his Department. [43805]

Mr. Ingram: I am satisfied that our acquisition strategy for aviation repair work is coherent, provides best value for money for the British taxpayer and ensures fair treatment for all competitors in this field. I therefore have no plans at present to review the competition process.

Mr. John Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) for what reason the Defence Aviation Repair Agency was not awarded the contract for Tornado rudder, air intake, windscreen and wing nibs under the Tornado Tiger Team; [43804]

(2) what assessment he has made of the process by which BAE Systems was selected to undertake Tornado rudder, air intake, windscreen and wing nibs within the Tornado Tiger Team. [43802]

Mr. Ingram: The intended support solution for the Tornado rudder, air intake, windscreen and wing nibs work, a prime contract with BAE Systems with the Defence Aviation Repair Agency (DARA) acting as repair sub-contractor, was developed by a joint team that included representation from the Defence Logistics Organisation, BAE Systems, HQ Strike Command and DARA. The process was fair and fully transparent to all those involved but in the event, DARA was unable to agree acceptable prices. The eventual prime contract, which was awarded to BAE Systems, represents best value-for-money and incentivises BAE Systems to manage sub-contract arrangements accordingly.

Defence Aviation Repair Agency

Mr. John Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the ability of the Defence Aviation Repair Agency to achieve its targets for the financial years (a) 2001–02 and (b) 2002–03. [44575]

Mr. Ingram: For 2001–02, end of year performance against the Defence Aviation Repair Agency (DARA) Key Targets will be independently audited and reported in the Agency Annual Report and Accounts. While DARA will continue to strive to meet its targets, at this stage it is too early to give an accurate forecast.

For 2002–03 the Key Performance Indicators are still being developed, and will be announced in the House shortly.

Porton Down

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many films made by the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment, Porton Down had been transferred to the Imperial War Museum as of 14 February. [43455]

Dr. Moonie: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 9 May 2001, Official Report, column 196W. No further films have been transferred since that date.

Senior Armed Forces

Mr. Davidson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what proportion (a) now, (b) five years ago and (c) 10 years ago of senior officers in each of the armed forces attended (i) independent and (ii) state schools; and if he will make a statement. [43855]

Mr. Ingram: This information is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

HMS Sheffield

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the cost is of keeping HMS Sheffield (a) in reserve and (b) in mothballs; when its Royal Navy service will end; how many personnel are involved in keeping it in service and at what cost; and if he will make a statement. [43924]

Mr. Ingram: The estimated costs of holding HMS Sheffield at extended readiness from November 2002 until September 2004 is £3.3 million. This figures includes £0.8 million for the costs of the 13 RN personnel directly involved in maintaining her in service. On current plans HMS Sheffield will be withdrawn from service towards the end of this decade.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many answers to parliamentary questions are more than (a) two weeks and (b) three months outstanding; and if he will make a statement. [43927]

Dr. Moonie: The information is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. Approximately 3,200 parliamentary questions have been tabled to the Ministry of Defence during the current session. Ministers aim to answer ordinary written parliamentary questions within five working days and named day parliamentary questions on the day requested.

Fighter Jets

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the Royal Air Force's total inventory is of (a) Harrier GR7s, (b) Tornado GR1s and (c) Jaguar GR1s; and how many of each are operationally available. [43635]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 15 March 2002]: On 13 March 2002 there were 74 Harrier GR7 aircraft in the departmental fleet (the total number of aircraft owned by the Ministry of Defence), of which 55 were assigned to the Actual Operating Fleet (the total number of aircraft allocated to meet the fleet task); 23 Tornado GR1 aircraft in the departmental fleet, of which 14 were assigned to the Actual Operating Fleet, and 51 Jaguar GR1 aircraft in the departmental fleet, of which none were assigned to the Actual Operating Fleet.

Overseas Territories/Sovereign Bases

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the military presence is on each (a) British Overseas Territory and (b) Sovereign Base; and what plans there are to change that presence in each case. [44033]

Mr. Ingram: There is no permanent military presence on Anguilla, British Virgin Islands, Cayman Islands, Montserrat, Pitcairn Islands, St. Helena, Tristan da Cunha, South Georgia and the South Sandwich Islands, or the Turks and Caicos Islands.

The military presence on the Falkland Islands comprises: Joint Headquarters and support elements; offshore patrol vessel; Roulement Infantry Company; one Tornado F3 flight; one VC10 tanker; one C-130 Hercules; Rapier Squadron; one helicopter squadron (Sea King and Chinook); air support services.

The military presence on Gibraltar comprises: Joint Headquarters and support elements; two coastal patrol vessels; RAF Gibraltar; Royal Gibraltar Regiment.

The British Indian Ocean Territory has a naval party of approximately 40 personnel. There are approximately 25 service personnel on Ascension Island, with support provided by a civilian Multi-Activity Contract. A small number of service personnel are on loan or secondment in Bermuda and British Antarctic Territory.

The military presence on the Sovereign Base Areas in Cyprus comprises: Joint Headquarters; signals units and Cyprus Joint Support Unit; two Sovereign Base Area HQs; two Resident Infantry Battalions; one Engineer Squadron; one Gazelle helicopter Flight; Port and Maritime elements; RAF Regiment personnel; one Wessex Squadron; RAF Akrotiri.

Helicopter operations on Cyprus will be transferred to a Commercially Owned, Military Registered arrangement next year.

There are no current plans to make significant changes to the military presence in other areas, but all commitments are subject to periodic review to meet changing requirements.

Snagge Report

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 11 March 2002, Official Report, column 655W, on the Snagge report, if the report was produced using his Department's facilities; to whom it was submitted; when he took a decision on its publication; and if he will make a statement on his policy with regard to the publishing of unsolicited reports which he regards as (a) misleading and (b) accurate. [44257]

Mr. Ingram: The report written by Colonel C. E. M. Snagge, although unsolicited from the then 2 Division based in York, was an official, internal document submitted to Headquarters Land Command. As such it was taken into account when the future location of the divisional headquarters was being considered. As I said in my answer on 11 March 2002, Official Report, column 655W, however, the report contained partial opinion. A balanced view, setting out the rationale for the decision, was set out in the Consultation Document "Land Command Restructuring of Divisions/Districts" which was issued to trade union representatives on 30 October 1998. A copy of this report will be placed in the Library of the House.

Ministry of Defence policy on the release of information follows the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information. The decision to withhold Colonel Snagge's report was taken in accordance with Exemption 2 of the Code, which relates to internal discussion and advice, when I answered the hon. Member's question on 28 February 2002, Official Report, column 146W.

Irish Sea (Submarines)

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what investigations his Department has carried out following the two fishing boat accidents in the Irish Sea on 31 January and 14 February; what the result of those investigations has been; and what further action will be taken to ensure that action plans are in place in fishing ports to address similar accidents in the future; [44466]

(2) what investigations have been carried out into submarine activity in the Irish Sea, with particular reference to the area between St. John's Point at Killough, County Down and Dundalk, County Louth; and what the result of those investigations has been. [44467]

Mr. Ingram: Royal naval submarines operating in waters frequented by UK fishing vessels are governed by a code of practice, mutually agreed by the Royal Navy and the UK fishing industry, which is designed to ensure the safety of fishing vessels. Additionally, it is mandatory for royal naval and allied submarines to report their position once a fishing vessel incident is reported. I can confirm that, following internal investigations, no submarines were operating in the vicinity of either of the two incidents referred to. The Marine Accident Investigation Branch have confirmed that they are satisfied with this conclusion.

The Royal Navy will, in general, respond to such incidents if requests for assistance are received from the Coastguard or the Marine Accident Investigation Branch.

Apache Helicopters

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the progress of the integration of the Hellfire missile on to the Army's Apache helicopters. [44659]

Dr. Moonie [holding answer 19 March 2002]: Trials of the helicopter and its weapons systems are progressing satisfactorily. We expect the Hellfire missile to be integrated on the helicopter and cleared for training by the end of this year.

Development Expenditure

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the net book value of development expenditure at the end of each year in the period 1997–98 to 2002–03; and if he will show the development expenditure made in each year. [44662]

Mr. Ingram: The information requested is shown in the table.

Year	Net book value of development expenditure[1]	Development expenditure made this year
1997–98	[2]—	[2]—
1998–99	[3]18.6	[2]—

Logistics

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the net book value was of (a) capital spares and (b) raw materials and consumables at the end of each month since April 2000. [44661]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 19 March 2002]: The net book value of capital spares and raw materials and consumables held by the Ministry of Defence at the end of each month since April 2000 was as follows:

£000

Financial month and year	Capital spares	RMC
2000
April	8,560,947	7,057,584
May	8,839,946	8,978,671

[1] This is the last month for which figures are currently available.

The figures provided from April 2000 to March 2001 were consolidated within the Departmental Resource Accounts (DRAc) for that financial year, but the figures for stock were qualified by the Comptroller and Auditor General when the accounts were audited. The figures from April 2001 onwards will be consolidated within the next DRAc, which will be audited later this year.

Fleet Support Limited Company

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether the Fleet Support Limited company has (a) met all contractual performance indicators and (b) delivered on time and to cost for all work on Fleet Maintenance and Repair in Portsmouth. [44757]

Mr. Ingram: The information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost. Since its formation in 1998, Fleet Support Ltd. (FSL) has undertaken an extensive programme of work on RN and RFA vessels in Portsmouth, during which period not every project has been delivered to time and cost. The reasons for this are complex, vary considerably across the projects concerned and are not necessarily the sole responsibility of the company in each instance. However, the company's performance overall in the last 12 months has been well within the performance indicators which the Warship Support Agency (WSA), as the provider of maritime logistics support, is tasked to achieve.

Iraq

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what injuries were sustained by members of the RAF in the threats and attacks on coalition planes in Iraq in 2001; and if he will make a statement. [44741]

Mr. Ingram: RAF aircraft patrolling as part of the international coalition's enforcement of the no-fly zones over Iraq are regularly attacked by Iraqi air defences, including anti-aircraft artillery and surface-to-air missiles. Owing to the skill of RAF aircrew, their training, equipment, tactics and support, none were hit in 2001, and no aircrew were injured. This record has been maintained this year to date.

Accommodation

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the average wait is by service personnel for accommodation in the private sector when DHE housing is unavailable has been in the last three years; and if he will make a statement. [44970]

Dr. Moonie: When service family accommodation is not available, the Defence Housing Executive authorises substitute service family accommodation. A Ministry of Defence accommodation agency contractor is then tasked to provide appropriate accommodation from the commercial rental market to meet the service applicant's required date.

From 1 January 2001 to 28 February 2002, there were 434 applications for SSFA. Of these, some 42 per cent. of applicants were housed, on average, eight days before their required date. The remaining 58 per cent. were housed, on average, 20 days after their required date.

MOD Housing

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the system is of upkeep for empty MOD housing; and if he will make a statement. [44968]

Dr. Moonie: Empty Ministry of Defence housing is maintained under the same contractual arrangements which MOD, through the Defence Housing Executive (DHE), employs to maintain all its housing stock in mainland United Kingdom. A contracted Works Services Manager provides a response repair service and, working with the DHE Property Manager, undertakes a programme of regular planned maintenance which is fulfilled according to available funds. A temporarily empty property required for service family occupation in the longer term would normally have priority over a property intended for disposal.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment has been made of the effectiveness of the fraud detection system for MoD housing; and if he will make a statement. [45439]

Dr. Moonie: The effectiveness of fraud detection, in the context of Ministry of Defence housing and related works, is kept under constant review. Line management is responsible for ensuring that appropriate procedures are followed and controls operated effectively. In addition, there is a rolling programme of compliance and risk based audits carried out independently of line management. Consultants are also employed to carry out additional audits of property management and to undertake initial investigations of suspected fraud or impropriety. Furthermore, the central Defence Finance Audit Unit is notified of all suspected cases of fraud and they may then call in the MOD Police.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how much money was spent on (a) single living accommodation and (b) married quarters in each year between 1992 and 1997; and if he will make a statement; [45441]

(2) how many complaints were made about (a) single living accommodation and (b) married quarters in each year between 1992 and 1997; and if he will make a statement. [45433]

Dr. Moonie: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Crèche Facilities

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what crèche facilities are provided by his Department; and at what cost. [44870]

Dr. Moonie: The Ministry of Defence provides the following child care support for its civilian and military employees:

42 work place nurseries offering 1,700 full day care places for children aged three months to five years.

36 crèches (benefiting 700 children) providing occasional care and 70 pre-schools (benefiting over 2,000 children) providing education on a sessional basis, primarily for service families.

14 wrap around care schemes for five to 12-year-olds (benefiting 350 children) providing before and after school care to match the working day.

12 holiday play schemes providing full day care for five to 12-year-olds during school holidays (three are shared with other Government Departments) benefiting 500 children.

a child care voucher scheme for civilian employees in Glasgow benefiting about 80 parents.

The capital and running costs of child care schemes are funded by a variety of means including: money raised by parents, benevolent funds, local authorities, the civil service modernisation fund and the defence budget. However, no figures for the total costs are readily available, and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Freedom of Information Act

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment has been made of the implementation of the Freedom of Information Act 2000 in the MOD; and if he will make a statement. [44737]

Dr. Moonie: The Ministry of Defence and armed forces are, with the exception of the Special Forces, subject to the Freedom of Information Act 2000. Work is under way to ensure that we are ready for implementation of the rights and obligations it creates. A pilot version of MOD's publication scheme was released in February and this is now being reviewed in light of comments from users and guidance which has recently been issued by the information commissioner under s.47(2) of the Act. More widely, the preparatory work will involve education of all relevant personnel about the key provisions; establishing or modifying procedures in order to support compliance; and ensuring that the status under the Act of all types of information held by MOD is understood both within the Department and, where appropriate, by external bodies. In addition, it is recognised that successful implementation will be dependent on developing a more open outlook and that achieving this culture change must also be an integral part of the agenda. In a Department as large and wide-ranging as MOD this represents a significant programme which, we assess, will require the full lead time provided by the implementation timetable which my noble and learned Friend the Lord Chancellor announced on 13 November 2001.

UN Peacekeeping

Mr. Lazarowicz: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what training and education the UK provides to service personnel from other countries engaged in UN peacekeeping and conflict resolution initiatives. [44745]

Mr. Ingram: Training and education are provided to service personnel from other countries engaged in UN peacekeeping and conflict resolution initiatives by the United Kingdom in various ways. A one-year post-graduate course in global security and a seven-week diploma course in managing defence in a democracy are offered at the Royal College of Military Science, Shrivenham and have been developed for foreign military and civilian students as part of the Ministry of Defence's Defence Diplomacy Mission. The Army has recently commenced a series of 10-day International Peace Supporting Briefing programmes with students attending from many parts of the world. The programme includes briefing on the structure and role of the British Army, the role of Government Departments and non-governmental organisations in peace support operations (PSO), PSO doctrine, civil/military co-operation, the role of the police and equipment and training issues. However, the Royal College of Defence Studies course and the Advanced Command and Staff course syllabi also contain elements relevant to UN peacekeeping and conflict resolution and selected countries are invited to send students each year. Additionally, spare capacity on UK military training courses is offered to other countries as part of the UK MOD's Defence Diplomacy Mission. Examples of such training are as follows:

Initial Officer Training.

English Language Training.

First Aid and Combat Casualty Care (Royal Navy).

Anti-piracy—Board and Search Course (Royal Navy).

Combat Medical Technician (Army).

Regimental Medical Assistant (Army).

Helicopter Tactics Training (prior to Bosnia/Kosovo deployment) (Royal Air Force).

In addition to training conducted in the UK, overseas training is carried out by established British military advisory and training teams (BMATT). Most of this training is directly relevant to UN peacekeeping and conflict resolution initiatives and BMATTs are currently established in seven countries worldwide. The MOD also provides short term training teams (STTT) to supplement the training given by BMATTs or is provided for immediate local training needs in other areas of the world. Numerous STTTs are in place at any given time on deployments typically lasting for between two and six weeks.

Colchester Garrison

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to the answers of 21 January 2002, Official Report, column 557W and of 28 January 2002, Official Report, column 23W, on Colchester garrison, how many representations he has received about the temporary portakabin type single living accommodation for soldiers; and if he will make a statement. [45379]

Dr. Moonie: Other than the hon. Member's question of 28 January 2002, Official Report, column 23W, I have received no representations about the temporary portakabin type, single living accommodation for soldiers at Colchester garrison.

Depleted Uranium

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on how many occasions in the last 20 years depleted uranium shells have been fired at the Foulness ranges in Shoeburyness; and if he will make a statement. [44797]

Dr. Moonie: No depleted uranium (DU) shells have been fired at Foulness.

However, during the 1980s, approximately 200 rounds of small experimental DU projectiles, of up to 30 mm calibre, were fired in a purpose-built indoor facility at Foulness.

Experimental firings between 1982 and 1983 are confirmed by range records. Further to this, in his response of 9 March 2001, Official Report, column 358W, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence stated that DU firings may have continued at Foulness until 1986.

The building in which firing took place was designed to prevent any escape of particulate DU into the atmosphere. It was closed in the early 1990s and was decontaminated in 1997.

Colchester Corrective Training Centre

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many civilians are employed at the Military Corrective Training Centre in Colchester; and how many are in receipt of the prison environmental allowance. [45291]

Mr. Ingram: There are currently 30 civilians employed permanently at the Military Corrective Training Centre (MCTC) in Colchester, and all receive the prison environmental allowance. Two Ministry of Defence Guards Service staff are also provided to the MCTC on a rotational basis, but these staff do not qualify for the prison environmental allowance.

Decommissioning

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when (a) HMS Ark Royal, (b) HMS Invincible and (c) HMS Illustrious are to be decommissioned. [45488]

Mr. Ingram: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave on 15 January 2002, Official Report, column 125W, to my hon. Friend the Member for Chorley (Mr. Hoyle).

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when the last Sea Harrier and RAF Harrier are to be taken out of service. [45490]

Mr. Ingram: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave on 28 February 2002, Official Report, columns 1451–52W, to my hon. Friend the Member for Broxtowe (Dr. Palmer). Under the revised investment strategy for Joint Force Harrier, the Sea Harrier fleet will be withdrawn from service by 2006. The withdrawal of RAF Harriers from service will occur as they are replaced by the Future Joint Combat Aircraft and, on current plans, will be completed in 2015.

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to convert one of the three aircraft carriers into a helicopter carrier after its decommissioning date. [45489]

Mr. Ingram: There are currently no plans to convert an aircraft carrier into a helicopter carrier after decommissioning. All three of our aircraft carriers have the capability to operate as a Landing Platform Helicopter as a secondary role.

Afghanistan

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if C130Js have flown into Afghanistan; and if the C130J Hercules deployed in Afghanistan have a full defensive aids suite. [45457]

Mr. Hoon: No C130Js have been flown into Afghanistan. All C130s operating into Afghanistan are provided with defensive aids. Details vary from air-frame to air-frame but we are confident that for all flights into Afghanistan self protection measures are adequate against the perceived threat.

Defence Medical Services

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what psychiatric and mental health service staff are employed in the Defence Medical Services. [45935]

Dr. Moonie: As at 1 January 2002, there were 11 Consultant Psychiatrists and 81 Registered Nurses (Mental Health) serving in the Defence Medical Services (DMS). In addition, there were 11 medical officers undergoing Consultant Psychiatrist training, and 20 mental health nurse trainees. Civilian mental health staff are also employed in the United Kingdom and overseas in support of the DMS, some of whom are filling vacant military posts.

Deployment

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the mean percentage is of the British Army which has been deployed on operations in each year since 1998. [45697]

Mr. Ingram: The mean percentage of the British Army deployed on operations in each year since 1998 is shown in the following table.

1998	25
1999	24
2000	24
2001	21
2002[2]	20

[1] The mean percentage of the British Army deployed on operations for years 1998, 1999 and 2000 includes personnel from the Royal Irish (Home Service) and Mobilised Reserves.
[2] As at 1 March.

Ministerial Meetings

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what meetings were arranged for Defence Ministers to meet the US Assistant Secretary for Defence during his recent visit to London; and if he will make a statement on the outcome of the meetings. [45696]

Mr. Ingram: A meeting was arranged for 18 March 2002 between myself and the United States Assistant Secretary of Defence but because of business in the House, it did not take place. The Assistant Secretary did have discussions with officials.

Injuries

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many claims have been made for compensation from the MOD for muscular-skeletal injuries during Army training in each year since 1995 from (a) men and (b) women. [46261]

Dr. Moonie: The Ministry of Defence does not record separately cases brought against the MOD for muscular-skeletal injuries during Army training. The information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Warships

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has for modernising warship repair and maintenance. [46336]

Mr. Hoon: The Government have decided on arrangements which will secure better value for money for warship repair and maintenance for the Royal Navy.

The Ministry of Defence has considered a number of options, including internal proposals to improve efficiency, proposals for further improvements from the MOD trade unions, and proposals from the existing dockyard companies. All options offered significant benefits compared with the current cost of undertaking warship repair and maintenance, but the company proposals offered the best overall value for money.

I have therefore decided to proceed with partnering arrangements with the companies. Subject to the satisfactory conclusion of negotiations, contracts will be placed later this year with Devonport Management Ltd., Fleet Support Ltd. and Babcock Naval Services Ltd. (a newly formed subsidiary of BRDL) for the provision of engineering support and related services at the naval bases at Devonport, Portsmouth and the Clyde. The Ministry of Defence has also agreed with the dockyard companies that a larger proportion of the surface ship refit and repair programme will be opened up for competition, with corresponding improvements in value for money. Taken together, these approaches will deliver efficiency improvements of over £300 million over the next five years.

These arrangements will involve the transfer of nearly 3,000 posts to the partnering. The Ministry of Defence will work closely with trade unions to ensure this transfer can be achieved as smoothly as possible.

Defence Evaluation and Research Agency

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the work programme of DERA. [45368]

Dr. Moonie: DERA was disestablished on 1 July 2001 as part of the DERA PPP and two new organisations, Dstl and QinetiQ plc, were formed. The split of DERA, and thus the work programme, was done on the basis of capabilities; the principle being that the work that could not easily be transferred to the private sector remained within the Ministry of Defence, the rest became part of QinetiQ's business.

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will publish the representations he has received from defence manufacturers on the transfer of parts of DERA to the private sector. [45685]

Dr. Moonie: On completion of formal consultation on the DERA PPP process in June 2000, 19 written responses had been received from industry, including defence manufacturers. An industry forum was subsequently held to provide an opportunity for a detailed discussion of the PPP proposals before decisions were made on the way ahead. Rather than publish the individual representations, which would require the approval of the relevant organisations, the key points have been summarised in the Ministry of Defence responses about consultation to the Defence Select Committee and trade unions. The summary was published by the Defence Select Committee in its fifth report of session 2000–01 titled "The Draft Defence Science and Technology Laboratory Trading Fund Order 2001 at Appendix 3". In general, industry regarded the PPP proposals as workable and indicated a willingness to liaise with MOD to ensure that they were implemented in a way that best meets defence interests.

Consultation with industry has been a regular feature of the PPP process and has taken the form of informal workshops, meetings, briefings and seminars. Contact has generally been focused through the trade associations or other relevant professional bodies such as the Defence Industries Council, Defence Manufacturers Association and Association of Independent Research and Technology Organisations. Officials managing the PPP process are also in regular contact with the National Defence Industry Council's appointed industry liaison officer.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

National Lottery

9. Alistair Burt: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much the national lottery has raised to date; and how much has been spent in Bedfordshire. [43150]

Mr. Caborn: The national lottery has raised £12.19 billion at the end of December 2001 with £34,087,878 awarded to Bedfordshire to date.

19. Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will make a statement on the distribution of New Opportunities Fund national lottery money, with specific reference to demographic area. [43160]

Tessa Jowell: The New Opportunity Fund's programmes are designed to ensure a fair geographic spread of lottery money. For some of its programmes, the fund targets particular areas in order to ensure that funding reaches those in the greatest need.

27. Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what estimate she has made of the total value of national lottery ticket sales to date. [43169]

Mr. Caborn: The total value of national lottery tickets sold from the launch in November 1994 up to and including the draw for the main online game on 9 March 2002 was £36,494,475,733.

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when she will give details of the outcome of her Department's discussions with national lottery distributors regarding increasing the efficiency of the distribution of lottery funding. [45716]

Mr. Caborn: The Department has agreed with distributors a series of measures with a view to halving the overall National Lottery Distribution Fund balance by 2004. We propose to identify any elements in the Statement of Financial Requirements or policy directions which hinder faster payment and a bolder forward commitment policy and make amendments where this is consistent with good financial management; and to review whether more discretionary powers need to be introduced into the financial directions to enable distributors to assess applications in a way more commensurate with the risk involved.

In addition, distributors have identified a range of methods which they may be able to use to reduce balances more quickly. These include adopting a bolder approach to commitment, leading to extra awards; improving systems for cash management; and reducing the time between an in-principle commitment being made and the first draw-down of funds. We will share best practice on measures employed by different distributors to reduce balances.

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what criteria will be used for choosing which authorities are eligible to receive lottery money through the National Lottery Fair Share initiative; and if she will make a statement. [45901]

Mr. Caborn: Those local authority districts which will benefit from Fair Share have already been chosen according to whether they are deprived and are receiving less than the median per capita amount of lottery funding.

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what steps she will take to help disadvantaged areas which do not receive a proportionate share of National Lottery awards and who have not been placed on the list of disadvantaged areas eligible for the National Lottery Fair Share initiative. [45900]

Mr. Caborn: Fair Share is one of several targeted initiatives operated by the lottery distributors. The Government are committed to ensuring that all areas benefit from lottery funding. We have challenged other lottery distributors to draw up their own lists of areas not receiving their fair share of lottery funding and target their resources on these.

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how she will ensure that disadvantaged areas receive a proportionate level of lottery funding after the completion of the National Lottery Fair Share initiative in 2005. [45899]

Mr. Caborn: We will consider what further steps might be taken once we have begun to evaluate the effectiveness of Fair Share.

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the cost is of setting up the National Lottery's joint community fund and New Opportunities Fund Fair Share project; if she will give a breakdown of these costs; and from which budget the costs will be taken. [45346]

Mr. Caborn: The New Opportunities Fund and the community fund are required to meet their running costs from their share of the National Lottery Distribution Fund. It is not possible at this stage to disaggregate the running costs that will accrue to the two distributors from administering Fair Share.

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport, pursuant to her answer of 18 March 2002, Official Report, column 45W, what consideration she gave to including Tewkesbury in the list of areas under the targeted lottery initiative. [46132]

Mr. Caborn: The selection of Fair Share areas was a matter for the community fund and the new opportunities fund, based on broad criteria set by the Government.

Tewkesbury was not selected as a Fair Share area because it is not one of the 100 most deprived local authority districts in England.

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport, pursuant to her answer of 18 March 2002, Official Report, column 45W, how much each of the 51 areas listed under the targeted lottery initiatives has received in National Lottery funding. [46131]

Mr. Caborn: The following table gives the value of lottery awards made in the 51 English Fair Share areas.

BBC

12. Mr. Leigh: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what plans her Department has for BBC finances. [43153]

Tessa Jowell: I have no plans to change the current financing arrangements for the BBC, but funding will be looked at as part of the process of reviewing the BBC's Charter, which expires in 2006.

International Year of Mountains

13. Tony Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what support the Department is giving to Cumbria for celebrations during the international year of the mountains. [43154]

Dr. Howells: I intend to visit the National Mountaineering Exhibition at the Rheged Discovery Centre in June to celebrate the Cumbrian Mountain Festival that is being held in association with the United Nations International Year of Mountains to boost sustainable tourism in the county.

Museums and Galleries

14. Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what action she plans to take in respect of museums in Cambridge following the museums and galleries task force. [43155]

Tessa Jowell: Resource: the Council for Museums, Libraries and Archives published on 7 March application forms and criteria for the selection of museums as regional hubs. Museum consortia in each region are invited to submit applications to Resource by 19 April. My Department is currently working with Resource to start implementing the Task Force recommendations with £10 million per annum which was allocated to Resource in the last spending review.

We will take the Task Force's recommendations into account in the current spending review, alongside other priorities.

James Purnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport whether she commissions independent assessments of how successfully the national museums and galleries meet their key performance indicators. [40332]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 6 March 2002]: My Department recognises its role in ensuring that the national museums and galleries which it sponsors provide reliable performance indicator data. The funding agreements which are in place with all of our sponsored museums and galleries now incorporate information on the process to be adopted in validating reports on performance against targets. In addition, we expect the internal auditors of our sponsored museums and galleries to provide independent assurance that the methods of data collection are in accordance with agreed definitions and that they allow credible performance reporting.

Sports Clubs

16. Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will make a statement on Government support for local sports clubs. [43157]

Mr. Caborn: Local amateur sports clubs make valuable contributions to improved health, the local economy and social inclusion. In order to help clubs attain the financial stability to develop these roles, my Department has been working with the Charity Commission and sports bodies on a possible tax exemption package that would extend charitable status to clubs on the grounds that they provide healthy recreation.

Healthy Living

17. Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what work her Department will carry out to support the Government's public health objective of promoting healthy living in 2002–03. [43158]

Tessa Jowell: My Department continues to support and emphasise the significant contribution sport, the arts and children's play provision can make to promoting a healthier society. Through our close involvement in the Cross-Cutting Review on Health Inequalities, we are also examining the ways in which our sectors can help to tackle the problems posed by health inequalities in this country.

Rugby League

18. Andy Burnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will make a statement on support for grassroots rugby league from the national lottery. [43159]

Mr. Caborn: Total funding received from the National Lottery in England for grassroots rugby league is £8,717,584. The responsibility for lottery awards rests with the independent distributing bodies, such as Sport England, who make their funding decisions independently of the Government.

Arts Education

20. Jonathan Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assessment she has made of the progress being made by the arts education pilot projects under the creative partnership scheme. [43161]

Tessa Jowell: Creative Partnerships is on course to begin in April when funding comes on stream. This new fund will offer school children in some of the most deprived areas in the country the opportunity to work with artists and other creative practitioners on sustained projects.

Football Grounds

22. Hugh Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what representations the Government have made to the Football Association and other football bodies about the sale of club grounds without making alternative provision for training and games. [43163]

Mr. Caborn: Neither I nor my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has made representations to the Football Association or the other football authorities about the sale of club grounds.

These are primarily commercial issues for clubs' managements. However, the Government fully appreciate that clubs' grounds are important parts of the communities they serve. That is why Supporters Direct was set up by the Government last year to advise and assist football supporters wishing to get involved in the responsible running of their football clubs.

Supporters Direct has recently been involved in setting up successful rescue packages for clubs whose primary assets, including their grounds, have been threatened.

Euro

23. Paul Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport whether she has met the English Tourist Council to discuss the acceptance of euro notes and coins. [43165]

Dr. Howells: No, I have not. The British Tourist Authority have, in consultation with the UK's tourism industry and HM Treasury, issued guidance entitled "The Euro—A guide for small tourism businesses" to assist tourism firms. I have arranged for copies to be deposited in the Libraries of the House.

Film School, Newport

24. Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will visit the Film School at Newport, Gwent. [43166]

Dr. Howells: My right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State has no current plans to visit the school.

Exercise

25. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will introduce an advertising campaign to encourage people to take up exercise and sport and to make the most of local council sporting facilities. [43167]

Mr. Caborn: I have no plans to introduce an advertising campaign to encourage people to take up exercise and sport and to make the most of local council sporting facilities.

Sport England's well publicised Active Sports initiative is a national programme designed to give eight to sixteen-year-olds the opportunity to enjoy their sport throughout the country. In addition Sport England's Active Communities initiative is seeking to encourage all sports providers to reach communities and individuals who have traditionally been excluded from sport or physical activity, and to encourage delivery within communities that do not have a strong sport and recreation infrastructure.

Regional Theatres

26. Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what steps the Government are taking to support regional theatres in Lancashire and the north-west. [43168]

Tessa Jowell: This is a matter for the Arts Council of England and the Regional Arts Boards. As a result of last year's Theatre Review an extra £2.8 million was allocated to theatre throughout the north-west arts region. By 2003–04 over £7.5 million will be spent in revenue funding for theatre, representing an increase of 77 per cent. over 2000–01.

Portable Antiquities

28. Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will make a statement on future funding for the portable antiquities scheme. [43170]

Tessa Jowell: I can confirm that my Department has agreed to fund all the present 14 posts for a further full year, pending the outcome of Resource's lottery bid.

Sports Coaching

21. Jim Dobbin: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will make a statement on the contribution of volunteers to sports coaching, with special reference to schools. [43162]

Mr. Caborn: My Department and the Home Office will shortly launch our joint Volunteering in Sport project. This project will make available £7 million of funding over the next two years to provide training and volunteering opportunities for people both young and old. The project will focus on existing School Sport Coordinator Partnerships where they exist. The trained volunteers are part of the Volunteer Investment Strategy and will form an additional resource to deliver the Government's commitment to an entitlement of a minimum of two hours per week high quality PE and sport to every pupil, by helping teachers run school sports clubs, festivals and competitions and supporting local primary school sport. Many of the volunteers will also be deployed in community sports clubs.

My Department and the Coaching Task Force are also currently exploring the opportunities for encouraging more parents and grandparents to become involved in coaching, particularly in relation to school sport.

Civil Servants

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will set out for each civil service grade within her (a) Department and (b) Department's executive agencies the (i) total number of staff employed, (ii) number aged (A) 16 to 25, (B) 26 to 35, (C) 36 to 45, (D) 46 to 60 and (E) over the age of 60 years, (iii) number of registered disabled and (iv) number of ethnic minorities. [39174]

Dr. Howells: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him by the Parliamentary Secretary, Cabinet Office on 13 March 2002, Official Report, column 1072W.

Sponsorship

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport which of her Department's projects have received sponsorship since 1997, including (a) details of the sponsor, (b) the nature of the project, (c) the date of the project, (d) the total cost of the project and (e) the amount of money involved in the sponsorship deal. [40825]

Dr. Howells: Details of the Department's projects which have benefited from sponsorship since 1997 are detailed in the table:

World Tourism Organisation

Janet Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what plans she has for UK membership of the World Tourism Organisation. [44612]

Dr. Howells: The Government do not believe that there would be value for money in joining the World Tourism Organisation, membership of which would cost around £200,000 a year. However, DCMS does take an interest in the work of the World Tourism Organisation and offers co-operation in areas such as statistics and best practice in environmentally sustainable development.

Janet Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what estimate she has made of the cost to the UK of membership of the World Tourism Organisation. [44613]

Dr. Howells: Membership of the Worlds Tourism Organisation is calculated by the WTO according to the level of economic development and the importance of tourism in each country. In 2000 the estimated cost to the UK of membership was around £200,000.

Historic Sites

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will list the sites of historic interest in Buckinghamshire which have received grant aid in the last five years, indicating (a) the date and (b) the amount awarded in each case. [43294]

Dr. Howells: The following table shows the grants which English Heritage has allocated to sites of historic interest in Buckinghamshire in the last five years.

Tourism Satellite Account

Janet Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what plans she has to establish a tourism satellite account in line with the recommendation of the Parliamentary Assembly of the Council of Europe. [44611]

Dr. Howells: We are actively considering developing at least some of the components of a Tourism Satellite Account, but it will be costly and will have to be considered alongside the other priorities as part of the current spending review.

Golden Jubilee

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many meetings the ministerial group for the Queen's Golden Jubilee has had; what the group discussed during meetings; how many members the group is comprised of; and if she will make a statement. [44585]

Tessa Jowell: There has been one meeting of the ministerial group for the Queen's Golden Jubilee, which took place on 12 April 2000 to consider the planning of the celebrations. Since then a number of other issues have been considered by the group. In the interests of speedy resolution, these issues were dealt with and cleared through correspondence. They are also kept informed of all major developments in this way. There are 23 members of the group.

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport which Department will pay for the Queen's Golden Jubilee medals; how much of the cost will be met by the public; and if she will make a statement. [44588]

Tessa Jowell: Responsible Government Departments and the devolved Administrations will bear the costs of their respective services' medals.

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if commemorative coins will be minted to celebrate the Queen's Golden Jubilee; and if she will make a statement. [44563]

Tessa Jowell: The Royal Mint announced details of the design for the Golden Jubilee commemorative crown on 12 September 2001. The commemorative coin has been available for purchase since January and has a face value of £5.00.

Ofcom

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what relationship Ofcom will have with the devolved assemblies. [44486]

Dr. Howells: The Communications White Paper stated that Ofcom would be expected to develop good links with the relevant policy committees and executives of the devolved assemblies and with representatives of the English regions. We will expect Ofcom to consult closely with the devolved assemblies on how best to establish the most meaningful relationships with them and to build on some of the arrangements which some of the existing regulators have already established, such as holding regular meetings with assembly officials and establishing regular links between senior Ofcom representatives and the assemblies themselves.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the relationship will be between Ofcom and the OFT; and in the event of a dispute on jurisdiction who will decide. [44487]

Dr. Howells: As the White Paper made clear, Ofcom will be able to exercise powers under the Competition Act 1998 and the Fair Trading Act 1973 concurrently with the Director General of Fair Trading, in respect of communications matters. The Government are confident that Ofcom and the OFT will be able to work closely and constructively together in the exercise of these powers. This would reflect the existing relationship between regulators with concurrent powers and the OFT. The Competition Act moreover makes provision for formal co-ordination between the OFT and those regulators who have concurrent powers under that Act, including co-ordination of case handling under the Competition Act 1998 (Concurrency) Regulations 2000. The regulations provide that in the event of a dispute between the Director General of Fair Trading and any regulator as to which should handle a particular case, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State will decide. To date my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has not been required to be involved in this way. The OFT and regulators have always been able to agree on who is best placed to deal with each case and therefore its allocation. The provisions for formal co-ordination will be applied to Ofcom in the same way as to other regulators having concurrent powers.

Communications White Paper

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what provision she plans to make for those (a) with disabilities, (b) with imperfect sight and (c) hard of hearing in implementing the White Paper on Communications. [44485]

Dr. Howells: The Government fully recognise the importance of access to communications services for people with disabilities.

As proposed in the White Paper, the forthcoming Communications Bill will extend to digital cable and digital satellite broadcasters the current requirements for broadcasters on digital terrestrial television to provide subtitling, sign language and audio description services on their channels.

More generally, Ofcom will be placed under a duty, wherever relevant, to have regard to the needs of persons with disabilities.

National Stadium

Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport whether EU directives for the administration of public projects apply to the building of the national stadium at Wembley; and if she will make a statement on the national stadium. [44445]

Mr. Caborn: Responsibility for the development of the National Stadium project lies with the Football Association and their wholly owned subsidiary company Wembley National Stadium Ltd. (WNSL). The FA are committed to making a significant equity investment in the project and to raising debt financing to fund the majority of construction and other related costs.

WNSL are required, under the terms of the lottery funding agreement concluded with Sport England, to fully comply with EU procurement legislation unless WNSL has been properly advised that EU procurement legislation does not apply. In such circumstances, the lottery funding agreement requires WNSL to adopt commercial competitive tendering procedures unless it can demonstrate to the satisfaction of Sport England that there is some overriding reason why that is not appropriate. I understand that WNSL's legal advisers advised WNSL in 1998 that EU procurement legislation does not apply to the national stadium project.

Mr. Bailey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what steps have been taken to ensure that an independent assessment is made of any future contract between Wembley National Stadium Ltd. and Multiplex to ensure value for money and conformity to best practice in corporate governance and procurement practice. [46246]

Mr. Caborn: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State set out the Government's position on the national stadium project to the House on 19 December 2001, Official Report, column 292. One of the conditions of Government support was that the Football Association and Wembley National Stadium Ltd. should commission an independent value for money assessment of the proposed contracts with Multiplex. That assessment is currently under way following the appointment by WNSL of Cyrill Sweet Ltd. to carry out this study. A copy of Cyrill Sweet Ltd.'s terms of reference were placed in the Library on 12 March.

Another of the Government conditions laid out on 19 December relates to corporate governance changes required of the Football Association and WNSL to produce a management structure capable of delivering a complex project within procedures acceptable to the public sector. The FA and WNSL are currently engaged in producing proposals to meet the Government's conditions and we expect the FA's work to be completed in April. The FA/WNSL proposals will be subject to scrutiny by Patrick Carter's review team and Sport England as well as by the Government.

Criminal Damage

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the cost has been of criminal damage to her Department's buildings in each of the last four years. [44827]

Dr. Howells: The Department for Culture, Media and Sport has no reported incidents of criminal damage at any building on the Departmental estate.

Crèche Facilities

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what crèche facilities are provided by her Department; and at what cost. [44860]

Dr. Howells: The Department offers holiday places at four Central London sites. The scheme operates during all main school holidays for children aged between five and 12 years. The cost per day is £26.00 of which the Department subsidises 50 per cent.

Correspondence

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the target time will be in 2002–03 for (a) Ministers to reply to letters from hon. Members and (b) officials in her Department to reply to letters received directly from members of the public. [44958]

Mr. Caborn: In 2002–03 we will continue to aim to answer all correspondence, whether it be from hon. Members or the general public, within 18 working days.

Landmark Projects

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the progress of each Landmark project supported by the Millennium Commission as part of the Millennium Celebration has been; which Landmark projects supported by the Millennium Commission have exceeded projected time and cost to be brought into operation; and if she will make a statement. [44734]

Tessa Jowell: This is a matter for the Millennium Commission. I will write to the hon. Member in my capacity as Chair of the Commission, and place copies of my reply in the Libraries of both Houses.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many, and which, Landmark projects depend on local authority money; how much money local authorities have provided; and if she will make a statement. [44744]

Tessa Jowell: This is a matter for the Millennium Commission. I will write to the hon. Member in my capacity as Chair of the Commission, and place copies of my reply in the Libraries of both Houses.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport which Landmark projects have failed to match the Millennium Commission funding with private finance; how much the shortfall is in each case; what has been done to fill the gap; and if she will make a statement. [44740]

Tessa Jowell: This is a matter for the Millennium Commission. I will write to the hon. Member in my capacity as Chair of the Commission, and place copies of my reply in the Libraries of both Houses.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport which Landmark projects (a) her Department and (b) the Millennium Commission have encouraged local authorities to support with council tax funds or their capital funding; how much money was provided; and if she will make a statement. [44742]

Tessa Jowell: I will write to the hon. Member in my capacity as Chair of the Commission, and place copies of my reply in the Libraries of both Houses.

Millennium Tower, Portsmouth

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much public money, excluding that provided by the Millennium Commission, has been spent on the Millennium Tower in Portsmouth; and if she will make a statement. [44743]

Tessa Jowell: I will write to the hon. Member in my capacity as Chair of the Commission, and place copies of my reply in the Libraries of both Houses.

Free Television Licences

Mr. Ivan Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many old age pensioners in the Harwich constituency have benefited from the introduction of free television licences. [45117]

Dr. Howells: TV Licensing, which administers the free television licence scheme for the BBC as Licensing Authority, is not able to provide geographical breakdowns of the number of free licences issued. However, estimates based on the 1991 Census indicate that there were approximately 12,900 people aged 75 or over in the Harwich constituency.

Register of Sports Facilities

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when she expects the register of sports facilities will be published; how this will be funded; and if she will make a statement. [45167]

Mr. Caborn: Information on sports facilities is currently held by a variety of organisations and a single database will enable more strategic Government investment in those areas and facilities which are most important. My Department is continuing discussions with Sport England on the scope, content, and cost of the proposed database and how the project will be taken forward. We will then be in a position to draw up a realistic timetable for the project.

Millennium Bridge

Mr. Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what public funds have been expended in rectifying the defects in the Millennium bridge. [45136]

Tessa Jowell: This is a matter for the Millennium Commission. I will write to the hon. Member in my capacity as Chair of the Commission, and place copies of my reply in the Libraries of both Houses.

Bisham Abbey

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will list the bodies consulted by (a) Sport England and (b) her Department prior to the agreement of proposals to redevelop Bisham Abbey National Sports Centre. [45427]

Mr. Caborn: Given the historic nature of Bisham Abbey, Sport England have undertaken extensive consultation on the redevelopment of the National Sports Centre. Among the organisations consulted have been national governing bodies of sport, local sports clubs and other interest groups. The governing bodies and local sports clubs include: English Cricket Board, English Hockey Association, British Judo Association, Amateur Rowing Association, Rugby Football Union, Lawn Tennis Association, BAWLA, Football Association, Bisham Abbey Squash Club and Bisham Abbey Golf Club. In addition the interest groups consulted include Windsor and Maidenhead District Council, Bisham Parish Council, Environment Agency, English Heritage, the Council for Protection of Rural England, Bisham Abbey User Committee and local residents.

Officials from my Department hold regular meetings with members of Sport England to discuss issues relating to the English Institute of Sport and the National Sports Centres, including Bisham Abbey.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what discussions she has had with Sport England on the re-development of Bisham Abbey National Sports Centre. [45446]

Mr. Caborn: Officials from my Department hold regular meetings with members of Sport England to discuss issues relating to the English Institute of Sport and the National Sports Centres, including Bisham Abbey.

Digital Heritage

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will make a statement on the preservation of the digital heritage of the United Kingdom. [45198]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 21 March 2002]: Digital publications are continuing to increase in number and importance. The present system of legal deposit requires printed publications to be deposited in the British Library. In July 1998 the Working Party on the Legal Deposit of Non-print Publications chaired by Sir Anthony Kenny reported to the then Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport. Copies of the report have been placed in the Library. The report makes a convincing case for moving towards legislation for the legal deposit of non-print material. My Department continues to seek a legislative slot in which to bring the matter before the House. In the meantime a voluntary code of practice is in operation.

The national archive of the records of central Government and the courts of law for the United Kingdom is the Public Record Office, for which the Lord Chancellor is responsible. It has already instituted an electronic records programme for selection and preservation of the records of central Government.

New Millennium Experience Company

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will list those individuals who have held shares in the New Millennium Experience Company since it became a non-departmental public body, and for each individual to state (a) the number of shares they held, (b) the percentage of the total shares in the company they held, (c) the date on which they became shareholders and (d) the date on which they ceased to be shareholders. [45199]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 21 March 2002]: The information is as follows:

	(a)	(b)	(c)	(d)
Right hon. Roger Freeman MP	2	100	February 1997	May 1997

Scottish Land Fund

Mr. Peter Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will list the grants made to date by the New Opportunities Fund through the Scottish Land Fund, the date of award and the amount awarded. [46233]

Mr. Caborn: In just under a year of operation, 47 grants worth a total of £4,838,472 have been made by the Scottish Land Fund using New Opportunities Fund funds. The table gives further details of all awards made to date.

Swimming

Ms Shipley: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when the Government will respond to the Select Committee on Culture, Media and Sport report "Testing the Waters: The Sport of Swimming". [46424]

Mr. Caborn: The Government's response to the report is being laid in the House today.

ELECTORAL COMMISSION COMMITTEE

Electoral Commission Plan (2002–07)

Mr. Watson: To ask the right hon. Member for Berwick-upon-Tweed, representing the Speaker's Committee on the Electoral Commission what the outcome was of the committee's consideration of the commission's plan for 2002–03 to 2006–07. [46333]

Mr. Beith: At its meeting on 13 February, the Speaker's Committee approved the Electoral Commission's Corporate Plan 2002–03 to 2006–07. The plan, which gives details of the commission's aims and objectives, was laid before the House today. Copies will be available in the Vote Office and it will be possible to view the plan on the commission's website: www.electoralcommission.org.uk.

PUBLIC ACCOUNTS COMMISSION

Individual Learning Accounts

37. Mr. Bacon: To ask the Chairman of the Public Accounts Commission if he will make a statement on the resources made available to the National Audit Office for its inquiries into the individual learning account scheme. [43180]

Mr. Alan Williams: The Public Accounts Commission has provided funding for the National Audit Office which is consistent with the completion of some 50 major reports a year. During the course of each year the balance of the programme of reports is adjusted to reflect emerging issues, such as the Individual Learning Account scheme to which the hon. Member refers.

CHURCH COMMISSIONERS

Contracts of Employment

40. Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the hon. Member for Middlesbrough, representing the Church Commissioners, if he will make a statement on clergy contracts of employment. [43183]

Mr. Bell: In general, clergy in the Church of England serving in parishes, cathedrals and dioceses are office holders and do not have contracts of employment. However, some clergy serving as chaplains do so under contacts of employment, and the same applies to some clergy who are on the staff of diocesan bodies, the Church's national institutions, or other bodies connected with the Church.

Final Salary Scheme

42. David Taylor: To ask the hon. Member for Middlesbrough, representing the Church Commissioners, what recent submissions relating to the future of the final salary scheme for retired clergy have been made to the Commissioners; and if he will make a statement. [43185]

Mr. Bell: The Church of England is undertaking wide-ranging consultation on this subject. As yet it is unclear whether or not there is any desire for a move away from the current defined benefit pension arrangements.

Funding (Diocesan Resources)

Mr. Lansley: To ask the hon. Member for Middlesbrough, representing the Church Commissioners, what estimate he has made of the increase in funding within diocesan resources required in 2002–03 to replace Church Commissioners' funding. [43181]

Mr. Bell: Following the Commissioners' good investment performance in recent years, they plan to distribute an extra £10 million for parish ministry over 2002–04 and will increase their transitional relief to assist dioceses and parishes in meeting contributions for clergy pension by the same amount. They continue to meet the full cost of clergy pensions for service prior to 1998.

The relationship between the Church's funding partners remains fluid and it is not particularly meaningful to express part of diocesan expenditure as a replacement for Commissioners' funding. I refer the hon. Member to the Commissioners' annual report and to our correspondence for a fuller account of these matters.

Church Repairs

Miss McIntosh: To ask the hon. Member for Middlesbrough, representing the Church Commissioners, what recent discussions he has had with the Chancellor of the Exchequer to discuss the administration of grants to churches to cover the VAT element of the cost of repairs. [43847]

Mr. Bell: I have had no discussions recently about the Listed Places of Worship Grant Scheme, which is managed by the Department for Culture, Media and Sport. However, I understand that a number of successful applications have already received moneys from the scheme.

Discussions with the Treasury continue on the wider question of a reduction of VAT payable on the repair and maintenance of listed church buildings. I understand the European Commission has indicated that it will consider this matter as part of its general review of reduced rates in 2003.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Civil Defence

Mr. Hawkins: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what changes he plans to (a) make and (b) discuss with his ministerial colleagues on the funding for local authorities in relation to their enhanced civil defence responsibilities. [44978]

Mr. Leslie: There have been no recent changes in the civil defence and emergency planning responsibilities of local authorities. The Government have decided to allocate a total of £18.97 million to local authorities in civil defence grant for 2002–03. Figures for subsequent years will be settled as part of this year's spending review.

Age Discrimination

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what his Department's policy is towards age discrimination. [42575]

Mr. Leslie: The Cabinet Office is an equal opportunities employer and is committed to a policy of equal opportunity for all.

It is the Department's policy that everyone should have equality of opportunity for employment and advancement on the basis of their ability, qualifications and suitability for work. There must be no discrimination on the grounds of age, disability, gender, marital status, sexual orientation, race, colour, nationality, ethnic origin or national origin.

The Cabinet Office's age retirement policy for grades below the senior civil service supports the recommendations of "Winning the Generation Game". Our normal age for retirement is 60 years but retention beyond this age up to age 70 is possible subject to departmental needs and continuing health and efficiency for most grades.

Yarl's Wood Fire

Andrew Selous: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will make it his policy that Bedfordshire does not suffer a reduction in its civil defence grant following the Yarl's Wood fire. [45007]

Mr. Leslie: In accordance with the Civil Defence (Grant) Act 2002, grant will be allocated in accordance with a nationwide formula designed to be fair to all authorities. An announcement on the formula and the allocations to individual authorities will be made shortly.

Regulatory Impact Assessment

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister, pursuant to the answer of 14 February 2002, Official Report, column 557W, for what reason the Government do not publish information on the relative performance of Government Departments with respect to regulatory impact assessment. [45494]

Mr. Leslie: The Government do not hold centrally information on the relative performance of Government Departments with respect to regulatory impact assessments.

Secondments

Dr. Cable: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the Cabinet Office policy is on the publishing of individual secondees' names; and if he will make a statement. [43668]

Mr. Leslie: My Department does not disclose names, under the Code of Practice on access to Government Information, exemption 12 "Privacy of Individuals".

Parental Leave Directive

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what estimate he has made of the (a) financial costs and (b) benefits to his Department of the Parental Leave Directive. [42480]

Mr. Leslie: The cost of the Department of the Parental Leave Directive is not held centrally, and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

The Cabinet Office currently has a number of policies and practices, including statutory entitlement to Parental Leave, that are designed to help staff strike a balance between their working and home responsibilities.

We believe that by offering such opportunities we are helping to aid recruitment and retention, improving morale and motivation, and decreasing staff absenteeism.

Human Rights Act

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many cases have been brought against his Department under the Human Rights Act 1998; and what has been the cost in (a) legal fees to defend cases and (b) compensation payments. [45071]

Mr. Leslie: My Department does not collect central records of cases in which the Human Rights Act 1998 is relied on. Human rights are now integrated in the general law and are rarely the sole basis for a challenge.

PFI/PPPs

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the difference was between the price offered in reaching preferred bidder stage and the final contract price for PPP contracts let by his Department in each of the last four years; and if he will make a statement. [45609]

Mr. Leslie: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him earlier today.

Stolen Equipment

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister, pursuant to the answer of 29 January 2002, Official Report, column 253–54W, on stolen equipment, whether the computer equipment stolen from his Department was (a) new and unused and (b) used; and what was the nature of the data stored on such items in each case. [42647]

The Deputy Prime Minister and First Secretary of State: Of the PCs and laptops stolen, 12 were new and unused. With regard to the used equipment, the data stored on the PCs would be limited to software, as files were stored on network servers. Laptops held software data and files; however, none of the files were of a sensitive nature.

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister, pursuant to his answer of 29 January 2002, Official Report, columns 253–54W, on stolen equipment, what criminal proceedings have been undertaken for cases of theft against his Department, stating in each case (a) whether the proceedings (i) led to a criminal conviction and (ii) were unsuccessful, (b) the cost incurred by his Department in pursuing a conviction and (c) the value of items recovered; and if he will make a statement. [41499]

The Deputy Prime Minister and First Secretary of State: Internal investigations of each reported case are carried out; however, to date no criminal proceedings have been undertaken in relation to any of the thefts recorded. None of the items has been recovered.

Celebrations

Tim Loughton: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what arrangements his Department has made to celebrate (a) St. Patrick's Day, (b) St. George's Day, (c) St. Andrew's Day and (d) Her Majesty the Queen's Golden Jubilee; and how his Department celebrated St. David's Day. [42297]

Mr. Leslie: The Cabinet Office has no specific plans to celebrate St. Patrick's Day, St. George's Day or St. Andrew's Day. The Union flag will, however, be flown from the Department's buildings on the latter two days. Together with St. David's Day, these are named days on which the flag must be flown from all Government buildings.

On arrangements for Her Majesty the Queen's Golden Jubilee, I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport, my right hon. Friend the Member for Dulwich and West Norwood (Tessa Jowell) to the hon. Member for South Suffolk (Mr. Yeo) on 11 February 2002, Official Report, columns 58–59W. Consideration is being given to flying the Union flag for the Jubilee, but in any event it will be flown on Coronation Day, 2 June, since this is a named day.

Other than by flying the Union flag, the Department has made no special arrangements for celebrating St. David's Day.

Public Bodies (Appointments)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if there is an age limit for (a) men and (b) women, for appointments to a public body in England and Wales; and if he will make a statement. [43940]

Mr. Leslie: The Code of Practice of the Commissioner for Public Appointments states that all public appointments should be governed by the overriding principle of selection based on merit, and that care must be taken, at every stage, not to discriminate on a number of grounds including age and gender.

Mr. Forth: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will list the appointments made by his Department since 1 May 1997 of chairmen of (a) non-departmental public bodies, (b) commissions, (c) inquiries, (d) agencies and (e) task forces; and if he will list their (i) term of office, (ii) salary and (iii) known political affiliation (A) past and (B) present. [33880]

The Deputy Prime Minister and First Secretary of State: The following table includes information on appointments made to public bodies sponsored by Cabinet Office and appointments made by Ministers in Cabinet Office. The table does not include appointments to the Advisory Committees on Justices of the Peace in Lancashire, Greater Manchester and Merseyside, made by my noble Friend, Lord Macdonald of Tradeston and his predecessors as Minister for the Cabinet Office in the capacity of Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster.

There were no such appointments to commissions, inquiries or agencies.

Information on political affiliation is not collected.

Information on the number, remit and membership of task forces, ad hoc advisory groups and reviews has been published by the Cabinet Office on a regular basis. The first report was published on 11 January 2000 and gives information for the period between 1 May 1997 and 31 October 1999. A second report was published on 27 July 2000, and covered the period 1 November 1999 to 30 April 2000. A third report was published on 13 December 2000 covering the period 1 May 2000 to 31 October 2000. The most recent report, "Task Forces, Ad Hoc Advisory Groups and Reviews", was issued in October 2001, and covers the period of the financial year 2000–01. Copies of these reports have been placed in the Libraries of the House.

Advertising

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will list the publicity and advertising campaigns run by his Department in each of the last four years, specifying the (a) purpose, (b) cost to public funds, (c) number of staff involved and (d) method of evaluation in each case. [39097]

The Deputy Prime Minister and First Secretary of State: The information requested is not held centrally, and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

For details of advertising expenditure over the last four years I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him today (PQ ref. 36166).

Publicity Expenditure

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what assessment he has made of the total real terms expenditure of his Department, its agencies and non-departmental public bodies on publicity in each of the years (a) 1997–98, (b) 1998–99, (c) 1999–2000, (d) 2000–01 and (e) 2001–02 (i) to date and (ii) as estimated for the whole of the present year; and if he will break these figures down to indicate expenditure on (A) advertising and (B) press and public relations. [36166]

The Deputy Prime Minister and First Secretary of State: The information is not available in the form requested and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Details of departmental expenditure for advertising over the last four years and to date is as follows:

1997–98	144
1998–99	138
1999–2000	262
2000–01	464
2001-to date[1]	163

[1] This includes financial information from 1 April 2001 to 28 February 2002.

The increase in expenditure from 1998–99 to 2000–01 from £138,000 to £464,000 is due to expenditure on recruitment advertising for posts within the Department. These posts range from administration and junior management level through to the senior civil service. Also included is recruitment advertising expenditure for specialist placements within the Government Information and Development Centre.

Equipment Leasing

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will list the equipment leasing arrangements entered into by his Department in each of the last four years; and what the cost is to public funds in each case. [39077]

Mr. Leslie: The following leasing arrangements have been entered into by my Department and its agencies in each of the last four financial years.

	1997–98	1998–99	1999–2000	2000–01	Total
Vehicles	10,089	14,064	51,397	40,949	116,499
Reprographic equipment[1]	160,000	414,155	215,514	514,867	1,304,536
Other equipment[2]	8,148	48,073	21,160	94,248	171,629
IT[3]	2,835	167,606	5,732	29,763	205,936
	181,072	643,898	293,803	679,827	1,798,600

[1] Reprographic equipment includes photocopiers and multi-function devices.
[2] Other equipment includes post room equipment, franking machines and fax machines.
[3] IT includes PCs and data tracking equipment.
Notes:
Women's Unit, Women's National Commission, PIU and CMPS joined Cabinet Office.
Office of e-envoy established.
All figures provided are for the full leasing term. They have been entered under the financial year in which the leasing arrangement was awarded.

Equipment should be leased when it offers better value for money than direct purchase bearing in mind the products whole life costs and quality to meet (but not exceed) the requirement. These costs include maintenance, running and disposal costs, not simply initial costs.

Press and Public Relations

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the annual budget for communications activities, including press, public relations, marketing and internal communications, was for his Department for each financial year from 1997–98 to 2001–02. [39925]

Mr. Leslie: The majority of the Cabinet Office's press office and internal communications activity, as well as management of its official website, is dealt with by the Department's Communication Group. Where appropriate the group also handles public relations.

The Group's annual budget, net of receipts, for each of the financial years since 1997–98 is as follows:

	Annual budget net of receipts
1997–98	1,629,000.00
1998–99	1,568,000.00
1999–2000	1,918,000.00
2000–01	2,400,000.00
2001–02	2,558,000.00

The increase in the budget, particularly between 1998 and 2001, is largely due to an increase in Cabinet Office activity and responsibilities relating to establishing new Units, increases in ministerial posts and the resultant additional communication activity.

For expenditure on marketing and external public relations, I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Buckingham (Mr. Bercow) on 29 January 2002, Official Report, column 252W.

Accountancy Contracts

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will list the contracts agreed by his Department with the five largest accountancy firms since May 1997; and what was the total value of contracts with each. [42111]

Mr. Leslie: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave the hon. Member for Bath (Mr. Foster) on 14 February 2002, Official Report, column 563W.

Workplace Smoking

Ms Walley: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister when he expects to announce the outcome of the consultation by the panel for regulatory accountability in respect of the approved code of practice on workplace smoking. [45205]

Mr. Leslie: The Panel for Regulatory Accountability did not undertake any public consultation in respect of the approved code of practice on workplace smoking.

However, the Health and Safety Commission completed a consultation exercise on whether to introduce an Approved Code of Practice, and announced, in September 2000, that it favoured the introduction of an Approved Code of Practice.

The Government is giving careful consideration to the Commission's proposals. As part of this process, the Health and Safety Commission has been asked to consider further both the implications of an Approved Code of Practice on the hospitality sector and small businesses generally, and the role the Public Places Charter could play.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Fair Trade

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the value of fairly traded (a) tea and (b) coffee used in his Department in each of the last five years. [17562]

Angela Eagle: The Home Office has not awarded any central contracts to purchase fairly traded products over the past five years. However each individual directorate and unit within the Department can purchase fairly traded tea and coffee from those companies that supply fair trade products.

The Department fully supports ethical trading in mainstream business and fair trade products will be purchased when they meet the criteria on procurement of goods and services.

The Home Office will be publishing an article on fair trade in the next edition of "Purchasing Matters", an internal periodical for all procurement staff. In addition the Home Office will be holding a purchasing symposium on the issue of fair trade in April. Both these initiatives will encourage fair trade purchasing in the Department.

Asylum Accommodation Centres

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what consideration his Department gave to the capacity to gain rapid planning permission when identifying sites for the proposed asylum accommodation centres. [35640]

Angela Eagle: In identifying potential sites for accommodation centres, consideration has been given to a wide range of issues including planning considerations.

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which site in the Bicester area has been identified as a potential location for an accommodation centre for asylum seekers. [37078]

Angela Eagle: The prospective accommodation centre site in Bicester is on the land vacated by Ministry of Defence Logistics.

Mr. Woodward: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 5 March 2002, Official Report, column 160W, on facilities at accommodation centres, what assessment has been made of the costs of providing transport for asylum seekers housed in accommodation centres to ensure they receive needed services which are not provided in-house at accommodation centres. [43024]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 18 March 2002]: We have said we will provide for transport where necessary. We are considering the costs, which will depend on the location of the sites and the exact range of facilities on-site.

Yarl's Wood

Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his oral statement on the fire at Yarl's Wood removal centre, 25 February 2002, Official Report, column 441, what representations he has received on access to the site by Bedfordshire fire and police services; and if he will make a statement. [41243]

Angela Eagle: In the immediate aftermath of the events at Yarl's Wood on 14–15 February 2002 a number of anecdotal claims were made in the media and elsewhere that the emergency services could not gain immediate access to the site. To date, these claims have not been substantiated. It is likely that they arise from the fact that, on arrival at the scene, the first priority for the police was to establish perimeter security and also that firefighters could not be deployed within the site until a degree of order had been re-established. These issues will, of course, be considered by the separate inquiries being conducted by the Home Office, Bedfordshire Police, Bedfordshire Fire and Rescue Service, and Group 4.

Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will provide a breakdown of the asylum seekers who were detained at Yarl's Wood removal centre on 14 February by (a) nationality, (b) gender, (c) length of detention, (d) the stage of application and immigration status at the time of application and (e) those aged under 18; and if he will make a statement. [41148]

Angela Eagle: The information requested is not readily available and could be obtained only by examination of individual case files.

Andrew Selous: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will ensure that the on-going policing requirements at the National Detention Centre of Yarl's Wood will not fall exclusively upon the Bedfordshire constabulary; [40851]

(2) if he will ensure that the (a) additional police costs and (b) costs incurred by retained firemen who have assisted with the Yarl's Wood fire will not be borne by the local authorities in Bedfordshire. [40853]

Angela Eagle: The Department is in discussion with Bedfordshire Police Authority about the policing costs of Yarl's Wood. The Government's position on this is clear. We will take whatever advice is necessary, and we will work with the police authority to protect their interests and those of the people they serve in Bedfordshire.

Policy responsibility for the funding of the fire service rests with my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions (Mr. Byers).

Ministerial Design Champion

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what meetings the Ministerial Design Champion for his Department has attended in her capacity as Design Champion in the last month; and if he will make a statement. [41960]

Angela Eagle: Ministerial Design Champions meet at approximately four-month intervals. I, as Ministerial Design Champion for the Home Office, attended the most recent meeting on 17 January 2002. The next meeting will take place on 22 May 2002. The Design Champions Officials Group, which works to the Ministerial Champions Group, meets at regular intervals to support the work of Ministers.

I fully support the measures to underline the Government's commitment to the Better Public Buildings Initiative. My officials are working to deliver the Home Office action plan and I am pleased to have received a presentation from representatives of the Commission for Architecture and the Built Environment (CABE), who outlined ways in which they can work with my officials on future design and construction across the Home Office estate. I have encouraged regular dialogue, both with CABE and other Government Departments, to address the common goals and to promote the sharing of best practice wherever possible.

Superintendent Ali Dizaei

Mr. Salter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many officers are allocated to the investigation into the affairs of Superintendent Ali Dizaei. [42745]

Mr. Denham: The Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis informs me that 12 officers are currently allocated to the investigation of the affairs of Superintendent Ali Dizaei.

Metropolitan Police Service

Mr. Salter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which (a) members of the Metropolitan Police Independent Advisory Group, (b) business associates of those members and (c) companies related to them have been in paid employment of the Metropolitan Police service. [42741]

Mr. Denham: The Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis informs me that the operating protocols of the Independent Advisory Group require members to declare any relevant pecuniary interest. Two members of the Independent Advisory Group are directors of Ionann Management Consultants Ltd., the company under contract to the Home Office to provide specialist support to the police service on community and race relations training. The other detailed information requested by the hon. Member is not collected by the Metropolitan Police Service.

Metropolitan Police (Internal Investigation)

Mr. Salter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will conduct an independent inquiry into the manner in which the Metropolitan police's Internal Investigation Command (CIB3) investigates black police officers. [42743]

Mr. Denham: We are currently considering representations on this issue from the National Black Police Association.

Experience Corps

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what initiatives are being undertaken by the experience corps volunteering in the constituency of Buckingham. [43287]

Angela Eagle: The Experience Corps Company began the implementation of this initiative in November 2001. This is across the nine English Government regions, five of which have operations under way. I understand that the experience corps company will launch in the south-east region, which includes Buckingham, during the spring.

It will be for the company to decide what initiatives it develops in this area in line with its targets and objectives agreed with the Home Office.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the experience corps that have been set up in the constituency of Buckingham; and what total funding each corps has received. [43288]

Angela Eagle: The experience corps is a single initiative, which began its operations in England in November 2001. The experience corps will be launched in the south-east region, which includes Buckingham, during the spring.

The level of funding for the initiative in Buckinghamshire is a matter for the experience corps company to decide in line with objectives and targets agreed with the Home Office.

Metropolitan Police (Ethnic Officers)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many Black and Asian police officers are serving in each of the Metropolitan police divisions covering the Greater London area. [43013]

Mr. Denham: The information requested has been provided by the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis and reflects the position on 14 March 2002.

Armed Robberies

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many armed robberies have been committed in (a) England and Wales and (b) Greater London in each of the last three years. [43018]

Mr. Denham: The number of robberies using firearms is given in the table:

Number of robberies using firearms (including air weapons)

Year (ending March)	England and Wales	Greater London[1]
1998–99	2,973	1,138
1999–2000	3,922	1,695
2000–01	4,081	1,424

[1] Metropolitan Police and City of London police force areas. There was a boundary change on 1 April 2000 in which parts of the Metropolitan Police area were transferred to Essex, Hertfordshire and Surrey, so that these police force areas followed county boundaries thereafter.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many asylum seekers have been detained at Oakington since its opening; and of these how many have (a) left Oakington for accommodation provided by NASS, (b) left Oakington for other accommodation and (c) been detained in other establishments immediately after leaving Oakington. [42948]

Angela Eagle: 11,895 principal asylum applicants were accepted at Oakington between 20 March 2000 and 31 December 2001. Provisional data, which is subject to revision, show that approximately 20 per cent. of these were detained in other establishments immediately after leaving Oakington. Corresponding information about the destination of those released on temporary admission on leaving Oakington is not presently available.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many asylum seekers are awaiting decisions as to whether their application for asylum has been accepted. [43017]

Angela Eagle: There were 39,400 asylum applications awaiting an initial decision on 31 December 2001, less than half the 87,000 on 31 December 2000. This figure relates to the number of cases ie the number of principal applicants.

Information on the number of cases awaiting an initial decision (including work in progress) is published quarterly on the Home Office website at http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/immigration1.htm.

Mr. Coleman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what financial support in vouchers and cash is provided by NASS to support asylum seekers. [43239]

Angela Eagle: Column A of the table sets out current levels of financial support. This is provided in vouchers and includes one for £10 which can be exchanged for cash. Column B of the table sets out the level of support which will be provided with effect from 8 April 2002. This support will be provided wholly in cash.

	Column A	Column B
Qualifying couple	57.37	59.26
Lone parent aged 18 or over	36.54	37.77
Single person aged 25 or over	36.54	37.77
Single person aged at least 18 but under 25	28.95	29.89
Person aged at least 16 but under 18[1]	31.75	32.50
Person aged under 16	30.95	33.50

[1] Except a member of a qualifying couple.

Asylum seekers in receipt of the full support package (accommodation and subsistence) receive fully furnished accommodation including cooking utensils. Council tax and utilities are paid for centrally.

Mr. Leigh: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many asylum seekers are resident in (a) the Gainsborough constituency and (b) Lincolnshire. [44643]

Angela Eagle: The information is not available in the form requested. We currently only have statistics on the number of asylum seekers supported directly by the National Asylum Support Service (NASS).

The only cluster area to which NASS disperses asylum seekers in Lincolnshire is Lincoln. As at the end of December 2001, 70 asylum seekers (including dependants) were being supported in NASS accommodation in Lincoln. Some asylum seekers supported by NASS find their own accommodation and receive subsistence only support (vouchers) from NASS. From available information, as at the end of December 2001, there were 500 asylum seekers (including dependants) in receipt of subsistence only support (vouchers) in the East Midlands Region (which includes Lincolnshire). Figures are not currently available by constituency for those asylum seekers supported by the NASS.

Mr. Leigh: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many asylum seekers whose applications have been refused have been removed from the United Kingdom during the last year for which figures are available. [44642]

Angela Eagle: Provisionally, there were 9,285 principal asylum applicants (to the nearest five) removed from the United Kingdom in 2001. Further information is given in the table.

Asylum removals in 2001[1,2]

	Principal applicants removed	Dependants removed[3]	Total asylum seekers removed
Q1	2,070	n/a	n/a
Q2	2,375	215	2,590
Q3	2,385	355	2,745
Q4	2,450	485	2,935

[1] Provisional figures, rounded to the nearest five. Figures may not sum due to rounding.
[2] Includes persons departing 'voluntarily' after enforcement action had been initiated against them and persons leaving under Assisted Voluntary Return Programmes run by the International Organisation for Migration (IOM).
[3] Data on dependants of asylum seekers removed have only been collected since April 2001.

Information on the number of asylum removals is published on a quarterly basis. Information for the first quarter (January to March) of 2002 will be published on 31 May 2002 on the Home Office Research, Development and Statistics Directorate website http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/immigration1.html.

Mrs. Ellman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he last received a letter from the chief constable of Merseyside concerning the future housing of asylum seekers in Landmark and Inn on the Park in Everton, Liverpool; and if he will make a statement. [44105]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 18 March 2002]: A letter from the chief constable of Merseyside police concerning the future housing of asylum seekers in Landmark and Inn on the Park in Everton, Liverpool was received on 12 March 2002. We are reviewing the situation in the light of his comments.

Metropolitan Police (Racism)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many complaints of allegations of racism have been made against officers serving in the Metropolitan police in the last 12 months. [43015]

Mr. Denham: Data are collected centrally on a financial year basis for racial discrimination. In the 12 months from April 2000 to March 2001, the Metropolitan police recorded 352 complaints of racial discrimination.

Wheel Clamping

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he plans to introduce legislation on wheel clamping. [43012]

Mr. Denham: Under the Private Security Industry Act 2001 anyone engaged in wheel clamping by way of business or employment or for monetary gain (as well as other designated groups) will need to obtain a licence from the Security Industry Authority. The authority will begin operations in 2003 and will have wheel clamping as one of its priority areas.

Charity Commission

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the progress of the Charity Commission investigation into organisations that operate within charitable rules promoting Islamic fundamentalism and raising funds for proscribed organisations. [43480]

Angela Eagle: This is a matter for the Charity Commission as the Government Department responsible for charities in England and Wales. The Director of Operations at the Charity Commission wrote to my hon. Friend on 11 March 2002.

Correspondence

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the hon. Member for Walthamstow will receive a reply to his letters regarding Mr. M. Amin (A466239), sent on 12 October 2000 and 14 November 2001. [43774]

Angela Eagle: I wrote to my hon. Friend on 22 March 2002. I am sorry I did not send an earlier reply.

Animal Experiments

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to set up a royal commission inquiry into animal experiments. [43969]

Angela Eagle: The Government have not ruled out a Royal Commission but strongly believe that resources can best be used to make immediate improvements to the operation of the 1986 Act and to promote the fullest application of the 3Rs—replacing the use of animals with alternative methods; reducing the number of animals needed for a particular purpose and refining the procedures to minimise suffering.

In this context, the Animal Procedures Committee is currently considering the responses to a public consultation paper as part of its review of the cost/benefit assessment of applications for authority to use animals in scientific procedures. As part of this work, the committee plans to produce a statement on the validity of animal experiments. I expect to receive its report in the next few months.

The House of Lords has also established a Select Committee on the use of animals in scientific procedures and is currently gathering evidence.

Foster Carers

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he plans to allow non-working foster carers the opportunity to earn credits for national insurance purposes. [34630]

Mr. McCartney: I have been asked to reply.

Foster carers whose allowance contains a reward element are liable to pay national insurance contributions. Those who have no liability may choose to pay voluntary contributions. We will keep these arrangements under review as we do with all rules relating to benefits.

Golden Jubilee

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what events (a) he is and (b) other Ministers in his Department are planning to attend as part of the Golden Jubilee celebrations; and what events his Department is planning to arrange to celebrate the Golden Jubilee. [33247]

Mr. Blunkett [holding answer 4 February 2002]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (Tessa Jowell), on 11 February 2002, Official Report, column 58W.

Passport Service

Ms Coffey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the United Kingdom Passport Service intends to publish its corporate and business plan 2002 to 2007. [46320]

Angela Eagle: The United Kingdom Passport Service corporate and business plan has been published today and I am pleased to say that copies of the plan have been placed in the Library.

Criminal Records Bureau

Ms Coffey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the Criminal Records Bureau intends to publish its corporate and business plan 2002 to 2007. [46321]

Angela Eagle: The Criminal Records Bureau corporate and business plan has been published today and I am pleased to say that copies of the plan have been placed in the Library.

Diabetes (Guidelines)

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to change his guidelines to the police on diabetes. [44489]

Mr. Denham [holding answer 19 March 2002]: The guidelines on diabetes are currently under review by independent medical experts as part of the Home Office's National Recruitment Standards project. This work aims to ensure that occupational medical standards for police recruitment are evidence-based, job-related and not unfairly discriminatory. The new standards are expected to be applied consistently by the 43 forces of England and Wales.

The medical review will also take into account the implications of the proposed extension of the employment related provisions of the Disability Discrimination Act to the police.

Recommendations on proposed new medical standards should be available for consultation by July/August 2002.

Seafarer's Work Permit

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what his policy is on the extension of the work permit regime to include seafarers serving on one-port voyages. [43595]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 20 March 2002]: In June 2000, the work permit arrangements in place for non-European economic areas seafarers engaged in domestic ferry services and dredging operations were extended to include those engaged on scheduled domestic freight services. This has been enforced with effect from 1 April 2001, following a period of flexibility to allow shipping companies to adjust their staffing patterns to take account of the revised arrangements.

Consideration of whether to extend the work permit arrangements to cover one-port voyages is continuing. A decision will be made in due course in the light of all the available information, including legal advice received and consultations with officials in the Department for Transport, Local Government and the Regions.

Entitlement Cards

Mr. Letwin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if Her Majesty's Government are investigating (a) privacy-enhancing technologies and (b) secret-key certificates in its work on developing entitlement cards. [40864]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 7 March 2002]: My officials have engaged in wide discussion in their work on entitlement cards. In particular, they have worked closely with the Office of the e-Envoy where relevant work on privacy enhancing technologies and secret-key certificates is being undertaken in the context of the development of electronic Government services.

Family Visit Visas

Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will give a breakdown by nationality of (a) acceptances and (b) refusals for family visit visa applications in the last six months for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [44443]

Mr. Bradshaw: I have been asked to reply.

We do not collect statistics on the nationalities of applicants.

Statistical information on the number of family visit applications issued and refused on a monthly basis is only available, from those posts which provide monthly statistical information (110 largest posts in 2001 and 111 in 2002). These figures are in the tables.

The remaining posts submit information on an annual basis; this is not broken down into months. The annual return will be issued later this month, with replies from missions expected at the end of April 2002.

Children's Rights

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the United Kingdom will ratify the European Convention on the exercise of children's rights. [43939]

Ms Rosie Winterton: I have been asked to reply.

Of the 43 member states of the Council of Europe only Cyprus, Greece, Latvia, Poland and Slovenia have ratified the Convention on the Exercise of Children's Rights. A new Council of Europe Convention on Contact with Children is expected to be adopted shortly. Both of these conventions include provisions for children who may wish to be heard or represented as a party to the proceedings so the Government intend to look at both of them together.

Public Transport (Assaults)

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many assaults there have been on (a) crew and (b) passengers while travelling on public services in Staffordshire in the last 12 months. [43958]

Ms Keeble: I have been asked to reply.

In returns to the Department, bus operators in Staffordshire reported 12 assaults on bus crew in the year 2000; data are not yet available for 2001. Information concerning assaults on bus passengers in Staffordshire is not available. The British Transport police have advised that in the last 12 months five assaults on staff and seven on passengers were reported on the railways in Staffordshire.

Dog Ownership

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if the Government plans to introduce licensing for dog ownership. [43966]

Mr. Meacher: I have been asked to reply.

The Government do not plan to introduce licensing for dog ownership—the previous dog licensing system ceased in 1988 because it cost more to administer than the revenue it produced. DEFRA promotes responsible dog ownership through byelaws, education and publicity.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Global Crossing

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the dates of meetings that (a) special advisers and (b) Ministers in his Department have had since 1 January 1999 with representatives of Global Crossing; and if he will make a statement. [34058]

Mr. MacShane: No Ministers of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, or their special advisers, have had meetings with representatives of Global Crossing since 1 January 1999.

Air Conditioning

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which consultant was used to advise on the installation of air conditioning during the recent refurbishment of GCHQ. [41163]

Mr. Straw: The most recent refurbishment work at a GCHQ premises, involving the provision of air-conditioning, engaged the services of W. S. Atkins as consultant.

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether an installer capable of installing not-in-kind air conditioning was invited to quote for the recent refurbishment contract for GCHQ; and if he will make a statement. [41165]

Mr. Straw: In line with Government policy, contracts for GCHQ are let on the basis of a main contractor providing goods and services via sub-contractors, (including in this case the provision of air conditioning). It is for those specialists to determine solutions which may, or may not, be on a like for like basis.

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what measures were taken to ensure that the consultant advising on the installation of air conditioning during the recent refurbishment of GCHQ was aware of the Government's policy on the use of hydrofluorocarbon refrigerants in air conditioning; and if he will make a statement on the measures taken by the consultant to source practical and safe alternatives to hydrofluorocarbon-based air conditioning. [41164]

Mr. Straw: GCHQ ensured that the consultant complied fully with Government policy on refrigerants, which supports the phase-out timetable for ozone-depleting agents—including hydrochlorofluorocarbon (HCFC) and chlorofluorocarbon (CFC)—as agreed in the Montreal Protocol of 1987, and the subsequent revisions laid down by European Commission Regulation 594–91. The refrigerant chosen for the air conditioning plant used in the refurbishment was R407C (which is HFC-based and is therefore not ozone-depleting) and all other materials were CFC-free. This is acceptable under the relevant legislation.

Staff Numbers

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many staff have been employed by his Department in each of the last 10 years. [42467]

Mr. Bradshaw: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Secretary, Cabinet Office on 19 March 2002, Official Report, column 296W.

Weapons of Mass Destruction

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which countries have weapons of mass destruction. [43089]

Mr. Bradshaw: Under the terms of the nuclear non-proliferation treaty, the United Kingdom, the United States, France, China and Russia are legally entitled to possess nuclear weapons.

Additionally, India and Pakistan have tested nuclear devices. We continue to encourage Israel to resolve international concerns about its nuclear status by acceding to the nuclear non-proliferation treaty as a non-nuclear weapons state. We also know that Iraq possesses significant biological and chemical weapons capabilities and, were UN sanctions to be lifted, we believe it could develop a nuclear weapon within five years.

There are four States Parties to the Chemical Weapons Convention (The US, Russia, India and another State Party) that have declared possession of chemical weapons. They are currently in the process of destroying them in accordance with their obligations under the convention.

We are also aware of, and very concerned by, persistent reports that Iran, The Democratic People's Republic of Korea, Libya and Syria are pursuing programmes to develop WMD and the means for their delivery.

Israel

Richard Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Government of Israel concerning the implementation of United Nations Security Council Resolution 1322 with respect to adhering to the Fourth Geneva Convention. [43485]

Mr. Bradshaw: The UK along with our EU partners reaffirmed the applicability of the Fourth Geneva Convention to the Occupied Territories, including East Jerusalem at the reconvened conference of High Contracting Parties to the Fourth Geneva Convention in Geneva on 5 December 2001, and, in both the Conference Declaration and in the EU statement, condemned the indiscriminate and disproportionate use of force to contain violence, in line with UN Security Council Resolution 1322.

Richard Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what investigations he has made into Israeli forces' detention, since 12 March, of the British citizen Patricia Rantisi and their occupation of her Ramallah apartment; and what representations he is making to the Government of Israel on the subject. [44672]

Mr. Bradshaw: Our embassy in Tel Aviv have raised concerns with the Israeli Defence Force (IDF) about the plight of all British nationals in the occupied territories. Consular officials in Jerusalem kept in regular contact with British nationals trapped in Ramallah between 12 and 15 March, including speaking by telephone to Mrs. Rantisi.

On 14 March, the Permanent Under Secretary of State at the Foreign and Commonwealth Office delivered a demarche in the name of my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary to the Israeli ambassador to London calling for IDF co-operation over the plight of British nationals in Ramallah. The embassy in Tel Aviv has also raised Mrs. Rantisi's plight with the Israeli Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

Contracts

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the 30 largest contracts awarded by his Department from (a) May 1997 to April 1998, (b) May 1998 to April 1999, (c) May 1999 to April 2000, (d) May 2000 to April 2001 and (e) May 2001 to the latest date for which figures are available, stating in each case the values of the contracts and the companies with which the contracts were placed. [43674]

Mr. MacShane: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for North Tayside (Mr. Peter Wishart) on 20 March 2002, Official Report, column 385–86W.

Civil Servants (Education)

Mr. Davidson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what proportion (a) in the last year for which figures are available, (b) five years ago and (c) 10 years ago of senior civil servants in his Department attended (i) independent and (ii) state schools; and if he will make a statement. [43856]

Mr. Bradshaw: The information requested cannot be provided except at disproportionate cost. The Foreign and Commonwealth Office's manpower system does hold data on education details but information on the schools and type of school that staff attended is incomplete. In its recruitment policy, the Foreign and Commonwealth Office aims to reflect the diversity of British society.

British Detainees (Guantanamo Bay)

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he has received clarification from the detaining power as to the legal status of British detainees at Camp X-Ray; and if British detainees at Camp X-Ray may be removed to other jurisdictions without his knowledge and approval. [44476]

Mr. Bradshaw: We continue to ask the US authorities for clarification of the position of British detainees in Guantanamo Bay, including their status and the legal procedure to which they might be subject.

In response to our approaches, the US Government has given us the assurance that they will treat all of the detainees humanely and consistently within the principles of the Geneva Convention.

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether (a) the UK Government and (b) its agencies has been offered access to evidence gathered from British detainees at Camp X-Ray by the detaining power. [44457]

Mr. Bradshaw: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave him on 12 March 2002, Official Report, column 867W.

Drug Trafficking

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer to the right hon. Member for Devizes (Mr. Ancram) of 11 March 2002, Official Report, column 691W, on drug trafficking, what anti-drugs assistance has been given to countries in south-west and central Asia; and what assistance has been given for border security and surveillance in those countries. [44711]

Mr. MacShane: We have allocated approximately £4.5 million for counter-narcotics projects in central and south-east Asia in financial year 2002–03.

This region has already benefited significantly from FCO funding. The main recipients for the financial years 1998–2002 have been Iran (approximately £2.9 million, mostly via UNDCP) and the five Central Asian Republics (approximately £500,000).

FCO overseas anti-drugs assistance is targeted at improving law enforcement capacities in the main producing and trafficking countries which pose a direct drugs treat to the UK through the provision of equipment and training.

Creche Facilities

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what creche facilities are provided by his Department; and at what cost. [44866]

Mr. Bradshaw: The FCO opened its first workplace nursery on 3 September 2001. It can take up to 36 children. Capital costs were in the region of £450,000 (£375,000 for construction costs, £50,000 for professional fees and £25,000 for furniture and equipment). The Cabinet Office provided £150,000 towards these costs from the Modernising Government Fund. Parents pay between £100-£120 per week, depending on their grade and the age of the child. It is envisaged that an initial subsidy towards running costs of up to £85,000 per annum, reducing gradually over a 2–3 year period, will be needed while the nursery builds up to full capacity. The objective of setting up the nursery was to demonstrate a long-term commitment to helping staff combine work and family.

The FCO is also an employer partner in the Buffer Bear network of nurseries, with access to 10 priority places. The cost of a place varies depending on, among other things, the location of the nursery and staff are offered a subsidy of £15-£35 per week depending on their grade. These nurseries are based at key commuter points and offer choice for parents who do not wish to bring their children into London.

The FCO currently has two under-two places at the First Steps nursery in Marsham street. These are being phased out, before the FCO withdraws from the contract in December 2002. The cost of a place for an under-two is £223.14 per week. As with our in-house nursery, parents pay between £100-£120 per week, depending on their grade. The FCO subsidy for the coming year will be in the region of £14,000.

Staff are also eligible to use the Westminster Holiday Playscheme, which caters for 5 to 12-year-olds during school holidays, at three sites in central London. The cost is £26 per day, which is split equally between the FCO and the parent. The subsidy for FY 2001–02 will be in the region of £4,000. Places are offered on a first come, first served basis, which means the number of users varies each year.

The FCO is currently conducting a review of child care support that is offered to staff.

Nigeria

Phil Sawford: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations he has made to the Nigerian Government in support of Safiyatu Hussaini's appeal against the sentence of death by stoning for the crime of adultery. [43972]

Mr. MacShane: We have repeatedly made clear our concerns about the case of Safiyatu Hussaini. Our high commission in Abuja is monitoring the situation closely and is in contact with local organisations involved in the case. Ms Hussaini has the support of a strong defence team, supported by the Nigerian Human Rights Commission and local non-governmental organisations.

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Government of Nigeria regarding the woman due to be stoned to death; and if he will make a statement. [45004]

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth affairs what representations he has made to the Government of Nigeria about the decision by Sharia law to stone to death Safiyati Husseini. [44896]

Mr. MacShane: The Nigerian Government are well aware of the Government's concerns over the sentence of death by stoning passed on Safiyatu Husseini.

Ms Husseini's case is currently before Sokoto State Sharia Court of Appeal, which has said it will give its decision on the appeal on 25 March. If the sentence is confirmed, there is scope for further appeals. Ms Husseini is supported by a strong legal team and the Nigerian Human Rights Commission.

The British high commission in Abuja is monitoring the situation closely, and has made the Government's concerns over the case known at a number of levels to the Nigerian authorities.

Zimbabwe

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what estimate he has made of the numbers of British passport holders who may need to be rescued in the event of a major humanitarian crisis in Zimbabwe; [44934]

(2) what contingency plans the Government have made to rescue British passport holders by air in the event of a major humanitarian crisis in Zimbabwe. [44933]

Mr. Bradshaw: There are approximately 26,000 British nationals registered with the British high commission in Harare. We have a civil contingency plan for Zimbabwe, as we do for many other countries. Any evacuation would be a last resort and by whatever means available at the time.

Mr. Ancram: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps he has taken to demonstrate the Government's position on recognising the result of the Zimbabwean elections, with particular reference to (a) diplomatic relations and (b) other protocols with Zimbabwe. [45789]

Mr. Straw: I refer the right hon. Member to my statements to the House of 14 and 21 March. We do not recognise the result of the presidential election in Zimbabwe as being a true reflection of the will of the Zimbabwean people. As a signal of our conviction that the election was neither free nor fair, the British high commissioner in Harare did not attend the inauguration ceremony for Mr. Mugabe on 17 March.

India (Peter Bleach)

Mr. Forth: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations at ministerial level have been made to the Government of India regarding Peter Bleach; what the response of the Indian Government were; and if he will make a statement. [45411]

Mr. Bradshaw: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary wrote to the Indian Home Minister, L. K. Advani, about Mr. Bleach's case on 13 December 2001. The Prime Minister also raised it with Mr. Advani during his visit to India in January 2002.

I discussed Mr. Bleach's case with the Chief Minister of West Bengal, Buddhadeb Bhattacharjee, on 22 February 2002. Most recently, my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary reiterated our concern about Mr. Bleach's continued detention and poor health with Mr. Advani on 27 February 2002.

Since December 2000 we have requested that Peter Bleach be released on grounds of fair and equal treatment with the five Russians convicted with him for the same offences, and who were released in July 2000. The Government of India's response has been that the nature of Mr. Bleach's offences was different: we do not accept this. We have asked the Government of India to reconsider Mr. Bleach's case and to take into account the deterioration in his health since he has been diagnosed with tuberculosis and bronco-pneumonia.

Gibraltar

Mr. Hawkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment was made of precedents for the EU's conditional offer to the citizens of Gibraltar agreed to at Barcelona. [44977]

Peter Hain [holding answer 21 March. 2002]: At Barcelona EU Heads of State and Government welcomed the relaunch of the Brussels Process, underlined their support for the efforts of the British and Spanish Governments to conclude a comprehensive agreement before the summer; and invited the European Commission to explore ways in which the EU could underpin any agreement reached. It is for the Commission to consider how best to carry this remit forward.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the implications for Gibraltar of the Barcelona Summit. [45577]

Peter Hain: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Belfast, North (Mr. Nigel Dodds) on 20 March 2002, Official Report, column 389W.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he plans to visit Gibraltar. [46224]

Peter Hain: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply from my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary to the hon. Member for South Staffordshire (Sir Patrick Cormack) on 14 January 2002, Official Report, column 29.

Macedonia

Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he plans to present the Stabilisation and Association Agreement between the European communities and FYR Macedonia to Parliament. [45241]

Peter Hain: A Command Paper and an explanatory memorandum for the Macedonian Stabilisation and Association Agreement with the European Union was deposited in Parliament on 1 March.

United States

Mr. Ancram: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what meetings were arranged for the Department to meet the US Assistant Secretary for Defence during his recent visit to London this week; and if he will make a statement on the outcome of the meetings. [45695]

Mr. Straw: On 18 March the Assistant Secretary of Defence attended two separate meetings with senior officials from the FCO. These were part of a series of discussions in Whitehall.

Iraq

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what consideration has been given to the offer of the Iraqi Government to allow British weapon inspectors into Iraq; and if he will make a statement. [43912]

Mr. Straw: The UK Government have received no direct approach from the Government of Iraq, although we are aware that an Iraqi spokesman announced such an offer through the state-controlled Iraqi media. The demand of the international community is for UN weapons inspectors to be allowed into Iraq. They have built up a vast amount of knowledge about Iraq's weapons and know where to look. United Nations Security Council resolutions also require Iraq to allow the weapons inspectors full, unconditional access at any time. If Iraq truly has nothing to hide it will let them in on this basis. I note from the Iraqi spokesman's announcement that the British team would be allowed to visit only sites named in advance. We are looking for Iraqi disarmament, not yet more propaganda stunts.

Mr. David Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to obtain (a) UN and (b) NATO authorisation to allow a United Kingdom military attack on Iraq. [45159]

Mr. Bradshaw: No decision has been taken to launch military action against Iraq, and so the question of whether authorisation is needed does not arise.

WALES

Press Releases

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many press releases were issued by his Department (a) between 1 May and 31 December 1997 and (b) in each year from 1998 to 2001 inclusive. [40041]

Mr. Paul Murphy: A monthly breakdown of Welsh Office press releases in 1997 is no longer available. In that year as a whole, the Welsh Office issued 650 press releases. The Welsh Office issued 774 press releases in 1998 and 776 in 1999. Since its creation in July 1999, the Wales Office has issued 30 press releases in 1999, 100 press releases in 2000 and 86 press releases in 2001.

Coalfields Regeneration Trust

Ann Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what recent discussions he has had with the First Secretary of the National Assembly for Wales on the work of the Coalfields Regeneration Trust with particular reference to (a) the Cynon Valley and (b) Wales. [44790]

Mr. Paul Murphy: I have regular discussions with the First Secretary on a range of issues affecting Wales.

The National Assembly funds the Coalfields Regeneration Trust and it has established itself as a leading funder and partner in coalfield regeneration in Wales. All of the £3.46 million available for Wales during the first three years has been committed to nearly 60 projects.

I understand that in the Cynon Valley the Trust has funded many projects, including assistance with the refurbishment of the Cwmaman Public Hall and building alterations to Hirwaun YMCA.

Ministerial Visit (Czech Republic)

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what modes of transport he used to travel to the Czech Republic in the week beginning 11 March; what the total cost was of his travel expenditure; how many officials accompanied him; what the total cost of the visit was; and how long he took to travel there and to return. [45280]

Mr. Touhig: None: my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has made no official visit to the Czech Republic.

However, I undertook a visit to the Czech Republic from 11 to 13 March. The main objective of my visit was to meet and to support a trade mission organised by Wales Trade International. The trade mission comprised seven Welsh companies, drawn from throughout Wales, each of which was establishing first contacts in the Czech Republic. In supporting the trade mission, I highlighted the benefits—for individuals and for firms—of a wider Europe, both for the applicant countries and for the UK as a whole, and for Wales in particular.

The further objectives of my visit included confirming the United Kingdom's support for the enlargement of the EU and the sharing of experience of regenerating a former coal-mining and steel-making region.

I travelled to the Czech Republic by train at a cost of £816.60. I was accompanied by my private secretary and by one senior policy official. The total cost of the visit was £3,174.99. The outward journey took 18 and a half hours and the return journey took 19 and a half hours. My outward journey was made on a Sunday; both journeys entailed travelling overnight.

PRIVY COUNCIL

Flexible Working

Mr. Bercow: To ask the President of the Council how many and what proportion of the staff of his Department are (a) job sharing, (b) term working and (c) engaged in another form of flexible working. [42420]

Mr. Robin Cook: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Twickenham on 14 February 2002, Official Report, column 631W, about job sharing in my Department. Currently three members of my staff are engaged in flexible working although none are term working.

Staff in my Department regularly work from home subject to operational requirements and based on individual circumstances.

Modernisation

Mr. Lazarowicz: To ask the President of the Council if, in his proposals for modernisation of the House, he will consider (a) the House providing information about the work of the Scottish Parliament and devolved assemblies within the UK and (b) requesting the same bodies to provide information about the work of the House on a reciprocal basis in their own information centres. [46273]

Mr. Robin Cook: These are valuable suggestions which will be kept in mind as work on improving the facilities for visitors progresses.

Parental Leave Directive

Mr. Bercow: To ask the President of the Council what estimate he has made of the (a) financial costs and (b) benefits to his Department of the Parental Leave Directive. [42479]

Mr. Robin Cook: Thus far, no member of staff in my Department has sought parental leave. No estimate of the financial costs has been made as these would differ according to individual circumstances.

The potential benefits to the Privy Council Office of the Parental Leave Directive are considered to be: experienced staff can be retained by offering extra time away from work to care for their children; improved staff morale and performance through a better work and life balance; and improved planning of staff absences.

MINISTER FOR WOMEN

Pensions

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Minister for Women what recent discussions she has had with Ministers in the Department for Work and Pensions on pension rights for women. [43807]

Ms Hewitt: Last week I wrote to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions highlighting the work that his Department has carried out in ensuring that pension reforms had improved women's rights.

Currently over 1.1 million female pensioners are in receipt of the minimum income guarantee and the new pension credit will benefit lower income pensioners, of whom two-thirds are women.

I also asked my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions to ensure that his officials continue to liaise with officials from the Women and Equality Unit so that they can remain informed of the progress on pensions reforms as they affect women and that the development and implementation of pensions policy is analysed by gender so that potential benefits for women can be identified.

PRIME MINISTER

Select Committees

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Prime Minister on how many occasions he has been invited to appear before a Select Committee since 1997. [37692]

The Prime Minister: Since 1997, I have received four formal invitations to appear before a Select Committee.

Equipment Leasing

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list the equipment leasing arrangements entered into by his Office in each of the last four years; and what the cost is to public funds in each case. [39085]

The Prime Minister: Equipment should be leased when it offers better value for money than direct purchase bearing in mind the products whole life costs and quality to meet (but not exceed) the requirement. These costs include maintenance, running and disposal costs, not simply initial costs.

Leasing costs for office equipment incurred in each of the last four years are as follows:

2 May 1997 to 31 March 1998	107,892
1998–99	81,885
1999–2000	136,204
2000–01	142,138

Lord Levy

Richard Ottaway: To ask the Prime Minister which ministers of foreign Governments Lord Levy has met at his request in the last six months. [41864]

The Prime Minister: In his capacity as the Prime Minister's envoy, Lord Levy meets a range of contacts, including Ministers of foreign Governments. In the last six months, Lord Levy has discussed the Middle East peace process with Israeli Prime Minister Ariel Sharon, Israeli Foreign Minister Shimon Peres, the Palestinian Authority President Yasser Arafat, Palestinian Authority Minister for Planning and International Co-operation Nabil Sha'ath, King Abdullah of Jordan, Former

He also met President Hugo Chavez of Venezuela, and the Venezuelan Vice President and Foreign Minister to discuss bilateral relations.

Lord Levy has also met a number of more junior Ministers in his role as the Prime Minister's envoy.

Parental Leave Directive

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Prime Minister what estimate he has made of the (a) financial costs and (b) benefits to his Office of the Parental Leave Directive. [42483]

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him by my hon. Friend, the Parliamentary Secretary, Cabinet Office today.

Age Discrimination

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Prime Minister what his Office's policy is towards age discrimination. [42583]

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him by my hon. Friend, the Parliamentary Secretary, Cabinet Office today.

Safiyatu Hussaini

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Prime Minister if he raised the case of Safiyatu Hussaini during his meetings with representatives of the Nigerian Government in February. [44895]

The Prime Minister: The case was not raised during my meetings, which focused on other issues.

The Nigerian Government is well aware of the Government's concerns over the sentence of death by stoning passed on Safiyatu Hussaini. We have made our concerns over the case known at a number of levels within the Nigerian federal system.

Ms Hussaini's case is currently before Sokoto State Sharia Court of Appeal, which has said it will give its decision on the appeal on 25 March. If the sentence is confirmed, there is scope for further appeals thereafter. Ms Hussaini is supported by a strong legal team and the Nigerian Human Rights Commission.

The British High Commission in Abuja is continuing to monitor the situation closely.

Phase Three Implementation

Norman Baker: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make a statement on the implications for Government policy of the implementation of Phase Three. [45890]

The Prime Minister: The Government's policy agenda focuses on sustaining a strong economy and making improvements in productivity and enterprise, continuing welfare reform and increasing social justice, driving through public service reform particularly in education, health, crime and transport, and taking a leading place at the centre of Europe and the wider international community.

Unpaid Advisers

Mr. Beith: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list the names of the unpaid advisers appointed by him since June 1997, stating in each case (a) the date of their appointment, (b) the duration of their appointment and (c) the project or projects on which they have been engaged. [43373]

The Prime Minister: At 25 March, I had appointed the following unpaid advisers to work with the new Forward Strategy Unit (FSU):

Arnab Banerji, Chief Investment Officer of F&C Management Ltd.;

Nick Lovegrove, Partner at McKinsey's;

Penny Hughes, formerly President of Coca Cola Great Britain and Ireland, currently non-executive director of Vodafone plc and Trinity Mirror plc; Adair Turner, Vice Chairman of Merrill Lynch.

Lord Birt, my unpaid strategy adviser, has an over-arching role on a number of projects supported by the FSU.

Previous unpaid advisers who have been appointed by me and the issues on which they advised are Lord Stevenson (education), Lord Simon (the civil service), and Lord Birt (crime).

Rehabilitation International's Charter

Mr. Kaufman: To ask the Prime Minister what response he has made to representations on the Government's support for Rehabilitation International's Charter for the Third Millennium, presented to him on 5 July 2000 and the adoption by the United Nations General Assembly of the Charter's call for a UN Convention on the Rights of Disabled People; and if he will (a) publish the response in the Official Report and (b) place copies in the Library. [45511]

The Prime Minister: I have received representations on this matter.

I welcomed Rehabilitation International's Charter for the Third Millennium in July 2000. In doing so, I said that I believed that it would form the basis of a global consensus on priorities for at least the next decade. This absolutely remains the Government's view.

At the UN General Assembly in November a resolution calling for an international convention on disability, as envisaged in the charter, was adopted. The resolution has now established an ad hoc committee to consider proposals for an international convention on the rights and dignities of disabled people. It is likely that the committee will meet this summer. We will want to work closely with other on the committee to ensure that the convention is clearly focused and its aims and objectives are consistent with member states' national interests and responsibilities.

In addition, there have been two further important international developments.

The Irish Resolution at the Commission on Human Rights (CHR) in 2000 has led to a study on the adequacy of existing international standards to protect the rights of people with disabilities. Its findings are due soon and are expected to inform the Irish draft at this year's CHR.

We also await the report of the Special Rapporteur of the Commission on Social Development for Disability, Mr. Bengt Lindquist, who is monitoring the implementation of the UN Standard Rules as well as looking at the question of an international convention. The Government support the activities of the Special Rapporteur and have contributed £20,000 to further his important work.

In the meantime, the Government continue to focus here on action to take forward our commitment to comprehensive and enforceable civil rights for disabled people in the UK. This policy presently ensures that the UK is ahead of many other countries in legislating for and promoting civil rights for disabled people.

Strategic Rail Authority

Mrs. May: To ask the Prime Minister what discussions his Policy Unit has had with the SRA on the development of the SRA's Capacity Utilisation Strategy. [45709]

The Prime Minister: Officials have meetings with a range of people in the course of their work. It is not the normal practice of the Government to release details of such meetings or discussions.

Illegal Meat Imports

Mr. Alan Reid: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make a statement on departmental responsibility for (a) preventing illegal meat imports entering the United Kingdom and (b) detecting meat imports which have entered the United Kingdom illegally. [46105]

The Prime Minister: DEFRA has lead responsibility for animal health controls on imports of meat working with the Food Standards Agency, HM Customs, the devolved Administrations, and local and port health authorities.

Gibraltar

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Prime Minister when he plans to visit Gibraltar. [46185]

The Prime Minister: I have no immediate plans to do so.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Prime Minister when he last spoke to the Chief Minister of Gibraltar. [46184]

The Prime Minister: I have not spoken to the Chief Minister of Gibraltar. My right hon. Friends the Foreign Secretary and the Minister for Europe met the Chief Minister of Gibraltar most recently on 25 January and are in regular contact with him in writing and through the Governor of Gibraltar.

Correspondence

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Prime Minister what his target time will be in 2002–03 for (a) Ministers to reply to letters from hon. Members and (b) officials in his office to reply to letters received directly from members of the public. [44949]

The Prime Minister: The effective handling of correspondence is an issue to which I, and ministerial colleagues, attach great importance. My office takes action on all letter received within 15 working days.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

McKenzie Friends

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department under what circumstances a McKenzie Friend (a) can and (b) cannot be used in court; and in which type of courts they are used. [44804]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The judgment in the 1999 Court of Appeal case of R. v. Bow County Court, ex parte Pelling confirms that litigants in person should be allowed the help of a McKenzie Friend in public proceedings, held in open court or in chambers, unless the judge is satisfied that fairness and the interests of justice do not require it.

In an open court hearing there usually must be some justification established if a person is not to have the benefit of a McKenzie Friend, or some evidence that the McKenzie Friend has acted or is acting inappropriately at the hearing which makes it reasonable to deprive the litigant of the assistance which would otherwise be permitted.

Where the proceedings are held in private then the nature of those proceedings (which make it appropriate for the hearing to be in private) may make it undesirable in the interests of justice for a McKenzie Friend to assist.

Children and Family Court Advisory and Support Service

Simon Hughes: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what proportion of the children's guardians who work for CAFCASS have been allowed to access the CAFCASS IT system; and if she will make a statement. [46011]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The CAFCASS IT system is available to all office-based employed guardians but not yet to newly employed home-based guardians who accepted an offer of employment last summer.

Simon Hughes: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what the estimated date is for CAFCASS to be 'e' ready in line with targets set for public bodies; and if she will make a statement. [46013]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The CAFCASS Corporate Plan states that CAFCASS is contributing to the 'e' Government agenda through increased capacity, where appropriate, for services to be delivered by electronic means by 2005. CAFCASS is developing an IT infrastructure which facilitates efficient and effective exchange of information between agencies in the family justice system.

Simon Hughes: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what frequency of board meetings the CAFCASS Support Infrastructure Project Initiation document specifies; and on how many occasions the board met between July 2001 and January 2002. [46009]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Support Infrastructure Project Initiation document did not specifically state a frequency of meeting, nor is a specific frequency mandated in the PRINCE2 manual. The Support Infrastructure Project did not meet after July 2001 as the project was put on hold.

Simon Hughes: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if the CAFCASS IT system has database facilities installed; and if she will make a statement. [46012]

Ms Rosie Winterton: CAFCASS inherited systems with database facilities. The CAFCASS IT system continues to support and extend these databases. The recent Magistrates Courts Service Inspectorate (MCSI) report said that IT investment across CAFCASS was, in general, a success story once initial teething problems had been addressed.

Disputes Resolution

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what (a) action she has taken and (b) results have been achieved, pursuant to her pledge that Government legal disputes will be settled by mediation or arbitration whenever possible. [44959]

Ms Rosie Winterton: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave him on 15 October 2001 in response to his question on how my Department will report to Parliament on progress with the Government's commitment to use alternative dispute resolutions where possible in resolving its own disputes. On that occasion I explained that the Lord Chancellor intends to make an announcement at the beginning of the next financial year, and has asked all Government Departments to collect the relevant figures.

Court Proceedings Pilot

Mr. Grieve: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department when the pilot for extended courts in Manchester and London will commence; when the courts will start and close business; and for how long the pilots will run. [42793]

Mr. Wills: The two pilot schemes are due to commence in spring 2002. The proposed plans for Manchester and London are different. They are:

(i) The pilot at Manchester city magistrates court is planned to support the key criminal justice objectives of access to justice, reducing delay and improving services to victims and witnesses. The pilot courts will have an earlier start from 9am for three adult remand courts from Monday to Friday. Additional sittings for trials will take place in two court rooms from 4pm until 8pm on two evenings per week (Tuesday and Thursday).

(ii) In London the plan is for Bow Street magistrates court to support the objective of arrest and straight to court by dealing immediately with evening arrests and to evaluate if this will deter criminals and provide reassurance to the public. One court will sit from 6pm until midnight on Friday and Saturday nights.

Both pilots will run for approximately six months. The actual start dates and full details of the schemes will be given in a press notice which will be released when all of the aspects for the working protocols are agreed and finalised with the agencies involved.

Persistent Offenders

Vernon Coaker: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what guidelines he has issued to courts about detaining persistent offenders under 16 years who are (a) charged with and (b) guilty of non-violent offences; and if he will make a statement. [42246]

Mr. Wills: The decision whether to grant bail or not is a judicial decision taken within the statutory framework provided by the Bail Act 1976. Judges and magistrates carry out their duties independently of the Government. It would be wrong for Ministers to seek to direct judges or magistrates in the way they exercise their discretion. Accordingly, no guidelines have been issued on the use of bail or the related powers in section 23 of the Children and Young Persons Act 1969. For the same reasons, my Department does not issue guidelines on sentencing. Magistrates and judges are helped by decisions of the higher courts and, particularly, by the guideline judgments of the Court of Appeal. In R. v. Howells and others (1998) the then Lord Chief Justice, Lord Bingham, in a reserved judgment, considered, at length, the factors which courts should weigh when considering whether an offence is so serious that only a custodial sentence is justified.

Litigation

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many cases (a) her Department and (b) its agencies have defended in (i) industrial tribunals and (ii) the courts in each year since 1997; how many were concluded in their favour; and what the total cost to her Department of litigation was in each year. [41108]

Ms Rosie Winterton: In each year since 1997 the Lord Chancellor's Department (including the Court Service) has defended the following number of (new) cases:

(a) 1997–98:
12 employment tribunal cases
77 court cases.

(b) 1998–99:
13 employment tribunal cases
94 court cases.

(c) 1999–2000:
26 employment tribunal cases
81 court cases.

(d) 2000–01:
26 employment tribunal cases
80 court cases.

(e) 2001 to date:
21 employment tribunal cases
108 court cases.

Of the employment tribunal cases, only one case was concluded against the Department/Court Service which was in the year 2000 (the case having been issued in 1998). All the other cases (which are not on-going) were either successfully defended at trial (or on appeal), or withdrawn beforehand. Of those employment tribunal cases withdrawn, agreed compensation was paid in the following number of cases:

(a) 1997–98: one
(b) 1998–99: three
(c) 1999–2000: three
(d) 2000–01: one
(e) 2001 to date: two.

Of the other court cases, the vast majority of these were either struck out, disposed of summarily by the court, or settled on favourable terms. On the information readily available in the Department, in the last year there has been only one case in which the court has given judgment against the Department/Court Service.

In each year since 1997 the Public Guardianship Office (formerly the Public Trust Office) has defended the following number of (new) cases:

(a) 1997–98:
0 employment tribunal cases
0 court cases.

(b) 1998–99:
one employment tribunal case
five court cases.

(c) 1999–2000:
0 employment tribunal cases
one court case.

(d) 2000–01:
three employment tribunal cases
0 court cases.

(e) 2001 to date:
one employment tribunal case
0 court cases.

Of the employment tribunal cases, none of these were concluded against the Public Trust/Guardianship Office and of the cases which were withdrawn, in only one case was agreed compensation paid (in 2000–01).

Of the other cases, in only one case was agreed compensation paid (in 2001).

Treasury Solicitor's costs (which includes Counsel's fees) for each year for cases[1] involving the Lord Chancellor's Department, the Court Service and the PGO (formerly PTO) were:

(a) 1997–98: £384,202
(b) 1998–99: £512,568
(c) 1999–2000: £589,242
(d) 2000–01: £627,862
(e) 2001 to date: £766,961.

[1] These figures may include a small amount in relation to "non-litigious" work. It has not been possible in the time available to exclude any such amounts.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Circulars

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will list the circular documents that have been sent by her Department to local education authorities since 7 June 2001; and how many pages each document contained. [44079]

Mr. Timms [holding answer 18 March 2002]: We have sent 274 documents to local education authorities between 7 June 2001 and 18 March 2002. The full list of titles and page numbers has been placed in the Library.

Child Care

Ms Buck: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) how many child care places in day nurseries, with childminders and in pre-school and playgroups were available for every 100 children aged under eight years in each region in England in (a) 1997 and (b) 2002; [43506]

(2) if she will list, for each region of England and for each London borough, how many places at (a) day nurseries, (b) childminders, (c) play groups and play schools, (d) out of school clubs and (e) holiday play schemes there were in (i) 1997 and (ii) 2001; [43505]

(3) how many places in (a) after-school clubs and (b) holiday play-schemes were available per 100 children of primary school age in (i) 1997 and (ii) 2001. [43507]

Margaret Hodge: Information is not available in the form requested. The available information is shown in the tables.

Latest figures on day care facilities in England were published by my Department in the Statistical Bulletin "Children's Day Care facilities at 31 March 2001 (08/01)" in October 2001, a copy of which is available from the Library. An electronic copy of this publication is also available on my Department's website www.dfes.gov.uk/statistics.

[1] Figures for England and Government office regions rounded to the nearest 100.

Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) how much money was spent by Cambridgeshire in 2000–01 in creating child care places; [44017]

(2) how much money has been allocated to Cambridgeshire to achieve its child care targets in (a) 2000–01 and (b) 2001–02. [44016]

Margaret Hodge: For 2000–01, Cambridgeshire Early Years Development and Childcare Partnership (EYDCP) was allocated a total of £642,570, including £100,500 from the European Social Fund (ESF) for child care. For 2001–02, their allocation is £2,149,873, including £375,835 from the ESF.

In 2000–01 Cambridgeshire spent £604,113 towards the creation of child care places.

In addition, money from the New Opportunities Fund is available to support the creation of out of school hours care and neighbourhood nurseries.

Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) what the targets are for Cambridgeshire for the creation of new child care places in 2001–02; [44014]

(2) what the latest figures are for the creation of child care places in Cambridgeshire in 2001–02. [44015]

Margaret Hodge: Cambridgeshire EYDCP has targets to create 1,577 child care places in 2001–02 by April 2002. By the end of December 2001 Cambridgeshire EYDCP had reported the creation of 1,401 child care places.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills when she will review the OfSTED application pack for day care registration. [44901]

Margaret Hodge: The content of application packs is a matter for OFSTED. I understand that OFSTED is reviewing the content currently and that revised packs will be available later in the year.

Nursing Diploma

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills whether the student funding review is examining funding arrangements for nurses on diploma courses. [43333]

Margaret Hodge: No. Funding for nurses on diploma courses does not form part of the student finance review being undertaken by my Department, as it is the responsibility of the Department of Health.

School Conditions

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) how many schools were (a) rebuilt and (b) substantially remodelled in 2001–02; [46115]

(2) if she will list by LEA building works in schools exceeding £1 million undertaken in each year since 1997, stating (a) when the decision was made to go ahead with the project, (b) the political control of the LEA, (c) the cost of the works and (d) the constituency within which the school is located; [45870]

(3) if she will list by LEA the newly constructed schools opened in each year since 1997, stating (a) when the decision was made to construct the school, (b) the political control of the local education authority, (c) the cost of the buildings and (d) the constituency in which the school is located. [45869]

John Healey: We do not hold information in the form requested. Much capital support is allocated to local education authorities and schools on a formulaic basis. Records of how it is utilised for specific projects are held locally.

Demountable Classrooms

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many demountable classrooms there are in Shrewsbury and Atcham; and where they are. [44296]

John Healey: As part of the data collected through the appraisal of Asset Management Plans, the Department has some information on the overall area of temporary buildings at schools, but it is not possible from these data to identify with any precision the number of demountable classrooms within individual authorities.

The data we have on temporary buildings will be appraised with a view to publishing analysis to support benchmarking later this year.

Education Maintenance Allowances

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what proportion of pupils in receipt of education maintenance allowances attend (a) selective and (b) non-selective schools in each authority where they are paid. [45868]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: We do not require local education authorities, who administer the pilot EMA schemes, to collect this information. EMA is targeted at eligible young people irrespective of what type of school or college they attend.

PFI/PPPs

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the difference was between the price offered in reaching preferred bidder stage and the final contract price for PPP contracts let by her Department in each of the last four years; and if she will make a statement. [45616]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The final contract price for Capita to deliver the Connexions Card project was £109.7 million over seven years. The details of the various bidding stages during contractual negotiations are commercial in confidence.

Physical Education

Mr. Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what her latest estimate is of the number of schools providing two hours of sport and PE during the school day each week. [45109]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The national curriculum for PE includes an aspiration that all schools should offer two hours physical activity a week. The Qualifications and Curriculum Authority's PE and School Sport Project has found that with imaginative and flexible timetabling schools can and do provide two hours of high quality PE and school sport per week. All of the schools involved in the project are doing this. Our White Paper "Schools: achieving success" gives a commitment that all children will be entitled to two hours of high quality PE and school sport a week, within and outside the curriculum.

14 to 19 Education

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how she plans to involve young people in the consultation on the Government's plans for the education of those aged 14 to 19; and if she will make a statement. [44773]

Mr. Timms: We recognise the need to take full account of the views of young people on the 14–19 reforms and, for the first time ever, we have produced a version of the Green Paper specifically for them.

Copies of this have been distributed to members of the UK Youth Parliament and, through the British Youth Council, to Youth Councils around the country. Sample copies will also be distributed to schools, FE sector colleges and LEAs with encouragement for teachers to engage young people in the consultation process in guided PSHE and citizenship sessions or through student councils.

Events will also be organised for a wide cross-section of young people through local Connexions Partnerships. We are also inviting the UK Youth Parliament and the British Youth Council to consider the proposals and respond and Ministers are discussing the proposals with groups of young people during ministerial visits.

We have also placed the Green Paper online on the DfES young people's gateway at www.dfes.gov.uk/youngpeople and advertised on websites popular with young people.

School Playing Fields

Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what measures her Department has taken to prevent the selling of school playing fields. [44444]

John Healey: Before October 1998, there was nothing to prevent a local authority selling a school playing field if it wanted to. As a result of widespread public concern, section 77 of the School Standards and Framework Act 1998 was introduced in October 1998 to stop the indiscriminate sale of school playing fields. Local authorities and governing bodies of all maintained schools are now required to obtain the Secretary of State's consent before they can sell any part of a playing field.

Applications to sell school playing fields are assessed against the following criteria:

a. schools' needs: that playing field provision and curriculum requirements at the school selling the playing field, and at other schools in the local area, will be met;

b. community needs: that community use of a school's playing fields is taken into account, with alternative facilities made available if necessary;

c. finance: that the sale proceeds are re-invested to provide new or improved sports facilities at schools, or are used to help to raise standards by providing better educational facilities.

The criteria are set out in the Department's Guidance 0580/2001: "The Protection of School Playing Fields and Land for City Academies". Only those applications that meet the criteria are approved. Furthermore, since July 2001, all applications have been scrutinised by the independent School Playing Fields Advisory Panel to make sure that they conform to the published criteria. The Panel comprises representatives from the National Playing Fields Association, the Central Council of Physical Recreation, the education organisation Learning through Landscapes, the National Association of Head Teachers and the Local Government Association.

Teachers

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many full-time equivalent teachers there were in maintained (a) nursery, (b) primary and (c) secondary schools in January 2001; and how many there were in 1984. [46008]

Mr. Timms: The numbers of regular full-time equivalent teachers in the maintained sector in England were as follows:

	January 1984	January 2001
Nursery	1,600	1,600
Primary	171,200	193,400
Secondary	224,200	196,700

Notes:

1. 1984 secondary numbers exclude estimated sixth form college numbers.
2. Part-time teachers have been converted to an estimate of their full-time equivalence and added to full-time numbers.
3. Excludes occasional teachers.
4. Teachers whose service is divided between primary and secondary schools have been apportioned pro-rata to the nursery/primary or secondary phase.

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many teachers left the profession in the latest period for which figures are available. [45408]

Mr. Timms: In the year to 31 March 2000, the latest for which data are available, 34,900 qualified teachers left full-time or part-time regular service in the maintained schools sector in England for reasons including retirement. Over the same period, there were 36,300 new entrants or re-entrants to the maintained schools sector in England. These data are provisional.

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what proportion of the teaching work force in schools in England supply teachers comprise. [45270]

Mr. Timms: The information is not available in the form requested. Occasional teachers employed on contracts of less than one month and who worked for the whole of the survey date, comprised 4.6 per cent. of the total full-time equivalent number of teachers working in maintained schools in England on 18 January 2001.

School Governors

Mr. David: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what plans she has to encourage people to become school governors. [45253]

Mr. Timms: The Department continues to support and provide guidance to local education authorities (LEAs) in England and we are devising a programme to support school-led governor recruitment. We fund the School Governors' One-Stop Shop to recruit governors with business and management skills in areas covered by the Excellence in Cities programme. As part of our commitment to encourage recruitment of school governors from minority ethnic backgrounds, the Department supports the activities of the Collective of Bangladeshi School Governors that promotes governorship to minority ethnic communities in Newham, Tower Hamlets and Hackney.

Science and Engineering Courses

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) if she plans to provide incentives for colleges and universities to provide science and engineering courses; [45564]

(2) if she plans to provide incentives for students studying science and engineering at Higher National and degree level. [45563]

Margaret Hodge: The Higher Education Funding Council for England takes into account the higher cost of teaching science and engineering subjects in making grant allocations to higher education institutions, but the Government have no plans to introduce incentives for institutions to provide science and engineering courses, nor for students to take them.

University Funding

Alistair Burt: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will make a statement on the submission to SR 2002 on university funding by Universities UK. [45204]

Margaret Hodge: The Government have carefully considered the representations on the financial needs of higher education from Universities UK, and from a number of other bodies. The outcome of the 2002 spending review will be announced in the summer.

Public Service Agreements

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills which public service agreement targets that are scheduled to be met in 2002 will not be achieved by the due date. [44838]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Information about progress on PSA targets will be published in the Department's 2002 departmental report, which is due to be published in May.

Airline and Aerospace Industries

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what discussions she has had with the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry in respect of retraining needs in the airline and aerospace industries; what budgets she has made available to assist with such retraining; and if she will make a statement. [27547]

Mr. Nicholas Brown [holding answer 23 January 2002]: I have been asked to reply.

The airline and aerospace industries have been affected by a number of closures and job losses in recent months. The Government have been proactive in working, in regional and local partnerships, to support those people affected by providing the most appropriate service to help them back into work and to retrain them where necessary.

Retraining opportunities are offered to people who have been made redundant through Work Based Learning for Adults. In addition, Rapid Response Funding has recently been approved to retrain individuals made redundant from BAe Systems in the north-west and Gill Aviation in the north-east. The Learning and Skills Council (LSC) are also offering support—for example, at Gatwick and Heathrow LSC funding has been provided for one to one advice sessions for clients facing particular employment problems, and to support their training needs.

Student Loans

Mr. Gordon Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, pursuant to her answer of 11 March 2002, Official Report, columns 764–70W, to the hon. Member for Newcastle upon Tyne, Central (Mr. Cousins), if she will break down the figures for Blackpool (a) by part-time and full-time students and (b) by age of student. [44698]

Margaret Hodge: The previous figures shown for Blackpool in the answer of 11 March were all full-time, apart from two students on part-time initial teacher training courses; the level of fee support received by these two students is unknown.

Data on age breakdown as requested are not available.

Medical Schools

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many students in medical schools in the UK there were who had been educated at (a) state schools and (b) independent schools in each of the last five years. [42841]

Margaret Hodge [holding answer 14 March 2002]: The latest available information is shown in the table.

Language Statistics

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will make a statement on the proportion of people in England who speak a second language; and what recent research she has commissioned on comparisons with other EU states. [43806]

Margaret Hodge: As part of its support for the European Year of Languages, the European Commission carried out a survey of the languages spoken in the 15 member states of the European Union in April 2001. The survey, "Eurobarometer 54", indicated that 34 per cent. of the UK sample is able to speak another EU language.

Our long-term language strategy, which we plan to publish in the autumn, will outline our proposals to widen the opportunities for language learning in this country. In particular, it is our ambition that all primary school children will be entitled to study languages by 2012.

Illiteracy

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the level of illiteracy is (a) in coalfield areas and (b) of citizens born in the United Kingdom. [41799]

John Healey: The table shows estimated literacy levels in the main coalfield districts (those districts with more than three 'coalfield wards').

District name	Literacy levels[1]	District name	Literacy levels[1]
Dover	23.9	Selby	22.3

[1] Percentage of population with 'low', 'lower' or 'very low' literacy.

Note:

National average equals 24 per cent.

Data at ward level is available as a searchable database on the Basic Skills Agency website at "www.basic-skills.co.uk/datasite/", which also contains data by Parliamentary Constituency and by local Learning and Skills Council area.

The most detailed survey of basic skills in Britain is "Adult Literacy in Britain", published in 1997. This reported that 23 per cent. of the population had low levels of literacy. 15 per cent. of those with low levels of literacy did not speak English as a first language and may not have been born in the UK. This equates to around 1 million of the 7 million adults in England with poor literacy skills.

Higher Education

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many higher education institutions are situated in coalfield constituencies. [41823]

Margaret Hodge: The higher education institutions located in constituencies containing coalfield areas are listed in the table.

HE institution	Constituency
University of Kent	Canterbury
Christ Church College	Canterbury
University of Durham	City of Durham
University of Teesside	Middlesbrough
University of Newcastle	Newcastle upon Tyne, Central
University of Northumbria	Newcastle upon Tyne, Central
University of Keele	Newcastle-under-Lyme
University of Salford	Salford
University of York	Selby
Sheffield Hallam University	Sheffield, Central
University of Sunderland	Sunderland, South
University of Leeds (Bretton Hall)	Wakefield

Energy Costs

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will make a statement on energy costs incurred by her Department in each of the last 10 years. [42438]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Minister of State for Rural Affairs on 19 March 2002, Official Report, column 268W.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Literacy

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the literacy levels are of long-term unemployed people in (a) coalfield areas and (b) England. [41821]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: Statistics relating to the literacy levels of the long-term unemployed in England are not available. However, we estimate that around one third of unemployed people have literacy and/or numeracy skills below Level 1 (the level expected of an 11-year-old) in England)[1].

No separate information is available for literacy levels among long-term unemployed people in coalfield areas, although we do have information on overall literacy levels in these areas.

We are committed to improving the literacy and numeracy of unemployed people so they have the skills they need to find and stay in work. In September 2001 we began piloting alternative ways of encouraging people claiming jobseeker's allowance to take up offers of help with their literacy and numeracy skills. One of these pilots is in my hon. Friend's constituency.

Empty Properties

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the total area in square feet of all empty properties owned by (a) his Department, (b) his agencies and (c) other public bodies for which he has had responsibility was in each year since May 1997. [37309]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: The Department for Work and Pensions was formed in June 2001 from the former Department for Social Security and parts of the Department for Education and Employment.

Statistics relating to empty properties owned by the new Department are not yet available for the current financial year (2001–02).

Health and Safety (Computers)

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many employees in his Department who regularly use computers have taken up the provision of a free eye test; and how this service is advertised to (a) current and (b) new staff. [36691]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: Currently different arrangements for testing eye health apply to staff employed in the former Department of Social Security and those employed in the Employment Service.

In May 2001 the Department of Social Security contracted with a company of ophthalmic opticians to provide staff with free eye tests at intervals of not less than two years. Between 1 May 2001 and 31 January 2002 (which is the latest month for which statistics are available) a total of 13,888 staff had their eyes tested under this contract. We estimate that by the end of the first year of the contract, on 30 April 2002, around 18,500 staff would have benefited from the service.

The availability of free eye tests in the former Department of Social Security is publicised on the Department's "Intranet" computer system and was brought to the attention of staff through a circular which was distributed widely. New staff are provided with information about the service as part of the standard induction programme. In addition, local managers are required to nominate an eye care liaison officer whose responsibility is to publicise the availability of the service, using posters and leaflets, prior to an optician visiting an office of the Department.

The Employment Service (which was up to July 2001 part of the former Department for Education and Employment) does not have a contract with an external eye care specialist. Instead staff are able to arrange their own eye tests with an optician of their choice and to have the cost reimbursed. Between 1 April 2001 and 31 January 2002 a total of 2,030 staff had their eyes tested at the Agency's expense.

The Employment Service provides new staff with a "Workstation Guide" leaflet and a video entitled "In Your Own Interests" is shown to all staff. Both of these highlight the provision of eye tests. In addition, eye tests are covered in the Health and Safety Guide which is available on the Employment Service's computerised communication system. Work station assessment forms are also completed by staff at six monthly intervals or following a work station change. These too highlight the provision of eye tests.

We intend to gradually extend the provisions of the former Department of Social Security's contract to all staff in the Department for Work and Pensions from April 2002. This will mean that in future all staff should have the opportunity to have their eyes tested free of charge in their places of work.

Parental Leave Directive

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what estimate he has made of the (a) financial costs and (b) benefits to his Department of the parental leave directive. [42473]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: Parental leave is unpaid and therefore incurs no direct financial cost. We do not keep records of the opportunity or indirect cost of staff taking parental leave. Information obtained from our payroll systems shows that during the period 1 March 2001 to 28 February 2001, staff in DWP took a total of 2,075 days parental leave.

We cannot quantify the specific benefits to the Department provided by the parental leave directive because it is only one part of a wide range of family-friendly policies provided by the Department. Benefits to the Department include increased labour supply, reduced turnover and a higher commitment from staff while enabling them to achieve a better balance between their home and working lives.

Automated Credit Transfer

Brian Cotter: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many benefits claimants have moved to a system of automated credit transfer in each year since the service has been available. [43343]

Malcolm Wicks: Information on the number of customers moving to automated credit transfer (ACT) each year since ACT became a method of payment is not available in the precise format requested. However, we do collect information on the number of benefit recipients being paid by ACT and this is given in the table.

As the table shows, the number of customers paid by ACT increased by 800,000 in 2001. This shows that the status quo is not an option, because people are already voting with their feet.

	Number of benefit recipients receiving their benefit by ACT
1993	5,166,000
1994	5,852,000
1995	7,084,000
1996[1]	7,508,000
1997	8,005,000
1998[2]	8,691,000
1999	9,180,000

[2] Includes invalid care allowance from June 1998
[3] Includes guardian's allowance from June 2000

Information is available from 1993 on the number of customers being paid by ACT with the exception of customers in receipt of jobseeker's allowance (for which data is not available). The table reflects the number of benefit recipients being paid by ACT. The figures include customers receiving payment by ACT for the first time as well as those moving from paper based methods of payment to ACT.

Universal Bank

Brian Cotter: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what funding the Government have secured from the main lending banks in order to finance the Universal Bank project. [43345]

Malcolm Wicks: The main UK high street banks and the Nationwide Building Society have together agreed to contribute a total of £180 million over five years towards the costs of the new Post Office Card Account. They have also agreed to make their basic bank accounts accessible through post offices.

Brian Cotter: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) how many discussions he has had with the Post Office on the Universal bank; [43338]

(2) if he will make a statement on the future of the Universal bank project. [43342]

Malcolm Wicks: Officials from the Department, together with Inland Revenue and Northern Ireland social security agency officials, meet with the Post Office on a regular basis. Contracts have now been signed between these Departments and the Post Office for the provision of the new post office card account.

Council Tax (Mentally Impaired People)

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will extend the arrangement for a non-dependent deduction, relating to those who are severely mentally impaired, to council tax. [41782]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 11 March 2002]: Regulations already provide that deductions are not made from a person's council tax benefit where a non-dependant member of the household is severely mentally impaired as defined in schedule 1 of the Local Government Finance Act 1992.

Foster Carers

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what recent representations he has received on the extension of home responsibilities protection to whole-time foster carers. [37304]

Mr. McCartney [holding answer 26 February 2002]: We regularly receive representations on all aspects of state retirement pension entitlement from a variety of organisations and interested individuals.

Dr. Jack Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if home responsibilities protection will be given to foster carers. [37186]

Mr. McCartney [holding answer 27 February 2002]: Foster carers whose allowance contains a reward element may be liable for national insurance contributions on a self-employed basis. Where there is no liability, they may choose to pay voluntary contributions to assist in qualifying for state retirement pension. Foster carers who receive child benefit for their own children under aged 16 will be eligible for home responsibilities protection. We will keep these arrangements under review as we do with all rules relating to benefits.

Dr. Jack Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what pension arrangement foster carers are entitled to; and if he will make a statement on support for those who give up work to care for foster children. [37187]

Mr. McCartney [holding answer 27 February 2002]: Foster carers whose allowance contains a reward element may be liable to pay national insurance contributions as a self-employed person. Those who have no liability may choose to pay voluntary contributions to assist them to qualify for basic state retirement pension. Where a foster carer receives child benefit for a child of their own aged under 16, they will be eligible for home responsibilities protection. We will keep these arrangements under review as we do with all rules relating to benefits. Married women of pensionable age will be entitled to a retirement pension of 60 per cent. of their husband's entitlement when he reaches state pension age and makes a claim.

Housing and Council Tax Benefit

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what plans he has to reform non-dependent deductions for housing benefit and council tax benefits. [42257]

Malcolm Wicks: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 14 November 2001, Official Report, column 787W.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the specific measures were of the direction issued to Hackney Council for the improvement of its administration of housing benefit and council tax benefit. [44304]

Malcolm Wicks: The housing benefit direction issued on 12 October 2001 to the London borough of Hackney, under section 15 of the Local Government Act 1999, required the authority to achieve the following:

(a) clear its backlog of benefits work by 31 December 2001;

(b) in completing this action, satisfy itself on an on-going basis that it was acting lawfully and properly by carrying out appropriate checks;

(c) clear the backlog of work without adversely affecting the speed and accuracy of non-backlog housing benefit and council tax benefit work.

A copy of the direction is available in the Library.

Home Responsibilities Protection

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people are entitled to home responsibilities protection; and at what annual cost. [37305]

Mr. McCartney [holding answer 26 February 2002]: Such information as is available is in the table. We cannot calculate an annual cost as this is dependent upon the individual's circumstances at pension age.

Numbers of people of working age entitled to home responsibilities protection

Thousand

Tax year	Men	Women	Total
1990–91	116	5,142	5,257
1991–92	127	5,253	5,380
1992–93	139	5,368	5,507
1993–94	155	5,446	5,600
1994–95	166	5,478	5,644
1995–96	181	5,484	5,665
1996–97	196	5,467	5,662

Notes:
1. Figures are subject to sampling error.
2. Figures are rounded to the nearest thousand and are shown in thousands.
3. These figures are the number of individuals entitled to HRP. They include those who have not used it to reduce the number of years needed for a full basic state retirement pension.
4. 1996–97 figures are the latest available.

Incapacity Benefit

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) how many people were (a) unemployed and (b) claiming incapacity benefit in April in each of the last five years; [44259]

(2) what proportion of incapacity benefit claimants have returned to full-time employment in each of the last five years. [44260]

Mr. Nicholas Brown [holding answer 20 March 2002]: We are undertaking a fundamental overhaul of the welfare system, transforming it from a passive organisation paying out benefits to an active system that fights poverty, creates opportunity and helps people become self-sufficient and independent.

Our new Jobcentre Plus service ensures that people making new or repeat claims to incapacity benefit have the opportunity of work-focused advice and support from a personal adviser so they can be helped to move into work when they are ready to do so.

The available information is in the table.

	Number of people unemployed	Number of people claiming incapacity benefit
May 1997	1,556,000	2,370,500
May 1998	1,293,000	2,316,900
May 1999	1,221,100	2,277,500
May 2000	1,063,700	2,263,200
May 2001	935,700	2,327,000

Notes:
1. All figures are rounded to the nearest hundred. Incapacity benefit data are collected quarterly in May, August, November and February of each year.
2. Incapacity benefit figures include national insurance credits only cases.
3. From 13 April 1995 people of pension age were no longer able to claim incapacity benefit. Incapacity benefit recipients already over pension age could continue to receive incapacity benefit for up to five years after state pension age.
4. Unemployment figures have been seasonally adjusted.
5. Figures are for Great Britain.

Sources:
1. Office for National Statistics: count of claimants of unemployment-related benefits from Benefits Agency computer systems.
2. Incapacity benefit figures are taken from 5 per cent. samples of the incapacity benefit computer system and exclude a small number of cases held clerically.

Information on the number of people who have returned to full-time employment following a claim to incapacity benefit is not available.

Social Fund

Paul Goggins: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what gross budget will be set for the discretionary Social Fund in 2002–03. [46332]

Malcolm Wicks: The discretionary Social Fund budget for 2002–03 will be £627 million. This represents an increase of £6.4 million over the total gross budget allocated in April 2001.

As part of this allocation, the Community Care Grant budget will be increased by £5 million to £108 million. The loans budget will be £518 million, an increase of £1.4 million over that allocated in April 2001.

£1 million will be retained centrally as a contingency reserve. For example, to provide additional help to Districts facing unexpected and unplanned expenditure.

Further details of individual District budget allocations, and the basis on which these were made, have been placed in the Library.

Minimum Income Guarantee

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people in (a) Stoke-on-Trent, North, (b) Staffordshire and (c) England he expects to have a guaranteed income of £98 per week from next April; and if he will make a statement. [25526]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is as follows.

The forecast number of claimants of the minimum income guarantee from April 2002 in England is 1,485,000.

Nationally there are over 1.7 million pensioners claiming the MIG. By April 2002 a single pensioner will be at least £15 a week better off in real terms than in 1997 from the MIG rises. A pensioner couple will be well over £23 a week better off.

New Deal

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what targets he sets for (a) enrolment, (b) programme completion and (c) permanent employment for the New Deal for Disabled People; and if he will make a statement on the extent to which such targets have been achieved. [44261]

Mr. Nicholas Brown [holding answer 20 March 2002]: The New Deal for Disabled People is testing new and innovative ways of helping people on incapacity benefits into work. Although Job Brokers have provided indications of planned take-up, these are commercial in confidence. No targets have been set for enrolment, programme completion or permanent employment.

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the cost per permanent job achieved by the New Deal for Disabled People has been since its full initiation. [44262]

Mr. Nicholas Brown [holding answer 20 March 2002]: Under the New Deal for Disabled People, sustained employment is defined as employment lasting six months or more. As the programme only became available nationally from July 2001, it is not yet possible to provide a meaningful figure for job placements resulting in sustained employment nor therefore a figure for the cost per sustained job achieved.

Older People

Mr. MacDougall: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what initiatives his Department has in place to encourage (a) organisations, (b) companies and (c) the civil service to employ people who are aged 50 years and over. [42400]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: Since 1997, this Government have consistently shown its commitment to employment opportunities for all regardless of age. For those over 50 there is a comprehensive range of back to work help including New Deal 50 plus. Government support has ensured that the employment rate for the over-50s has increased each year for the last four years. Through New Deal 50 plus alone, over 61,000 people so far have been helped back to work.

We are vigorously promoting the benefits of recruiting, training and retaining older workers as part of our Age Positive campaign. We have already spoken to employers, employer organisations, employees and voluntary sector organisations about ways in which the message can be spread further. The Age Positive campaign is going from strength to strength, working to challenge ageist employment practices between now and the implementation of age legislation in 2006. The newest feature of the campaign is the Age Positive website (www.agepositive.gov.uk). It features guidance and good practice case studies for employers including our recent publication 'Good Practice in the Recruitment and Retention of Older Workers' which is also available in the Library.

For small and medium sized employers, we have developed a model programme on the business benefits of age diversity and recruiting the over-50s. To date 20 workshops have been delivered across the country and we are looking to increase this in the coming months, extending to Scotland and Wales.

The Department's Diversity and Equality statement makes an explicit commitment to non-discrimination on age grounds. We do not discriminate against anyone on the basis of their age when recruiting or promoting staff. We have also been working closely with the Cabinet Office to promote this approach across the civil service and have done so since the introduction of the Code of Practice on Age Diversity in Employment, which we published in June 1999. The departmental retirement age for all staff below senior civil service was increased from 60 to 65 with effect from 1 April 2000. Staff have the choice to retire at any time between these ages.

Pensions

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) if he will estimate the number of (a) people receiving and (b) pension providers issuing combined pension forecasts; [43359]

(2) if he will estimate the number of (a) employers and (b) pension providers who are providing information for the combined pension forecast. [43358]

Mr. Nicholas Brown [holding answer 14 March 2002]: To date, 33,662 customers have received a combined pension statement issued in partnership with four employers and three pension providers.

Since its launch at the annual Pensions Show on 17 October 2001, the new service has received expressions of interest from 91 private or occupational pension providers who wish to take advantage of this new, voluntary service.

These providers are progressing through the various stages involved in introducing the service to their customers, including the formal registration process, obtaining the required customer consent to exchange personal information with the Department and developing their IT systems to share data electronically.

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will estimate what proportion of (a) occupational pensions defined by benefit, (b) occupational pensions defined by contribution and (c) personal pensions provided for survivor benefits or joint life annuities; and what proportion of such pensions provide for indexation of pensions. [37040]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is in the table.

Numbers of active members of defined benefit schemes according to benefits payable on death after retirement

Thousands

Benefit payable	Private sector		Public sector		Total
	As of right under scheme rules	At trustees' discretion	As of right under scheme rules	At trustees' discretion
Pension to surviving spouse	4,810	220	4,100	—	9,130
Pension to surviving children	3,090	600	4,100	—	7,790
Pension to a divorced ex-spouse	200	1,680	600	160	2,640
Pension to any nominated person	320	2,560	600	340	3,820
Total active members of defined benefit schemes	5,140	—	4,100	—	9,240

Notes:

1. Schemes may be included under more than one category in the above table.
2. The GAD survey did not include information on the number of defined contribution and personal pension in payment that provide for a survivor's pension as most of these schemes provide a lump sum on retirement with which the member buys a pension. It is then up to the member to choose whether or not the pension will provide for a survivor's pension. In a defined contribution scheme used to contract out of the state earnings related pension scheme (SERPS), that part of the pension deriving from the national insurance contribution rebate (the protected rights) must be used to purchase a pension providing for a survivor's pension where the member is married at the time the pension is purchased.
3. The same rules apply to personal pensions. It is entirely a matter for the member to decide whether or not the pension provides for survivor's benefits except where the personal pension has been used to contract out of (SERPS). In these circumstances, that part of the pension fund comprising the protected rights, must be used to purchase a pension providing for a survivor's pension where the member is married at the time that the pension is purchased.
4. All occupational pension schemes (both defined benefit and defined contribution) are subject to indexation. That part of the pension in payment that derives from pension rights built up from 6 April 1997 must be increased by the percentage increase in the retail price index, or 5 per cent, whichever is the lesser.
5. With personal pensions only that part of the pension deriving from the protected rights is subject to indexation. It is up to the scheme member to decide whether or not the pension deriving from the excess of these rights is to be indexed.

Table 10.9 of the GAD Survey of Occupational Pension Schemes 1995

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions in each of the past 30 calendar years what was the (a) percentage ratio of current average earnings to the state basic retirement pension, (b) same percentage ratio to average state pension paid to individuals (excluding dependent spouses) and (c) same percentage ratio to mean income from state and occupational pension schemes. [40112]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 5 March 2002]: The information requested is in the tables.

1. The figures are based statistics published in the Pensioner Income Series 1999–00.
2. The definition of a pensioner unit is a single person over state pension age or a couple where the man is over state pension age.
3. Data for years prior to 1994–5 would only be possible using the Family Expenditure Survey but this analysis is not readily available.
4. Since parts (a) and (b) of this question are based on DWP administrative data on benefit receipt, part (c) is not directly comparable.
5. Figures are for GB.

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many employees in each of the last ten years were (a) participants in contracted-out funded pension schemes, (b) participants in contracted-in payments to the national insurance system and (c) outside either category. Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will change the practice of starting a pension from the Monday following a person's 60 or 65 birthday. [37423]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: Entitlement to Retirement Pension begins with the pay-day on or following the pensioner's 60 or 65 birthday. Changes in entitlement, for example a decrease because of a prolonged stay in hospital, also takes effect from the pay-day following the change in circumstances. The same rule applies with the termination of the award. The principle of paying Retirement Pension in whole weeks stems from the fact that the benefit is traditionally paid in advance.

There are no plans to change the present arrangements for paying Retirement Pension.

Mobility Allowance

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions for what reason medical checks in respect of mobility allowance are carried out on a person who has a medically confirmed condition that will not improve; and what plans there are to change this system. [45893]

Maria Eagle: Entitlement to the mobility component of disability living allowance is based on the effects of a disabling condition and not the condition itself. Even where a condition remains unchanged, the effect on a person's ability to walk, or the help they need from other people when out and about, can change over time for a number of reasons, including medical treatment, therapy, or how the person adapts to their disability.

When considering entitlement to either care or mobility components of disability living allowance, the decision maker may request a report based on an examination by a specially trained Medical Services doctor. This is not primarily about diagnosis, but is intended to obtain an expert view of the disabling effects of the condition. The decision maker will consider this, along with any other evidence about their needs supplied by the disabled person, their medical attendants, carers or others with relevant information, to decide whether the relevant statutory provisions relating to entitlement are satisfied.

There is a substantial programme of work to modernise the administration of disability living allowance. This includes work to ensure that medical evidence is utilised as efficiently as possible.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will make a statement on eligibility for mobility allowance. [45891]

Maria Eagle: Mobility allowance was replaced by the mobility component of disability living allowance in 1992. The mobility component, which comprises a lower rate and a higher rate, is primarily to help people who are severely disabled early in life.

To qualify for the lower rate claimants must be aged five or over, and must be so severely disabled physically or mentally that they cannot take advantage of the faculty of walking out of doors without guidance or supervision from another person most of the time. To qualify for the higher rate claimants must be aged three or over, and must be so severely physically disabled that they are unable to walk or virtually unable to walk.

Approximately 1.5 million severely disabled people currently receive the higher rate and some 0.5 million receive the lower rate of the mobility component.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how often medical checks are carried out to ensure a person is still eligible for the mobility allowance. [45892]

Maria Eagle: The former mobility allowance is now the higher rate mobility component of disability living allowance (DLA). Assessment of a DLA claimant's medical condition occurs at the time of the initial claim, and at any subsequent review of entitlement. A review normally occurs when a decision is being made on a renewal of benefit in the case of limited-period awards; or where the recipient themselves requests a review; or under the rolling programme of periodic review of long awards.

Jobcentre-Plus Offices

David Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) how many incidents of verbal abuse or damage to office equipment occurred in (a) 1999–2000 and (b) 2000–01 in branches of the Employment Service; [45506]

(2) how many incidents of verbal abuse or damage to office equipment occurred in (a) 1999–2000 and (b) 2000–01 in branches of the Benefits Agency. [45505]

Malcolm Wicks: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for Portsmouth, South (Mr. Hancock) on 13 March 2002, Official Report, column 1118W.

Pension Service

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) what advice on pensioner benefits will be available in Jobcentre Plus offices following the introduction of the Pension Service; [45694]

(2) if he will estimate the (a) number and (b) percentage of inquiries received by pension centres which will be outsourced; [45688]

(3) what plans he has to outsource (a) telephone, (b) e-mail and (c) postal inquiries made to pension centres; [45689]

(4) if he will estimate the average number of Pension Service staff in each local authority area who will offer (a) face-to-face non-home visits, (b) administrative support and (c) home visits; and if pensioners will have an entitlement to a home visit from Pension Service staff; [45692]

(5) if he will list the benefits and credits on which Pension Service staff will be trained to advise in (a) pension centres and (b) face-to-face contact sessions; [45693]

(6) what progress he has made in establishing partnership agreements with voluntary organisations that will deliver face-to-face advice on pensioner benefits; [45690]

(7) if he will estimate the average number of Pension Service staff who will offer face-to-face advice in each local authority area; [45691]

(8) pursuant to his answer of 4 March 2002, Official Report, column 15W, if pensioners will retain the right to face-to-face advice on pensions matters following the introduction of the proposed Pensions Service; and how such a right will be exercisable. [45197]

Mr. Nicholas Brown [holding answer 21 March 2002]: The Pension Service will offer an improved service for both today's and future pensioners. There are no plans to outsource customer inquiries.

The new organisation, and in particular the local service will take time to build. In the mean time all of our current arrangements for face-to-face contact will continue to apply.

In terms of the staff who will provide face-to-face advice, we are still determining precise numbers and the ratio of contact centre staff to local service staff. Final decisions have yet to be taken on where local service staff will be located. However numbers will reflect the needs of local communities and will not be assigned by local authority area.

Staff will be trained to identify potential entitlement to other benefits and will refer customers on as appropriate.

Retirement Ages

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if the distinction between working and retirement ages constitutes the watershed between the respective responsibilities of the new Jobcentre Plus and Pensions Agency services; and what arrangements are being made to ensure that officers of either agency can handle client queries which do not fully match the division of administrative responsibilities. [44265]

Mr. Nicholas Brown [holding answer 20 March 2002]: The Pension Service and Jobcentre Plus will operate within a single Department.

The Pension Service will offer an improved service for pensioners. It will be customer focused and will give pensioners a modern, personalised, efficient service designed to meet their needs. It will also provide information for future pensioners to help them make decisions about their future pension arrangements.

Jobcentre Plus will provide work-focused benefit and other services to people of working age, and services such as New Deal 50 plus to people above retirement age who are looking for work.

Arrangements will be in place between the agencies to cover specific cross-cutting issues, such as access to the social fund by people above retirement age, and access to the minimum income guarantee by men aged between 60 and 64. To ensure that levels of service are maintained, officials will be provided with contact details across both agencies, and in the Department's other businesses, to ensure that customers are dealing with the right part of the Department for the service they require regardless of the route by which they first approached it.

Accounting Standards

Mr. David Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assessment he has made of the implementation, time scale and content of accounting standard FRS 17 and its effects on standard and final salary pension schemes. [45264]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: Accounting standards are a matter for the Accounting Standards Board which is independent of Government. There are many factors affecting occupational pension provision including longer life expectancy and falling stockmarkets. It is not possible to isolate the effects of FRS 17 from these other factors.

Legal Aid

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what plans he has for the re-introduction of legal aid in respect of civil claims for personal injuries and disease cases. [44992]

Ms Rosie Winterton: I have been asked to reply.

The Access to Justice Act 1999 excludes most personal injury claims from the scope of Community Legal Service funding. However funding is still available for personal injury claims against public authorities which allege serious wrongdoing, such as child abuse claims and actions against the police. A personal injury claim may also be funded if it has a significant wider public interest. Support funding remains available for exceptionally expensive cases. Public funding is also available for clinical negligence cases, as we recognise that costly investigative work is necessary for these cases to be brought.

We believe that conditional fee agreements provide a suitable alternative to public funding for those personal injury cases excluded from the scope of the Community Legal Service scheme, and we have no plans to re-introduce public funding for those cases.

TRANSPORT, LOCAL GOVERNMENT AND THE REGIONS

Local Government

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will list additional statutory obligations placed upon local authorities by the Government in each of the past five years. [40215]

Dr. Whitehead: The information for all Departments is not held centrally. The main new duties placed on local authorities by my Department in the last five years include:

Local Government Act 1999

Duty of best value to make arrangements to secure continuous improvement in the way in which they exercise their functions, having regard to a combination of economy, efficiency and effectiveness.

Greater London Authority Act 1999

Duty on London borough councils and the common council of the City of London to have regard to the Mayor's transport strategy, municipal waste management strategy and London air quality strategy; and to consult the Mayor on their unitary development plan to ensure it is in general conformity with the Mayor's spatial development strategy.

Local Government Act 2000

Duty to consult, draw up proposals and implement new executive arrangements.

Duty to hold a referendum on a directly elected mayor if their proposals involve a form of executive which includes a directly elected mayor, where a valid petition is submitted or the Secretary of State directs the authority.

Duty to appoint an overview and scrutiny committee.

Duty to prepare a community strategy.

Duty to adopt a code of conduct within six months of the new model code coming into force.

Duty to establish a standards committee.

Duty to set up an independent remuneration panel to advise on their allowance scheme.

Transport Act 2000

Duty to prepare and keep under review a local transport plan, which includes a bus strategy, for their area.

Duty to offer disabled residents and elderly people of state pension age a free pass entitling them to half fares on local bus services.

Representation of the People Act 2001 and Political Parties, Elections and Referendums Act 2000

Various duties, or changes to duties, in relation to local, parliamentary, and European parliamentary elections, including the registration of electors and the conduct of elections in their areas.

Homelessness Act 2002

Stronger duties to accommodate and assist homeless people.

Duty on housing authorities to adopt a homelessness strategy every five years based on a homelessness review, and a duty on social services to co-operate in this on request.

Duty on housing departments to co-operate with social services when dealing with homeless families with children.

Spring Supply Estimates

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will make a statement on item (a) lxxxvi and (b) lxxxv on page 9 of the Spring Supply Estimates. [40234]

Dr. Whitehead: Item (a) lxxxvi on page 9 of the Spring Supply Estimates provided for payments to and receipts from Railtrack plc (in administration) in accordance with the Loan Agreement and indemnities given under section 63 of the Railways Act 1993. Item (b) lxxxv on the same page of the Spring Supply Estimates relates to the heavy goods vehicle (HGV) transitional rebate scheme, which covered the period 1 December 2000 to 30 November 2001.

Press and Public Relations Staff

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many people were employed in a press or public relations function in his Department and its predecessor on 1 January in (a) 1997, (b) 1998, (c) 1999, (d) 2000, (e) 2001 and (f) 2002. [39946]

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many staff in his Department's press office have received (a) termination and (b) redundancy payments in each of the last four years. [41082]

Dr. Whitehead: I refer the hon. Members to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State to the hon. Member for Maidenhead (Mrs. May) on 19 March 2002, Official Report, column 220W.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what involvement Ian Jones had in drafting the Department's press release of 15 February entitled Stephen Byers' statement on the resignations of Martin Sixsmith and Jo Moore. [41996]

Mr. Byers [holding answer 11 March 2002]: Under Part II of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information it is not the practice to disclose details of internal discussions and advice.

Leak Inquiries

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many leak inquiries have been held in his Department and its predecessor in each of the last five years; and how many led to action against a member of staff. [41993]

Mr. Byers [holding answer 11 March 2002]: Four inquiries were undertaken in my Department and its predecessor in 1997–98, two in 1998–99, one in 1999–2000, three in 2000–01. None of these inquiries led to action against a member of staff. Two inquiries have been carried out this financial year. No action has been taken against any member of staff as a result of the first inquiry. Consideration is being given to whether action against any member of staff is appropriate as a result of the second inquiry.

Railways

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will list the total public and private investment, not including public resource expenditure, allocated for the railways to be spent over the period 2001 to 2011, at today's prices as at (a) 1 April 2001, (b) 2 April 2001, (c) 13 January 2002, (d) 14 January 2002, (e) 29 January 2002 and (f) the latest available date. [45706]

Mr. Jamieson: I refer the hon. Member to the updated version of table A3 from the Ten-Year Plan for Transport, copies of which were placed in the Libraries of the House on 25 February.

Total capital investment in rail over the ten years to 31 March 2011 is estimated to be £52.9 billion (£18.6 billion public plus £34.3 billion private). This figure has increased from £49 billion in the original Ten-Year Plan to reflect the public sector funding increases since then. These figures are in cash prices, standard HM Treasury deflators should be used to translate into current prices.

Rail funding over the period also includes £14.9 billion of public resource funding, of which £3 billion is estimated to be used as direct revenue support for the private investment. This £3 billion should be deducted when calculating the total level of public and private funding for rail to avoid double counting.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions, pursuant to his answer of 18 March 2002, Official Report, column 21W, how many meetings he has had with the Rail Regulator since 11 December 2001. [46119]

Mr. Byers: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State (Mr. Jamieson), to the hon. Member for Epsom and Ewell (Chris Grayling) on Tuesday 11 December 2001, Official Report, column 789W.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will list the route specific capacity utilisation strategies being developed by the SRA. [45462]

Mr. Byers: The SRA is currently developing one route specific capacity utilisation strategy in relation to the West Coast Main Line.

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what recent representations he has received from (a) the Strategic Rail Authority, (b) the Association of Train Operating Companies, (c) train operating companies, (d) the Rail Passenger Committee and (e) other passenger representatives regarding (i) rail fares and fare regulation and (ii) network railcards. [45415]

Mr. Jamieson: The Association of Train Operating Companies informed Ministers and local MPs of their proposals for the network railcard. No other recent representations have been received on these subjects from industry organisations or passenger representatives.

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions, pursuant to the answer of 6 March 2002, Official Report, column 373W, on railway policy, what the changes in demand were to which his Department responded; and who within his Department was responsible for (a) assessing these changes and (b) reallocation of resources. [45495]

Mr. Jamieson: I refer the hon. Member to my answers of 6 March 2002, Official Report, column 373W and 18 March 2002, Official Report, column 22W.

Rail Fares

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what recent changes (a) his Department and (b) the Strategic Rail Authority have made to (i) rail fare regulation and (ii) the regulation of network railcards; and what changes are planned. [45414]

Mr. Jamieson: No recent changes have been made to rail fare regulation. Network railcards are not regulated. The issue of rail fares and fare regulation will be dealt with through the Strategic Rail Authority's review of fares policy.

Railtrack

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions, pursuant to the answer of 6 March 2002, Official Report, column 370W, on Railtrack, if he will list the variety of other organisations referred to. [45498]

Mr. Jamieson: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him by my right hon. Friend the Minister for Transport on 8 February 2002, Official Report, column 1188W.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many meetings he has had with Ernst and Young as administrators of Railtrack since 1 January. [45451]

Mr. Byers: It is not the normal practice of the Government to release details of meetings or discussions with private individuals or companies.

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions when Railtrack in administration will repay the money lent to it since going into administration. [44232]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 18 March 2002]: I refer the right hon. Member to the answer given today by my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State to my hon. Friend the Member for Scarborough and Whitby (Lawrie Quinn) [ref. 45966].

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions on what date the Railtrack administrator is expected to repay the moneys advanced under the commercial loan agreement. [45298]

Lawrie Quinn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will make a statement on the current position of Railtrack plc in administration. [45966]

Mr. Byers: Following the European Commission's decision of 13 February 2002 to clear the package of financial assistance to Railtrack plc (in administration), the administrator has secured up to £4.4 billion of commercial banking facilities, backed by a Government guarantee. This is a clear demonstration of the willingness of the private sector to invest in the UK railway sector. It has enabled the administrator to repay, with interest, the £1.9 billion he has drawn down from the £2.1 billion short-term commercial loan that Government provided on 7 October 2001.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what discussions he has had with the Treasury on the tax treatment of share holdings in Railtrack. [45448]

Mr. Byers: My Department and the Treasury have had numerous discussions at a variety of levels in relation to Railtrack.

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how much money has been (a) granted to, (b) lent to and (c) guaranteed for Railtrack since going into administration. [44233]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 18 March 2002]: I refer the right hon. Member to my answer of 12 March 2002, Official Report, column 917W.

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how much the administration of Railtrack has cost the Government to date; and how much the Government have spent on (a) railway consultancy, (b) accountancy and (c) legal advice in the last five months. [44240]

Mr. Spellar [holding answer 18 March 2002]: The total fees for the Administrator and his advisers were about £17.5million to the end of February 2002, which will be repaid when Railtrack comes out of administration. With regard to how much the Government have spent on railway consultancy, accountancy and legal advice, I refer the right hon. Member to the reply given by my hon. Friend the Minister for Transport to the hon. Member for Epsom and Ewell (Chris Grayling) on 12 March 2002, Official Report, column 916W.

Tinsley Viaduct

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions (1) what analysis has been carried out of alternative routes for traffic using the Tinsley viaduct; [44670]

(2) how many (a) cars, motorbikes and vans, (b) lorries and (c) camper-vans and caravans used the Tinsley Viaduct each day in the last 12 months; [44669]

(3) if he will list the work carried out on the Tinsley Viaduct on the M1 in the last 30 years, in each case giving (a) the aim and nature of the works, (b) details of the Government body responsible, (c) the length of time the works took and (d) the costs of the works; [44667]

(4) what his estimate is of the change in the level of traffic on the Tinsley Viaduct on the M1 following the planned return to three lanes of traffic; [44671]

(5) what works are planned on the Tinsley Viaduct on the M1. [44668]

Mr. Byers: I have asked the Chief Executive of the Highways Agency, Tim Matthews, to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Tim Matthews to Mrs. Theresa May, dated 25 March 2002:

The Secretary of State for Transport, Stephen Byers, has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Questions about Tinsley Viaduct on the M1. The Highways Agency has the responsibility for this structure.

In addition to routine maintenance of the structure, major works were carried out between 1976 and 1980 to strengthen the structure following the report of the Merrison Committee into box girder bridges. The Viaduct has also been rewaterproofed and repainted during the 30 year period. Records are no longer available to enable me to provide details of the duration and costs of these works.

The Highways Agency has recently awarded (a contract) to Edmund Nuttall to assess the extent of strengthening works needed to allow the viaduct to carry 3-lanes of traffic in each direction. This investigation started on 25 February and will take up to four months to complete. Decisions on what works are necessary, will be taken in the light of this investigation.

Traffic data for the viaduct is not available in the form you requested. However we do have total vehicle numbers for the year 2000, the last twelve month period for which figures are available:

These are:

Cars, motorbikes and vans including camper vans and caravans—31,486,086

Lorries—9,897,218

These figures equate to Average Annual Daily Traffic flows of 86,263 (cars, motorbikes and vans) and 27,115 (lorries).

Reinstating three traffic lanes in each direction is not expected to have any material effect on the volume of traffic using this section of the M1. The main benefit of restoring capacity will be the reduction of congestion at peak times. This will improve journey-time reliability and reduce accident risks associated with traffic queues on motorways.

Several plans exist for diverting traffic onto alternative routes. They are applied in consultation with the police and depend upon the nature of the incident requiring a diversion. For example, local diversions from the top level of the Viaduct to the lower level, the A631, are used during periods of high winds and when accidents occur on the Viaduct. Wider diversions to direct traffic off the motorway at junctions in advance of the Viaduct are also available.

When the Viaduct needs to be closed for roadworks, alternative traffic routes are agreed with the Local Highway Authorities. It is rarely necessary to close the Viaduct completely. Planned closures take place when traffic flows are reduced, usually at night.

If you require any further information, our Group Leader Phil Stanton, will be happy to assist you. He can be contacted at the Agency's offices at Sunley Tower, Piccadilly Plaza, Manchester M14BE or by telephone on 0161 930 5688.

Heathrow

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what discussions he has had with interested parties following the publication of the Inspector's report on Heathrow terminals on the development of rail links from Heathrow to the West. [45425]

Mr. Byers: I have made clear that I expect BAA to comply with their commitments to encourage the introduction and use of additional public transport services to Heathrow. The conditions of the Terminal 5 planning permission provide safeguarding measures for future rail links to and from the west of Heathrow. The SRA is continuing discussions with BAA on all options for improved rail links, including those west of Heathrow.

Rail Lines (Kent)

Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions when the SRA will announce the tender document for commuter trains on the new CTLR railway lines; and if he will make a statement. [46146]

Mr. Jamieson: The SRA are currently working to a provisional timetable which envisages that the letting process would start in the summer with the publication of an OJEC notice inviting expressions of interest in delivering the domestic services, including the required rolling stock. This would be followed by the issue of an invitation to negotiate [ITN] in the autumn.

Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions (1) when the SRA will publish the required electricity supply needs and costs for the London to Sittingbourne trains for the new 12 carriage 375 rolling stock with particular reference to requirements during the rush hour; [46147]

(2) what discussions Railtrack has had with Connex SE management since 1997 on increasing the power supply for the new class 375 rolling stock for the London to Sittingbourne line; and if he will make a statement. [46148]

Mr. Jamieson: The Strategic Rail Authority (SRA) is working with the industry, including Connex and Railtrack to ensure all matters connected with the replacement of slam door rolling stock are carried out effectively. Their remit covers the London—Sittingbourne route and the enhancement to the power supply system will take into account the need to operate 12 car trains on this route.

West Coast Main Line

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions when the SRA's review of capacity utilisation on the West Coast Main Line will be published for consultation. [45460]

Mr. Byers: The Strategic Rail Authority began a review of the project's outputs last year. The outputs will be subject to approval by the Rail Regulator.

East London Line Extension

Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what assessment his Department has made of incorporating the Braithwaite viaduct in the East London Line extension; and when he expects to make an announcement on this matter. [44750]

Mr. Jamieson: The Braithwaite viaduct is outside the limits of deviation established for the northern extension of the East London Line under its Transport and Works Order. London Underground Ltd. have no plans, or powers, to construct a railway on that alignment.

Consequently, there is no possibility of the Braithwaite viaduct being incorporated in the East London Line project. LUL have not sought the removal of the Braithwaite viaduct, which is now listed as a Schedule II building, as it does not form part of the East London Line works at the Bishopsgate Goodsyard. London Underground will need to obtain Listed Building consent to demolish the structures adjacent to the Braithwaite.

Rail Freight

David Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what studies have been undertaken by his Department on the impact of rail freight terminals on local communities. [45130]

Mr. Jamieson: Rail freight facilities are subject to approval under normal planning procedures, which take into account, among other things, the impact on the local environment.

David Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will list the rail freight terminals located in the UK. [45129]

Mr. Jamieson: A rail freight terminal may be any interface between rail freight services, other modes and storage facilities. They vary enormously in size and scope from a simple siding to a multi-user distribution park. Railtrack's 2001 Network Management Statement gives the number of freight facilities connected to its network, including closed sites and maintenance depots. Railtrack's website, www.freightcommercial.co.uk, contains a list of these facilities. I understand the information is also available from a commercial website, www.railfreightonline.com.

David Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will estimate the level of freight transported by (a) road and (b) rail each year in the UK. [45128]

Mr. Jamieson: Estimates are not made on an UK basis for both road and rail freight. The latest available comparative figures are for Great Britain in 2000:

(a) road: 1,689 million tonnes lifted and 158 billion tonne-kilometres moved.

(b) rail: 93 million tonnes lifted and 18 billion tonne-kilometres moved.

Central Railway Freight Line

Mr. Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what assessment he has received from the SRA regarding the (a) financial and (b) technical case for the proposed Central Railway freight line. [45005]

Mr. Jamieson: Last year the Strategic Rail Authority provided Ministers with a high level financial and technical review of Central Railway's proposals. With the help of consultants and with the co-operation of Central Railway, the SRA are to carry out a further detailed assessment in order to further test key areas of the proposals. This is an essential piece of work if the Government are to be able to take an informed decision about Central Railway's request for a hybrid Bill. The SRA anticipates that the work will be completed by September.

Channel Tunnel Rail Freight

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions (1) what recent discussions he has had with (a) the EU Transport Commissioner and (b) the French Transport Minister on the closure of the channel tunnel rail freight facilities; [43978]

(2) what assessment he has made of the impact on his rail freight target of the closure of the Channel Tunnel rail freight facilities; and if he will make a statement. [44011]

Mr. Spellar: The channel tunnel rail freight facilities have not closed.

West Somerset Railway Link

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will give financial help to the West Somerset Railway Link to the main line at Taunton. [43401]

Mr. Jamieson: There are at present no plans to do so, although it is understood that proposals are being considered by Somerset county council in the context of its Local Transport Plan.

Strategic Rail Authority

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions (1) what discussions he has had with the Strategic Rail Authority regarding the funding of multi-modal schemes; [45419]

(2) if he will make a statement on the proposed future funding of multi-modal schemes through the Strategic Rail Authority. [45420]

Mr. Jamieson: The Strategic Rail Authority is working with my Department on the processes by which the study outcomes will be taken forward.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions when the SRA's capacity utilisation strategy will be published for consultation. [45461]

Mr. Byers: The Strategic Rail Authority (SRA) is planning to publish a draft Capacity Utilisation Strategy consultation document later this year.

British Transport Police

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what the (a) operational and (b) target strength of the British Transport police in each BTP area was (i) in April 1997 and (ii) at the latest available date. [43950]

Mr. Byers: The British Transport police have provided me with the following information regarding operational and target strength in 1997 and 2002. In 1997 the force recorded target numbers according to rank rather than location.

British Transport staff numbers

	April 1997		March 2002
	Operational	Target	Operational	Target
Force HQ	114.00	—	109.00	112.00
London North	323.50	—	308.00	315.00
London South	296.00	—	308.05	315.00
Midlands	164.75	—	168.00	177.00
North East	203.00	—	189.10	195.10
North West	285.75	—	258.30	267.00
Scotland	195.00	—	203.40	202.40
South West	135.00	—	128.08	135.28
London Underground	415.35	—	430.00	420.00
	2,132.35	2,177	2,101.93	2,138.78

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what new arrangements the British Transport police are implementing to ensure that no individual case is acted on on the basis of an out-of-date arrest warrant; and if he will make a statement. [45182]

Mr. Jamieson: The British Transport police (BTP) have advised that after completing their initial 15 weeks at a regional training centre recruits return to the BTP's Force Training Centre where they receive specialist training that includes the execution of arrest warrants. Further guidelines on warrants are also available internally to all BTP staff. A specialist eight-day course is also run for the BTP's Police National Computer (PNC) operators. This provides detailed knowledge on the PNC and includes procedures relating to arrest warrants.

Mr. Peter Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many Transport police were employed in each of the last five years. [45309]

Mr. Jamieson: The British Transport police have provided me with the following information:

	Number of officers (full time equivalents)
1997	2,132
1998	2,095
1999	2,106
2000	2,073
2001	2,101

Passenger Transport

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions whether he intends to establish value for money criteria for allowances paid to PTA members. [44377]

Ms Keeble: Remuneration for PTA members under the Local Government Act 1972 and Local Government and Housing Act 1989 are entirely a matter for local determination.

Transport Delays

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what recent (a) assessment he has made and (b) research he has commissioned into the cost, in terms of customer and business time and financial impact, of transport delays. [45428]

Mr. Jamieson: The 10-year Plan for Transport made estimates of the amount of time lost on English roads as a result of delays due to congestion in 2000. The Plan made forecasts for 2010 of the increase in congestion and of the extent to which the policies in the Plan would reduce this rise in congestion.

A number of external estimates have also been made of the value road users might place on the elimination of congestion. These use different methods and therefore produce different results, but they all agree that this value runs to billions of pounds per annum.

Neither these external estimates, nor those undertaken by my Department, can be translated directly into assessments of the cost of congestion to business or more widely. This is because they relate only to the amount of time road users lose to congestion and the value of this time to them. They take no account of the costs of implementing the policies or schemes needed to reduce the amount of time lost. The true costs of congestion are therefore the economic and other benefits forgone if we do not tackle it.

We shall be doing further work in this area, the lessons from which we will take into account as part of our Review of the 10 year-Plan which we intend to publish in July.

Transport Costs

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what assessment has been made of (a) past and (b) likely future scenarios of changes in the cost of different modes of transport in the UK to (i) individuals and (ii) households. [45421]

Mr. Jamieson: The most recent published data on past trends in transport costs can be found in "Transport Statistics Great Britain 2001" (tables 1.15 and 1.25) and "Transport Trends 2001" (pages 23 and 41).

Chapter 9 of "Transport 2010", the Government's 10-year plan for transport, contains some general analysis of future transport costs, including illustrative scenarios and their potential impacts. More detail on these scenarios and on the assumptions underlying the 10-year plan is contained in the companion "Background Analysis" document.

Airport Security

Mr. Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions when he expects to reply to the letter of 19 November 2001 from the hon. Member for Leominster, concerning airport and baggage security. [45332]

Mr. Spellar: I replied to the hon. Member's letter on 18 December 2001.

Social Housing

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many (a) local authority dwellings and (b) dwellings owned by registered social landlords (i) were not of a decent standard on 1 April 2001, (ii) will have been brought up to a decent standard by 1 April 2002, and (iii) will not meet the decent standard on 1 April 2002. [43435]

Ms Keeble: We estimate that 1.7 million social homes did not meet the decent home standard at April 2001—about 1.2 million homes local authority homes and 500,000 homes owned by housing associations. These estimates will be updated later this year when the 2001 English House Condition Survey results are available.

Local authorities have plans to reduce their non-decent stock by 12 per cent. between April 2001 and March 2002. This is through a combination of investment in the housing they own and through transfer to housing associations. We do not yet have equivalent figures for dwellings owned by housing associations. The Housing Corporation is working with associations to ensure the 2004 target is met.

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what his estimate is of the cost of (a) reducing the number of social dwellings that are not up to a decent standard by one third in the period 1 April 2001 to 31 March 2004 and (b) reducing the number of social dwellings that are not up to a decent standard by 50 per cent. in the period 1 April 2001 to 31 March 2006. [43436]

Ms Keeble: At present we only have estimates for the costs associated with local authority stock. The estimated costs of tackling the capital works outlined above are about £9.5 billion by 2004.

The cost of reducing the number of non-decent homes by one third by 2004 depends on three factors:

(a) the cost of dealing with those dwellings identified as non-decent at April 2001

(b) the cost of making homes decent that fall below this standard between 2001 and 2004

(c) the cost of preventing homes becoming non-decent during the period.

The reduction of non-decent homes in the local authority sector will be achieved through a combination of investment in the local authority stock (through retention, transfer to Arms Length Management Organisations and via resources secured through Private Finance Initiative) and transfer of stock to housing associations.

Currently, no target has been set for the improvement required by 2006. A reduction of 50 per cent. in the number of non-decent LA homes would require investment of about £15 billion, through a combination of investment by local authorities and transfer.

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will make it his policy to require local authority housing investment programme returns to record the number of homes which (a) are and (b) are not of a decent standard on the same criteria as set out in the comprehensive spending review. [46109]

Ms Keeble: Local authorities are already required to provide information on their stock in their Housing Revenue Account business plans, which is part of the Housing Investment Programme.

Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions (1) how many local authority properties released for letting as a result of the cash incentive scheme in each Government office region in England in each of the past four years were (a) bedsits, (b) one-bedroomed , (c) two-bedroomed, (d) three-bedroomed, (e) four-bedroomed and (f) five-bedroomed or more; [44470]

(2) how many local authority tenants in each Government office in England have applied for a cash incentive scheme grant in each year since 1997–98; and how many of those (a) were offered a grant and (b) used a grant to purchase a property on the open market; [44469]

(3) what was the total value of cash incentive scheme grants made to local authority tenants in each Government office region in England in (a) 1997–98, (b) 1998–99, (c) 1999–2000 and 2000–01. [44468]

Ms Keeble: Information on the numbers and amounts of Cash Incentive Scheme grants made is given in the table. Data are not collected centrally on grant offers made or the types of properties released.

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many non-decent social dwellings there are in (a) England, (b) Wales, (c) Scotland and (d) Northern Ireland. [46220]

Ms Keeble: We estimate that 1.7 million households lived in non-decent social sector dwellings in 2001. This estimate will be updated later this year when the 2001 English House Condition Survey results are available.

The decent home standard applies to housing in England—different standards are used in Wales, Scotland and Northern Ireland.

Mr. Grogan: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Hendon (Mr. Dismore) of 12 December 2001, Official Report, column 871W, on rents, if he will provide similar estimates for the real terms percentage changes in each year he predicts for formula rents for council tenants in each local council in England until 2011. [43851]

Ms Keeble: As I said in my earlier answer to the hon. Member, Official Report, column 1004W, the underlying increase in 'formula' rents will be the same for all local authorities.

It is possible to make estimates of how average 'actual' rents might change in real terms between 2001–02 and 2011–12 if the national average local authority formula rent were to increase by an average of about 1.5 per cent. per year, and each local authority were to move its actual average rent to its average formula rent over that period (ignoring the impact of rent caps and the limit on annual rent changes for individual tenants). This was the basis of the figures given to the hon. Member for Hendon on 12 December. I am placing in the Libraries a table giving equivalent figures for all authorities on the same basis.

I must, however, emphasise once more that these figures are only estimates based on a number of assumptions. Ultimately the level of 'actual' local authority rents over the next ten years will depend, among other things, on the outcomes of future spending reviews and the decisions taken by individual local authorities.

Right to Buy

Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what assessment he has made of the impact of increasing the maximum cash incentive scheme grant available in London to a level (a) equal to the maximum right to buy discount available in London and (b) 25 per cent. higher than the maximum right to buy discount in London. [44465]

Ms Keeble: No recent assessment has been made of the impact of increasing the limits on maximum Cash Incentive Scheme grants.

Rate Relief Scheme

Brian Cotter: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how increased charges to those businesses that will not qualify for assistance under the proposed rate relief scheme in the Government's Strong Local Leadership-Quality Public Services White Paper, will be implemented; and if he will make a statement. [46193]

Dr. Whitehead: The White Paper proposed a rate relief scheme for small businesses, funded through a small supplement of no more than 2.5 per cent. on the bills of ratepayers not receiving the relief. The scheme will require primary legislation to allow for the relief and to allow for the small upward adjustment in the national rate poundage that will apply to those not receiving relief. The timing of this legislation depends on the availability of parliamentary time.

Homelessness

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many families were living in bed and breakfast accommodation, broken down by (a) constituency and (b) local authority. [44715]

Ms Keeble [holding answer 21 March 2002]: Available information reported by local authorities in England on the number of households accommodated in bed and breakfast hotels under statutory homelessness provisions on 31 December 2001, has been placed in the Libraries of the House. Information is collected at local authority level only.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State recently announced a new commitment to ensure that by March 2004 no family with children will be placed in bed and breakfast other than in an emergency. This was accompanied by changes in housing benefit subsidies to make leasing self-contained temporary accommodation more cost effective, and an additional £35 million from DTLR to help local authorities find alternatives to bed and breakfast.

Rough Sleepers

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what assessment he has made of the number of rough sleepers in (a) Leeds and (b) West Yorkshire at the latest available date. [45371]

Ms Keeble: Tables showing the local authority HIP estimates and results of street counts for 1998, 1999, 2000 and the latest figures for 2001 were placed in House Libraries on 11 December 2001, Official Report, columns 797–98W. Local authorities not listed in the tables for those years submitted either an estimate of 0–10 or no estimate in their HIP returns.

Queen's Jubilee

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how much the Department has spent on the Queen's Jubilee in each of the past three years; how the money was allocated; and if he will make a statement. [44602]

Dr. Whitehead: Over the past year the Department for Transport, Local Government and the Regions has been fully involved in the preparations for the Golden Jubilee. As these costs have been absorbed in the general running of the Department, it is not possible to state what these costs have been.

Staff (Locally Elected Representatives)

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many members of staff at his Department are locally elected democratic representatives; and if he has a strategy for his Department to encourage members of staff to become locally elected democratic representatives. [44560]

Dr. Whitehead: The DTLR does not keep a centralised record of those members of staff who are locally elected democratic representatives.

My Department supports members of staff who wish to take part in all local democratic processes, although some staff are precluded from certain activities due to the nature of their positions.

Abandoned Cars

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions when he expects to make a statement on the outcome of the consultation on abandoned cars. [45189]

Mr. Jamieson: My right hon. Friend expects to make an announcement shortly.

Neighbourhood Management Programme

Ms Buck: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if the Government plans to announce a further round of funding under the Neighbourhood Management Programme; and if he will make a statement. [44791]

Ms Keeble: The Government do intend to announce a further round of funding under the Neighbourhood Management programme. We are keen to learn early lessons from the first round of Pathfinders to help shape our approach in a second round. My Department is developing options for taking this forward, and I hope to be able to announce details of a further round by late spring/early summer.

Marine and Port Safety

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will make a statement on changes to the safety bodies responsible for (a) marine and (b) port safety issues since June 2001. [45650]

Mr. Jamieson: There have been no such changes.

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what discussions he has had with (a) Humber pilots and (b) Associated British Ports since 12 December 2001 regarding pilotage on the River Humber. [45647]

Mr. Jamieson: Officials have maintained regular contact with ABP in order to confirm the assurances which they have given us that the safe operation of the Humber ports will not be affected by a dispute with their former pilots. Officials last met representatives of the former pilots at the end of January when the former Chairman and Secretary of Humber Pilots Ltd. called shortly before giving up these positions. The Department has since had two exchanges of correspondence with the acting Chairman.

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions by what mechanism his Department (a) implements and (b) monitors marine organisations and companies against the Port Marine Safety Code. [45649]

Mr. Jamieson: The Port Marine Safety Code applies to statutory harbour authorities, some of which are companies—others are trusts and local authorities. The code required participating authorities to complete implementation by the end of 2001, and the Department has commenced a review of this work which will run to the end of 2002.

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what assessment he has made of changes to the nature of pilotage since 12 December 2001. [45648]

Mr. Jamieson: A new pilotage service was introduced on the Humber on 12 December when the former pilots went on strike. My Department has closely monitored the new arrangements and I hope to be in a position to place in the Library a copy of a report of that work.

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what representations he has received since 12 December 2001 from (a) Humber pilots and (b) Associated British Ports regarding (i) pilotage on the River Humber and (ii) other issues. [45646]

Mr. Jamieson: Associated British Ports have provided regular reports to confirm the assurances which they have given us that the safe operation of the Humber ports will not be affected by a dispute with their former pilots. Former Humber pilots and others—mainly pilots in other ports—have made various representations.

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what role his Department has played in negotiations between the Humber pilots and the Associated British Ports regarding the Humber pilots dispute. [45645]

Mr. Jamieson: None.

Research

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions whether reports published by his Department from research conducted for his Department may be (a) materially altered and (b) edited from the original documentation supplied to the Department before publication. [45658]

Mr. Jamieson: Amendments may be made to the format and content of draft reports in so far as these relate to the presentation of the results of the research and interpretation of relevant policy. Once final draft reports are agreed, they are published, or otherwise made available, without alteration.

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions, pursuant to the answer of 12 March 2002, Official Report, column 915W, on research documents, if he will place in the Library a copy of the Department's research management policies and practices and the handling of research and/or contractor information as referred to in Annex A of the DTLR(C) Reseach Overview. [45672]

Mr. Jamieson: The information requested has been placed in the Libraries of the House. It should be noted that this is internal guidance and subject to regular update and revision.

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions, pursuant to the answer of 12 March 2002, Official Report, column 915W, on research documents, who is preparing the specification for further work to present the information in a form suitable for access through the DTLR website; what timetable has been agreed for this specification to be completed; what form this specification is likely to take; and what timetable for completion of work to enable access to be available is expected. [45674]

Mr. Jamieson: My officials are developing the specification to provide a basis for further work within the Department (to ensure consistency of information and compatability with other information available on the website) and for commissioning further software development (to facilitate access to the data). No firm timetable has yet been agreed.

Air Traffic Control

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what progress has been made towards the development of a new air traffic control centre at Prestwick; and if he will make a statement. [45705]

Mr. Jamieson: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for Galloway and Upper Nithsdale (Mr. Duncan) on 23 January 2002, Official Report, columns 862–63W.

Urban Regeneration

Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what assessment he has made of the potential for private finance initiatives within urban regeneration. [41387]

Ms Keeble: The Secretary of State has asked English Partnerships to carry out a feasibility study into the use of private finance initiatives within urban regeneration

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will list the local government finance assistance schemes available through Leeds City Council to tackle urban poverty. [45373]

Ms Keeble: My Department's main programmes such as the Housing Investment Programmes (HIP) and Revenue Support Grant all contribute to the alleviation of urban poverty. In addition, my Department runs the following programme which specifically addresses this:

Neighbourhood Renewal Fund (NRF), which is paid as part of Rate Support Grant, amounts to:

2001–02: £4.1 million

2002–03: £6.2 million

2003–04: £8.3 million.

NRF is specifically targeted at deprived communities.

The HIP allocation for 2002–03 is £12.8 million. The Major Repairs Allowance allocation is £35.05 million.

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will list the inner city budget schemes initiated to tackle urban poverty since June 1997. [45372]

Ms Keeble: Since June 1997, my Department and its predecessor Department have initiated the following programmes which aim to tackle poverty and address social exclusion, particularly in the most deprived local authority areas, including those in inner cities:

Year	Name of scheme
1998	Single Regeneration Budget round 4
1999	Single Regeneration Budget round 5
1999	New Deal for Communities
2000	Single Regeneration Budget round 6
2000	Government's share of the European Regional Development Fund
2001	Single Regeneration Budget transitional arrangements for the RDA single programme
2001	Community Chest
2001	Community Empowerment Fund
2001	Neighbourhood Management Programme
2001	Neighbourhood Renewal Fund
2001	Neighbourhood Skills and Knowledge Programme
2001	Neighbourhood Wardens Programme
2001	Starter Homes Initiative
2001	Street Wardens Programme

Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what assessment he has made of the impact of EU state aid rules on the use of private sector partnerships to deliver urban regeneration in the UK. [41385]

Ms Keeble: The closure of the PIP programme has restricted the use of regeneration PPPs. We are currently working on ways of removing these restrictions. However, provided public and private involvement in the regeneration PPP acts on the same terms it should not be affected by the state aid rules. The existing gap funding schemes allow PPPs to provide state aid within defined limits. The Single Regeneration Budget, one of the Government's major regeneration programmes, is delivered through local regeneration partnerships and the private sector continues to be an important member of a large number of these.

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what his most recent estimate is of the quantity of previously developed urban land available for development in the London Region; and what estimate has been made of the number of new dwellings that may be accommodated on that land. [45651]

Ms Keeble: Estimates from the National Land Use Database show that, within London in 1998, there were some 2,820 hectares of previously developed land that were unused or may have been available for redevelopment. Estimates from the boroughs suggested that some 1,720 hectares of this were suitable for housing and could accommodate some 82,000 dwellings. The figures provide a snapshot of the land available in 1998. The estimated dwelling capacity reflects the development plan policies applying at the time and were made prior to the publication of revised national planning policy guidance on Housing (PPG3). The figures do not make allowance for new brownfield sites emerging in future, or other sources of additional capacity, not involving greenfield land, such as sub-division of existing housing, flats over shops and empty homes.

In September 2000, the GLA published a report entitled "London's Housing Capacity". The capacity study, undertaken in 1999, estimated that there was potential for 381,000 net additional dwellings in London in the period 1997–2016. If vacancies and non self-contained accommodation are included the capacity is 458,000 household spaces. The study found that of the large identified housing sites (which comprised nearly 30 per cent. of the total capacity and where detailed information about former use was available), 97 per cent. were brownfield sites.

The National Land Use Database is currently being updated to 2001.

Play Areas (Children With Disabilities)

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will meet representatives from interested organisations to discuss the Government's proposed best practice guidance on accessible play areas for children with disabilities; and if she will make a statement. [41297]

Dr. Whitehead: The Government are committed to producing new guidance on play areas for disabled children. I welcome the valuable contribution that outside expertise would bring and I would be pleased to meet relevant organisations.

Fire Service

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will list the awards made by the Arson Control Forum, stating (a) the recipient, (b) the amount and (c) the purpose in each case. [42922]

Dr. Whitehead: I would refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my hon. Friend, the then Minister for the Home Department (Mike O'Brien) on 8 May 2001, Official Report, column 78W about the Arson Control Forum's new projects bidding exercise for 2001–02.

I shall be writing to the hon. Member about the outcome of the Arson Control Forum new projects bidding exercise for 2002–03 in due course.

Roads

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many road schemes the South West Regional Assembly has recommended to the Department for approval. [45279]

Mr. Jamieson: To date, the South West Regional Assembly (SWRA) has recommended three road schemes for inclusion in the Targeted Programme of Improvements (TPI). These are:

A38 Dobwalls Bypass

A417 Cowley to Air Balloon Improvement

A30 Merrymeet roundabout, near Okehampton.

In March 2001, the Dobwalls Bypass was added to the TPI while the two other schemes are currently the subject of further studies being undertaken by the Highways Agency.

Gas Explosion, Newton Heath

Mr. Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will make a statement on the Health and Safety Executive's investigation into the gas explosion in Newton Heath, Manchester on 17 November 2001. [43653]

Dr. Whitehead [holding answer 21 March 2002]: A report by Transco plc on the gas explosion at Newton Heath was received by the Health and Safety Executive on 4 March 2002. HSE is discussing with Transco what action the company should take to implement the recommendations. I understand that a copy of the Transco investigation report has been sent to the hon. Member by HSE and that both they and Transco have offered to meet him to discuss the report.

Stadiums

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will set out the criteria used in deciding whether to call in the planning application for (a) redevelopment of Odsal Stadium and (b) a new stadium for Arsenal Football Club. [45477]

Mr. Byers: My general approach, like that of previous Secretaries of State, is not to interfere with the jurisdiction of local planning authorities unless it is necessary to do so. Parliament has entrusted them with responsibility for day-to-day planning control in their areas. Local planning authorities are normally best placed to make decisions relating to their areas and it is right that, in general, they should be free to carry out their duties responsibly, with the minimum of interference.

There will be occasions, however, when I may consider it necessary to call in a planning application to determine myself instead of leaving it to the local planning authority. My policy is to be very selective about calling in planning applications. I will, in general, only take this step if planning issues of more than local importance are involved and if those issues need to be decided by me rather than at a local level. Such cases may include, for example, those which, in my opinion:

may conflict with national policies on important matters; could have significant effects beyond their immediate locality;

give rise to substantial regional or national controversy;

raise significant architectural and urban design issues; or may involve the interests of national security or of foreign Governments.

Each case is, however, considered on its own facts.

Copies of the letters to call in (a) and not to call in (b) are on the Department's website.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what discussions he has had with the Department of Culture, Media and Sport on the redevelopment of Odsal Stadium, Bradford. [45491]

Mr. Byers: I have had no discussions with the Department of Culture, Media and Sport on the redevelopment of Odsal Stadium.

Secondments

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many BP employees are on secondment to his Department; for what purposes; on what terms; and how many BP employees have been on secondment to his Department since January 2000. [45888]

Dr. Whitehead: There have been no BP employees on secondment to this Department since January 2000.

Multi-modal Studies

Mrs. Calton: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions when he intends to make an announcement about the South-East Manchester Multi Modal Study. [45768]

Ms Keeble: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my right hon. Friend (Mr. Spellar) to my hon. Friend the Member for Rochdale (Mrs. Lorna Fitzsimons) on 21 March 2002, Official Report, columns 492W-493W.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what consultation there has been between the consultants undertaking the London to south and south-west multi-modal study and the Thames Valley multi-modal study on recommendations regarding the M4 from London to Reading. [45452]

Mr. Byers: There have been frequent meetings between the two sets of consultants undertaking these two multi modal studies, and between the Government Offices for the south-east and south-west who are chairing the steering groups for the studies.

Congestion

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what the level of inter-urban congestion is on roads in England. [46194]

Mr. Jamieson: To provide a baseline against which to monitor progress towards the congestion target in the 10-year Plan for Transport, we will publish estimates of congestion in 2000 later in the year.

Signposting

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what plans he has to improve signposting on roads and motorways; and if he will make a statement. [45957]

Mr. Jamieson: The responsibility for placing and maintaining signs lies with the relevant traffic authority. We have published good practice guidance on the design and use of signs, which is available from the Stationery Office, in the Traffic Signs Manual and Local Transport Notes, and the Highways Agency has recently updated its standard on sign maintenance. We are currently consulting on updated guidance for the provision of white and brown direction signs to tourist attractions and facilities in England, and we will be publishing updated guidance on warning signs and road markings when revised Traffic Signs Regulations are introduced later this year.

Local Authority Contracts

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will make it his policy to remove the right for local authorities to charge successful tenders a percentage of the total tender price. [45974]

Dr. Whitehead: I am not aware that local authorities do charge successful tenderers a percentage of the total tender price. If the hon. Member would like to provide me with more information, I will consider further.

East of England Development Agency

Mrs. Shephard: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what the annual salary costs are of (a) the chairman and (b) the chief executive of the East of England Development Agency in 2001–02. [45510]

Dr. Whitehead: In 2001–02 the salary costs for the chairman of the East of England Development Agency are £46,634, and the salary costs for the chief executive are £100,590 plus a bonus yet to be determined.

Planning Inspectorate

Ms Dari Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what performance target he plans to set the Planning Inspectorate Executive Agency for 2002–03. [46482]

Ms Keeble: The Planning Inspectorate has a key role to play in delivering quality services to all users of the planning system.

This year, for the first time, we are setting targets for the handling of enforcement appeals. The Planning Green Paper underlines that better enforcement is a key factor in raising public confidence in the planning system. Improved handling of enforcement appeals will support delivery of that objective.

We are also setting a new target for the handling of called-in planning applications and recovered appeals by the inspectorate. This is part of our Green Paper drive to deliver essential improvements in the decision-making times in these cases.

We will be working with the inspectorate to consider ways in which performance on planning appeals might be improved further in later years without compromising quality.

The targets for 2002–03 are as follows:

Timeliness

(a) Planning appeals

80 per cent. of all planning appeals decided by written representation to be decided within 16 weeks;

80 per cent. of all planning appeals decided by hearing to be decided within 22 weeks;

80 per cent. of all planning appeals decided by inquiry to be decided within 30 weeks;

(b) Enforcement appeals

80 per cent. of all enforcement appeals decided by written representation to be decided within 32 weeks;

80 per cent. of all enforcement appeals decided by hearing to be decided within 33 weeks;

80 per cent. of all enforcement appeals decided by inquiry to be decided within 43 weeks;

(c) Called-in and recovered appeals to process 80 per cent. of all called-in and recovered appeal cases within 12 weeks from close of the inquiry to delivery of the inspector's report to the Secretary of State.

(d) Development plan inquiries to provide an inspector for a development plan inquiry in at least 90 per cent. of cases on the date requested by the local authority, provided that the objection period has ended and at least six month's notice has been given; to deliver 90 per cent. of inspector's reports on development plan inquiries to local authorities according to time scales agreed under service agreements.

Quality

To satisfy the Advisory Panel on Standards for the Planning Inspectorate, and thus the Secretary of State and the first Minister of the National Assembly for Wales, annually and following rigorous monitoring, that the quality of all the inspectorate's work is being maintained at a high standard, with 99 per cent. of its case work free from justified complaint.

Information and guidance

To survey customer satisfaction with the inspectorate's performance and to act upon the results.

Wembley Stadium (Transport Links)

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will make a statement on the redevelopment of Wembley Park underground station to facilitate transit to and from a national stadium at Wembley. [45202]

Mr. Jamieson: I refer the hon. Member to the reply my right hon. friend the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Brent, North (Mr. Gardiner) on 12 March 2002, and which I understand appeared in the Official Report, on 19 March 2002, column 237W.

Driver and Vechicle Licensing Agency

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many complaints were received by (a) the DVLA, (b) his Department and (c) other bodies with reference to the process by which licence applications are processed by the DVLA, broken down by the nature of each complaint, in each year since 1997. [45426]

Mr. Jamieson: Available information about the number of formal complaints received about the DVLA driving licence application process is shown as follows.

Table 1 shows the number of formal customer complaints received by DVLA broken down by the nature of the complaint.

Table 2 shows the number of official correspondence cases received by DVLA, which may include complaints, but detailed analysis figures are not available. Of these, private secretary office cases are received via the Department. Further analysis of Table 2 data is not available without a special exercise at disproportionate cost. DVLA receive 5.4 million driving licence applications every year.

The Department and DVLA have no information on complaints received by other bodies.

Table 1: DVLA formal customer complaints

Complaint category	1997–98	1998–99	1999–2000	2000–01
Driving licence applications
Non receipt of a driving licence	48	59	130	92
Other driving licence complaints	153	227	551	139

The figures are shown in financial years.

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what recent changes there have been in the (a) management, (b) computerisation and (c) other aspects of the DVLA related to the process by which licence applications are processed; and if he will make a statement. [45413]

Mr. Jamieson: The second EC directive on driver licensing resulted in significant changes to the management, computerisation and other aspects of DVLA's processes relating to the issue of driving licences. Prior to July 1998 drivers received paper licences. From this point photocard licences were introduced on a phased basis. All licences issued by DVLA are now in this form.

The changes have meant that photographs and signatures are captured electronically for reproduction on the new style licence. As it now contains a photograph identity checking procedures have been tightened up considerably, compared with those in place for the issue of paper licences. Ministers decided that from April 1999 identity documentation should be accepted to support identity.

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what assessment his Department has made of the effectiveness of the process by which licence applications are processed by the DVLA; what steps his Department (a) has taken and (b) plans to take to make this process more effective; and if he will make a statement. [45412]

Mr. Jamieson: The process associated with the issue of driving licences has been the subject of continuous review and improvement since photocards were introduced in July 1998. Holders of UK passports and those in receipt of state retirement pensions can now have their applications checked at some 750 post offices with the documents returned immediately, thereby reducing the need to send their documents direct to Swansea.

The introduction of electronic interchange of information about identity between DVLA and UK Passport Services is being actively explored. New versions of forms and leaflets are introduced regularly taking customers views into account, which has reduced the rate of return of applications significantly.

MOT

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what changes have taken place to the MOT test since 1997; what plans there are to make further changes to the test; and if he will make a statement. [45430]

Mr. Jamieson: There have been no significant changes to the scope of the MOT test since 1997 and there are none planned. However, detailed testing standards and methods are constantly updated to keep pace with changing vehicle technology and legislation.

The introduction of the MOT computerised database from January 2003 will improve the availability of standards information for testers and enable much more information on the results of tests to be gathered. It will also alter administrative procedures for recording a test and the issue of test certificates.

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many cars (a) initially failed, (b) passed on completion of necessary work and (c) passed without additional work the MOT test in each year since 1990. [45432]

Mr. Jamieson: The Vehicle Inspectorate collects returns from all 18,869 MOT testing stations on a monthly basis which contain details of the vehicles tested, failures and passes. A 2 per cent. sample of the returns is used as the basis for calculating an annual fail rate and details are shown in the table. The inspectorate does not hold details of the numbers of vehicles passed on completion of necessary work or passed without additional work. More information about failure rates and defect categories can be found in the Vehicle Inspectorate Effectiveness report 2000–01, a copy of which has been placed in the House of Commons Library.

Year[1]	Number of vehicles[2] tested	Fail rate (percentage)
1994–95	22,562,000	37.2
1995–96	22,468,000	37.3
1996–97	21,669,000	36.1
1997–98	21,482,000	36.1
1998–99	22,174,000	35.7
1999–2000	22,035,000	33.6
2000–01	22,775,000	31.7

[1] Figures not available in a comparable format prior to 1994–95
[2] Cars, vans and passenger vehicles with up to 12 seats

The introduction of the computerised MOT database from January 2003 will provide the inspectorate with the facility to improve the reporting of pass and fail rates.

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what steps (a) his Department and (b) the Vehicle Inspector (i) have taken and (ii) plan to take to monitor the work of MOT testing stations and the effectiveness of the MOT test. [45431]

Mr. Jamieson: Checks of the standard of MOT test procedures and authorised premises are carried out by the Vehicle Inspectorate (VI) by means of regular visits during which premises are inspected and tests observed; observed tests of vehicles submitted by "incognito" vehicle examiners; checks carried out in response to appeals against the test result from members of the public; and special investigations in cases where the inspectorate believes that there might be significant breaches of the regulations. The Vehicle Inspectorate has the power to take enforcement action when evidence of sub-standard testing is found. Sanctions can range from the issue of warning letters to withdrawal of authorisation.

VI trialled a new check of testing effectiveness in 2000–01 which has been introduced fully this year. Examiners carry out random re-inspections of recently tested vehicles and the results give VI a measure of how well garages are applying test standards.

The introduction of the computerised MOT database from January 2003 will enable the inspectorate to analyse detailed statistics on the performance of test stations, testers and the outcome of individual tests. This will enable VI to increase its effectiveness through improved targeting of enforcement checks, training and advice.

Road Safety

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions (1) how many local authority (a) road safety officers and (b) school crossing patrol coordinators there are in the UK; [45663]

(2) how many (a) schools and (b) companies ran road safety activities with their local authority road safety officers in 2001. [45665]

Mr. Jamieson: This information is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will place in the Library the guidance issued by his Department on the location and visibility of speed cameras. [45707]

Mr. Byers: New visibility rules for those areas participating in the safety camera netting off scheme were announced on 3 December and have been placed in the Libraries of the House.

Digital Tachographs

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what is the intended date for the introduction of digital tachographs; how many representations he has received about the need to protect data from fraudulent manipulation; how many times drivers will be able to lose their smartcard and remain within the law; and what information he has made available to the freight industry. [44936]

Mr. Spellar: The fitting of digital tachographs to new vehicles will become compulsory two years after the publication by the European Commission of the technical specification for digital tachographs. I understand that publication should take place in May this year. On this basis, digital tachographs will need to be fitted to new vehicles from May 2004.

To date, no representations have been received about the vulnerability of data to fraudulent manipulation. The regulation lays down strict security requirements and provides that type approval may not be granted until the whole system has demonstrated its capacity to resist attempts to tamper with or alter the data.

A driver may hold one valid driver card only. If the driver card is damaged, malfunctions or is lost or stolen, the issuing authority—in the UK the Driver and Vehicle Agency (DVLA)—will issue a replacement card. The issue of a replacement card will be shown on DVLA's database and the original card recorded as withdrawn. Multiple losses of cards by drivers will be reported by DVLA to the Vehicle Inspectorate who may investigate.

We have kept the industry informed about developments through the Road Haulage Forum and other on-going contacts. Now that the Commission is shortly to publish the technical specification, starting the countdown to implementation of the regulation, we will be consulting the industry on various detailed aspects of the implementation process.

TV Cables (Electrocution)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many cases of electrocution there were from 1995 arising from the seepage of water through aerial and satellite cables into television and set top boxes; and if he will make a statement. [43236]

Ms Hewitt: I have been asked to reply.

My Department knows of no such cases.

Aggregates

Ms Atherton: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what resources he makes available for treatment of Mundic aggregate. [43421]

Mr. Wilson: I have been asked to reply.

Over the past eight years Government have provided funding for the work of the Building Research Establishment programme that looks at problems in concrete materials. This work has included an investigation into mundic treatment processes and testing procedures.

Ms Atherton: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what progress has been made in developing methods of testing and assessment to enable the maximum number of homes built using mundic aggregate to be accepted by mortgage lenders. [43438]

Mr. Wilson: I have been asked to reply.

The Royal Institute of Chartered Surveyors, Mundic Working Group published "Stage Three Expansion Testing" on 29 January 2002. The test has been accepted by the Council of Mortgage Lenders and will allow some further houses to be removed from the mortgage black list.

Civil Defence

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what requirements there are for local authorities to produce a civil defence plan. [45353]

Mr. Leslie: I have been asked to reply.

The Civil Defence (General Local Authority Functions) Regulations 1993 require county councils, unitary authorities, metropolitan districts and London Boroughs to prepare and review plans for civil defence purposes, to exercise and train for those plans and to consult other local authorities and fire authorities affected by those plans. They require district councils to train their staff, to provide information to county councils and to assist county councils in making and revising plans.

Since the introduction of these regulations local authorities have been encouraged to prepare flexible plans for responding to a wide variety of peacetime hazards.

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions who within local authorities is the officer held accountable for civil defence matters. [45354]

Mr. Leslie: I have been asked to reply.

The Chief Executive, or equivalent, of a local authority is accountable for matters relating to civil defence.

SCOTLAND

Retirement Ages

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if she will list the retirement ages that apply to the employees of her Department and its agencies, including how many and which categories of employees are affected by each; and if she will make a statement on her Department's policy on flexible retirement. [32830]

Mrs. Liddell: The normal retirement practice age in the Scotland Office for staff outside the senior civil service is age 60. Retirement age policy is currently under review with colleagues in the Scottish Executive, from where most Scotland Office staff have been loaned. Pending the outcome of the review, staff may be retained beyond age 60 on a yearly basis, provided there is a post available and performance, conduct and attendance are satisfactory.

The Cabinet Office is responsible for setting the retirement age for all members of the senior civil service. This is age 60. However, Heads of Departments and Agency Chief Executives have flexibility to retain members of the senior civil service beyond age 60 if they judge it in the public interest and they are satisfied about the fitness and efficiency of the individual to carry out his or her duties.

Fair Trade

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether fair trade products are sold in her Department. [39833]

Mrs. Liddell: My Department has no facilities which would enable us to sell fair trade products.

Ministerial Meetings

Mrs. Lait: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when she plans to (1) meet the Scottish Ambulance Service; and on how many times she has met them since becoming Secretary of State for Scotland; [40591]

(2) meet Link Scotland; and on how many times she has met them since becoming Secretary of State for Scotland; [40588]

(3) meet the Scottish NFU; and on how many times she has met them since becoming Secretary of State for Scotland; [40589]

(4) meet Friends of the Earth Scotland; and on how many times she has met them since becoming Secretary of State for Scotland; [40593]

(5) meet the Scottish Society for the Protection of Animals; and on how many times she has met them since becoming Secretary of State for Scotland; [40590]

(6) meet the WWF Scotland; and on how many times she has met them since becoming Secretary of State for Scotland; [40592]

(7) meet Scottish Care; and on how many times she has met them since becoming Secretary of State for Scotland; [40597]

(8) meet the Scottish Council for Development of Industry; and on how many times she has met them since becoming Secretary of State for Scotland; [40598]

(9) meet the Centre for Scottish Public Policy; and on how many times she has met them since becoming Secretary of State for Scotland; [40599]

(10) meet the Education Institute of Scotland; and on how many times she has met them since becoming Secretary of State for Scotland; [40594]

(11) meet Universities Scotland; and on how many times she has met them since becoming Secretary of State for Scotland; [40596]

(12) meet the Scottish Council of Voluntary Organisations; and on how many times she has met them since becoming Secretary of State for Scotland; [40601]

(13) meet the Scottish Daily Newspaper Society; and on how many times she has met them since becoming Secretary of State for Scotland; [40600]

(14) meet the Scottish Parent Teacher Council; and on how many times she has met them since becoming Secretary of State for Scotland. [40595]

Mrs. Liddell: I meet representatives of a wide range of public and private sector bodies in a variety of circumstances, both formal and informal, and I shall continue to do so.

Nuclear Power Stations

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Advocate-General, pursuant to her oral answer of 19 March 2002, Official Report, column 157, (a) what discussions she has had with the Minister of State, Scotland Office in the last two months on the issue of planning consent for new nuclear power stations in Scotland and (b) what account she took of section 36 of the Electricity Act 1989; and if she will make a statement. [45766]

The Advocate-General: I have regular discussions with ministerial colleagues concerning a variety of issues. As I have explained to the House on several occasions it is a long-standing convention, adhered to by successive Governments, that neither the fact nor content of opinions or advice given by the Law Officers is disclosed outside Government (even in Parliament).

PFI/PPPs

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what the difference was between the price offered in reaching preferred bidder stage and the final contract price for PPP contracts let by her Department in each of the last four years; and if she will make a statement; [45612]

(2) what the difference was between the price offered in reaching preferred bidder stage and the final contract price for the five largest PFI contracts let by her Department in each of the last four years; and if she will make a statement. [45597]

Mrs. Liddell: The Scotland Office was established in its present form on 1 July 1999. No PPP or PFI contracts have been let by my Department since that date.

Reserved Matters

Mr. Alan Reid: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if she will list the functions which she exercises in relation to Scotland in reserved matters. [46104]

Mrs. Liddell: I exercise certain statutory and other functions in relation to reserved matters, including under the Scotland Act 1998 in relation to the devolution settlement itself; in relation to elections in Scotland under the Representation of the People Act 1983, as amended; in relation to the Boundary Commission for Scotland under the Parliamentary Constituencies Act 1986, as amended; in relation to the Crown Estate Commissioners under the Crown Estate Act 1961, and under the Private Legislation Procedure (Scotland) Act 1936.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Statutory Instruments

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will list the statutory instruments issued by her Department in the last 12 months, indicating (a) the purpose of each and (b) the cost of each to (i) public funds, (ii) businesses and (iii) individuals. [36221]

Ms Hewitt: In the period, my Department made and issued 142 statutory instruments. During this time 33 Regulatory Impact Assessments were issued in connection with SIs.

The further information requested by the hon. Member could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Sustainable Development

Mr. Colman: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what arrangements she will put in place to ensure that in filling vacancies on the Gas and Electricity Markets Authority, account is taken of the Government's commitments to sustainable development and reduction of UK greenhouse gas emissions. [39382]

Mr. Wilson: When making appointments to the Gas and Electricity Markets Authority we seek to create a body with a range of skills and attributes which are relevant to the various duties and objectives of the authority.

Energy Costs

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make a statement on energy costs incurred by her Department in each of the last 10 years. [42436]

Mr. Wilson: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to him by my right hon. Friend the Minister for Rural Affairs on 19 March 2002, Official Report, column 268W.

Entertainment Costs

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will list for 1997–98 and each subsequent financial year the amount spent by (a) her Department, (b) its agencies and (c) its non-departmental public bodies in respect of hotel and other similar privately-provided accommodation (i) in the UK and (ii) abroad for (A) Ministers, (B) staff and (C) other persons; if she will list the proportion of this cost incurred in respect of (x) food and (y) alcohol in each case; and if she will list the average cost per hotel room or similar unit of accommodation provided in each case. [34389]

Ms Hewitt: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Secretary, Cabinet Office, on 14 February 2002, Official Report, column 560W.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will list for 1997–98 and for each subsequent financial year, including the current year to date, the amount spent by (a) her Department, (b) its agencies and (c) its non-departmental public bodies on (i) food and (ii) alcohol, indicating how much was spent on guests, and how much in respect of (A) Ministers and (B) staff, broken down to show how much was provided directly by her Department and how much reclaimed. [34464]

Ms Hewitt: The information requested for the Department, its agencies and non-departmental public bodies could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Official Visits

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) if she will list the official visits to (a) Paris and (b) Brussels made by each Minister in her Department in 2001 and the mode of travel used; and what guidance is provided to Ministers in her Department on the choice of mode of travel for such visits; [38145]

(2) if she will list the official visits within the UK outside London made by each Minister in her Department in 2001, giving for each (a) the origin and destination and (b) the mode of travel used; and what guidance is provided to Ministers in her Department on choice of mode of travel for official visits. [38181]

Ms Hewitt: Since 1999 this Government have published an annual list of all visits overseas undertaken by Cabinet Ministers costing £500 or more during each financial year. The Government have also published on an annual basis the cost of all Ministers' visits overseas. Details of travel undertaken since 1 March 2001 will be published as soon as possible after the end of the current financial year. Copies of the lists are available in the Libraries of the House.

All travel is undertaken fully in accordance with the rules set out in the Ministerial Code and Travel by Ministers, copies of which are available in the Libraries of the House.

The additional detailed information requested in respect of UK travel is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Celebrations

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what arrangements her Department has made to celebrate (a) St. Patrick's Day, (b) St. George's Day, (c) St. Andrew's Day and (d) Her Majesty the Queen's Golden Jubilee; and how her Department celebrated St. David's Day. [42293]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 11 March 2002:] I refer the hon. Member to the reply which my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport gave to the hon. Member for South Suffolk (Mr. Yeo) in response to his round robin question of 30 January, 11 February 2002, Official Report, columns 58–59W.

The DTI, along with other Government Departments, flies the Union flag from its buildings on certain days of the year known as 'named days' when the Union flag must be flown from Government buildings. The days include St. David's Day and St. George's Day, but not St. Patrick's Day.

Consideration is being given to the Union flag flying protocol for the Jubilee. However, the Union flag will fly on Coronation Day (2 June) as this is a 'named day'.

An additional bank holiday will take place on Monday 3 June 2002 to mark the Queen's Golden Jubilee and, to create a two-day holiday period, the spring bank holiday, which would normally take place on 27 May, has been moved to Tuesday 4 June.

East of England Development Agency

Margaret Moran: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will list the projected underspend by EEDA for the year to 31 March, indicating the reason for the underspend in each case. [35464]

Alan Johnson: EEDA's total projected underspend for the 2001–02 financial year is £5,864,000.

Mrs. Shephard: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the total annual budget is of the East of England Development Agency in 2001–02; and what sum within that total is allocated to publicity and marketing. [45509]

Alan Johnson: EEDA's total annual budget for 2001–02 is £62.596 million. This figure includes £3.7 million potential end of year flexibility from 2000–01 which as at 20 March is still awaiting parliamentary approval. EEDA has allocated £200,000 for publicity and marketing in 2001–02.

Refurbishment

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what measures the Government are taking to uphold specification standards for the refurbishments of Departments. [36830]

Ms Hewitt: Individual Departments are responsible for the refurbishments of their own Departments.

Insolvency Service

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the budget for the Insolvency Service was for each year from 1997. [42070]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Plans for the Insolvency Service are published in the Government's Expenditure Plans for the DTI, a copy of which can be found in the Libraries of the House. Insolvency Service expenditure is reported in the service's annual accounts which are laid before Parliament and placed in the Libraries of the House.

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what controls are in place to ensure that the Insolvency Service hotline meets the needs of its customers. [42077]

Miss Melanie Johnson: In August and September 1998 the National Audit Office undertook a follow up review of directors disqualification, including the hotline, and contacted a sample of complainants, 78 per cent. of whom stated that they would use the service again. The NAO's recommendations as regards the hotline were fully implemented, and included a simplified complaints questionnaire which is also available on the service's website and by link from Companies House.

The service also operates a formal complaints procedure, and since January 1998, six complaints have been received in connection with the hotline of which only two proved to have been justified.

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps her Department is taking to make insolvency laws more (a) efficient, (b) user friendly and (c) effective in obtaining prosecutions. [42061]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Insolvency Act 2000 introduced an optional moratorium into voluntary arrangement proceedings to make procedures more responsive to the needs of those facing financial difficulties.

The White Paper "Opportunity for All in a World of Change: Insolvency—A Second Chance" outlined the Government's proposals for reforms to the law of personal insolvency.

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the average cost in (a) sterling and (b) man hours has been to prosecute a rogue director, by the undertaking of an investigation and prosecution by the Insolvency Service, over the last year. [42074]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Insolvency Service is not a prosecuting authority. In cases where the Insolvency Service considers that there is prima facie evidence of a prosecutable offence the official receiver refers the results of his/her investigation to the Legal Services Directorate of the Department of Trade and Industry for further investigation and prosecution where appropriate.

Cost for prosecutions are not available.

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment she has made of the effect of the Insolvency (Amendment) Regulations 2000 on the Insolvency Service, including (a) cost savings, (b) efficiency savings and (c) changes in service levels between the Service and its customers. [42067]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Insolvency (Amendment) regulations 2000, which came into force on 31 March 2000 make provision for payments into and out of the Insolvency Services Account to be transmitted by electronic means. This has had the following effect on the Insolvency Service and its customers:

(a) Cost savings: the Insolvency Service estimates that a BACS payment costs 50p less than a payment by cheque. In the period from 1 April 2000 to 28 February 2002, 7,770 payments out of the Insolvency Services Account were made by BACS producing total estimated savings for the Insolvency Service of £3,885. Insolvency practitioners who have a BACS payments facility should be able to achieve the same order of cost savings when remitting funds to the Insolvency Services Account by this method. Currently the Insolvency Service does not levy a fee for making a BACS payment, whereas a fee of 65p per cheque is charged against the estate upon which it is drawn. In respect of the 7,770 BACS payments in the period from 1 April 2000 to 28 February 2002, the cost saving to estates was £5,050.50.

(b) Efficiency savings: the resource efficiencies of electronic payments have, with other process efficiency gains, enabled the Insolvency Service to process a 15 per cent. higher volume of payments in the period from 1 April 2000 to 28 February 2002 without increasing the number of staff engaged in this area of work.

(c) Changes in service levels between the Insolvency Service and its customer: a BACS payment request is processed on the day of receipt (day one) by the Insolvency Service and credited to the payee's bank account on day three. By comparison, a cheque requisition received on day one is despatched to the payee on day four; the transit time and bank clearing process mean that the cheque will generally be credited to the payee's account on day seven—four days later than by BACS.

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many convictions as a result of investigations by the Insolvency Service there were in each year since 1997. [42072]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The number of prosecutions as a result of investigation by the Insolvency Service each year since 1997 is as follows:

	Number
1 January 1997 to 31 December 1997	406
1 January 1998 to 31 December 1998	394
1 January 1999 to 31 December 1999	334
1 January 2000 to 31 December 2000	339
1 January 2001 to 31 December 2001	373

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what procedure is in place within the Insolvency Service to track the progress of individual cases being investigated; and what plans she has to review this procedure. [42075]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Official receivers have worked to a centrally defined investigation process since 1999. The progress of the investigation is recorded on case files and on a computerised case management system. Performance is monitored at an office level, at regional level and at national level. The investigation process was reviewed and reissued in 2001 and will be subject to further review in 2003.

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what targets her Department has set the Insolvency Service in each of the years since 1997; and how successful the agency was in achieving these targets. [42064]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The targets and outturn for the Insolvency Service are published in the Insolvency Service annual report, a copy of which can be found in the Libraries of the House.

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make a statement on the effectiveness of the Insolvency Service's quinquennial review. [42080]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Insolvency Service (INSS) has responded positively to the recommendations of the quinquennial review.

All recommendation are being actioned by INSS under the supervision of its steering board. Action includes steps to build on its existing performance, to provide a basis to respond to fluctuations in work loads and to modernise existing delivery frameworks. All action is aimed at enhancing service delivery.

The Insolvency Service steering board will continue to oversee progress on implementation.

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what targets she has set the Insolvency Service for 2002–03. [42063]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The targets for 2002–03 have not yet been approved.

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what (a) representations she has received and (b) research she has commissioned into the effectiveness of the Insolvency Act 2000; and if she will make a statement. [42059]

Miss Melanie Johnson: I have not received any representations about, or commissioned research into, the effectiveness of the Insolvency Act 2000.

The Insolvency Service monitors those of the Act's measures that came into force by 2 April 2001.

Insolvencies

Mr. Woodward: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many insolvencies by (a) creditors voluntary liquidation, (b) receivership, (c) compulsory liquidation, (d) administration and (e) company voluntary arrangement there were in (i) 1997, (ii) 1998, (iii) 1999, (iv) 2000 and (v) 2001 in (A) St. Helens, South, (B) St. Helens, MBC area, (C) Merseyside, (D) Manchester, (E) the north-west regional development area, (F) other regional development areas and (G) England. [44491]

Miss Melanie Johnson [holding answer 21 March 2002]: Information on the regional basis requested is not available. The table shows the different types of insolvency for each year from 1997 to 2001 for England and Wales.

	1997	1998	1999	2000	2001
(a) Creditors voluntary liquidations	7,875	7,987	9,071	9,392	10,297
(b) Receivership	1,837	1,713	1,618	1,595	1,914
(c) Compulsory liquidation	4,735	5,216	5,209	4,925	4,675
(d) Administrations	196	338	440	438	698
(e) Company voluntary arrangements	629	470	475	557	597

Bankruptcy

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what her Department's policy is regarding bankruptcy; and what her policy is on measures to deter individuals and companies from seeking bankruptcy terms. [42055]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Department's policy on bankruptcy is set out in the White Paper "Insolvency A Second Chance" (Cm 5234), which is available in the Libraries of the House. There are no plans to deter individuals or companies from entering into insolvency proceedings, which still have an important role to play in the resolution of financial difficulties.

Business Mergers

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discussions she has had with the takeover panel in respect of the merger between P&O Princess and Royal Caribbean Cruises. [45361]

Miss Melanie Johnson: None.

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will take action in respect of the proposed merger between KPMG and Andersen's non-US businesses. [45363]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Any proposed merger which meets the qualifying threshold would be considered by the European Commission under European Community Merger Regulation.

The parties concerned have not yet made a formal notification to the Commission.

US Steel Tariffs

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make a statement on (a) the decision by the US Government to impose tariffs on steel imports and (b) the impact on the UK steel industry of the decision; and what assistance she will provide to the UK steel industry. [41863]

Mr. Wilson: I refer my hon. Friend to the statement my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry made to the House on 6 March 2002, Official Report, columns 307–19.

The direct impact on the UK steel industry of the additional US tariffs on their steel imports is likely to be a marked reduction in the approximately 300,000 tonnes of UK steel exports to the United States. The indirect impact of US imports being deflected to the EU is of potentially greater significance.

The Department works closely with the UK steel industry to provide support to improve the sector's competitiveness, for example through the Metals Industry Competitiveness Enterprise and the National Metals Technology Centre.

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment she has made of the impact of US tariffs on the import of steel on the steel industry in south-east Wales; and what action she intends to take. [41866]

Mr. Wilson: The direct impact on the UK steel industry of the additional US tariffs on their steel imports is likely to be a marked reduction in the approximately 300,000 tonnes of UK steel exports to the United States. The indirect impact of US imports being deflected to the EU is of potentially greater significance.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, set out the Government's reaction to the US measure in her statement to the House on 6 March 2002, Official Report, column 307–19.

Bioenergy Capital Grants

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will ensure that the bioenergy capital grants scheme is sufficiently flexible to support small and medium sized enterprises, [44052]

Mr. Wilson: After considerable consultation with the industry conducted by my Department and the New Opportunities Fund (NOF), we have recently put forward the initial details of the bioenergy capital grants scheme on our website. The initial design takes into account the policy directions which accompany the NOF funding and the recommendations of the Performance and Innovation Unit which accompany the DTI funding. There is no limit to the size of organisation which can be involved, but we envisage setting minimum project sizes to ensure appropriate economies of scale, appropriate electrical efficiency and sufficient supply chain development.

There may also be scope for support for smaller-scale biomass projects within our forthcoming community and household grants scheme which we are currently developing under the Sustainable Energy Research and Development Programme.

Waste Electrical and Electronic Equipment Directive

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what estimate she has made of the cost to the British economy of the waste electrical and electronic equipment directive using the methodology set out in the draft document; [42591]

(2) if she will make a statement on the economic cost of the methods of disposing of waste electrical and electronic equipment in the United Kingdom. [42593]

Mr. Wilson [holding answer 12 March 2002]: An updated partial regulatory impact assessment (RIA) will be placed in the Libraries of the House this month. Based on the latest draft of the directive, the RIA suggests the annual compliance costs of implementing the directive will lie in the range £191 million to £391 million.

Industry estimates suggest that, by weight, around half of the total UK electrical goods waste arisings currently enter a recycling/recovery process on an economic basis. There will be a cost associated with disposal of the remainder. This will primarily relate to landfilling costs.

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations she has received from greetings card manufacturers and retailers about the inclusion of musical greeting cards within the scope of the proposed waste electrical and electronic equipment directive. [42592]

Mr. Wilson [holding answer 12 March 2002]: I am not aware of any representations.

Fuel Poverty

Ms Shipley: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how the Government will ensure that sustainable energy and realistic pricing proposals do not increase fuel poverty. [45177]

Mr. Wilson: The Government will continue with actions to put downward pressure on prices. The Government's Fuel Poverty Strategy also sets out a range of programmes to improve the energy efficiency of homes of the fuel poor. This will help households in fuel poverty and minimise the impact of any possible increases in energy prices. The Government are committed to monitor and report on progress in tackling fuel poverty.

Energy Research

Ms Shipley: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much the Government have spent on energy research and development in each year since 1997. [45175]

Mr. Wilson: Government expenditure on energy research and development since 1997 has been in the fields of sustainable energy and nuclear fusion and is set out in the table.

£ million

	Sustainable energy research:
	DTI programme	Research councils	Fusion research
Expenditure
1997–98	13.0	2.9	16.6
1998–99	11.3	3.1	12.6
1999–2000	12.5	2.4	14.4
2000–01	13.1	2.8	14.3
Provision
2001–02	18.5	5.5	14.3
2002–03	19.0	7.0	14.3

Publicly funded research into nuclear fission reactors stopped in 1994. The Health and Safety Executive co-ordinates a nuclear safety research programme funded by the relevant nuclear licensees.

Trading Scheme Exemptions

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry pursuant to her answer of 14 February 2002, Official Report, column 520W, on the single tier exemption, what representations were made to her Department for an additional exemption from the relevant provisions of the trading schemes legislation for trading schemes with more than a single master franchise in the UK during (a) the consultation in 1996 and (b) lobbying for the amending SI 1997 No. 1887; and if she will place in the Library the description of Government policy on multi-level trading provided to those requesting additional exemptions during the lobbying for SI No. 1887; and if she will make a statement. [39319]

Miss Melanie Johnson [holding answer 11 March 2002]: At the time of the Trading Schemes Act 1996 and the introduction of supporting subordinate legislation in 1997, parts of the franchise industry proposed exclusion of schemes with more than one master franchiser in the UK.

In response to some of the representations made, the subordinate legislation was amended to reflect more accurately the policy of excluding from regulatory control master franchise operations in which only the UK master franchiser would benefit from the recruitment of others to the scheme. However, it was decided that schemes with more than one master franchiser could leave a loophole allowing illegitimate schemes to avoid regulatory controls.

Government policy for legislation in this area has always been:

to provide a degree of protection to a party who is vulnerable in relation to another, in terms of their financial position and level of business acumen, but not to burden legitimate business, particularly the franchise sector, with unnecessary regulation.

Galileo Project

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discussions she has had with representatives of the German and Dutch Governments on the commercial viability of the Galileo project. [43046]

Ms Hewitt: My officials, together with those of other Departments, have held a number of discussions with officials in the German and Dutch Governments about commercial viability and other issues relating to the Galileo project. We share with them and others the view that we support Galileo in principle, subject to satisfying certain conditions on finance, management and civil use. EU level discussions continue in advance of Transport Council.

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if the Government will give financial assistance to the Galileo project. [43045]

Ms Hewitt: We are already providing funding to the European Space Agency for the first phase of the Galileo programme. I am currently in discussion with my ministerial colleagues about subscribing to the development and validation phase. We expect the EU Transport Council to decide on 26 March whether or not to proceed with Galileo. If the decision is positive, a UK announcement on funding will follow.

Respiratory Compensation

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much money has been paid in (a) respiratory compensation and (b) legal costs to solicitors. [43965]

Mr. Wilson: To date, over £276 million has been paid in compensation and £49 million has been paid to claimants' solicitors in relation to respiratory disease.

Territorial Forces

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many members of staff of her Department are members of the Territorial forces; and if she has a strategy to encourage members of staff in her Department to become members of the Territorial forces. [44067]

Ms Hewitt: My Department does not currently keep records of staff who are members of the Territorial forces. While there is no specific strategy to encourage staff to become members of the Territorial forces, my Department does grant special leave with pay of up to eight days a year (plus additional special leave without pay) for normal training. In the event of mobilisation of reserve forces, my Department would respond sympathetically to requests for staff to serve actively. Such absence would be unpaid but count as reckonable for pensions purposes.

Aerospace Industry

Mrs. Irene Adams: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps the Government have taken to help the aerospace industry since 1997; and if she will make a statement on her plans for further support. [43920]

Mr. Wilson: The Government continue to support the aerospace industry through various programmes. For example, since 1997 we have committed nearly £1 billion in Launch Investment to Rolls-Royce and Airbus UK towards developing engines and wings for new aircraft. The Government have also funded over £100 million of research under their civil aeronautics research programme since 1997. The programme, which was renewed last year for a further five years until 2006, will continue to encourage both research and technology demonstration in civil aeronautics. There are also programmes to encourage cross-sectoral activity, for example, business process improvements, e-business and supply chain activity, from which the aerospace industry benefits. The Government are also making significant investment in the science base with the Research Council funding of research in a wide range of basic technologies of potential application in aeronautics.

The Government are undertaking a study with the SBAC to review the future of support to the sector. The Government have also supported retention of a major aeronautics research programme as part of the forthcoming 6th European Framework programme from which UK companies should gain significant benefit.

Ian Stillman

Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discussions the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Small Businesses held concerning the case of Ian Stillman during his visit to India on 3 to 6 February. [43906]

Nigel Griffiths [holding answer 18 March 2002]: I understand that Mr. Stillman's case has been raised by ministerial colleagues in the Foreign Office.

Trade Partners UK

Andrew Selous: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what public funding Trade Partners UK has had in each year since 1981 in (a) actual and (b) real terms. [45008]

Nigel Griffiths: Trade Partners UK was launched in May 2000 and is the trade promotion and development arm of British Trade International. Programme funding of the Government's trade promotion and development activities from 1999, the year British Trade International was established, is as follows:

	£ million
1999–2000 outturn	56.6
2000–01 outturn	70.5
2001–02 budget	68.0

I have placed in the Libraries of the House a more detailed breakdown of current Government support for trade development and promotion, in the expenditure plans reports of British Trade International (Cm 5123), the Department of Trade and Industry (Cm 5112), the Foreign and Commonwealth Office (Cm 5110) and British Trade International's resource accounts for 2000–01 (HC 526).

I have placed in the Libraries of the House information about Government support for trade development and promotion in earlier years, in the expenditure plans reports of the Department of Trade and Industry and the Foreign and Commonwealth Office.

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry on what date Trade Partners UK received a request for advice on the attempted acquisition of Sidex by LNM/Ispat; and on what date it replied. [44473]

Ms Hewitt: In accordance with previous Administrations, it is not our practice to disclose internal advice to Ministers which is exempt under Exemption 2 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information.

General Agreement on Trade in Services Negotiations

Ann McKechin: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make a statement on the progress her Department has made in consulting universities and colleges of higher education on the inclusion of higher education services in the GATS negotiations at the World Trade Organisation. [44483]

Ms Hewitt: I refer my hon. Friend to my previous answer on 14 February 2002, Official Report, columns 528–29W. The consultations to which I referred are continuing.

Justices of the Peace

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many members of staff at her Department are justices of the peace; and if she has a strategy for her Department to encourage members of staff to become justices of the peace. [44555]

Ms Hewitt: My Department does not keep records of staff who are justices of the peace. While there is no specific strategy to encourage members of staff to become justices of the peace, my Department does grant special leave with pay of up to 18 days a year (plus reasonable time for travelling to permit up to 26 attendances).

Compensation Applications

David Hamilton: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many applications have been made for compensation for vibration white finger/carpal tunnel syndrome, broken down by year of application. [44380]

Mr. Wilson: Carpal tunnel syndrome, CTS, was not originally included in the Handling Agreement and therefore claimants cannot directly apply for compensation for this disability under the present scheme. However, it was agreed last year between the Department and the claimants' solicitors that CTS is a compensatable condition and these claims would be dealt with alongside vibration white finger, VWF, claims. Where claimants have been diagnosed as suffering from CTS following medical assessment, the Department will make an additional payment. The Department cannot therefore state the numbers of CTS claimants until all valid claimants are assessed.

The number of claims registered for VWF by year is as follows:

	Number of claims
1991	1
1994	1
1995	1,201
1996	8,537
1997	9,309
1998	12,079
1999	23,666
2000	60,417
2001	18,474
2002	4,114
Total	137,799

Nuclear Electricity

Mr. Peter Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much nuclear electricity general capacity is expected to be decommissioned, in each year of decommissioning. [44339]

Mr. Wilson: As with other electricity generation options, decisions on nuclear station lifetimes are a commercial matter for the generating companies. Latest information published by the nuclear generating companies is as follows:

British Energy stations	Declared net capability (MW)	Current expected operational lifetime
Hinkley Point B	1,220	2011
Hunterston B	1,190	2011
Dungeness B	1,110	2008
Hartlepool	1,210	2014
Heysham I	1,150	2014
Heysham II	1,250	2023
Torness	1,250	2023
Sizewell B PWR	1,200	2035+

Magnox stations	Capacity (MW)	Expected lifetime
Calder Hall	194	2006–08
Chapelcross	196	2008–10
Bradwell	246	2002
Sizewell A	420	2006
Dungeness A	450	2006
Oldbury	434	2008
Wylfa	980	2009

Gas-fired Power Stations

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations her Department received prior to the lifting of the moratorium on gas-fired power stations. [44665]

Mr. Wilson: Representations were made to the Department throughout the period of the stricter consents policy on the value of the policy and its application to particular projects. It is not realistic to detail all these. However the ministerial decisions of particular cases are a matter of public record.

Construction Skills Certification Scheme

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much public funding, including EU funding has been made available to the Construction Skills Certification Scheme in each year since its inception. [44224]

Mr. Wilson [holding answer 18 March 2002]: CSCS Ltd. is an independent company limited by guarantee. The Department has not provided any public funding to CSCS. Overall funding is a matter for them.

The inquiry has been passed to CSCS with the request that they respond directly.

Women Engineers

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what plans she has to encourage women engineers back to work who have taken time off to raise families; [43576]

(2) what plans she has to promote an increase in the number of women entering the engineering profession. [43577]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 19 March 2002]: The DTI Promoting SET for Women unit works closely with the WISE campaign on a number of projects designed to attract more girls into engineering. We are funding a pilot mentoring scheme by WES/AWISE which will encourage and support both entrants and returners to science and engineering careers.

Export Licence Requirements

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether export licence requirements extend to the production in countries outside the EU of weapons, vehicles and equipment otherwise licensable in the military list as part of offset deals on the sale of services and intellectual property involving UK firms. [44710]

Nigel Griffiths: An export licence is not required from the Department of Trade and Industry's Export Control Organisation to manufacture items outside the UK. However, where the product to be manufactured under commercial licence has a potential military use, the UK exporter might require an export licence before the goods and technology necessary for the establishment and operation of the licensed production facility can be supplied from the UK.

The Government have made it clear that an export licence will not be issued where to do so would be in contravention of the Consolidated EU and national arms export licensing criteria, including where there is a clear risk that the finished products could be used for internal repression, international aggression, or diverted to an undesirable end-user.

Company Law Review

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what progress has been made with regard to the company law review; and if she will make a statement. [44778]

Ms Hewitt: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary for State for Competition, consumers and Markets to the hon. Member for Weston-super-Mare (Brian Cotter) on 15 October 2001, Official Report, column 982W.

Inward Investment

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the British percentage was of inward investment into the EU from (a) the USA, (b) the G7 countries and (c) Japan in each of the last 20 years. [44781]

Ms Hewitt: The information is in the following table:

UK share of G7 foreign direct investment into the EU 1994–99
Percentage of stock level at year end

	USA	G7 total[1]	Japan
1994	37.1	20.6	23.2
1995	34.6	19.3	23.2
1996	36.0	20.7	25.0
1997	40.1	24.4	27.9
1998	34.5	21.1	25.9
1999	33.0	21.5	14.9

[1] G7 comprises of UK, France, Germany, Italy, Japan, Canada and USA.

Note:

Eurostat Foreign Direct Investment (FDI) statistics have been quoted to ensure consistent comparison between countries and are based on inward FDI stock figures as reported by individual EU member states. Outward FDI stocks in the EU published by other non-EU country statistical offices may differ from those published by Eurostat. For example, the US Bureau of Economic Analysis statistics reported than in 1999 the UK received 41 per cent. of US outward FDI stocks. There are a number of widely recognised technical reasons why such apparent discrepancies arise.

EU Tariffs

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate she has made of the cost to (a) EU countries and (b) the UK economy of tariffs applied by the EU in the last year for which figures are available. [44764]

Ms Hewitt: In 2000, the latest full year for which figures are available, on total UK imports of £222.6 billion the customs duty charged was £1.8 billion.

In the same year on total EU imports, including UK imports, of £1,525 billion, the customs duty charged was £8.9 billion.

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many tariffs the EU has applied to goods from outside the EU in each of the last 20 years. [44780]

Ms Hewitt: The European Union's 2002 Common Customs Tariff has 10,400 lines. A positive "most favoured nation" "full" rate of duty is payable on 8,270 of these lines, although in most cases one or more "preferential" (i.e. lower) rates of duty is payable on imports from a range of countries. On the remaining 2,130 lines, no duty is payable.

Equivalent information for earlier years is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Broadband Access

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is the (a) total number and (b) percentage of (i) homes and (ii) businesses in the UK that have broadband access. [44784]

Ms Hewitt: A map showing availability of broadband services in the UK was contained in the UK Online annual report 2001. The report states that 60–65 per cent. of the population (equating to around 15 million households) is now covered by at least one affordable broadband technology.

Oftel have reported that there were some 350,000 subscribers to ADSL and cable modem services as at 25 January 2002.

DTI's Business in the Information Age International Benchmarking Report 2001 provides information on the information and communication technologies used by businesses.

Copies of these documents have been placed in the Libraries of the House.

Universal Bank

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make a statement on the progress made in establishing the universal bank. [44789]

Ms Hewitt: Progress continues to be made on universal banking services.

Trade Union Membership

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many and what percentage of workers belonged to trade unions in each of the last 20 years; and what the figures were broken down into (a) public and (b) private sector workers. [44765]

Ms Hewitt: The number of workers who are members of a trade union can be estimated annually from the results of the autumn Labour Force Survey. The number and percentage of workers in Great Britain is given in the table. Data are available for union membership from 1990 and can be sub-divided for the private and public sector from 1993.

Union membership in Great Britain, 1990 to 2001

	Workers[1] in employment		Workers[1] in private sector		Workers[1] in public sector
Year	Members (Thousand)	Union density	Members (Thousand)	Union density	Members (Thousand)	Union density
1990	8,835	33.9	—	—	—	—
1991	8,602	33.6	—	—	—	—
1992	7,956	32.2	—	—	—	—
1993	7,767	31.5	3,920	23.7	3,847	64.4
1994	7,530	30.1	3,825	22.5	3,705	63.6
1995	7,309	28.8	3,651	21.3	3,658	61.4
1996	7,244	28.2	3,629	20.6	3,615	60.9
1997	7,154	27.3	3,605	19.7	3,548	60.8
1998	7,152	26.9	3,590	19.2	3,561	60.7
1999	7,257	27.0	3,649	19.2	3,609	59.8
2000	7,321	27.0	3,600	18.7	3,720	60.0
2001	7,270	26.5	3,606	18.4	3,664	58.1

[1] Includes all those in employment, excluding members of the armed forces, unpaid family workers, and those on college based schemes.

European Trade Mark Law

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, pursuant to the answer of 13 December 2001, Official Report, column 944W, what progress has been made towards liberalising European trade mark law. [44787]

Ms Hewitt: The European Parliament has called on the Commission to report on the implications for industry, consumers and employment of liberalisation of European trade mark law and to submit detailed proposals by the end of this year.

In the meantime, we continue to work bilaterally with our European partners to build the necessary consensus for change. Unanimity is needed for change to the Community Trade Mark Regulation. Although some member states support change, a number remain unconvinced.

Low Carbon Vehicles

Ms Shipley: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much the Government have spent on the research and development of low carbon vehicles since 1997. [45176]

Mr. Wilson: The DTI's Foresight Vehicle Programme is supporting 20 "low carbon vehicles" projects valued at £25.5 million of which Government's contribution is £9.7 million. The projects include work on advanced lightweight materials, alternative systems for powertrain such as hybridisation and improved conventional internal combustion engines. The Foresight Vehicle Programme is carrying out technology road mapping which will identify R&D priorities for future phases of Foresight Vehicle and inform requirements such as those outlined in the Government's draft "Powering Future Vehicles" strategy. The strategy seeks to accelerate the transition in the UK to a low carbon transport systems.

Since 1992, the DTI's Advanced Fuel Cells Programme has supported industrial R&D in the fuel cells area including stack development, fuel processing and systems development for both transport and stationary power generation applications. Some of the work is generic so it is not possible to be precise regarding the expenditure specifically relating to vehicles. It is estimated that since 1997 work which is wholly or primarily relevant to vehicle applications of fuel cells has amounted to £2.4 million.

The Engineering and Physical Sciences Research Council supports research into transport operations, manufacture and management. Areas covered include improving engine efficiencies, road management, environmental impacts, social inclusion and safety. The £10 million EPSRC research portfolio covering transport operations and management consists of 97 active grants, of which an estimated £500,000 per year relates to low carbon vehicles. EPSRC also supports fuel cell research. The research portfolio is shared between engineering, chemistry and materials programmes of the EPSRC which estimates overall support of around £2 million a year for fuel cell research across all programmes.

Renewable Energy

Ms Shipley: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) if the proposed renewables obligations fund over three years includes research into the nuclear option; [45178]

(2) what proportion of the renewables obligation fund is earmarked for (a) solar voltaics, (b) offshore wind and (c) tidal and/or sea powered power generation. [45179]

Mr. Wilson: The renewables obligation will require licensed electricity suppliers to demonstrate through a system of renewables obligation certificates (ROCs) that they have bought a specified proportion of their electricity from renewable sources. Alternatively, suppliers may meet their obligation through the independent market purchase of ROCs. The renewables obligation will thus provide a substantial market incentive for the UK renewable energy industry as a whole. Electricity suppliers will be free to choose the sources of renewable electricity that enable them to meet their obligation most cost-effectively.

Suppliers who do not present the required number of ROCs will be required to make a buy-out payment corresponding to the extent that their purchases of renewable electricity fall short of the specified amount. The buy-out price will be set initially at 3 pence per kilowatt hour. The proceeds from the buy-out payments will be recycled to suppliers in proportion to the number of ROCs presented. The recycling of the buy-out payments will thus provide an extra incentive to suppliers to meet their obligation.

Separately from the operation of the renewables obligation, the Government are providing over £260 million over the three-year period to March 2004 for the direct support of renewable energy initiatives, including capital grants for early demonstration schemes, and research grants.

Of this direct support money, £20 million has been specifically allocated to solar photovoltaics (PV), £74 million to offshore wind, and £5 million to wave and tidal energy; in addition, finance for research and development projects in these areas will be available through the DTI's Sustainable Energy Programme and through the Research Councils.

The Government do not currently fund nuclear fission research and development, but are currently active participants in a range of international forums that cover nuclear fission including the OECD's Nuclear Energy Agency (NEA), the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA), the EU's Euratom Framework Programme and the Generation IV initiative.

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make a statement on plans to utilise renewable energy sources within Wales. [44042]

Mr. Wilson: The Government's role in the promotion of renewable energy is to set the framework but leave the market to decide on the type and location of projects to be pursued.

The Renewables Obligation will apply to Wales and England (with a corresponding arrangement in Scotland), providing an assured market for renewables until 2027. Subject to parliamentary approval, we anticipate that the Renewables Obligation will come into effect on 1 April 2002.

Consent for projects under 50 MW, except offshore wind, is normally a matter for local determination. For larger projects in Wales as in England, I have the appropriate consent powers, which are exercised after extensive consultation with all interested parties, including the Welsh Assembly Government.

Wales has much potential for renewable energy projects. The regional assessment conducted for Wales indicated that Wales could deliver between 4 per cent. and 13 per cent. of the UK Renewables Obligation target. It also said:

> "Whether the higher end of the target range is reached will depend almost entirely on the deployment of wind energy and biomass schemes".

Nuclear Reactor Design

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what evaluations her Department has made of new nuclear reactor and nuclear power plant design and operation in (a) South Africa, (b) America and (c) Canada. [44808]

Mr. Wilson: The UK is involved in international nuclear systems work including the Generation IV International Forum (GIF), started by the United States Department of Energy (USDOE) to promote and develop better longer-term nuclear reactor designs. South Africa, America and Canada are all among the 10 countries that participate in the forum.

The evaluation of specific new reactor designs is a matter for UK generating companies and the market, as with all generation options.

UK Arms Sales

Mr. Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will list arms sales from UK companies to India and Pakistan approved since 1997. [44761]

Nigel Griffiths: The Department of Trade and Industry's Export Control Organisation does not record arms sales. It records details of all export licences issued and refused, which are published in the Government's annual reports on strategic export controls, copies of which are available in the Libraries of the House.

The granting of a licence does not necessarily translate into a sale.

New Deal

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many people have been employed by her Department in each of the last three years under (a) the New Deal for Young People, (b) the New Deal for the Over 50s and (c) the New Deal for Lone Parents; and at what cost, listed by category, to public funds. [44911]

Ms Hewitt: The information is as follows:

Scheme	1999	2000	2001
Young People	4	1	8
Over 50s	0	0	1
Lone Parents	0	0	2

In addition to the above, my Department has appointed 10 New Deal participants from the 25+ scheme during the same period.

New Deal recruits are appointed to existing vacancies so extra costs to public funds are limited to the subsidy, where appropriate, and any additional training and development which may be needed. The cost of the latter cannot be readily identified.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many people employed by her Department under the new deal for young people in each of the last four years have subsequently (a) found unsubsidised employment for more than 13 weeks and (b) returned to jobseekers' allowance or other benefits. [45090]

Ms Hewitt: My Department has appointed 26 new dealers during the period in question, 24 of whom are, or have been, employed by the Department on an unsubsidised basis. Of those new deal participants appointed under the scheme, four have been successful in securing permanent employment with the Department, while six others have departed, Of the latter, it is not possible to identify how many remained in alternative unsubsidised employment, or returned to jobseeker's allowance or other benefits.

Creche Facilities

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what creche facilities are provided by her Department; and at what cost. [44853]

Ms Hewitt: The following are DTI's child care provisions for its staff.

Holiday Playscheme

Departmental staff in central London have access to a 32-place holiday playscheme for a minimum of 54 days each year. Staff contribute £14.00 per place towards the £31.00 daily fee. DTI HQ staff in Cardiff have access to a local Easter and summer holiday playscheme for a contribution of £8.00 per place towards the £16.00 daily fee.

Nursery Places

Departmental staff in central London have access to six nursery places (divided equally between under 2s and over 2-year-olds) at the inter-departmental nursery. The weekly cost to the Department for a full-time place for an under 2-year-old is £200.50 and £169.00 for 2-year-olds and over. Staff contribution is levied at a flat rate of £103 per week for a full-time place, irrespective of the age of the child. Children attending the nursery on a part-time basis are charged a pro rata rate.

DTI's total expenditure on child care for this financial year is £43,995.00.

PFI/PPPs

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will list the (a) private finance initiative and (b) public private partnership projects which have been delayed. [44888]

Ms Hewitt: The following projects have been delayed:

Private finance initiative: The redevelopment of the National Physical Laboratory at Teddington.

Public private partnerships: British Nuclear Fuels Ltd.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the difference was between the price offered in reaching preferred bidder stage and the final contract price for PPP contracts let by her Department in each of the last four years; and if she will make a statement. [45617]

Ms Hewitt: My Department has not let any PPP contracts in the last four years.

Human Rights Act

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many cases have been brought against her Department under the Human Rights Act 1998; and what has been the cost in (a) legal fees to defend cases and (b) compensation payments. [45061]

Ms Hewitt: We do not collect central records of all cases in which the Human Rights Act 1998 is relied on. Human rights are now integrated in the general law and are rarely the sole basis for a challenge. We do monitor centrally those cases which we consider may be of particular significance to this Department.

We do not collect separate information centrally about the costs to public funds, legal fees or compensation payments in cases which include a human rights issue. In most cases it will be difficult to single out associated costs relating to the human rights element.

Public Service Agreement

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry which public service agreement targets that are scheduled to be met in 2002 will not be achieved by the due date. [44839]

Ms Hewitt: Information abut progress on public service agreement targets will be published in the DTI's 2002 departmental report.

FYR Macedonia

Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what arrangements are in place to encourage trade between the UK and FYR Macedonia. [45242]

Nigel Griffiths: In June 2001, Trade Partners UK organised representation of 12 UK companies at the Skopje International Fair. Trade Partners UK also arranged a programme for representatives of two major Macedonian food importers visiting the International Food Exhibition in London.

A similar programme of events is planed for 2002-03.

In addition, Trade Partners UK offers a full range of services to exporters by way of inquiry handling, briefing, and general advice and support for market entry.

Pollution (Irish Sea)

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will list pollution incidents involving discharges above 0.01 tonnes in the Irish sea from 9 July

2001 to the latest available date, stating the (a) date, (b) size of incident, (c) name of company reporting the spill and (d) name of the company responsible in each case. [44002]

Mr. Wilson [holding answer 21 March 2002]: The information relating to oil spill incidents in the Irish sea basin, reported to the Department of Trade and Industry, from 9 July 2001 to the present date is as follows.

Date	Amount	Reported by	Responsible company
14 September 2001	0.1	BHP	BHP

DTI only receives reports for oil spills reported from or attributed to offshore installations.

Greenwich Mean Time

Mr. Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will confine GMT to the period between the last Sunday in November and the last Sunday in January. [45345]

Alan Johnson: There are no plans to reduce the period of GMT. The start and end dates of summer time are harmonised across EC member states through a European directive.

India

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what joint programmes her Department has to promote bilateral trade with India. [43596]

Nigel Griffiths [holding answer 21 March 2002]: The full range of services of British Trade International—both for trade and investment—are available to British companies seeking to do business with India which is a very important market for the United Kingdom. Trade Partners UK is responsible for helping UK exporters and outward investment, while Invest UK seeks to attract Indian investors, who are coming to the UK in growing numbers.

The Indo-British Partnership (IBP) was created in 1993 to encourage trade and investment between our two countries. Since the inception of the IBP UK-India trade has grown by 45 per cent. and, including invisibles, is now worth £5 billion a year.

The Enterprise Initiative: India is a current Trade Partners UK programme designed to help small and medium sized UK companies to enter the Indian market. The initiative offers a variety of services to British exporters.

Rail Lines (Kent)

Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many meetings the South East England Development Agency has had since its inception with (a) Railtrack, (b) the Strategic Rail Authority and (c) Connex SE to discuss the issue of power shortages and infrastructure planning on the (i) London Victoria to Sittingbourne, (ii) London Bridge to Sittingbourne and (iii) Cannon Street to Sittingbourne railway lines. [46183]

Alan Johnson: None.

Fenestration (Self-assessment)

Mr. Wyatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what action her Department is taking to enable small traders to join the fenestration self-assessment scheme. [42720]

Dr. Whitehead: I have been asked to reply.

I recently made regulations which allow a person registered with the Fenestration Self-Assessment Scheme (FENSA) to certify to local authorities that replacement glazing they undertake complies with the Building Regulations. FENSA has been developed by the Glass and Glazing Federation (GGF) in consultation with, among others, key industry representative bodies, local authorities, and my Department.

From the start it was the Department's requirement that the scheme should be open, fair and cost-effective. Any business of any size is able to join the scheme. All firms are required to pay a standard registration fee of £100, in addition to a vetting fee of £200. The vetting fee is not required however, if the firm has already been vetted by another body which has standards comparable to FENSA. Currently 19 such bodies are recognised. Therefore the majority of firms applying to FENSA do not need to pay the vetting fee. On top of the vetting fee there is an annual fee of £50, and a transaction charge of under £1 per certificate issued to local authorities—£2 if not undertaken electronically. All these costs are exclusive of VAT. Inspection will be undertaken on 1 per cent. of installations, subject to a minimum of two and a maximum of 100. These will cost around £100 per inspection. The firm is also required to purchase Approved Documents L1 and N.

I do not consider these costs to be punitive. FENSA represents a cost-effective mechanism for companies to ensure compliance with the Building Regulations, while at the same time, providing the necessary safeguards to ensure consumer confidence. Fees set below this level would not allow the necessary number of checks to be undertaken, or the development and maintenance of a satisfactory database which eases the certification process for the installer. I consider that no special measures are required for small traders.

Business Links

Brian Cotter: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many calls have been received by the Business Links national call centres since April 2001; and what proportion of these were re-directed to each of the local business link providers. [46191]

Nigel Griffiths: The Business Link National Contact Centre (BLNCC) has received 52,450 calls between 2 April 2001 and 17 March 2002. Of these calls, 11,560 were referred to Business Link operators, while 26,187 calls were fulfilled by the BLNCC (for example arranging mailing of small business literature). The remaining calls were fulfilled by referral to other sources of expertise (such as Farm Business Advisory Service or the Small Business Service equivalents in Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland). A full breakdown of the number of calls passed on to the local Business Link operators is as follows:

Local business link provider	Number of calls

Carbon Emissions

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what progress her Department has made in cutting carbon emissions; and if she will make a statement on the likelihood of the UK achieving its emissions targets set by the Kyoto protocol. [44416]

Mr. Meacher: I have been asked to reply.

The UK's Third National Communication on Climate Change, published last October, reports progress with implementing our climate change programme. We have made excellent progress so far in cutting greenhouse emissions which we estimate have fallen by about 13 per cent. between 1990 and 2000. The Climate Change Programme, published in November 2000, outlines a range of policies that we estimate could reduce greenhouse gas emissions by 23 per cent. below 1990 levels by 2010. This is well in excess of our 12.5 per cent. Kyoto target.

Industrial Action

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many days were lost due to industrial action (a) in the public sector and (b) in total in each of the last 20 years. [44783]

Ruth Kelly: I have been asked to reply.

The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell to Mr. John Whittingdale, dated 25 March 2002

The National Statistician has been asked to reply to your recent question about the number of days lost due to industrial action in the last 20 years. I am replying in his absence. (44783)

There are no statistics specifically for the public sector but figures on the public administration, education and health industries provide most of the information on the public sector as it is today. The figures are arranged according to the Standard Industrial Classifications of 1968, 1980 and 1992. Because of differences in Standard Industrial Classification coverage and the exclusion of certain industries (e.g. coal and steel) that have dropped out of the public sector since the 1980's, caution needs to be exercised in making comparisons.

Information is given in the attached table. The way the information is presented reflects the changes in Standard Industrial Classification.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

GM Crops

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many GM crop trials there were in each constituency in each year since 1990. [34873]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 11 February 2002]: Since the Genetically Modified Organisms (Deliberate Release) Regulations (1993) came into force in the UK, a total of 193 consents have been issued to release GM crops to the environment for research purposes. These include the farm scale evaluations, national list trials and a number of other research trials. Releases have taken place at about 1,000 different locations as most consents permit trials at more than one release site. We do not have the figures available in the form requested. However, the DEFRA website contains extracts from the public register, which list the locations by grid reference of all releases as part of experimental trials since 1993 and all sites in the farm scale evaluation programme.

Waste

Andrew Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions she has had with officers from the Greater Manchester Waste Disposal Authority regarding their soil improver product. [38403]

Mr. Meacher: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has had no such discussions. However, I met the authority on 11 March and the issue of composting and the soil improver was raised.

Mr. Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what work her Department has undertaken to determine final storage quality for the treatment of hazardous waste before acceptance into a hazardous landfill site; [43616]

(2) what representations she has received against requiring hazardous waste from 2004 to be treated to final storage quality before acceptance into a landfill site; [43617]

(3) what risk assessment her Department has undertaken on the impact on the environment and on public health of not requiring hazardous waste from 2004 to be pre-tested to final storage quality before acceptance into a landfill site. [43619]

Mr. Meacher: The Government do not consider that there is as yet a clear or accepted understanding of what is meant by the term "final storage quality". We have therefore not undertaken work to determine what treatment such a standard would require before hazardous waste could be sent to landfill or conducted a risk assessment on the impact of not applying such a standard after July 2004.

The Environment Agency has produced draft guidance on standards for treatment of hazardous waste going to landfill following implementation of the directive. The guidance is based on a determination of the best practicable environmental option for individual waste streams and, where processes are regulated under the PPC, the obligation to employ best available techniques with regard to the production of wastes and their treatment. The Government consulted on this approach in the Second Consultation paper on Implementation of the Landfill Directive. A wide range of responses were received from consultees including a number arguing against the treatment of hazardous waste to "final storage quality" though interpretation of what was meant by the term varied.

The standards to which hazardous waste will have to be treated to go to landfill will ultimately be determined by the waste acceptance criteria for hazardous waste landfills which are still under negotiation in Europe.

Mr. Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate her Department made of the quantities of hazardous waste that will require treatment in (a) 2005, (b) 2006, (c) 2007, (d) 2008, (e) 2009 and (f) 2010. [43618]

Mr. Meacher: The Department has made no estimates of the amount of hazardous waste that will require treatment from 2005 to 2010.

At present approximately 53 per cent. of hazardous waste arisings are landfilled. It is estimated that approximately 41 per cent. of current arisings will continue to be able to be landfilled following the implementation of the bans in July 2002. The amount of hazardous waste that will continue to be landfilled beyond July 2004 and will hence need to be pre-treated will depend on a range of factors. These include general trends in hazardous waste arisings, changes to the definition of hazardous waste, the availability of hazardous waste landfill capacity, the availability of alternative disposal routes such as incineration, and implementation of the waste acceptance criteria currently under negotiation in Brussels which will set out what hazardous wastes can go to hazardous waste sites or to separate cells in non-hazardous landfill sites.

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, pursuant to the answer of 5 March 2002, Official Report, column 217W, on waste disposal, (1) what steps her Department has taken to meet the target of banning the landfilling of hazardous liquid wastes from July; and for what reason her Department does not hold information on the locations of individual treatment facilities for liquid waste; [43428]

(2) how many treatment facilities there are in the UK for liquid waste; what assessment her Department has made of the availability of treatment facilities; and what assessment her Department has made of whether the target of banning the landfilling of hazardous liquid wastes from July will be met. [44363]

Mr. Meacher: The forthcoming Landfill (England and Wales) Regulations will impose the ban on the landfilling of hazardous liquid wastes by making it an offence for landfill site operators to accept such wastes for disposal beyond July 2002.

The regulation of individual waste treatment facilities is the responsibility of the Environment Agency. The agency holds details of the location of all licensed waste treatment facilities on their central licensing and charging databases but these records do not identify which individual sites are permitted to accept liquid wastes. This information is not held centrally because, for the purposes of regulating the sites, the physical nature of the waste is only significant at the individual site level. Control over the type of waste that can be accepted at any given site and over specific problems associated with handling liquids, is exercised through the conditions of individual licences, details of which are held at local area offices and which could be collated only at disproportionate cost.

The Department, in conjunction with the National Assembly for Wales, the Scottish Executive and the Northern Ireland Assembly, has undertaken an assessment of the landfill directive for the future management of wastes banned from landfill.

The aims and objectives of the study were:

to identify and evaluate the potential impact of the landfill directive on the management of hazardous wastes and liquid wastes in the UK, and to identify and assess the alternative waste management options that may be available to ensure the continued safe management of wastes for which landfilling will be banned under the landfill directive.

The study found that there was sufficient alternative disposal systems (in use or planned) to cope with the large volume of organic process waste streams requiring diversion from landfill. It also suggested that additional facilities might be required for oily wastes, contaminated soils, and inorganic chemical wastes. A copy of the report will be placed in the Library of both Houses.

Landfill Directive

Mr. Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate her Department has made of the number of new treatment facilities that will be required to achieve compliance with the United Kingdom's obligations under the landfill directive. [43620]

Mr. Meacher: The Department, in conjunction with the National Assembly for Wales, the Scottish Executive and the Northern Ireland Assembly, has undertaken an assessment of the implications of the landfill directive for the future management of wastes banned from landfill.

The aims and objectives of the study were:

to identify and evaluate the potential impact of the landfill directive on the management of hazardous wastes and liquid wastes in the UK, and to identify and assess the alternative waste management options that may be available to ensure the continued safe management of wastes for which landfilling will be banned under the landfill directive.

The study found that there was sufficient alternative disposal systems (in use or planned) to cope with the large volume of organic process waste streams requiring diversion from landfill. It also suggested that additional facilities might be required for oily wastes, contaminated soils, and inorganic chemical wastes. Copies of the study have been disseminated widely.

Further work is currently under way to assess the availability of pre-treatment facilities for those hazardous waste streams that can continue to go to landfill after July 2002.

Mr. Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when the landfill directive regulations will be laid before Parliament. [43621]

Mr. Meacher: The Government aim to lay the Landfill (England and Wales) Regulations before the Easter recess.

Sewers

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the timetable is for developing and applying criteria for determining long-term investment in sewers. [39481]

Mr. Meacher: The 10 water and sewerage companies in England and Wales are responsible for managing investment in their sewerage systems, both in capital maintenance and in new provision.

This Department, the Office of Water Services (Ofwat), Environment Agency, Drinking Water Inspectorate and water companies have worked closely together on a water industry capital maintenance framework, covering sewerage systems as well as other asset systems. A jointly commissioned study will be published in May.

Ofwat will shortly hold a preliminary consultation on its approach to capital maintenance at the forthcoming review of price limits. Ofwat with the Environment Agency have consulted on enhancements to the serviceability indicators for assets against which companies report to Ofwat. The new indicators will be used for the first time in companies' returns to be made in June 2002 and so provide better information for draft and final business plans.

Ofwat also issued, on 13 March 2002, "Flooding from sewers—A way forward" which consults on how companies should bring forward investment proposals to address sewer flooding both in the short term before 2005 and in the longer term for the period 2005–10. The consultation ends on 15 June.

The steps and timetable leading up to setting price limits in 2004 for the period 2005–10 are set out in "Ofwat Forward Programme 2002–03 to 2004–05" which was published on 21 March 2002. This year Ofwat will consult on its approach to the periodic review in October and in December the Government will issue guidance on the policies and programmes requiring investment in sewerage services.

Kirkby Stephen (Sheep)

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if the sheep at Kirkby Stephen were tested for the foot and mouth (a) virus and (b) antibody before restocking; and if she will make a statement. [39509]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 1 March 2002]: All animals used for controlled restocking must come from farms which have been inspected and found free from foot and mouth disease (FMD).

The sheep used to restock at Kirkby Stephen came from two sources. One source was tested for antibodies in September and in November with negative results on both occasions. The second source was also tested for antibodies in August and November, with negative results on both occasions. Neither flock was tested for virus.

Ofgem

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what action she has taken to ensure that Ofgem abides by the content and spirit of the Government's departmental guidelines on the integration of environmental policies. [39979]

Mr. Wilson: I have been asked to reply.

The Utilities Act 2000 provided for the Secretary of State to issue guidance to the Gas and Electricity Markets Authority about the making by the authority of a contribution towards the attainment of social or environmental policies set out in the guidance.

The Department has consulted on drafts of the guidance, and is now looking afresh at the guidance in the light of the Energy Review report published on 14 February by the Performance and Innovation Unit, which has implications for the guidance.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she will reply to question 31593 tabled for answer on 29 January regarding a breakdown of the total costs of the foot and mouth epidemic. [40368]

Margaret Beckett [holding answer 4 March 2002]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to him on 25 February 2002, Official Report, 916W.

Milk Prices

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much dairy farmers received per litre of milk in each of the past 10 years. [40768]

Mr. Morley: The table shows the annual average farm-gate milk prices, including bonuses, paid to farmers between 1992 and 2001, for raw milk in the UK.

Annual average UK farm-gate milk prices[1]

Scottish Executive

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether a Scottish Executive Minister will be a member of the UK delegation to the Environment European Union Council of Ministers meeting on 4 March; and what information is being provided by her Department to guarantee effective pre-council scrutiny by the European Committee of the Scottish Parliament. [40319]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 4 March 2002]: A Scottish Executive Minister was not part of the UK delegation at the Environmental Council on 4 March. On the second point, it is the responsibility of the European Committee of the Scottish Parliament to scrutinise Scottish Executive involvement in preparations for EU Council meetings. The Department provides information to Scottish Executive officials as part of that process.

Airports

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, pursuant to her answer of 25 February 2002, Official Report, column 918W, on airport runway capacity, when she will place a copy of the exchange of letters between the Permanent Secretaries in her Department and the DTLR in the Library. [41770]

Margaret Beckett [holding answer 8 March 2002]: This was deposited in the Library of the House on 11 March.

Air Conditioning

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps her Department has taken to notify (a) consultants and (b) producers involved in advising on the installation of air conditioning during refurbishment of Government buildings of the Government's view on hydrofluorocarbons as a non-sustainable technology; and if she will make a statement. [41182]

Mr. Meacher: The position of HFCs was made clear in the UK climate change programme that was produced in November 2000. It recognised that HFCs are not sustainable in the long-term and that technological developments may eventually make it possible to replace them in applications where they are used. The programme also stated that HFC emission reduction strategies should not undermine commitments to phase out ozone-depleting substances under the Montreal protocol while making it clear they should only be used where other safe, technically feasible, cost-effective and more environmentally acceptable alternatives do not exist. This position is reflected in the advice make available on the Greening Government website for managers on the Government estate, consultants and manufacturers of air conditioning systems. However, there may be scope under the EC procurement rules for Government Departments to work more closely with their suppliers and this is one of the issues that is being considered by the cross-Government Sustainable Procurement Group recently established by the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs.

Green Classification

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make it her policy to refuse the classification of green to a Government building if the latter procures refrigerants and air conditioners in a manner that conflicts with the Government's objectives on climate change. [41177]

Mr. Meacher: There is already a requirement on Government Departments to contribute to our climate change objectives by achieving high ratings on new buildings and major refurbishments under the Building

Research Establishment's Environmental Assessment Method (BREEAM). BREEAM seeks to discourage the unnecessary use of cooling in buildings through a range of credits relating to emissions of CO_2. There are also specific credits for use of non-ozone depleting refrigerants and leakage prevention systems. The method does not at the moment discourage refrigerants with a high global warming potential as the alternatives that are currently available are not always appropriate. However, the issue is being monitored as part of the annual review of BREEAM.

Food Imports

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what proportion of (a) organic and (b) non-organic (i) dairy products, (ii) meat, (iii) fruit, (iv) vegetables, (v) cereals and (vi) eggs sold in the UK in the last 12 months were imported; what assessment she has made of the proportion of these products that could be grown in the UK; and if she will make a statement. [42168]

Margaret Beckett [holding answer 11 March 2002]: Official figures are not available on the proportion of organic sales that are imported. The following table provides estimates produced by the Soil Association in their Organic Food and Farming Report 2001.

	Percentage of organic sales imported
Dairy products	35
Meat	45
Fruit and vegetables	85
Cereals (and baked products)	80
Eggs	10

Rural Work Force

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what proportion of the rural work force were employed in (a) agriculture, (b) rural tourism, (c) rural public sector and (d) rural private sector jobs by category in each year since 1990; and if she will make a statement. [42912]

Alun Michael: The table identifies the proportion of the rural work force employed in agriculture, tourism, public sector and private sector in England between 1995 and 2000. Data are not available for other years.

	(a) Agriculture	(b) Tourism	(c) Public sector	(d) Private sector
1995	—	25	26	49
1996	—	24	26	49
1997	5	23	25	48
1998	3	23	26	48
1999	3	22	26	49
2000	3	24	26	48

Notes:
1. Agriculture—agriculture and fishing from SIC 1992 broad industrial groups. Data for 1995 and 1996 are not available on a comparable basis.
2. Tourism—distribution, hotels and restaurants from SIC 1992 broad industrial groups (best proxy measure). There are no data specifically on rural tourism.
3. Public sector—public administration, education and health from SIC 1992 broad industrial groups.
4. Private sector—other six categories within SIC 1992.
5. Rural areas are defined as the rural local authority districts and unitary authorities as classified by the Rural Development Commission and currently used by the Countryside Agency.

Kyoto Agreement

Mr. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on progress towards implementation of the Kyoto agreement. [40125]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 13 March 2002]: Agreement at the climate change talks in Bonn and Marrakesh in 2001 on the detailed rules for implementation of the Kyoto protocol opened the way for ratification and entry into force of the protocol. In order for the Kyoto protocol to enter into force, it must be ratified by at least 55 countries, including countries accounting for at least 55 per cent. of industrialised countries' emissions in 1990. Without US participation, it is essential for both Russia and Japan to ratify as well as the EU.

A European Community decision to ratify Kyoto was adopted on 4 March. This paved the way for the UK and the other EU member states to complete their own ratification procedures. On 7 March, the Secretary of State for the Environment, Food and Rural Affairs made a statement to the House setting in motion the process of UK ratification. Once the protocol has been before Parliament for 21 sitting days, the Foreign Secretary will be in a position to sign the ratification instrument and will do so on or shortly after 19 April. For legal and presentational reasons, the European Community and each of its member states have agreed to deposit their instruments of ratification with the UN Depository simultaneously. Since entry into force of the protocol will occur only 90 days after the prescribed number of ratification instruments have been deposited, the aim is to do this by early June at the latest to allow entry into force by the World Summit on Sustainable Development. We are encouraging other countries to work to this deadline.

The UK is making strong progress with implementing its climate change programme which we estimate could reduce our emissions by 23 per cent. below 1990 levels by 2010. This is significantly over and above our 12.5 per cent. Kyoto target.

The UK has set a domestic goal to exceed this target through the measures set out in the Government's Climate Change Programme, published in November 2000. This aims to cut CO_2 emissions alone by 20 per cent.—we are well on course to achieve this and shall continue to evaluate our progress regularly. Measures set out in the UK Climate Change Programme aim to drive emission reductions over the next decade and into the future. Some examples include: the climate change levy, a new Energy Efficiency Commitment, an obligation to increase the production of energy from renewable sources by 10 per cent. by 2020 and an emissions trading scheme which is due to go live in April.

Canals

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on the use of canals by industry; and what plans there are to improve the canal infrastructure to encourage industry to use them. [43527]

Mr. Meacher: The Freight Study Group was set up by the Government in November 2000 to examine the scope for increasing freight traffic on the inland waterways of England and Wales. My noble Friend the Lord Whitty is considering the Group's report with the Parliamentary Under-Secretary at the Department of Transport, Local Government and the Regions (Mr. Jamieson), and will make an announcement in due course.

Air Pollution

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will indicate, in respect of the new risk-based regulation methodology being developed for air pollution, who is carrying out the work; when this process began; when it will end; and if she will place a copy of related documentation in the Library. [43423]

Mr. Meacher: Risk and Policy Analysts Ltd. were commissioned by the Department of Environment, Transport and the Regions in June 2000 to develop a methodology for risk-based regulation in relation to the Local Air Pollution Control system. Their report was published in November 2000 and was placed on the DETR website and is now to be found on the DEFRA website. The same firm was commissioned in May last year to undertake trials of the methodology recommended out of the four drawn up by the first stage of their work. The report is currently being finalised and will be placed on the DEFRA website in due course. I will decide the next steps on receipt of the report.

EU Policy Reform

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what her objectives are regarding reform of the (a) Common Agricultural Policy and (b) Common Fisheries Policy. [43083]

Margaret Beckett [holding answer 14 March 2002]: On the reform of the Common Agricultural Policy, our goal is to reduce the overall burden of the CAP, delivering better value for money to taxpayers and consumers; greater reflection of animal welfare concerns; a better deal for the environment; and a better deal for farmers.

We want to see market price support and production controls phased out, with transitional support payments to help farmers to adjust. This should be complemented by a shift towards the "second pillar" of the CAP, thus expanding the resources available for targeted support for rural development and agri-environment schemes.

Our primary objective for the Common Fisheries Policy must be for a policy which is both economically and environmentally sustainable and one which involves stakeholders more closely in management decisions affecting them. Only in that way will the CFP attract support and credibility from fishermen, ensure responsible stock management and give the promise of a viable future. I strongly agree with the Commission's conclusions in their Green Paper on the operation of the CFP that it is not meeting its objectives. It is failing to provide an adequate living for many fishermen and is failing to conserve fish stocks. The forthcoming review of the CFP will give the opportunity not only to put right what has gone wrong but also to consider how the CFP should develop over the coming years.

EU Water Framework Directive

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what representations her Department has received concerning the projected costs of implementing the EU Water Framework Directive in the UK; and if she will make a statement. [43602]

Mr. Meacher: A preliminary assessment of the costs and benefits of implementing the directive was set out in the first consultation paper issued jointly by the then Department for the Environment, Transport and the Regions and the National Assembly for Wales. The study estimated total costs for England and Wales in the range of £2 billion to £9.2 billion; benefits in the range of £1.6 billion to £6.2 billion. A copy of the paper is in the House Library.

A number of respondents to the consultation paper indicated that they had concerns about the cost to their industries of implementing the directive. A large majority of those raising concerns were from the farming industry.

A summary report of responses to the first consultation paper will be published as part of a second consultation paper on implementation of the directive later this year. Individual responses will also be available for inspection.

Implementation of the directive in Scotland and Northern Ireland, and with respect to the devolved functions in Wales, are matters for the Scottish Executive, the Northern Ireland Executive and the National Assembly for Wales. The Government and the National Assembly for Wales are working jointly to implement the directive in England and Wales. In Scotland and Northern Ireland, implementation of the directive is being managed wholly by the Scottish Executive and the Northern Ireland Executive.

Nitrates

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will estimate the average annual percentage change in the area of land required to spread a one tonne load of manure on farmland designated as being located in a nitrate vulnerable zone in the last five years. [44059]

Mr. Meacher: There have been controls of applying organic manures in nitrate vulnerable zones (NVZs) since December 1998.

Since then, there have been no changes in the area of land required to spread manure in a NVZ. The controls require farmers to remain within annual whole-farm limits for applying organic manure, allowing maximum nitrogen loadings of 250 kg/ha of total N on grassland and 210 kg/ha of total N on arable land.

From 19 December 2002 the maximum loading for arable land in existing NVZs (but not in new NVZs) will be reduced from 210 kg/ha to 170 kg/ha. At the maximum spreading rate permitted in a NVZ, any given amount of manure will then match the capacity of 24 per cent. more arable land than at present.

The N content of livestock manures depends on the number and type of livestock on individual farms. Farmers in existing NVZs make use of "Manure Planning in NVZs", available through DEFRA publications (08459 556000) or the internet (via a web link at http://www.defra.gov.uk/environment/water/quality/nitrate). This document contains simple calculations to identify the amount of manure delivering a particular nitrogen loading.

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she expects to announce her Department's decision on the amount of farmland to be designated as nitrate vulnerable zones; and when she expects to implement the nitrate vulnerable zone directive. [44060]

Mr. Meacher: The responses to the public consultation on options for implementing the nitrates directive are currently being analysed and we expect to publish the results, together with our decisions, by May 2002.

I anticipate that measures to implement the directive in new areas, to comply with a European Court Judgment, will come into force from 19 December 2002. Measures to implement the directive have been in force in existing nitrate vulnerable zones since December 1998.

Mr. Paul Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many farms have been found to have exceeded acceptable nitrate levels in the United Kingdom for each of the last five years; and where they are. [44297]

Mr. Meacher: The Environment Agency's water quality monitoring data, aggregated from the years 1996–2000 inclusive, indicate that farmers across about 80 per cent. of England contribute to the greatest nitrate pollution problems. There is no information available about nitrate levels on individual farms.

An indicative map of these areas was included in the DEFRA consultation document "How Should England Implement the 1991 Nitrates Directive" published in December 2001.

Farmers' Markets

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she expects to begin the certification of farmers' markets; if she will make a statement on the links established with regulatory authorities to ensure maintenance of standards; and what powers are vested in the regulatory authorities to restrict unauthorised traders from trading at farmers' markets. [44058]

Mr. Morley: The certification of farmers' markets is a private initiative by the National Association of Farmers' Markets (NAFM). The Department has, however, provided grant under the Agriculture Development Scheme to help fund the development and implementation of the scheme. We understand that the Local Authority Co-ordinating body on food and Trading Standards were involved in the drawing up of the certification handbook produced by NAFM.

The regulatory authorities have no specific powers to restrict traders from trading at farmers' markets. However, there may be scope for action to be taken under the general provisions of the Trade Description Act and the Food Safety Act.

Beef

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent representations the Government have made to the EC on relaxing EU rules on the export of beef. [43968]

Mr. Morley: The Government have made a number of recent representations to the European Commission, in particular concerning a relaxation of the dedication requirement of the Date-based Export Scheme so that establishments could be dedicated to export on certain days, rather than full time. A detailed paper was submitted on 5 March and we expect to discuss it with the Commission tomorrow 26 March.

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if imports of beef from animals over 30-months-old at the time of slaughter are banned; and if she will make a statement. [44225]

Margaret Beckett [holding answer 18 March 2002]: Beef from cattle aged over 30 months at slaughter may be imported from any country, but I understand from the Food Standards Agency that it may only be sold for human consumption if it comes from animals that were born, reared and slaughtered in a prescribed list of countries that have historically supplied the UK and in which there is no history of BSE. The list is kept under review, for example in the light of on-going European Union assessments of geographical risk.

Territorial Forces

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many members of staff in her Department are members of the territorial forces; and if she has a strategy to encourage members of staff to become members of the territorial forces. [44074]

Mr. Morley: Available records show that four members of staff are members of the territorial forces.

The Department actively supports its staff in giving more time to their communities and is keen to raise the profile of volunteering. Staff are allowed varying amounts of paid time off for voluntary public duties and for service in the territorial forces.

Packaging Waste

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) if the United Kingdom has met the requirements of the EU Packaging and Packaging Waste Directive; and if she will make a statement; [43511]

(2) when she will publish the recovery and recycling targets, under the Packaging Waste Regulations, for the current calendar year. [43512]

Margaret Beckett [holding answer 15 March 2002]: The EC Directive on Packaging and Packaging Waste—94/62/EC—was implemented in Great Britain by the Producer Responsibility Obligations (Packaging Waste) Regulations 1997 (as amended).

In order to comply with the requirements in the directive, recovery and recycling targets for 2001 under the packaging regulations were 56 per cent. for recovery and 18 per cent. for material-specific recycling of packaging waste. Data received to date suggest that, if obligated parties meet their obligations, these targets should be met.

I will be announcing the recovery and recycling targets for 2002 very soon.

Recycling

Dr. Pugh: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when the criteria for local authority bids will be announced with regard to the allocation of the £140 million recycling funds for 2002–03 and 2003–04. [44306]

Mr. Meacher: Final decisions on how we will distribute the fund have been made, following the results of the consultation. Officials have been working on the details of putting in place arrangements for distributing the funds.

Results of the consultation, and information on how the fund will be administered, will be published by the end of March. When this information is published, it will also be posted on the DEFRA website.

Compost

Dr. Pugh: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what guidelines she has set for the disposal and use of lower grade compost that will be unfit for agricultural use. [44345]

Mr. Meacher: The recovery or disposal of waste, including lower grade composted waste, must be carried out in compliance with the controls in place to fulfil the requirements of the waste framework directive. The main controls are set out in Part II of the Environmental Protection Act 1990 and the Waste Management Licensing Regulations (the 1994 Regulations). We have issued guidance on these controls in DOE Circular 11/94; and statutory guidance to the Environment Agency on waste management licensing in Waste Management Paper Number 4.

Waste compost may be spread on land for agricultural benefit or ecological improvement under the terms of the licensing exemption provided in paragraph 7 of Schedule 3 to the 1994 Regulations and registered with the Environment Agency. The spreading of waste compost in these circumstances is classified as a waste recovery operation. The disposal of waste compost must be carried out under the terms of a licence issued by the Environment Agency.

The Waste and Resources Action Programme (WRAP) has commissioned research investigating the markets for composts fit for restricted use, which will include those unsuitable for use in agriculture. The work will assess how much material could potentially be applied to various land use types and identify key issues associated with establishing quality standards for these materials.

Hemswell Cliff

Mr. Leigh: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what consultation took place between the Intervention Board, her Department and the Home Office before the announcement that the Hemswell Cliff site was a possible site for an asylum seekers' accommodation centre. [44624]

Mr. Morley: No consultations took place between DEFRA and these bodies prior to the Home Office announcement of the potential sites for trial accommodation centres. The Home Office will take a wide range of factors, including environmental, health and safety issues, into account at every site before final decisions are made.

Intervention Board

Mr. Leigh: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the total tonnage is that can be stored in refrigerated stores available to the Intervention Board. [44626]

Mr. Morley: The Rural Payments Agency currently has two Government owned stores, Hemswell Cliff and Locharbriggs near Dumfries the combined capacity of these is 15,000 tonnes. In addition commercial storage is acquired as necessary.

Staff (Local Elected Representatives)

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many members of staff at her Department are locally elected democratic representatives; and if she has a strategy for her Department to encourage members of staff to become locally elected democratic representatives. [44541]

Mr. Morley: Available records show that one member of staff is a locally elected representative.

The Department actively supports its staff in giving more time to their communities. Staff are allowed varying amounts of paid time off for voluntary public duties, including service as locally elected representatives.

Welfare of Laying Hens Directive

Matthew Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what extra welfare standards (a) have been implemented and (b) are planned to be introduced by the Government over and above the EU Directive 1999/74/EC on the welfare of laying hens. [44629]

Mr. Morley: It is intended that the Welfare of Laying Hens Directive 1999/74/EC will be implemented in England without being added to in any way. Wales, Scotland and Northern Ireland will follow suit. If changes are proposed, there will be a full public consultation.

A new welfare code for laying hens will accompany the regulations.

Matthew Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when the EU Directive 1999/74/EC on the welfare of laying hens will be fully implemented. [44628]

Mr. Morley: An implementing statutory instrument in respect of English legislation is being prepared and will shortly be presented to Parliament. Wales, Scotland and Northern Ireland are following a similar timetable.

Rio Earth Summit (Implementation)

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps her Department (a) has taken and (b) plans to take to re-affirm the Rio Declaration. [44361]

Mr. Meacher: The Government, in common with the rest of the international community, is working on the basis that the Johannesburg Summit is about implementing Agenda 21 and the Rio Declaration rather than renegotiating them. The Johannesburg intergovernmental political declaration should therefore reaffirm and reinforce the Rio Declaration.

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps have been taken by the Government since the Rio Earth Summit in 1992 to (a) set goals on environmental protection and (b) improve eco-efficiency and resource productivity relating to fresh water issues; and what these (i) goals and (ii) improvements have been. [44364]

Mr. Meacher: In 1999 the Government published its strategy for sustainable development for the UK, "A Better Quality of Life". This strategy is supported by a core set of around 150 indicators of sustainable development. A subset of 15 headline indicators focuses on specific issues and reflects targets against which progress is measured and reported annually. River water quality is one of the headline indicators. Over the last decade, general river quality in the UK has either improved or remained high.

In 1995 the Environment Act amended the Water Industry Act 1991 to place water companies under a statutory duty to promote the efficient use of water by their customers. Ofwat enforces this duty and requires companies to produce five-year water efficiency plans on which progress is reported annually. Following the Water Summit in 1997, Ofwat set annual leakage targets for water companies, which have resulted in a reduction of about 30 per cent. Further details are contained in the Ofwat report 'Leakage and the efficient use of water 2000–01', a copy of which is in the Library of the House. In addition, the Government runs the Envirowise programme, which promotes resource productivity—including water use—by industry. This resulted in over 29 million m^3 of water being saved last year.

Sustainable Development

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps the Government have taken since the United Nations General Assembly Special Session in 1997 towards the objectives of (a) poverty eradication and (b) sustainable production and consumption patterns; and what steps are planned towards further progress on these objectives. [44353]

Mr. Meacher: The issues of poverty eradication and sustainable production and consumption have been addressed by a number of key strategies published since 1997. In particular, the UK Government's Sustainable Development Strategy, 'A Better Quality of Life' sets out an overarching strategy for achieving sustainable development through social progress which recognises the needs of everyone, effective protection of the environment, prudent use of natural resources, and maintenance of high and stable levels of economic growth and employment. It includes a set of indicators to measure progress. The 2001 Annual Report on progress with the strategy was published last week.

Related strategies include: the Government's poverty and social exclusion strategy, set out and monitored in the annual 'Opportunity for All' reports; the Climate Change Programme; the Waste Strategy for England; and the UK Fuel Poverty Strategy, which sets out the framework for addressing the problem of households who cannot afford to keep warm.

In the future, the Government's work will include taking forward the recommendations in the reports to Government from the Performance and Innovation Unit covering Resource Productivity, Energy, and the forthcoming one on Waste.

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what preparations her Department is making for the World Summit on Sustainable Development in Johannesburg. [44362]

Mr. Meacher: DEFRA, working closely with other Departments, is leading on the UK's domestic and international preparations for the World Summit on Sustainable Development (WSSD). The Department is represented on MISC18, the Cabinet Committee set up to co-ordinate, develop and deliver the Government's strategy for WSSD. DEFRA also chairs two official level groups which co-ordinate preparations for the summit and will be attending the third preparatory meeting in New York starting on 25 March.

DEFRA has also led on the development of a cross-Whitehall communications strategy to raise awareness of the summit. We are working closely with local authorities, NGOs, business and other organisations to ensure that we engage a wide range of stakeholders in the summit. DEFRA has also developed the Government sustainable development website (www.sustainable-development.gov.uk) to include information on the WSSD.

Organic Farming

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, pursuant to her answer of 12 March 2002, Official Report, column 936W, PQ4610, when she will publish her organic action plan. [44227]

Margaret Beckett [holding answer 18 March 2002]: An announcement about the Organic Food and Farming action plan will be made soon.

Timber

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps her Department is taking to curb the importing of illegally cut timber. [44706]

Mr. Meacher: Combating illegal logging requires effort from both timber producing and consuming countries. Timber producing countries are responsible for defining and enforcing the national legislative and regulatory frameworks that define legality.

The Department for International Development (DFID) is working with a number of timber exporting countries to help them improve governance and strengthen forest law enforcement. We are also working to develop capacity for the implementation of timber certification schemes in some producing countries.

Domestically, the UK is working to ensure that the import of endangered timber species is in full compliance with CITES, the Convention on Trade in Endangered Species. We are also implementing a new Government timber procurement policy that seeks to procure forest products only from legal and sustainable sources.

The UK has shown leadership under the G8 Action Programme on Forests in promoting bilateral arrangements with timber producing countries whereby countries work together to tackle illegal logging and associated trade. We are currently negotiating the first of these with Indonesia. We hope that bilateral agreements will lead to regional and, eventually, an international agreement that will have a big impact on illegal trade.

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what research her Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated into the success of the Greening Government scheme in encouraging Government Departments to purchase timber from independently certified sustainable sources; and if she will make a statement. [44704]

Mr. Meacher: The Department has commissioned a report on the scale of timber procurement activities undertaken by central Government Departments and the improved guidance required to help buyers purchase timber and wood products from sustainable and legal sources. The final report is not due to be published until the summer of 2002. The timber trade, non-governmental organisations and other interested stakeholders are being consulted on the options for assessing product supplier claims on the sustainability of the source of the wood in their products. A consultation paper has been published on the website of the Tropical Forest Forum in advance of an open discussion on 25 March 2002. Written comments have been invited too. Following completion of the report it is intended that Departments will be given clearer guidelines including how to monitor and report on the evidence presented by suppliers. Departments will be asked to include information on wood product procurement in their returns for the annual reports on Sustainable Development in Government. This should enable their success in purchasing timber from independently certified sources to be evaluated.

Flood Defences

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what financial assistance is made available by the European Union to assist member states in the provision of coastal and inland flood defences. [44932]

Mr. Morley: No significant financial assistance is made available by the European Union to assist member states in the provision of flood and coastal defences.

Tidal Defences, Hullbridge

Mr. Francois: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when her Department expects to provide consent for the tidal defence works planned for Hullbridge, Essex; and if she will make a statement. [44982]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 21 March 2002]: I understand that the Environment Agency is seeking to obtain planning permission and to purchase the land necessary to compensate for the loss of internationally important habitats which would result from the construction of tidal defences at Hullbridge. These issues need to be resolved before the agency can submit an application for grant aid to this Department. When an application is received it will be considered against the normal economic, technical and environmental criteria and priority score arrangements for funding flood and coastal works.

Soil Surveys

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will supply data from the National Soil Inventory, using the average figure of all arable sites measured, on the change in (a) soil depth, (b) pH level, (c) nutrient level and (d) heavy metals between the 1978 to 1981 survey and 1994 to 1996 soil survey. [44728]

Mr. Morley: The National Soil Inventory can supply no data on changes in soil depth. Data on the other variables requested are not available at "arable sites" level, but data on arable/ley grassland sites are given in the following table.

Arable/ley grassland sites

Variable	1978–81	1994–96	Change
(b) pH	6.76	7.12	+0.36
(c) nutrient level
(i) organic carbon (percentage)	3.27	2.79	−0.48
(ii) available phosphorus (mg/l)	31.81	41.45	+9.64
(iii) available potassium (mg/l)	199.19	236.01	+36.82
(iv) available magnesium (mg/l)	141.78	143.80	[1]—
(d) heavy metals
total zinc (mg/kg)	88.64	68.30	−20.34
total copper (mg/kg)	20.24	18.27	−1.97
total nickel (mg/kg)	27.05	24.45	−2.60
total cadmium (mg/kg)	0.80	0.32	−0.48
total lead (mg/kg)	41.46	36.21	−5.25
total cobalt (mg/kg)	11.58	10.94	−0.64

Flooding

Mrs. Lait: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, pursuant to her answer of 8 March 2002, Official Report, column 642W, on flooding, what plans she has to review groundwater flooding matters. [45195]

Mr. Morley: We have no such plans. While groundwater flooding was recognised as a significant factor in the flooding of autumn 2000, its causes are varied and often complex.

The current legal situation is that, as with land subsidence, responsibility for taking remedial action generally falls to the individual householder or landowner. Only where groundwater problems are directly related to a defined watercourse do flood defence operating authorities have permissive powers to act. In deciding whether to do so they would need to consider the technical, economic and environmental effects of such action.

However, the Environment Agency routinely monitor major groundwater aquifers for water resource purposes. This information, and data on long-term accumulations of rainfall, may be used to provide general warnings for certain vulnerable areas at times of increased risk on a best endeavours basis. It is not technically feasible to provide specific warnings to particular properties though in most cases there are simple steps that individuals can take to monitor their own situation.

Creche Facilities

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what creche facilities are provided by her Department; and at what cost. [44855]

Mr. Morley: The Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (DEFRA) provide 145 full-time subsidised nursery places for departmental and agency staff at six sites. The actual number of children using the nurseries is higher than this figure due to many of the places being allocated on a part-time basis. The cost of nursery places and the amount of subsidy varies for each location.

School holiday playscheme places are also available to departmental and agency staff working at eight sites. The number of users varies at each site and for each school holiday period.

The overall cost of this provision for the HQ offices (York and London) during the 2001–02 financial year is estimated to be £60,000, which works out at approximately £17.86 per head of staff at those sites. In actual terms, the benefit per parent is higher as not all staff require child care support. Child care facilities at other sites are funded from local budgets and up to date figures are not available at short notice.

DEFRA keeps its child care provision arrangements under review.

New Deal

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many people employed by her Department under the new deal for young people in each of the last four years have subsequently (a) found unsubsidised employment for more than 13 weeks and (b) returned to jobseekers' allowance or other benefits. [45088]

Mr. Morley: Information is not held centrally on the number of new dealers who have found unsubsidised employment for more than 13 weeks or who have returned to jobseeker's allowance or other benefits.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many people have been employed by her Department in each of the last three years under (a) the new deal for young people, (b) the new deal for the over 50s and (c) the new deal for lone parents; and at what cost, listed by category, to public funds. [44910]

Mr. Morley: The number of people who have been employed by the Department and its agencies under the new deal programmes for the last three financial years is as follows:

(a) Young people (18 to 24-year-olds)

	Number
1998–99	5
1999–2000	6
2000–01	31

The Department does not hold information on the number of new dealers employed on either the (b) over 50s or (c) lone parents programmes.

The figures for young people include both subsidised and unsubsidised starts. New deal recruits take up existing vacancies so extra costs to public funds are limited to the subsidy, where appropriate, and any additional training and development which may be needed. The cost of the latter cannot be readily identified.

Pollution (Irish Sea)

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent assessment she has made of the impact of nutrients discharged from land-based sources into the Irish Sea. [44004]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 21 March 2002]: The Urban Waste Water Treatment and Nitrates Directives require member states to undertake periodic reviews of estuaries and near-shore marine areas to establish whether they are adversely affected (or have the potential to become so) by nutrient inputs from rivers and direct discharges. The latest reviews were undertaken by the discharge regulators during 2001 and the results should be available later this year.

Within the work programme of OSPAR, the Convention for the Protection of the Marine Environment of the North East Atlantic, Contracting Parties including the UK are currently assessing the eutrophication status of the various parts of the OSPAR maritime area. An initial stage, to identify the more obvious non-problem areas, found that the wider parts of the Irish Sea fell into the "non-problem" category. The area of the Irish Sea to the east of a line from Anglesey to the Solway Firth is being subject to a more detailed evaluation as it is recognised that this area may be at greater risk of being adversely affected by nutrients from land based sources. The UK is due to present the findings of this more detailed evaluation at the end of 2002.

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what research the Government have recently conducted into pollution of the Irish Sea. [44003]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 21 March 2002]: The UK Government have supported an extensive programme of research into pollution in the Irish Sea in recent years.

The Department, working in conjunction with the Scottish and Northern Irish Forum for Environmental Research (SNIFFER), made a substantial contribution to the body of evidence from which the co-ordinated UK-Irish assessment of the Celtic Seas was produced in 2000. This Quality Status Report (QSR) for the Celtic Seas, a copy of which is available in the Library of the House of Commons, provides a list of references which includes items of research sponsored by the UK Government.

Since 2000 we have continued to build our evidence base on pollution of the Irish Sea with a view to assessing the status of the North East Irish Sea in relation to nutrient inputs and identifying the key processes determining the potential impact and transport of pollutants. This is a part of our ongoing co-ordinated marine environment research programme which continues to contribute to regional co-operation on research and monitoring through OSPAR (the Convention for the Protection of the Marine Environment of the North East Atlantic) and its Assessment and Monitoring Committee.

In respect of pollution by radioactive substances, the results of a joint research project between the Environment Agency and SNIFFER, entitled Past, Current and Future Radiological Impacts of Radioactive Marine Discharges on Coastal Communities Surrounding the Irish Sea, was published in 1999. A copy of this report is available in the Library.

Home Energy Efficiency

Mr. Horam: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether a householder who has received a grant under Warm Front or Warm Front Plus can receive further assistance under the scheme for measures in addition to those originally installed; and whether a householder who has received a Warm Front grant is eligible, on reaching the age of 60, for assistance under Warm Front Plus. [44000]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 21 March 2002]: Paragraph 7(3)(e) of the Home Energy Efficiency Scheme (England) Regulations 2000, as amended, requires applications for assistance under the scheme to contain "a statement that neither the applicant, nor to his knowledge any other person, has received or applied for grant under these Regulations in respect of the dwelling which is the subject of the application". The effect of this paragraph is to limit to one the number of grants under the scheme for any household, whether the occupant is under or over 60 years of age.

Whaling

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs which countries engage in whaling. [45254]

Mr. Morley: The following members of the International Whaling Commission (IWC) engage in whaling activities:

Denmark (Greenland and the Faroe Islands)
Japan
Norway
Russia
St. Vincent and the Grenadines
United States of America.

We have no information on whaling carried out by non-IWC members.

Pig Farms

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) if she will list (a) the occasions when and (b) the reasons why (i) Oldlands Pig Unit in Wiltshire and (ii) Shoddesden Pig Unit in Hampshire were (A) not accepted onto and (B) suspended from Farm Assurance schemes in the past five years; [45153]

(2) if Farm Assurance scheme inspectors have visited pig units at (a) Oldlands Farm, Wiltshire and (b) Shoddesden, Hampshire; and what assessments have been made; [45150]

(3) on what grounds pig units of (a) Oldlands Farm, Wiltshire and (b) Shoddesden, Hampshire were suspended from the Farm Assurance scheme in (i) July 2000, (ii) February 2001, (iii) June 2001 and (iv) other times in the last four years. [45152]

Margaret Beckett [holding answer 21 March 2002]: The main pig assurance scheme was originally established by the Government. However, it was taken over by the industry in September 1996 and has since been run as a private initiative by Assured British Pigs (APB). Membership of the scheme is voluntary.

Following the privatisation of the scheme, the State Veterinary Service (SVS) continued to provide inspection services until September 1999 when its contract with ABP ended. Since then inspections have been carried out by a private independent inspection body and the Government have had no role in the operation of the scheme.

Prior to the ending of the contract the Shoddesden pig unit was inspected by a State Veterinary Service veterinary officer in connection with an application for it to be registered under the ABP scheme. The veterinary officer advised the applicant of action that would need to be taken in order to meet the scheme's requirements. We understand from ABP that the Shoddesden pig unit was subsequently registered under the scheme in March 1999 after the work requested by the veterinary officer had been confirmed as complete.

The SVS was not involved in subsequent APB inspections of the unit.

We are not aware of any application for the Oldlands pig unit to be registered under the APB scheme.

Mink Farming

Mr. Peter Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she will announce a scheme of compensation to farmers following the ban on the farming of mink. [45389]

Mr. Morley: A scheme of compensation was set out in SI 2001/3853, the Fur Farming (Compensation Scheme) (England) Order 2001, which was made and laid before Parliament on 3 December 2001 and came into force on 1 January 2002. Following comments by the Joint Committee on Statutory Instruments, this SI was revoked and replaced by SI 2002/221, the Fur Farming (Compensation Scheme)(England) Order 2002, which was made on 5 February 2002, laid before Parliament on 7 February 2002 and came into force on 1 March 2002. However, the scheme in the latter SI is identical to the previous one in all material respects and also contains a transitional provision for applications made under the 2001 order to be treated as if they had been made under the 2002 order.

Brucellosis

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on her Department's contingency plans for an outbreak of brucellosis. [45840]

Mr. Morley: The emphasis of the Department's approach to controlling outbreaks of brucellosis is the regular statutory testing of both dairy and beef herds to ensure that Great Britain maintains its brucellosis free status.

All dairy herds are tested monthly using the bulk milk tank test. If there is a positive result, blood samples are taken from all cattle in the herd and tested. Blood samples are taken from all adult breeding cattle in 50 per cent. of the national beef herd every year. This far exceeds the requirements of EC Directive 64/432. Under the Brucellosis (England) Order 2000, and equivalent legislation in Scotland and Wales, there is a statutory requirement for farmers to report abortions and premature calvings to the Local Animal Health Office of DEFRA. Investigative tests are then carried out.

To lessen the risk that brucellosis might be imported during the controlled restocking of farms following the foot and mouth disease epidemic, my Department has issued instructions to introduce even tighter surveillance and control for brucellosis under the cattle tracing system. All imported female cattle will be targeted for testing at strategic points. Reports are generated in the event of calving, absence of notified calving when a female reaches 30 months and when no calving has been registered for females over 30 months within 12 months of import. These reports are then followed up and testing carried out accordingly.

If an animal tests positive, it will be slaughtered with compensation and the rest of the herd will be placed under movement restrictions while further confirmatory testing is carried out. A veterinary investigation into the cause of the positive blood test result will be initiated immediately and movements on to and off the affected premises will be traced. It usually takes up to three weeks to confirm whether or not the animal was infected. In the event that brucellosis is confirmed contact herds will be tested. If the veterinary investigation reveals that some contact animals are at risk, these will also be slaughtered. This may involve the slaughter of all the affected herd. This strategy worked when one case of imported brucellosis was confirmed in Great Britain in 1993.

Livestock Movements

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when the Government plan to remove the restrictions for hauliers on the collection of livestock from more than one farm for transport to market. [46199]

Mr. Morley: Multiple pick-ups are permitted for livestock movements subject to conditions. They are limited to five farms per trip and may only take place at premises which have prior approval to operate as a pick-up site. Further details of the conditions that apply to multiple pick-ups and drop-offs are available at www.defra.gov.uk/footandmouth/movements/transport/index.htm.

Noxious Smells

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what advice and guidance she has issued to local authorities concerning the exercise of their powers to control remissions into the atmosphere of noxious smells. [46204]

Mr. Meacher: Local authorities have powers to control smells which are a statutory nuisance under Part III of the Environmental Protection Act 1990. No guidance has been issued to authorities in relation to these powers.

Local authorities also regulate smells as part of their responsibilities under Part I of the Environmental Protection Act 1990 to control air pollution from a range of industrial processes (Local Air Pollution Control). The Government issue a series of statutory guidance notes for local authorities on what constitute the Best Available Techniques Not Entailing Excessive Cost for minimising air emissions from a range of industrial processes. Odour is addressed in these guidance notes where appropriate. The notes are all published and are listed on my Department's website http://www.defra.gov.uk/environment/airquality/lapc/default.htm. A programme to review all the guidance notes is under way, and draft revisions can be found either on the DEFRA website or on the Environment Agency's website (www.environment-agency.gov.uk/business/lapc/?version=1), depending on the stage of progress.

An additional guidance note was issued to local authorities by my Department in January this year reminding them that their responsibilities under Part I of the 1990 Act included the control of air emissions which may not cause a local nuisance.

Foot and Mouth

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if the sheep at Hawnby were tested for the foot and mouth (a) virus and (b) antibody before restocking; and if she will make a statement. [40701]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 5 March 2002]: All animals used for controlled restocking must come from farms which have been inspected and found free from foot and mouth disease (FMD).

Two of the three farms which restocked the Hawnby premises had on previous occasions tested antibody negative for foot and mouth disease in November 2001 and October 2001. Testing for virus did not take place.

At the time of restocking in 2002, there was no requirement for pre-movement testing to be carried out as all counties had achieved FMD-free status.

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs where the Hawnby sheep originally came from; and what steps she is taking to test the original flock for foot and mouth. [40700]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 5 March 2002]: Three farms provided sheep to restock the Hawnby premises. They were in the Bosall, Helmsley and Hawnby areas of North Yorkshire. At the time the Hawnby sheep came under suspicion on 26 February, the source farms were immediately placed under Form D restrictions and a Veterinary Clinical Inspection was carried out on the stock.

No signs of foot and mouth disease were found.

Restrictions remained in place until after the restrictions on the Hawnby flock were lifted following negative results. There was no basis for further testing on the farms of sheep origin.

Mr. Peter Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the value is of outstanding claims for foot and mouth disease compensation from Scotland. [44367]

Mr. Morley: All claims from Scottish farmers for compensation for compulsorily slaughtered livestock have been paid amounting to £161.5 million. 136 valuations, on which compensation has been paid totalling around £32 million, are the subject of disputes lodged by the farmer. Two disputed claims to the value of £360,599 have been settled.

Abattoirs

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will list the (a) shire districts, (b) metropolitan districts, (c) unitary authorities and (d) London boroughs which lie, wholly or in part, (i) more than 50 miles from and (ii) more than 90 minutes' journey time from a licensed abattoir or slaughterhouse. [40974]

Yvette Cooper: I have been asked to reply.

The Food Standards Agency does not hold information on the siting of licensed abattoirs in the format requested. However, I have arranged for lists of licensed red and white meat abattoirs, arranged by county and local authority respectively, to be placed in the Library of the House.

TREASURY

VAT

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people were sentenced to imprisonment in (a) 1999–2000, (b) 2000–01 and (c) 2001–02 to date following the completion of VAT criminal prosecutions; what was the sum total of custodial sentences imposed in each year; and if he will make a statement. [12216]

Mr. Boateng [holding answer 6 March 2002]: The number of people sentenced to imprisonment in the year 1999–2000 following the completion of VAT criminal prosecution was 83 and custodial sentences totalling 213 years were imposed.

The number of people sentenced to imprisonment in the year 2000–01 following the completion of VAT criminal prosecutions was 61 and custodial sentences totalling 116 years were imposed.

The figures for the number of people sentenced and the custodial sentences imposed for the current year 2001–02 will not be available before the end of the financial year.

Ms Oona King: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether small businesses which make appropriate arrangements with the VAT Office to spread their VAT payments are liable to a surcharge in addition to their original VAT bill; and whether firms are advised of this surcharge at the time of renegotiation. [44749]

Mr. Boateng: A business which has incurred a surcharge because of a failure to meet VAT obligations, may include that surcharge in any subsequent arrangements made with Customs and Excise to clear their VAT arrears by instalments. Any business which enters into an agreement will remain subject to the default surcharge provisions if subsequent VAT returns or payments of tax due are received late. This is made clear in correspondence issued by customs when they confirm such payment arrangements.

However, following changes announced in the Chancellor's autumn statement when small businesses start to have difficulties in meeting VAT obligations, they are first offered advice and support, rather than incurring automatic surcharges.

Mr. Hammond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to ensure that VAT on hot take-away food is charged in a uniform way across different types of retail outlets. [45137]

Mr. Boateng: There have been no changes to the VAT treatment of hot take-away food. Customs and Excise plan to issue further advice to confirm that hot take-away food is VAT standard rated, regardless of the type of retail outlet that supplies it.

Benefits in Kind

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the number of individuals in his (a) Department, (b) related agencies and (c) related non-departmental public bodies whose annual remuneration including benefits in kind exceeded (i) £100,000 and (ii) £200,000 in each of the last four years. [26323]

Dawn Primarolo: (a) The number of individuals in the Chancellor's Departments whose annual remuneration exceeded £100,000 in each of the last four years is as follows:

1 April 1998: 11

1 April 1999: 12

1 April 2000: 15

1 April 2001: 21.

(b) The number of individuals in Related Agencies whose annual remuneration exceeded £100,000 in each of the last four years is as follows:

1 April 1998: 2

1 April 1999: 3

1 April 2000: 6

1 April 2001: 7.

There were no individuals in either Departments or Agencies in any of the four years whose remuneration exceeded £200,000.

(c) I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer given to him on 29 January 2002, Official Report, column 253W.

Treasury Website

Mr. Chope: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the items of material which have been removed from the Treasury website in each of the last four years. [36799]

Ruth Kelly [holding answer 25 February 2002]: The Treasury's website www.hm-treasury.gov.uk currently contains more than 3,000 pages. Pages are frequently updated with certain sections of the site, such as the economic data and careers areas, being changed on a weekly basis.

The website was relaunched in November 2001 to provide the Treasury with a more robust, better organised and searchable platform for its website. At that time, the opportunity was taken to remove a number of older documents, including files relating to the previous administration. Material removed at that time included expenditure reviews, press releases from 1994 to 1996 and older budget and spending review information. However, as a consequence of the relaunch, the site is significantly more robust and, with its search engine and simple navigational structure, documents are now easier to access and read.

Consultants

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the total cost to his Department was of the use of external consultants in each of the last four years. [35022]

Ruth Kelly: The costs to HM Treasury for external consultants were as follows:

Year
1996–97	1,032,250
1997–98	1,159,530
1998–99	1,788,706
1999–2000	1,489,024
2000–01	1,666,799
2001–02	1,160,099

Special Advisers

Mr. Collins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer on how many occasions since 1 May 1997 (a) departmental and (b) non-departmental special advisers have travelled abroad in an official capacity; and if he will list the total cost, including (i) travel, (ii) accommodation and (iii) subsistence allowance, for each occasion. [37981]

Ruth Kelly [holding answer 27 February 2002]: Between 1 April 2000 and 31 March 2001, special advisers in the Treasury travelled abroad on 31 occasions, at an average cost of £1,431 per trip. All travel by special advisers is undertaken in accordance with the rules set out in the Ministerial Code, and the Civil Service Management Code.

Smaller Quoted Companies

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps have been taken by the Inland Revenue to define the smaller quoted companies for tax purposes. [40251]

Dawn Primarolo: There are no areas of tax legislation that refer to small or smaller quoted companies, so no definition is needed.

Small Landlords

Margaret Moran: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his estimate is of the net cost to the Treasury of bringing small landlords within the same tax regime as other small businesses. [41669]

Dawn Primarolo: All landlords, irrespective of size, and others with assets giving rise to rental income or other receipts from land and buildings (taxable under Schedule A) are taxed in the same way on that income. There is no separate definition of "small".

If the hon. Member has in mind treating all assets giving rise to Schedule A income as qualifying for reliefs available to trading assets, the full-year cost is tentatively estimated to be £400 million.

Inheritance Tax

Mr. Love: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many (a) buildings and (b) works of art are covered under the conditional exemption scheme for inheritance tax; how many visitors there have been to each in each of the last 10 years, including an estimate for the current year; and if he will make a statement. [42561]

Dawn Primarolo: There are currently 288 cases of conditionally exempt land and/or buildings. Available figures for 65 conditionally exempt properties where visitors are admitted by ticket show an average of about 24,000 visitors per property per year.

86,000 chattels (including works of art) are currently conditionally exempt. Visitor numbers to conditionally exempt chattels are not available.

Mr. Love: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much inheritance tax has been deferred under the conditional exemption scheme in each year since 1984. [42560]

Dawn Primarolo: The estimated cost to the Exchequer of conditional exemption from inheritance tax (and its predecessor, capital transfer tax) is as follows:

	Amount of relief (£ million)
1984–85	45
1985–86	30
1986–87	25
1987–88	55
1988–89	50
1989–90	100
1990–91	170
1991–92	20
1992–93	45
1993–94	40
1994–95	60
1995–96	30
1996–97	35
1997–98	40
1998–99	35
1999–2000	10
2000–01	20

Parental Leave Directive

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the (a) financial costs and (b) benefits to his Department of the parental leave directive. [42484]

Ruth Kelly: Treasury staff are eligible for unpaid parental leave under the parental leave directive. Central records are not kept on the amounts of unpaid parental leave taken. The Treasury also has a number of other family friendly policies in place, for example alternative working practices, paid special leave, career breaks, to help staff strike a balance between home life and work.

Age Discrimination

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his Department's policy is towards age discrimination. [42571]

Ruth Kelly: The Treasury has taken steps to integrate age into its equal opportunity policies and the Department has a commitment that there should be no unfair discrimination on the basis of age. Action on diversity has and will continue to tackle any negative attitudes towards older staff particularly through the training and development of managers and through the monitoring of recruitment, selection and appraisal statistics.

Celebrations

Tim Loughton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what arrangements his Department has made to celebrate (a) St. Patrick's Day, (b) St. George's Day, (c) St. Andrew's Day and (d) Her Majesty the Queen's Golden Jubilee; and how his Department celebrated St. David's Day. [42296]

Ruth Kelly [holding answer 11 March 2002]: There are certain days of the year known as "named days" when the Union flag must be flown from Government buildings. The days include St. David's Day (in Wales), St. George's Day (in England), St. Andrew's Day (in Scotland) but not St. Patrick's Day.

The Union flag will be flown on the Treasury building on Coronation Day (2 June) as this is a named day. Whether the Treasury will further celebrate the Queen's Golden Jubilee will depend on the outcome of the Department of Culture, Media and Sport's current consideration of the Union flag flying protocol procedure for the Jubilee.

I would also refer the hon. Member to the answer the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport gave to the hon. Member for Suffolk South (Mr. Yeo) on 11 February 2002 Official Report, columns 58–59W. In the Treasury, all staff will be given an additional public holiday on 4 June 2002 to celebrate Her Majesty's Golden Jubilee.

Minimum Wage (Paisley, North)

Mrs. Irene Adams: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many employers within Paisley, North have been found to be breaching the minimum wage legislation. [43916]

Dawn Primarolo: This information is not available. For Scotland, over 1,600 investigations have been completed since the introduction of the national minimum wage in April 1999 with non-compliance being discovered in 27 per cent. of cases. During this period wages arrears of £550,000 have been identified.

Mrs. Irene Adams: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many employers within Paisley North, having advertised with the Employment Service, have subsequently been found to have breached the minimum wage legislation. [43918]

Dawn Primarolo: The information is not available.

The Employment Service (ES) will not accept for display any vacancy that does not meet the requirements of the National Minimum Wage (NMW) Act 1998. ES has in place a robust and ongoing monitoring system to ensure it meets its commitment to display only NMW compliant vacancies. However, with over two million vacancies handled every year there is always a risk that a "rogue vacancy" will slip through the net. Where ES is made aware of this, services to the employer may be suspended while the complaint is investigated. All complainants in these circumstances are advised to contact the Inland Revenue, as the NMW enforcement agency, to allow further investigation.

Staff (Local Elected Representation)

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many members of staff at his Department are locally elected democratic representatives; and if he has a strategy for his Department to encourage members of staff to become locally elected democratic representatives. [44539]

Ruth Kelly: Information on whether staff are locally elected democratic representatives is not held centrally. Staff who are representatives of bodies covered by Section 50 of the Employment Rights Act 1996 are allowed 10 days paid special leave to undertake their duties.

Inland Revenue Customer Call Centres

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what targets are in place at Inland Revenue contact centres in respect of the time taken to answer to customer telephone inquiries; and if he will make a statement. [44702]

Dawn Primarolo: Inland Revenue contact centres work to the following targets for call handling:

No more than 5 per cent. of attempted calls to reach an engaged tone.

No more than 5 per cent. of attempted calls to be abandoned.

Of the calls not engaged or abandoned, 90 per cent. to be answered within 20 seconds.

An attempted call is counted each time a customer dials the contact centre number.

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the policy of the Inland Revenue is with respect to providing customers with direct line numbers for inquiries to customer call centres; and if he will make a statement. [44699]

Dawn Primarolo: Ten million PAYE taxpayers have new Inland Revenue contact centres as their first point of telephone contact. By July 2002 this number will have grown to 15 million (50 per cent. of PAYE taxpayers).

For these taxpayers, where there is ongoing correspondence with an individual tax officer or inspector, a direct dial number will be provided so that the customer can make contact with the individual concerned. Unsolicited calls are handled by the contact centre, which provides a local rate number to customers.

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what mechanisms exist to establish whether sufficient telephone lines are in place at Inland Revenue customer call centres to handle the volume of customer telephone inquiries. [44700]

Dawn Primarolo: Staffing levels of the first five of Inland Revenue taxpayer contact centres were based on analysis of an experimental IR contact centre opened in 1998 in East Kilbride. Statistical analysis of call volumes there was used to inform the rollout programme.

The number of advisers is intended to allow the centres to meet targets on all but 15 days each year using a mixture of full and part time staff. Resource teams in each office match staff resources to the predicted call volumes.

On the 15 days where excess volumes are anticipated, calls are overflowed to customer service units in local offices.

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what targets exist at Inland Revenue contact centres for the time taken returning customer calls; and if he will make a statement. [44701]

Dawn Primarolo: Where a customer has raised a query that cannot be handled by the Inland Revenue contact centre they have contacted, the call will be passed to an officer in the service office to resolve the inquiry. Where that is not possible, or where further research is required, the target is to return to the customer within one working day. This will be extended if another time would be more convenient to the customer, or research will take longer than one working day.

In these situations a different time scale would be agreed with the customer.

Business Regulations

Mr. Flight: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent representations he has received from groups representing business and commerce regarding the burden of regulation and taxation on businesses. [44690]

Dawn Primarolo: As is normal in the run up to the Budget, the Government have received a number of representations from business organisations.

Mr. Flight: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if it is a goal of his policies to improve United Kingdom productivity that the burden of regulation on business should fall. [44724]

Mr. Boateng: The Government are committed to ensuring that regulations are fair and effective, so that they protect the vulnerable but do not stifle enterprise or productivity.

The Government have significantly strengthened the systems that control the regulatory burden. In February the Cabinet Office announced the "Government's Action Plan for Regulatory Reform" which included 260 reforms, with over 60 expected to make use of the Regulatory Reform Act.

National Insurance

Mr. Flight: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the number of people who would pay more in national insurance contributions if the ceiling on Class 1 contributions were aligned with the higher rate tax threshold. [44687]

Dawn Primarolo: Around 3¼ million people would pay more in national insurance contributions on an average weekly basis during 2002–03 if the Class 1 ceiling were aligned with the income tax higher rate threshold. This estimate was provided by the Government Actuary's Department.

Mr. Flight: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the revenue implications of removing the upper earnings limit on employee national insurance contributions. [44688]

Dawn Primarolo: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Banff and Buchan (Mr. Salmond) on 1 March 2002, Official Report, column 1573W.

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been (a) the maximum and (b) the average underpayment to pensioners adversely affected by NIRS2 since its introduction. [42516]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: I have been asked to reply.

The maximum underpayment of retirement pension caused by the NIRS2 problems is not known. The average underpayment to the small percentage of pension claims that have been affected by NIRS2 problems since June 1998 is £339. The arrears have been paid in nearly all the affected cases along with compensation, where appropriate. The NIRS2 computer is now stable and the difficulties caused to pensioners and other benefit claimants by the delayed implementation of some of the functions are now almost resolved.

Annuities

Mr. Flight: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he intends to reform the requirement to purchase an annuity at the age of 75 years. [44723]

Ruth Kelly: I refer the hon. Gentleman to my answer of 4 March 2002, Official Report, column 9W.

Tax Law Rewrite Project

Barbara Follett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what further developments there have been as a result of the Tax Law Rewrite Project. [46550]

Dawn Primarolo: The Tax Law Rewrite Project continues to make good progress. At the end of this month it will be publishing its thirteenth Exposure Draft, containing draft clauses on foreign income and property income.

The project is also currently working on an Income Tax Bill rewriting the provisions on employment income, pension income and taxable social security benefits. In preparation for that Bill, this year's Finance Bill will included some small amendments to the tax legislation on employment income. Copies of this draft Finance Bill legislation will shortly be published on the project's website.

Copies of the Exposure Draft and the draft Finance Bill legislation will be placed in the Library as soon as they are available.

Preston Case

Ian Stewart: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the tax treatment of settlements between employers and employees to implement the House of Lords decision in the Preston case. [46642]

Ruth Kelly: The Preston judgment means that many employers must give all their part-time employees and certain of their ex-employees, retrospective access to membership of their occupational pension schemes from April 1976 or in some cases later. The employers concerned have a responsibility to settle with their employees and ex-employees how this should be achieved in each case. There are outstanding cases before Employment Tribunals which are designed to determine how employers and employees should meet their liabilities.

Where employees are entitled to membership rights in an occupational scheme in respect of past periods of employment, the normal rules about tax relief on contributions continue to apply. That is:

all employers' contributions to occupational pension schemes, including any for past service, qualify for corporation tax relief; employees' contributions up to 15 per cent. of their salary from the employer concerned in the year the contributions are paid qualify for income tax, irrespective of whether any part of the contribution is in respect of previous years' service; employees may make contributions to their schemes above 15 per cent. of salary in any tax year but any such contributions do not benefit from tax relief.

In some cases, employers and employees may prefer to agree on lump sum settlements rather than additional membership rights in occupational schemes. In these cases, the lump sums are not taxable as income under schedule E but will be liable to capital gains tax subject to the normal annual exemption.

Government Debt and Asset Management

Mrs. Lawrence: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the future organisational arrangements for government debt and asset management. [46643]

Ruth Kelly: Following a detailed review of the current arrangements and future requirements for government debt and asset management, the National Debt Office (NDO) and the Public Works Loans Board (PWLB) will be integrated with the UK Debt Management Office (DMO) with effect from 1 July. Both the NDO and the PWLB are part of the National Investment and Loans Office (NILO) and the relevant staff will be relocated to the DMO's offices. This reorganisation, while maintaining provision of existing services, is designed to deliver improved management of the central Government balance sheet, and to offer a more robust, flexible and innovative service to public sector clients.

At the same time the remaining part of NILO, the Office of HM Paymaster General (OPG), will be merged with the Treasury, while also maintaining the provision of its existing services. NILO will thereafter cease to exist.

Tax Credits

Mr. Webb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many disabled people have benefited from the fast track to disabled person's tax credit since this provision was introduced. [44459]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 19 March 2002]: The number of recipients of the disabled person's tax credit (DPTC) entering via the fast-track is shown in table 2.3 of each DPTC Quarterly Enquiry, copies of which are in the Library.

Mr. Peter Duncan: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he expects the new working families tax credit unit in Livingston to be operational. [45311]

Dawn Primarolo: The Livingston Contact Centre, which will handle telephone inquiries about tax credits, is expected to be operational from 1 August 2002.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what estimate he has made of the number of people living on below 60 per cent. of median income who have an entitlement to the working families tax credit and are not in receipt of any payment; [45286]

(2) how many families living on below 60 per cent. of median income are in receipt of the working families tax credit; and what percentage of the total working families tax credit case load this represents. [45289]

Dawn Primarolo: No such estimates for working families tax credit will be available until the Family Resources Survey data for 2000–01 have been analysed.

Chris Grayling: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer for what reason (a) a widow receiving a widowed mother's allowance is not eligible for working families tax credit and (b) a mother receiving maintenance payments from a living ex-partner is eligible for the credit. [45858]

Dawn Primarolo: A widow in receipt of widowed mother's allowance and a mother in receipt of maintenance payments may both be eligible for the working families tax credit.

Mrs. Lawrence: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the compliance statistics for working families tax credit were in the nine months to 31 December 2001; and what the comparable statistics were in the previous year. [46644]

Dawn Primarolo: Compliance statistics for the nine months to 31 December 2001 show an increased effectiveness in the Inland Revenue's compliance programme. Of the 16,016 inquiries completed in this period, 5,427 cases (34 per cent.) were found to contain discrepancies and these produced a compliance yield of £10.4 million.

I very much regret having to report that the Inland Revenue have advised me that some previous statistics relating to tax credit compliance have proved to be incorrect or incomplete. The correct equivalent figures for the year ended 31 March 2001 are that, of the 31,211 inquiries completed in that year, 5,573 cases (18 per cent.) were found to contain discrepancies producing a compliance yield of £7.7 million.

These errors in the Inland Revenue's tax credit statistics have also resulted in incorrect information being given in responses to some written parliamentary questions, in letters to hon. Members and during debates. I am writing to the Members concerned correcting errors and I will place a copy of the letters in the Libraries of both Houses.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many families living on below 60 per cent. of median income are in receipt of the children's tax credit; and what percentage of the total children's tax credit caseload this represents. [45284]

Dawn Primarolo: This information is not available.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he plans to introduce incentives for tax credit towards training personnel employed in small and medium sized enterprises. [45561]

Dawn Primarolo: The Government keeps all taxes under review and any changes will be announced in the Budget report.

The Government is taking forward its Budget 2001 commitment to consider policies, possibly including a tax credit, to encourage low skilled workers to train. The PBR announced pilot schemes to start this year which will test a range of policy options to support and encourage training.

Creche Facilities

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what creche facilities are provided by his Department; and at what cost. [44861]

Ruth Kelly: The Treasury offers staff access to subsidised places on a holiday playscheme and pays £15.60 towards the cost of each place, which represents 60 per cent. of the total cost. Around eight staff take up places for their children. Staff can also reclaim additional child care costs incurred, including the tax liability, if they have to work longer or later than normal.

Parliamentary Questions

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer for what reason officials in his Department draw up background briefing notes concerning the reason that an hon. Member is asking a parliamentary question; and if he will make a statement. [45119]

Ruth Kelly: Ministers would be advised of Members' reasons for tabling particular questions to facilitate the provision of appropriate replies.

Sport

Bob Russell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) how many responses to the Treasury Consultation Document, "Promoting Sport in the Community", (a) agreed and (b) disagreed with the need to proceed with a separate Inland Revenue-administered tax package; [45170]

(2) how many responses to the Treasury Consultation Document, "Promoting Sport in the Community", (a) agreed and (b) disagreed with the assessment that the charitable route offered clubs better prospects than the Inland Revenue administered tax package. [45169]

Mr. Boateng: A range of responses have been received. Decisions on the best way forward will be made with regard to these responses and in the context of subsequent meetings with sports' representative bodies and the Charity Commission. A summary of responses will be made publicly available at the time of any announcement.

Bob Russell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many responses to the Treasury Consultation Document, "Promoting Sport in the Community", called for the Inland Revenue-administered tax package to include mandatory rate relief. [45172]

Mr. Boateng: Ministers are considering responses to the questions for consultation contained in the "Promoting Sport in the Community" document. A summary of responses will be made publicly available at the time of any announcement. The separate Inland Revenue administered tax package that the Government consulted on did not include business rate relief. However, CASCs gaining charitable status—for which they are able to apply immediately—are eligible for 80 per cent. mandatory business rate relief.

Bob Russell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many responses have been received to the Treasury Consultation Document, "Promoting Sport in the Community". [45168]

Mr. Boateng: The "Promoting Sport in the Community" consultation document attracted over 2,400 responses, for which we are grateful. Ministers are considering responses and decisions will be made as part of the normal Budget process. A summary of responses will be made public at the time of any announcement.

Correspondence

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the target time will be in 2002–03 for (a) Ministers to reply to letters from hon. Members and (b) officials in his Department to reply to letters received directly from members of the public. [44945]

Mr. Boateng: The target time for replying to all correspondence will be 15 working days from receipt.

EU Economic and Finance Council

Roger Casale: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the outcome was of the ECOFIN Council held in Barcelona on 14 March; what the Government's stance was on the issues discussed, including its voting record; and if he will make a statement. [45951]

Mr. Gordon Brown: I attended ECOFIN on 14 March.

Following previous discussions at the March ECOFIN and at the General Affairs Council, ECOFIN discussed further the draft EU position for the UN Financing for Development Conference in Monterrey. This was subsequently endorsed by heads of government at the Barcelona European Council. This position commits EU member states to increasing overseas development assistance as a proportion of Gross National Product to an EU average of 0.39 per cent. by 2006. This is a significant step forward for global social justice, that will provide around $7 billion a year in additional aid.

ECOFIN also considered proposals for strengthening EU development assistance to the Mediterranean region. It was agreed that a European Investment Bank Facility should be set up, and that this would be evaluated after a year and a decision then taken on whether it should be developed into a subsidiary involving other shareholders. This agreement was endorsed by the Barcelona European Council.

The implications of the Enron affair for corporate governance were discussed. It was agreed that ECOFIN would look again at this issue in light of work being undertaken by the Finance Stability Forum.

ECOFIN discussed whether Government-backed airline insurance schemes for covering third party war and terrorism risks should be extended beyond the end of March. It was agreed that further analysis should be provided before the discussion at the Transport Council on 26 March.

No votes were taken at the meeting.

Criminal Damage

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the cost has been of criminal damage to his Department's buildings in each of the last four years. [44826]

Ruth Kelly: None.

New Deal

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people employed by his Department under the New Deal for Young People in each of the last four years have subsequently (a) found unsubsidised employment for more than 13 weeks and (b) returned to jobseekers' allowance or other benefits. [45082]

Ruth Kelly: We do not have this information.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people have been employed by his Department in each of the last three years under (a) the New Deal for Young People, (b) the New Deal for the Over 50s and (c) the New Deal for Lone Parents; and at what cost, listed by category, to public funds. [44918]

Ruth Kelly: The latest complete years for which we have figures for people specially recruited under the New Deal arrangements are as follows:

New Deal

	1998–99		1999–2000		2000–01
	Young People	Other	Young People	Other	Young People	Other
Inland Revenue[1]	0	0	46	10	30	10

[1] Including Valuation Office Agency

HM Treasury specially recruited three people under the New Deal in 1999, four in 2000 and four in 2001, but does not differentiate between individual New Deal schemes. (None of these recruits was subsidised).

Customs and Excise have employed a total of 129 people under the New Deal for Young People since its inception, but by year figures are not available. They have employed no-one under the New Deal for Over 50s or Lone Parents.

No further classification of New Deal recruits is available.These recruits took up existing vacancies so extra costs are limited to the subsidy, where appropriate, and any additional training and development which may have been needed.

Running Costs

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Buckingham of 8 January 2002, Official Report, column 808W, if he will provide a full breakdown of the main items comprising the increase in the running cost between April 1997 and April 2001 of (a) his private office and (b) his Department; and if he will break down the increase in the cost of staff in his private office over the same period. [45120]

Ruth Kelly: The information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Bus Fleets

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of (a) how many insurance companies offer fleet insurance for bus fleets in the UK and (b) what level of competition this represents; and whether buses will be able to operate without fleet insurance in the event of the remaining insurance for bus fleets being withdrawn. [45122]

Ruth Kelly: Further to my answer on 25 February 2002, Official Report, columns 830–31W, we have a long standing agreement with the insurance industry that cover will always be provided for anyone legally entitled to drive.

Customs and Excise

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will provide a disaggregated analysis of how Her Majesty's Customs and Excise plans to spend its supplementary estimate for the purposes listed on page 54 of HC 636. [44084]

Mr. Boateng [holding answer 20 March 2002]: The purpose of the HM Customs and Excise spring supplementary is set out on page 1 of Cm 5380. The additional net cash requirement is required to pay for the provision of serviced accommodation under an estates PFI contract. These charges replace non-cash charges for the opportunity cost of utilising civil estate freehold assets. There is no increase to departmental expenditure limits as a result of the supplementary. The estates costs will cover all activities and purposes listed in HC636.

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer for what reasons the annual report of HM Customs and Excise for 2000–01 has not yet been published. [45745]

Mr. Boateng: Publication has been delayed because finalisation of the Trust Statement for Customs and Excise, which must be included in the report, took longer than expected. The Trust Statement now has an audit certificate, and the annual report for Customs and Excise has been laid before Parliament today.

Plant and Machinery (Investment)

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what incentives are in place for small and medium-sized manufacturing enterprises to invest in plant and machinery. [45562]

Dawn Primarolo: The tax system gives incentives for investment through capital allowances. Small and medium-sized enterprises qualify for 40 per cent. first year capital allowances for all investment in plant and machinery, in place of the usual 25 per cent. The rate is increased to 100 per cent. for businesses of all sizes if the plant or machinery is energy efficient, or is used for research and development purposes.

Secondments

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many members of staff were employed by the Treasury on secondment from non-governmental organisations in (a) 1999, (b) 2000 and (c) 2001. [45222]

Ruth Kelly: The numbers of people seconded to the Treasury from non-governmental organisations were as follows:

1999—6
2000—11
2001—16.

Details of current secondees from all sectors outside central Government can be found on the Treasury website.

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many members of staff were employed by the Treasury on secondment from the private sector in (a) 1999, (b) 2000 and (c) 2001. [45257]

Ruth Kelly: The numbers of Treasury staff on secondment from the private sector in 1999 was two, in 2000 was four and in 2001 was eight.

Details of current secondees from all sectors outside central Government can be found on the Treasury website.

Norman Baker: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many BP employees are on secondment to his Department; for what purposes; on what terms; and how many BP employees have been on secondment to his Department since January 2000. [45887]

Ruth Kelly: There are no BP employees currently on secondment to HM Treasury. There have been no BP employees on secondment to HM Treasury since January 2000.

Details of current secondees from outside central Government can be found on the Treasury's website.

Construction Industry (False Self-Employment)

Vernon Coaker: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the extent of false self-employment in the construction industry; and if he will make a statement. [45758]

Dawn Primarolo: The tax and national insurance rules, which distinguish the employed from the self-employed, are intended to apply to all workers. The Inland Revenue policies compliance with those rules in all industries, including the construction industry, to ensure that people are paying their tax and national insurance contributions on the correct basis.

Insurance Guidance

Mr. Chope: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will place in the Library a copy of the insurance guidance that went to the Economic Secretary to the Treasury at the end of November 1998. [46219]

Ruth Kelly: Insurance guidance on reserving for guaranteed annuities was issued by HM Treasury in December 1998 and is included as an appendix to the FSA's report into the regulation of Equitable Life. This was published on 16 October 2001 and a copy placed in the Library.

Equitable Life

Mr. Chope: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if Treasury Ministers have been shown the documentation covering the period in 1998 when the Treasury was directly responsible for regulating Equitable Life. [46107]

Ruth Kelly: Treasury Ministers are aware of the sequence of events in 1998 and have had access to all relevant documentation.

Mr. Chope: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will place in the Library a copy of the Treasury's written evidence to the Penrose Inquiry. [46106]

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what evidence the Government have been requested to provide the Penrose Inquiry into Equitable Life other than the Baird Report. [45884]

Ruth Kelly: Lord Penrose has been given access to all available information. The Treasury provided evidence to the Treasury Select Committee and arranged for publication of the FSA's report into the regulation of Equitable Life, copies of both of which have already been placed in the Library.

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether the Treasury has responded to the formal notice from the Parliamentary Commissioner for Administration of his intention to inquire into the regulation of Equitable Life. [45736]

Ruth Kelly: Yes. I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Christchurch (Mr. Chope) on 3 December 2001, Official Report, column 66W.

Mr. Chope: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what meetings have taken place since September 2001 between Lord Penrose and Treasury ministers. [46014]

Ruth Kelly: None.

Pensioners (Communication)

Mr. Webb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the (a) number and (b) percentage of pensioner households that do not have (i) a telephone, (ii) e-mail and (iii) internet facilities. [45687]

Ruth Kelly: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Mr. Webb to Mr. Len Cook, dated 25 March 2002:

As National Statistician I have been asked to reply to your recent question concerning the number and percentage of pensioner households that do not have (I) a telephone, (ii) e-mail and (iii) internet facilities. (45687).

The General Household Survey classifies pensioner households as those which contain a man aged 65 or over, or a woman aged 60 or over. Other non-pension age persons may also be in the household.

Unpublished data from the General Household Survey show that in Great Britain in 2000 (the most recent year available):

161,000 pensioner households did not have a telephone

6,688,000 pensioner households did not have internet facilities

These figures have been weighted and grossed to population values from the survey sample.

2% of pensioner households did not have a telephone

89% of pensioner households did not have internet facilities

These percentages are based on a weighted figure of 7,528,000 pensioner households in Great Britain (2649 in the survey sample).

The survey does not have information on e-mail.

Aggregates Levy

David Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) when the regulations dealing with the Aggregates Levy will be laid before Parliament; and when they will come into force; [46212]

(2) if he will delay the introduction of the Aggregates Levy to allow the publication of the regulations necessary to implement it in draft form; and if he will allow three months consultation on them before the levy commences; [46214]

(3) what factors he will take into account in deciding the date for the implementation of the Aggregates Levy. [46213]

Mr. Boateng: The levy will be implemented on 1 April 2002.

The draft regulations have been the subject of extensive consultation with the aggregates industry since November 2001.

The regulations were laid on 21 March and enter into force on 1 April 2002.

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make draft regulations for the implementation of the Aggregates Levy before 26 March. [45390]

Mr. Boateng: The Aggregates Levy (Registration and Miscellaneous Provisions) Regulations 2001 were made on 19 December 2001 and the Aggregates Levy (General) Regulations 2002 were made on 21 March 2002.

Whisky

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations have been received from the Scottish Executive regarding the proposals for a strip tax on whisky. [45817]

Mr. Boateng: I have received a number of representations about the consultation by Customs and Excise on the costs, benefits and practicalities of a tax stamps system for spirits, including representations from the Scottish Executive.

Oil Prices

Mr. David Stewart: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will assess the impact on the United Kingdom economy and (a) domestic and (b) business consumers of oil prices of (i) $30 a barrel, (ii) $35 a barrel and (iii) $38 a barrel for over 12 months' duration; and if he will make a statement on the implications for the economy of higher prices for oil produced on the UK Continental Shelf. [45158]

Ruth Kelly: As detailed in the Pre-Budget Report 2000 (Cm 4917, Box A3, page 153) higher oil prices would, all else equal, tend to reduce GDP growth and increase inflation. However, the UK differs from most other major industrialised economies in that it is a small net exporter of oil, so potential GDP losses may be partly offset by increased North Sea production.

Mr. David Stewart: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what risk assessment he has made of the effect on the (a) price of oil, (b) availability of oil and (c) UK economy of UK military action in Iraq. [45160]

Ruth Kelly: As the Prime Minister has made clear, most recently on 11 March, no decision has been made on whether to take military action against Iraq. Iraq currently contributes supplies of oil equivalent to about three per cent. of world production. Spare oil production capacity worldwide is currently several times this amount. Moreover, there are also International Energy Agency and international agreements on holding stocks of oil, and procedures to deal with any oil supply disruptions. Oil markets are, however, volatile and to some extent driven by expectations, as well as responding to the near-term actual balance of supply and demand. It is therefore difficult to predict the impact on oil prices from any supply disruptions, and the question of military action against Iraq is only one of a wide range of influences. The Government will publish an updated forecast for the UK economy in the Budget on April 17, taking account of all relevant economic factors.

Public Service Agreements

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if the service delivery agreement to reduce sickness absence by 0.5 days by April 2001 was met; [46103]

(2) what recent assessment he has made of whether the PSA target for the increase in net public investment and improvement of the public capital stock in 2002 will be met; [46000]

(3) when he estimates the PSA target for the publication of the whole of Government accounts for 2001–02 will be met; [46003]

(4) if the PSA target for the achievement of investors in people accreditation was achieved on time; [46004]

(5) if the PSA target for the completion of the information strategy review was met on time; [45982]

(6) what recent assessment he has made of whether the PSA target for achieving a declining trend in excessive hours worked will be met on time; [46005]

(7) what recent assessment he has made of progress with the public service agreement target for securing an increase in the number of successful high growth business start-ups; [46001]

(8) if he estimates that the PSA target for 2002 for increasing the proportion of business undertaken electronically will be achieved on time; [46006]

(9) if he estimates the PSA target for moving to electronic publishing of material hitherto published on paper will be met on time; [45983]

(10) if the PSA target for the reduction of unfilled vacancies was achieved on time; [45984]

(11) what recent assessment he has made of whether the PSA target for reducing the number of households facing marginal deduction rates over 70 per cent. will be achieved on time; [46002]

(12) if he estimates that the PSA targets for correspondence and parliamentary response times will be met on time. [45981]

Ruth Kelly: Information about progress on PSA targets will be published in the Treasury's 2002 departmental report.

European Single Currency

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what research is being carried out in his Department concerning the benefits of the single currency to the United Kingdom. [46174]

Ruth Kelly: As the Chancellor said in his October 1997 statement, the five economic tests will define whether a clear and unambiguous case can be made for UK membership of the single currency. The assessment of the five tests has not yet started, but the necessary preliminary analysis—technical work necessary to allow us to undertake the assessment within two years as promised—is under way.

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 29 January 2002, Official Report, column 224W, to the hon. Member for Yeovil (Mr. Laws), for what reason he is unable to specify the Treasury management units which are contributing to the evaluation of the five economic tests for membership of the euro; and if he will make a statement. [44931]

Ruth Kelly: I refer the hon. Member to the comments I made during the adjournment debate on the preliminary and technical work held on the floor of the House on 5 March 2002, Official Report, column 268.

Pre-Budget Report

Ian Stewart: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a further statement on measures for business in relation to the pre-Budget report in November 2001. [46549]

Mr. Gordon Brown: As announced in the pre-Budget report in November 2001 and following consultation with business:

the new corporation tax regime for substantial shareholdings will apply for disposals on or after 1 April 2002;

the new corporation tax regime for intangible assets will also apply with effect from 1 April 2002.

In addition the Government are also proceeding with the new tax credit to encourage research and development by large companies which will apply from 1 April 2002. The credit will follow a simple volume based approach, final details of which will be announced in the Budget.

Technical details of these measures will be published tomorrow and will be available to Members from the Vote Office.

PPPs

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what discussions he has had with his counterparts in other European Union member states about the use of public-private partnerships in the delivery of public services. [43123]

Mr. Andrew Smith: The Government discusses PPPs in a variety of fora. In this context, Treasury Ministers share information on existing UK policy on PPPs with a range of European colleagues.

Current Receipts

Mr. Flight: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the cash-terms change in current receipts has been since 1997. [44685]

Mr. Andrew Smith: Estimates of Government receipts are published quarterly by the ONS and HM Treasury in "Public sector finances".

Taxation

Mr. Flight: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the tax burden was as a proportion of national income in (a) 1996–97 and (b) 2001–02. [44686]

Mr. Andrew Smith: Estimates of net taxes and social security contributions as a percentage of GDP are contained in table B22 and table B10 of the November 2001 pre-Budget report.

Wanless Report

Mr. Flight: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he last met Derek Wanless to discuss the contents of the final Wanless report. [44689]

Mr. Andrew Smith: The Chancellor has held no meetings with Derek Wanless to discuss the contents of his final report.

Health Expenditure

Mr. Flight: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he last met ministerial colleagues in the Department of Health to discuss value for money in health expenditure. [44692]

Mr. Andrew Smith: The Chancellor meets with ministerial colleagues in the Department of Health to discuss a variety of issues on a regular basis.

Infrastructure Investment

Mr. Chope: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will set out the percentage of gross domestic product and expenditure per capita represented by public infrastructure investment in (a) the UK and (b) other EU member states. [45977]

Mr. Andrew Smith: Table B23 of the pre-Budget report sets out public investment as a proportion of GDP in the UK and the Public Expenditure Statistical Analyses, published in April 2001, include information about public expenditure on a per capita basis. Chart 6.2 in the Treasury publication "Realising Europe's potential", published in February 2002, compares general Government net investment across all member states.

HEALTH

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Miller: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress has been made in investigating his Department's performance in answering parliamentary questions. [46407]

Mr. Milburn: As indicated in my reply to a question from my hon. Friend the Member for Blackpool, North and Fleetwood (Mrs. Humble) on 5 March 2002, Official Report, column 192W, a full investigation has now been carried out into the circumstances which led to delays in dealing with parliamentary questions in the Department of Health, including apparent falsification in recording the handling of parliamentary questions in the Department's parliamentary section. The aim of the investigation was to establish the facts and to ensure that the necessary remedial action is taken.

An audit of outstanding questions was carried out immediately after the apparent falsification of the electronic database used in the parliamentary section to track the handling of parliamentary questions in the Department was discovered. This identified 411 outstanding questions due for reply before 14 February, with 214 of those questions having been recorded as answered when no reply had been given. This information formed the basis for my reply on 5 March and for replies to subsequent questions to hon. Members. Further more detailed investigation of the information derived from this audit reduced the number of outstanding questions due for reply before 14 February to 354, with 202 questions recorded as having been answered when no reply had been given. The balance was accounted for by questions which further investigation showed had in fact been answered where this had not been clear previously or which were due for reply after 14 February, questions transferred to other Departments for answer, duplicate entries on the database and incorrect entries on the database. Of these 354 questions, 348 received replies by 12 March, the remaining 6 on 13 March.

In addition this more detailed investigation identified a further 11 outstanding questions due for reply before 14 February. Six of these were recorded as having been completed and given a false Hansard reference on the database; two previously unidentified questions were found which had been recorded as having received replies when they had not; and three outstanding questions were discovered which had not been recorded on the database at all. All these questions have now been answered.

Of the total of 365 questions finally identified as due for reply before 14 February which had not received replies when I reported the situation on 5 March, 33 received an answer within one month of the due date for reply and 95 were answered within two months. The remaining 237 had been awaiting replies for more than two months; and 77 of these were asked before the summer recess in 2001.

The overall number of cases where the database had been falsified to show questions as having been answered when they had not was 210, broken down by party as follows:

Conservative 88
Labour 69
Liberal Democrats 42
Scottish Nationalist 9
Plaid Cymru 2.

The investigation has also established that according to the Library of the House there are a number of outstanding questions from previous Sessions. Regrettably, because the Department had not been following the normal practice of sending all questions answered by letter to the Library of the House, we are unable to confirm how many of these questions were not in fact answered. All of the questions answered by letter during the last summer recess have now been placed in the Library; and this practice will be followed assiduously in future. There are, however, some indications that falsification of the database may have taken place during previous Sessions; and this will be pursued in the context of the disciplinary process which is taking place.

The main conclusions of the investigation were as follows:

(i) There is clear evidence of the systematic falsification of records on the database which tracks the handling of the parliamentary questions received in the Department of Health. Questions were recorded as having been answered when no replies had been passed to the Member of Parliament or the Official Report; incorrect information appears to have been entered on the whereabouts of parliamentary questions within the system and in a number of cases a false Hansard reference was entered to indicate that the process was complete and had been externally validated. There have been three cases where questions that appeared on the Order Paper were not entered on to the database, thus preventing their being processed at all.

(ii) Examination of the questions in the backlog revealed no consistent pattern either by party or subject matter.

(iii) All the indications are that previously unidentified delays in handling cases in the parliamentary section were the overwhelming contributory factor, leading to the backlog of outstanding questions that developed, and that these delays were not identified through routine monitoring systems because of deliberate falsification of the database.

(iv) The number of parliamentary questions listed for answer by the Department of Health has increased significantly during this Session. During the 2000–01 Session (December 2000—May 2001) 1,754 questions were asked in 83 sitting days. For the current Session to date (June 2001—20 March 2002) 5,748 questions have been asked in 120 sitting days. This increase has tested the resources of the parliamentary section, particularly in the timely and diligent follow up of ministerial queries on draft answers. Pressure of work cannot, however, explain the failure to answer all the parliamentary questions in an appropriate and timely manner.

(v) Although some concerns were raised both within the Department and by MPs about delays in responding to questions and these concerns were followed up by Ministers and managers, suspicion was successfully deflected to others within the organisation. This was possible because the management information provided by the database had been corrupted by the false entries and because the increased volume of parliamentary questions made it increasingly difficult to track the physical progress of parliamentary questions folders in a small and cramped office. The falsification of the database also prevented the size of the backlog emerging in routine monitoring of progress on answering questions. Currently there is no external system against which the Department can validate its performance. From April the Leader of the House will make available to all Departments regular lists of the parliamentary questions the Library's records show are outstanding, so that such a check can be made.

(vi) An official in the parliamentary section has been suspended and is awaiting disciplinary action, in accordance with departmental disciplinary procedures. The detailed evidence found by the investigation will be used in this process. There is no evidence to suggest that any other member of staff was improperly involved.

Line managers had already put in hand action to manage the increased volume of parliamentary questions, to speed up their processing, and to share the tasks more widely within the unit. The database was in the process of being modified to provide more accessible and timely management information on the handling of parliamentary questions to enable improved tracking, early intervention and a clear audit trail. The staffing complement of the unit had been increased from seven to eight.

A summary of the process for dealing with parliamentary questions in the Department of Health prior to this investigation is being placed in the Library of the House. The following further remedial action was identified as necessary by the investigation and is being put in hand immediately:

(i) New arrangements will be established within the parliamentary section to ensure that the process for tracking parliamentary questions cannot be manipulated by any one individual. This will include a clear separation of tasks and building in a greater degree of external checking and validation, including regular checks against information held by the Library of the House.

(ii) The electronic database will be modified and shared across the Department and Ministers' Private Offices to allow for a more transparent system of tracking the handling of parliamentary questions.

(iii) Questions are already handled electronically between the parliamentary section and officials. This will be extended to include Ministers' Private Office to simplify and speed the process.

(iv) Ministers' Private Secretaries will be responsible for dealing with outstanding queries on draft parliamentary questions before they are returned to the parliamentary section.

(v) The parliamentary section will be moved to more suitable accommodation as a matter of urgency.

(vi) In addition to the extra capacity already introduced, there will be an immediate review of the staffing complement within the parliamentary section to reflect the increase in work load and to ensure proper controls mechanisms are in place, using other Departments' parliamentary sections with similar volumes of work as comparators.

I expect that these changes will prevent any recurrence of the lapse in my Department's standards of accountability to the House, which I deeply regret and for which I apologise.

Inter-country Adoptions

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discussions his Department has had with Romanian authorities about inter-country adoption. [26494]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 11 January 2002]: I apologise to the hon. Member for the delay in responding to this question. I refer the hon. Member to the reply that my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State gave my hon. Friend the Member for Blackpool, North and Fleetwood (Mrs. Humble) on 5 March 2002, Official Report, column 192W.

Department of Health officials have had regular contact with the National Authority for the Protection of Children and Adoption (formally the Romanian Committee for Adoption) concerning individual inter-country adoption applications.

An informal Co-operation Agreement between the Department of Health and the Romanian Committee for Adoptions was signed on 17 February 1998. A copy of the Co-operation Agreement has been placed in the Library for information. The Agreement was drawn up in consultation with the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, following the introduction of new adoption legislation in Romania in 1997. The Co-operation Agreement embodies the principles of the Hague Convention for the Protection of Children and Co-operation in Respect of Intercountry Adoption 1993.

A one-year moratorium on international adoptions from Romania was announced by the Romanian National Authority for Child Protection and Adoption, formerly the Romanian Committee for Adoptions, on 13 July, following a recommendation from the European Parliament. The United Kingdom Government have expressed their support for the one-year moratorium, which will allow the Romanian authorities time to redraft legislation on adoption and get the necessary framework in place to support it.

Overseas Treatment

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information he collated on the relative pay scales of (a) general practitioners and (b) publicly funded hospital consultants in the UK and France. [31176]

Mr. Hutton: I apologise to the hon. Member for the delay in responding to this question. I refer the hon. Member to the reply that my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State gave my hon. Friend the Member for Blackpool, North and Fleetwood (Mrs. Humble) on 5 March 2002, Official Report, column 192W.

The Department does not collate information on the pay scales of general practitioners and publicly funded hospital consultants in France.

For 2000–01 the Intended Average Net Income (IANI) for a full time GP for delivering General Medical Services (GMS) is £60,655.

For 2000–01 the salary scale for NHS consultants ranges from £50,810 to £66,120. The discretionary points scheme extends consultants' salary scale range by eight steps of roughly £2,645 each, up to a maximum of £87,280. Distinction awards may be paid in addition to consultants' basic salaries but subsume the value of any discretionary points previously held.

West Midlands South Strategic Health Authority

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if the Chairman of the West Midlands South Strategic health authority was consulted about the appointment of the Chief Executive of the authority; and if he will make a statement. [28194]

Yvette Cooper: I apologise to the hon. Member for the delay in responding to this question. I refer the hon. Member to the reply that my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State gave my hon. Friend the Member for Blackpool, North and Fleetwood (Mrs. Humble) on 5 March 2002, Official Report, column 192W.

I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave him on Tuesday 22 January at column 766W.

Hospital Waiting Times

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on progress with, and the cost to public funds of, the policy of enabling patients whose operations are cancelled on the day they are due to take place either to choose another date within 28 days at the hospital or to have it carried out at another hospital. [16248]

Mr. Hutton: I apologise to the hon. Member for the delay in responding to this question. I refer the hon. Member to the reply that my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State gave my hon. Friend the Member for Blackpool, North and Fleetwood (Mrs. Humble) on 5 March (at column 192W).

The patients' guarantee will come into force in April 2002. When a patient's operation is cancelled by the hospital on the day of surgery for non-clinical reasons, the hospital will have to offer another binding date within a maximum of the next 28 days or fund the patient's treatment at the time and the hospital of the patient's choice. Patients may choose NHS or private treatment and the NHS will fund the operation. Trusts will meet the cost from their existing budgets.

By reducing overall cancelled operations and ensuring that where patients are cancelled, they are offered another binding date within a maximum of the next 28 days, NHS Trusts will not incur any additional costs.

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the waiting time for joint replacements at (a) the Southampton University Hospital NHS Trust, (b) the Royal Bournemouth and Christchurch Hospitals NHS Trust and (c) the Poole Hospital NHS Trust. [41690]

Ms Blears: Action has been taken to improve waiting times for Orthopaedics waits in Southampton. This included additional consultants, two new operating theatres and 10 additional beds for orthopaedics. An area wide steering group has also been established.

The information collected centrally on joint replacement operations at Southampton University Hospitals NHS Trust and the Royal Bournemouth & Christchurch Hospitals NHS Trust is as follows:

Waiting times for waiting list and booked admissions by main operation and selected NHS trusts, 2000–01. Total joint replacement operations

Waiting times	Southampton University Hospitals NHS Trust	Royal Bournemouth and Christchurch Hospitals NHS Trust
0 to 3 months	34	411

Hospital Episode Statistics (HES), Department of Health

Notes
1. Waiting time statistics from HES are not the same as the published waiting list statistics. HES provides counts and waiting times for all patients admitted to hospital within a given period whereas the published waiting list statistics count those waiting for treatment at a given point in time and how long they have been on the waiting list.
2. HES calculates the waiting time as the difference between the admission and decision to admit dates. Unlike published waiting list statistics, this is not adjusted for self-referrals or periods of medical/social suspension.
3. The main operation is the first of four operation fields in the HES data set and is usually the most resource intensive procedure performed during the episode.
4. Figures in this table have not yet been adjusted for shortfalls in data.

There are no waiting list or booked admissions recorded for the Poole Hospital NHS Trust for these operations.

Waiting Lists

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 25 January, 2002. Official Report, column 1121W, on waiting lists, when the review by the regional offices of the 13 trusts will be made (a) public and (b) available to Ministers. [40076]

Mr. Hutton: I refer the hon. Member to the response I gave him on 7 March 2002, Official Report, column 544W.

Autism

Brian Cotter: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how much is being spent by the Government into research on autism; [41462]

(2) what research the Department is conducting into autism which has an impact on policies on (a) respite care from the social services and (b) specialist speech therapy. [41464]

Jacqui Smith: The main Government agency for research into the causes of and treatments for disease is the Medical Research Council (MRC), which receives its funding via the Department of Trade and Industry. The MRC spend on autism research for 2000–01 was approximately £1.2 million. The MRC funds a large amount of work on the causes and treatment of autism, and to increase the knowledge base of issues surrounding autism. As part of this ongoing work the MRC has recently published a review of the current state of knowledge about the causes and epidemiology of autism. The MRC has also recently been given an extra £2.5 million by the Department to do further research into autism.

The Department funds research to support policy and the delivery of effective practice in health and social care. The Department also provides national health service support funding for research commissioned by the research councils and charities that takes place in the NHS. Management of much of the research supported by NHS Research and Development Funding is devolved and expenditure at project level is not held centrally by the Department.

There are a number of research projects on autism for which the Department provides support costs. Details of these individual projects are available on the National Research Register (NRR), which can be accessed via the internet: http://www.doh.gov.uk/research/nrr.htm. The NRR shows that the Department supports a number of research projects on speech therapy and respite care although not specifically relating to autism.

NHS Professionals

Dr. Evan Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what measures he is taking to ensure that nurses working through NHS Professionals are paid on time and in full; [30774]

(2) whether nurses working through NHS Professionals will be paid weekly. [30772]

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what the length of time is within which he expects NHS Professionals to pay its temporary staff; [39683]

(2) if the payroll costs in respect of NHS Professionals staff are charged out to its clients; [39681]

(3) what steps he is taking to ensure that the costs of (a) time sheet processing and (b) payroll functions of NHS Professionals are identified and reported. [41728]

Mr. Hutton [holding answers 1 March 2002]: I apologise to the hon. Members for the delay in responding to these questions. I refer them to the reply that my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Blackpool, North and Fleetwood (Mrs. Humble) on 5 March, 2002, Official Report, column 192W.

HSC 2001/002 and guidance "NHS Professionals—A co-ordinated, NHS-led approach to temporary staffing" sets out NHS Professionals national standards for good employment practice, including provision for weekly payment upon submission of completed and authorised time sheets.

Local, regional and national project boards are in place to monitor the implementation of NHS Professionals to meet the required standards.

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how an NHS employee will become entitled to extra (a) maternity and (b) sickness pay in return for working additional hours for NHS Professionals; and what is the nature of the extra entitlement; [41724]

(2) whether a permanent NHS employee will be entitled to be paid at their substantive grade and substantive scale point, when working additional hours for NHS Professionals; [41720]

(3) how an NHS employee will accrue additional pension entitlement in return for working additional hours for NHS Professionals; and what is the nature of the enhancement; [41722]

(4) whether NHS Professionals nurses will be entitled to full Whitley council terms and conditions as for permanent staff; and if he will make a statement; [41718]

(5) how an NHS employee will become entitled to additional holiday pay in return for additional hours worked for NHS Professionals; and what the nature is of the addition; [41723]

(6) whether a permanent NHS employee will be entitled to overtime, if additional hours are worked for NHS Professionals over and above a normal full-time working week. [41719]

Mr. Hutton: NHS Professionals "A co-ordinated, NHS-led approach to temporary staffing" published in November 2001 highlights guidance on pay and conditions for NHS Professionals staff including maternity, sickness, pension and annual leave entitlement.

For maternity and sickness leave statutory provisions apply. Staff have the opportunity to join the NHS Pension Scheme and accrue benefits under the terms of that scheme. The number of days annual leave entitlement is as per the Working Time Regulations and the payments are pro rata to hours worked within a reference period, with staff taking the leave within their NHS Professionals shifts. Salary and grade levels are agreed at the recruitment stage with the understanding that staff have the opportunity to complete shifts below their substantive grade but not over. There is no provision for overtime payments.

Non-consultant Doctors

Mr. Gareth R. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action he is taking to ensure non-consultant career grade doctors can be appointed to NHS specialist posts; and if he will make a statement. [40967]

Mr. Hutton: We have proposed amendments to the European Specialist Medical Qualifications Order 1995. The amendments will increase the number of doctors in non-consultant career grades eligible to apply for consultant posts in the national health service subject, where appropriate, to the successful completion of a period of further training. It is not possible to extend this to all doctors in non-consultant career grades as they will not all have the required qualifications and training.

Nurse Recruitment

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what evaluation was made by his Department of the Sharing Ideas nurse recruitment project. [40883]

Mr. Hutton: The "Sharing Ideas" resource pack was published in March 1998, supported by the "Working Lives" published in March 1999. "Sharing Ideas", "Working Together", "Making a Difference" and "Working Lives" were the building blocks of the current successful returner, recruitment and retention and improving working lives programmes aimed at delivering the NHS Plan.

Speech Therapists

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action he is taking to increase the number of speech and language therapists for children. [38438]

Jacqui Smith: Speech and language therapists working in the national health service have a broad range of responsibilities and children are one of the many important groups they help. Since 1997, the number of qualified speech and language therapists has increased by 17 per cent. (from 4,870 to 5,680 in 2001). We are also committed in the NHS plan to increasing the number of training places for therapists (including speech and language therapists) and other professional staff by 4,450 by 2004. The number of speech and language therapy training commissions increased by 101 between 1999 and 2000 and 2000 and 2001, 11 in 2001–02 and further increases are planned for 2002–03.

Health Authority Appointments

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) men and (b) women from an ethnic minority background have been appointed to a health authority covering the Greater London Area since May 1997. [40519]

Mr. Hutton: The appointments made of people from an ethnic minority background to health authorities serving the London region since 1 May 1977 and at 5 March 2002 are given in the table.

	Appointment made since 1 May 1997		Appointments as at 5 March 2002

General Practitioners

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will give a profile of practising GPs in England and Wales, based on age and sex. [39208]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 28 February 2002]: The information requested is shown in the table.

UPEs (Unrestricted Principals and Equivalents) include GMS Principals, PMS Contracted GPs and PMS Salaried GPs.

Information for Wales is a matter for the Welsh Assembly.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many GPs in England and Wales work part-time; and how many worked part-time in 1997. [39207]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 28 February 2002]: Part-time working among general practitioners (GPs) is growing as the numbers and proportion of women GPs increase. Many of these prefer more flexible working arrangements than are offered by traditional General Medical Services principal posts. One of the strengths of the Personal Medical Services arrangements which were first piloted in 1998 is that it readily offers such flexibility. In 1997 4,823 GPs worked part time in England. By 2001 (latest available data) this had increased to 6,252. The equivalent data for Wales are a matter for the Welsh Assembly.

Agency Nurses

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) whether he intends to exempt existing agency nurses from the requirement to obtain a GP health report; [41714]

(2) what his policy is on commercial nurses' agencies (a) providing both nursing and domiciliary services to customers, (b) maintaining combined records in respect of both services and (c) both services being managed in one business; and if he will make a statement. [41726]

Jacqui Smith: The Government have recently consulted on the "Nurses Agency National Minimum Standards and Regulations" under the Care Standards Act 2000. The consultation document is available on the Department's website at www.doh.gov.uk/ncsc.

We will be considering any revisions to the standards and regulations in the light of responses to the consultation.

Consultant Vacancies

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many consultant vacancies there were by specialty in (a) 1997 and (b) 2001. [41716]

Mr. Hutton: The NHS vacancy survey has been conducted in March each year since 1999 and information is not available for 1997. Information for 2001 is shown in the table.

Women GPs

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many GPs in England and Wales are women. [39206]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 28 February 2002]: At 30 September 2001 there were 12,092 women general practitioners (GPs) in England. The number of women GPs in Wales is a matter for the Welsh Assembly.

St. Bartholomew's

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received concerning the possible re-opening of the accident and emergency department at St Bartholomew's hospital; and what response he has given. [36614]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 25 February 2002]: Since 1997 there have been approximately 250 pieces of correspondence concerning the accident and emergency department at St Bartholomew's hospital and ten parliamentary questions.

My right hon. Friend, the Member for Southampton, Itchen (Mr. Denham), was presented with an 8, 000 signature petition by the Islington Gazette in March 2001. I met with the hon. Member for Cities of London and Westminster on 23 October 2001.

The Tomlinson and the Turnberg reports confirmed that there was insufficient demand to justify supporting two full service A and E departments at both the St. Bartholomew's and the Royal London sites. There are currently no plans to return A and E services to St. Bartholomew's Hospital. St. Bartholomew's does however, run a minor injuries unit.

Podiatric Care

Mr. Viggers: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent changes in the level of podiatric care there have been in the Portsmouth and South East Hampshire Health Authority area. [31853]

Ms Blears: I apologise to the hon. Member for the delay in responding to this question. I refer the hon. Member to the reply that my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State gave my hon. Friend the Member for Blackpool, North and Fleetwood (Mrs. Humble) on 5 March 2002, Official Report, column 192W.

Increasing demand for podiatry care has placed intense pressure on the local chiropody service. As a result service provision was reviewed in order to ensure that care was provided safely and within available resources. Clearer admissions criteria have been introduced, designed to address the needs of those patients with high and medium clinical need across the current caseload of approximately 35,000 patients.

NHS (East Lancashire)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the cost of re-configuring the structure of the NHS in East Lancashire; and if he will make a statement. [27148]

Mr. Hutton: I apologise to the hon. Member for the delay in responding to this question. I refer the hon. Member to the reply that my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State gave my hon. Friend the Member for Blackpool, North and Fleetwood (Mrs. Humble) on 5 March 2002, Official Report, column 192W.

A number of simultaneous reconfigurations are taking place, both across and beyond East Lancashire. The cost of these reconfigurations will be met from within NHS allocations and is intended to result in a higher share of resources reaching frontline patient care.

Transplant Centres

Paul Holmes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) whether reducing the number of transplant centres in the United Kingdom is expected to lead to a reduction in the number of retrieval teams available; [4516]

(2) what financial savings would be made by reducing the number of heart and lung transplant centres to (a) four and (b) five; [4517]

(3) what policies are being put in place to increase the level of transplants and organ donation, per head of population; [4519]

(4) if the study relating to the number of transplant units undertaken by Finnamore management consultants for the national specialist commissioning advisory group will be made available for public study. [4518]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 19 July 2001]: I apologise to the hon. Member for the delay in responding to this question. I refer the hon. Member to the reply that my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State gave my hon. Friend the Member for Blackpool, North and Fleetwood (Mrs. Humble) on 5 March 2002, Official Report, column 192W.

Our long term goal for the cardiothoracic service is to increase the number of patients who receive successful heart and lung transplants, to ensure that today's high quality service is sustained in the future and to improve the working lives of the professionals who provide this crucial service.

To meet this goal, we issued a discussion document on 21 September 2001. It announces that all six cardiothoracic transplant units will continue to provide a service to NHS patients. To do so, they will need to meet the clear and explicit requirements set out in the new monitoring framework proposed in the discussion document. These requirements include staffing levels and qualifications, arrangements for retrieval of organs, the number of transplants carried out or the number of patients seen in follow-up clinics and survival and rejection rates. All six units will be inspected against these requirements.

The new service standards and effective monitoring will help ensure continued improvement to the quality of cardiothoracic transplant services, and provide patients with a national service of the highest possible quality. A copy of the discussion document, which invites comments on the standards and specification for the service, is in the Library.

Hospital Stays (Children)

Mrs. Humble: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many children stayed in hospital for four weeks or more in (a) Blackpool Victoria Hospital and (b) hospitals nationwide in the last 12 months. [39526]

Yvette Cooper: The table below shows a count of episodes of care where the length of stay was longer than four weeks.

Finished provider spells for 0–18 year olds where length of stay was over 4 weeks—Blackpool Victoria NHS Trust and all other Trusts in England, 2000–01

	Age Total (0–18)
Blackpool Victoria Hospital NHS Trust	55
Other NHS trusts	15,292
England	15,347

Notes:
A finished provider spell is defined as a period of in-patient care within one health care provider that commences with the patients' admission and ends on the date of discharge. It may comprise one or more FCEs (finished consultant episodes).
Figures in this table have not yet been adjusted for shortfalls in data.

Genito-Urinary Consultants

Laura Moffatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action he will take to increase genito-urinary consultant numbers in line with Royal College of Physicians, Consultant Physicians Working for Patients, recommendations. [40871]

Mr. Hutton: The NHS Plan sets a target of 7,500 additional consultants by 2004 (England), over the 1999 baseline, needed to deliver the service targets set out in the Plan. There are currently around 275 consultants in genito-urinary medicine in England. We anticipate that by 2004 there will be an increase of around 35 trained specialists in genito-urinary medicine, and a further 25 by 2009. We have also agreed an increase in specialist registrar numbers of up to 16 by 2004.

We continually review future requirements for trained specialists as part of the NHS's new multi-disciplinary workforce planning processes. These will look at the requirements for doctors alongside other staff focusing on the potential for new ways of working and developing new roles. As part of this process we discuss with the Royal College of Physicians their view of workforce needs in genito-urinary medicine.

Projections of need will change as modernisation of the workforce progresses. Supply projections will also change as numbers in training are varied in response to identified need.

Blood Donations

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many 17 year-olds have given blood in each of the past five years. [40875]

Yvette Cooper: In April 1998 donor selection criteria were altered to enable 17-year-olds to donate. The table shows the number of donors making their first donation aged 17 by financial year since this change was made.

Financial Year	17-year-old donor count
1998–99	13,777
1999–2000	19,133
2000–01	19,718
2001–02[1]	16,109

The national health service Equality Awards ran for two years with the focus on greater equality for all service users. Since the launch of the NHS Plan, the NHS Equality Awards have been combined with other national award schemes—the Nye Bevan Awards and Social Care Awards—to form the Health and Social Care Awards. This single set of awards recognises and rewards the excellence of staff working in vital services across both health and social care departments.

Abattoirs/Slaughterhouses

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the abattoirs and slaughterhouses which are licensed by the Food Standards Agency, stating in each case their maximum weekly throughput. [40972]

Yvette Cooper: The Food Standards Agency is responsible for the licensing of abattoirs in the United Kingdom. I have arranged for lists of all licensed red meat and white meat abattoirs in the UK to be placed in the Library of the House.

Licensed abattoirs are classified as either full or low throughput. Low throughput red meat abattoirs are limited to slaughtering no more than 1,000 livestock units per year at a rate not exceeding 20 livestock units per week. Low throughput white meat abattoirs are limited to slaughtering no more than 150,000 birds or 300,000 rabbits per year.

I am unable to provide the hon. Member with details of the throughput of individual abattoirs as this information is commercially confidential.

Hearing Aids

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what provision will be made to Hull and East Yorkshire NHS trust for the replacement of analogue hearing aids with digital ones. [41308]

Jacqui Smith: The Hull and East Yorkshire hospitals national health service trust has submitted a bid to the Department for second wave funding for the provision of digital hearing aids. The closing date for the submission of bids was 8 March 2002 and the bids are currently being evaluated.

Care Homes

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many applications the National Care Standards Commission has received from care providers wishing to register as a care home, under the Care Standards Act 2000, which are not existing residential care homes or existing nursing care homes; and if he will make a statement. [41606]

Jacqui Smith: Under the Care Standards Act 2000, the National Care Standards Commission takes over its responsibility for the regulation of social care and independent health care services on 1 April. Care providers who are not existing providers, in other words either they are not registered (the home is not operating) or exempt from registration under current legislation, may not apply to the Commission before the 1 April. On that basis the Commission has not received any applications for registration from such potential providers. The Commission is receiving applications under transitional arrangements from existing providers and managers of care services who must be registered from the 1 April.

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many applications the National Care Standards Commission has received from (a) existing nursing homes, (b) existing residential homes and (c) bed and breakfast accommodation under pilot schemes wishing to register as a care home under the Care Standards Act 2000. [41605]

Jacqui Smith: The National Care Standards Commission is now receiving applications for registration from providers and managers of care homes previously exempt from the requirement to register under current legislation. This is part of a planned transitional process but the full number of applications will not be known until 31 March 2002, which is the cut of date for applications under the transition. The Commission has to date received no applications from bed and breakfast accommodation under pilot schemes wishing to register under the Care Standards Act. Such provision, which will be regulated under the Act if it provides accommodation with personal care, cannot make applications to the Commission until 1 April 2002.

Residential Homes

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many vacant places there are in residential homes in the Barrow and Furness parliamentary constituency. [45262]

Jacqui Smith: The information requested is not available.

Leukaemia

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many over 60-year-olds suffering from chronic myeloid leukaemia have received bone marrow transplants in each of the last three years; and if he will make a statement. [41600]

Yvette Cooper: The information is detailed in the table. Bone marrow transplants are usually more suitable for younger patients. A range of other treatments is available for older patients with the disease.

Finished consultant episodes for patients aged over 60 where the main diagnosis was myeloid leukaemia and a bone marrow graft was performed. NHS Hospitals, England 1998–99 to 2000–01

Respiratory Syncytial Virus

Dr. Evan Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many cases of RSV requiring hospital admission there have been in the last three years for which figures are available, broken down by age. [41477]

Yvette Cooper: Figures for all admissions to NHS hospitals in England for respiratory diseases with a subsidiary classification of respiratory syncytial virus, are shown in the table.

Health Authority Debts

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the bad debts and moneys written off by each health authority in each year since 1997. [41711]

Mr. Hutton: Losses due to bad debts and claims abandoned for each English health authority since 1997 are shown in the table.

Mental Health

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent assessment he has made of the risk of abuse of elderly people with mental health problems in different care environments. [41710]

Jacqui Smith: Older people with mental health problems are as potentially susceptible to abuse as any other group of vulnerable adults. The Department takes the protection of vulnerable adults extremely seriously and is determined to stamp out abuse wherever it occurs. We are actively seeking to tackle the problem through a variety of initiatives. These include the launch of guidance titled 'No Secrets' and the planned implementation of the Protection of Vulnerable Adults list.

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much funding has been allocated to the treatment of (a) psychosis and (b) other mental health problems in adults in financial year 2001–02. [45942]

Jacqui Smith: The majority of funding for the treatment of psychosis and other mental health problems is allocated as part of health authority allocations and separate figures on allocations for psychosis or other mental health problems are not available.

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the (a) amount and (b) proportion of mental health expenditure has been on child and adolescent services in financial year 2001–02; and if he will make a statement on his assessment of the adequacy of the (i) amount and (ii) proportion of expenditure devoted to child and adolescent services. [45941]

Jacqui Smith: This information requested is not readily available. However our estimate for likely mental health expenditure in 2001–02 and the proportion spent on child and adolescent services is shown in the table, with the personal social services (PSS) expenditure particularly difficult to estimate.

We recognise that much still needs to be done to improve child and adolescent mental health. The work currently ongoing on the child and adolescent mental health module of the Children's National Service Framework will do much to inform our future expenditure.

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much was spent on mental health in each health authority as a percentage of total expenditure in each year since 1997. [41707]

Jacqui Smith: Figures showing how much was spent on mental health in each health authority as a percentage of total expenditure in each year since 1997–98 are shown in the table.

The figures in the answer are not comparable to those provided previously on a national basis, which cannot be analysed by health authority. The total expenditure used in this answer includes all the expenditure accounted for by the health authority whereas previous answers have provided spend on mental health as a proportion of total Health and Community Health Service expenditure. This excluded expenditure on primary care and authority administration.

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients with learning disabilities have been detained under the Mental Health Act 1983 in each year since 1997. [41708]

Jacqui Smith: The information is not collected in the form requested.

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which health authorities have put out to tender the (a) arrangement and (b) provision of mental health services. [41699]

Jacqui Smith: Following 'Shifting the Balance of Power' primary care trusts will secure delivery of the majority of services, including mental health services, to meet their population needs. Their local health improvement plan will indicate the extent of that clinical need and services will be commissioned from a range of appropriate providers accordingly.

Maternity Services

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what his Department's policy is on the benefits of locating maternity services within general hospitals. [41403]

Yvette Cooper: The national health service provides care for women during pregnancy and childbirth in various types, sizes and locations of maternity units, including units within general hospitals or stand alone units. The Department expects this choice to continue. It is for local health authorities, Trusts and communities to decide on the pattern of service provision, taking into account the needs of local people, evidence of effectiveness and available resources.

The Department has set up a maternity and neonatal workforce Group to make recommendations through the children's taskforce on workforce issues and various models for configuration of maternity services. This will feed into the children's national service framework to set national standards of care.

Diabetes

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action the Government have taken to inform people of ways to avoid contracting diabetes. [41326]

Jacqui Smith: The risk factors for diabetes include poor diet, physical inactivity and obesity. We are taking forward a wide range of work across Government to reduce obesity, to increase physical activity and improve diet, especially among children. Prevention of diabetes is one of the key areas covered by the diabetes national service framework standards, published in December 2001. Local strategies on promoting healthy eating and physical activity, and reducing overweight and obesity, are also being developed as part of the implementation of the national service framework for coronary heart disease.

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much money the Department has spent on research into diabetes since 1997; and if he will make a statement. [41322]

Jacqui Smith: The Department has consistently supported research into diabetes but has not in the past collected information on its total expenditure in this field. The greater part of the funding has gone to the clinical service support costs of research funded by other agencies such as the Medical Research Council and Diabetes UK. The landmark "UK Prospective Diabetes Study", a randomised multi-centre trial in more than 5,000 patients over 20 years, has been supported in this way and continues. The Department has also funded the direct costs of research through its national and regional research and development programmes.

A joint Department of Health/Medical Research Council research advisory committee on diabetes is currently reviewing this whole field of research, as part of the work to underpin the eventual implementation of the Diabetes National Service Framework.

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assistance is provided to diabetics who are affected by (a) sudden and (b) gradual loss of vision. [41324]

Jacqui Smith: The National Institute for Clinical Excellence published a clinical guideline on the early management of and screening for diabetic retinopathy on 5 March, as part of its series on the management of Type II diabetes.

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many medical practitioners in the NHS are specialised in diabetic detection and treatment. [41323]

Jacqui Smith: As at 30 September 2001, there were 23,142 general practitioner unrestricted principals and equivalents in England offering diabetes chronic disease management (CDM).

In addition as at 30 September 2001, there were 987 hospital medical staff working in endocrinology and diabetes mellitus in England, of which 428 were consultants.

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what provision is made for the (a) early screening and (b) management of diabetes. [41325]

Jacqui Smith: Services for the screening and management of diabetes are provided in a variety of health care settings and are of varying quality. There is evidence to show that the onset of Type II diabetes can be delayed, or even prevented, that effective management of diabetes increases life expectancy and reduces the risk of complications, and that self-management is the cornerstone of effective diabetes care. This evidence underpins our development of a national service framework for diabetes, for which we published the standards in December 2001. They set out 12 standards covering the prevention, identification and management of diabetes and its complications. The delivery strategy for the framework will follow later this year.

The diabetes national service framework provides the opportunity to clarify policy on screening for Type II diabetes, and we have requested advice from the UK National Screening Committee. The Committee has decided that further research, which may require some complex studies, is needed to inform its advice. It will report to the Department of Health in 2005.

Epilepsy

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assistance is provided to carers of severe epileptic sufferers. [41319]

Jacqui Smith: The National Carers strategy is providing better support, information, and care for carers. Carers of people with epilepsy will benefit from the strategy, which includes: extending the Carers Grant to ensure that 75,000 carers will receive a break by 2004; improving social security provision to benefit 300,000 carers financially; providing information and guidance through the Carers UK help-line, Government and voluntary sector booklets and leaflets, carers centres and on-line services, and telephone conferencing to bring carers together to discuss their experiences and provide mutual support; and, allowing carers to access relevant services and support from general practitioners.

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people he estimates suffer from epilepsy in the UK. [41320]

Jacqui Smith: Epilepsy is the commonest serious neurological disorder affecting around one in 130 of the UK population, or 380,000 people.

Around seventy per cent. of people newly diagnosed with epilepsy are prescribed oral anti-epileptic drugs (anti-convulsants). It has been estimated that seventy per cent. of people taking anti-convulsants have their seizures prevented completely or greatly reduced.

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the Government have done since 1997 (a) to raise awareness of epilepsy and (b) to reduce triggers of epilepsy in the environment. [41321]

Jacqui Smith: The Government has undertaken a range of co-ordinated initiatives to raise awareness of epilepsy. These include: supporting the Epilepsy Advisory Board to produce "Epilepsy Care—Making it Happen", a highly useful publication for improving epilepsy services; holding a NHS Epilepsy Day in October 1999; commending the Clinical Standards Advisory Group (CSAG) report, Services for people who have epilepsy, to the NHS; providing Section 64 funding to the Joint Epilepsy Council (JEC) to undertake a project to draw upon the good practice advice in the CSAG report and other recent epilepsy initiatives; supporting the National Sentinel Audit into Epilepsy Related Deaths which is expected to be published in May 2002; and, publishing the Chief Medical Officer's (CMO) Annual Report 2001, On the State of the Public Health, which included information on epilepsy.

The National Institute for Clinical Excellence (NICE) is producing a clinical guideline for epilepsy to help address widespread variations in clinical practice and contribute to the delivery of improvements in prevention, diagnosis, treatment and management of epilepsy. This will be supported by an appraisal of the clinical and cost effectiveness of new "add-on" drugs in children and adults, to help promote appropriate uptake and equitable access.

People with epilepsy will also benefit from the emerging Expert Patients Programme, which aims to provide training in self-management skills for people with long term chronic conditions. The first pilot phase will begin shortly in selected primary care group and trust sites, one of which will focus activity on people with epilepsy.

The CMO's Annual Report makes a commitment to putting in place an action plan which will cut the level of preventable deaths from sudden unexpected death in epilepsy three months after the National Sentinel Audit into Epilepsy Related Deaths is published in May 2002.

These initiatives will contribute to raising awareness of epilepsy and specific trigger factors.

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many medical practitioners in the NHS are specialised in epilepsy detection and treatment. [41318]

Jacqui Smith: The Department does not collect information about the number of general medical practitioners in the NHS who are specialised in epilepsy detection and treatment.

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much money the Department has spent on research into epilepsy since 1997; and if he will make a statement. [41317]

Jacqui Smith: The Department funds research to support policy and the delivery of effective practice in health and social care. The Department's expenditure on completed and ongoing directly commissioned projects since May 1997 is about £1.5 million.

In addition to specific projects, the Department also provides support for research commissioned by charities and the research councils that takes place in the national health service . Management of much of the research supported by NHS research and development funding is devolved and expenditure at project level is not held centrally by the Department. The total investment is therefore considerably greater than just the spend on directly commissioned projects.

The main Government agency for research into the causes of and treatments for disease is the Medical Research Council (MRC) which receives its funding via the Department of Trade and Industry. In 2000–01 the MRC spent £3 million on epilepsy research.

Contraception

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the effect of the price of emergency contraception upon the extent of its use; and if he will make a statement. [41885]

Yvette Cooper: Direct sale of emergency contraception in pharmacies has provided a welcome additional point of access to emergency contraception. Data are not collected on over the counter pharmacy sales of emergency contraception. Supply of a pharmacy medicine outside national health service arrangements is a private transaction and payment is therefore required. The cost is entirely a matter for the product licence holder and community pharmacies.

We do however recognise that the cost of this product may be a barrier for some women and that emergency contraception must continue to be widely available under NHS arrangements. Emergency contraception continues to be available free of charge, on prescription, from general practitioners, contraceptive clinics, youth clinics, and walk-in centres. In addition pharmacists in some areas are supplying emergency contraception free of charge under a patient group direction. We welcome the introduction of these schemes and have recently provided funding to 14 areas to enable further pharmacy schemes to be developed.

Chinese Language Services

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what services the NHS provides to meet the language needs of the Chinese community in Barnet. [45313]

Mr. Hutton: The NHS Plan signals that a key part of modernising the NHS and Personal Social Services is the need to be more responsive to black and minority ethnic groups, and to provide services for each individual which take account of their religious, cultural and linguistic requirements.

Barnet primary care trust (PCT) is already beginning to address the health needs of its diverse local communities. The PCT have established an Inequalities Group which meet frequently and feed into the health improvement programme.

Interpreting services for people attending general practitioners surgeries in Barnet, including the Chinese community, are managed and provided through the Linkworker service at Barnet and Chase Farm hospitals. All GP surgeries are aware of the arrangements for accessing these services and posters and circulars are provided for communications purposes. Interpreting services for clinics and health centres in Barnet are managed and provided through the PCT. The manager for these services is based at Edgware community hospital.

Dental Services (Wiltshire)

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what the cost is of the mobile dental clinic at Highworth; and how many patients used it per day on average in the last 12 months; [45466]

(2) what the annual cost is of the Dental Access Centre in Swindon; and how many patients have been treated in the Centre since its opening; and how many on average per day; [45463]

Ms Blears: In 2001–02 revenue costs of £1.233,000 were allocated to the Swindon Dental Access Centre by the Department of Health.

8,424 patients were seen in the Swindon Dental Access Centre between April 2000 and February 2002. Local management information is that in January 2002 the Centre saw an average of 41.2 patients a day across the three sites. The Centre provides a seven-day service.

It is not possible from the information collected centrally to identify cost and activity information for the individual sites within the Dental Access Centre. For more detailed information on cost and activity the hon. Member should contact the Chair of Wiltshire health authority.

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what consideration he has given to opening a dental access centre in North Wiltshire. [45465]

Ms Blears: Approval has been granted for the expansion of the Swindon Dental Access Centre to cover Chippenham. Planning permission has been granted for the development of a clinic and building work is expected to commence in April. The clinic is due to open in December 2002.

NHS Targets

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether he expects to meet each of the targets originally set out in (a) National Service Frameworks and (b) the NHS Plan. [45933]

Mr. Hutton: We remain confident that the national health service is on course to deliver NHS Plan and NSF commitments. Progress against these commitments is reported annually by the Department in the departmental report.

NHS Finance

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether (a) assets and (b) liabilities will be transferred to strategic health authorities; and if he will make a statement. [45940]

Mr. Hutton: Subject to legislation enabling strategic health authorities to be established, assets and liabilities appropriate to their role will be transferred to them.

Most assets and liabilities which currently rest with health authorities are expected to transfer to primary care trusts along with the health commissioning functions.

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what accumulated NHS deficits there are within each health authority area; [45939]

(2) what (a) current and (b) accumulated deficits there are in health authorities. [45938]

Mr. Hutton: The introduction of resource accounting and budgeting across all Government Departments from 2001–02 means that health authorities are no longer required to account on an income and expenditure basis. The concept of accumulated income and expenditure deficits is, therefore, no longer applicable, having been replaced by a measure which seeks to ensure that health authorities live within the approved resource limits set by the Department.

By the year end, we expect all health authorities to live within their agreed resource limits and not to overspend.

Surrey Health Trusts

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what was (a) the original budgeted expenditure and (b) the actual expenditure of West Surrey health authority in each of the last five years; [45502]

(2) what the debt is of West Surrey health authority; and to which bodies it will be allocated when the authority is abolished; [45467]

(3) if he will list the land and buildings identified to his Department as the source of funds to pay off the debt of West Surrey health authority. [45504]

Ms Blears: West Surrey health authority's original budget and expenditure is as follows:

£ million

	Original planned expenditure	Final budget	Expenditure
1997–98	330.2	369.8	374.3
1998–99	341.6	390.1	389.1
1999–2000	381.4	465.0	460.2
2000–01	411.4	478.6	477.8
2001–02	486.5	520.2	519.9

Notes:
Final budget and expenditure figures as per accounts.

The successor body to West Surrey health authority is the new Surrey and Sussex strategic health authority. It is responsible for the transfer of the balance sheet position, as at 31 March 2002, to the NHS organisations, which assume West Surrey health authority's functions from 1 April 2002. The exact transfer of specific assets and liabilities will be determined by the accounting process that is planned to be completed by 16 May 2002. The new health authority and local primary care trusts will be allocated the main proportion of West Surrey's balance sheet. The funding requirement for these successor organisations into 2002–03 will be concluded upon the closure of its accounts.

Land and properties that could be sold within the West Surrey health economy as follows:

(1) Currently owned by Surrey Hampshire Borders NHS trust:

Ridgewood site.

(2) Properties to be developed to Guildford and Waverley primary care trust:

Farnham hospital—surplus land;

Farnham health centre;

Cranleigh hospital and health centre.

(3) Currently owned by Bournewood community and mental health trust:

Property at rear of Ashford hospital (West Byfleet health centre);

Central site at St. Peter's campus.

Total sale proceeds from all these properties would be in the region of £16 million to £17.5 million of which £5 million–£7 million would be expected in 2002–03.

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was (a) the original budgeted expenditure and (b) the actual expenditure of the Ashford and St. Peter's Hospitals NHS Trust in each of the last five years. [45501]

Ms Blears: The information requested is shown in the table. Figures for 2001–02 are not yet available.

£ million

Ashford & St. Pete	Original budget	Turnover	Expenditure
1997–98	[illegible]	89.1	91.2
1998–99	91.3	96.9	96.8
1999–2000	98.7	108.9	110.5
2000–01	106.1	111.2	116.0
2001–02	121.0	123.7	125.7

Notes

1. The Ashford and St. Peters NHS Trust was created 1 April 1998 from the merger of the St. Peters Hospital Trust and the Ashford Hospital Trust. The figures for 1997–1998 are the sum of the figures for the two Trusts.

2. The original budget differs from the actual turnover of the Trust due to in year contract adjustments.

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the new Chairman of the Ashford and St. Peters Hospitals NHS Trust was appointed; and who was informed. [45468]

Ms Blears: Mr. Clive Thompson was appointed to chair the Ashford and St. Peter's National Health Service Trust on 11 March. The appointment was announced by press release on 14 March. A further letter was sent by the trust to all local hon. Members on 20 March informing them of the appointment.

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) directly employed nurses and (b) agency nurses were employed by the Ashford and St. Peters Hospital NHS Trust on 1 January (i) 1999, (ii) 2000, (iii) 2001 and (iv) 2002; and how much the use of agency nurses added to the expenditure of the Trust in each of the last three years. [45503]

Ms Blears: Information on the number of agency nurses employed by the Trust and the cost incurred are not collected centrally. The number of nurses employed by Ashford and St Peter's Hospitals NHS Trust in the years 1999 to 2001 are given below. Figures for 2002 are not yet available.

NHS Hospital and Community Health Service (HCHS): Nursing, midwifery andhealth visiting staff employed by Ashford and St. Peters Hospitals NHS Trust as at 30 September each year

Human Rights Act Compliance

Mr. Woodward: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 6 March 2002, Official Report, column 46W, on Human Rights Act 1998 compliance in hospitals, how many complaints made on human rights grounds have been made by detained patients through the NHS complaints procedures. [44772]

Jacqui Smith: This information is not held centrally.

NHS Service Reviews

Dr. Evan Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of services have been reviewed in line with Government policy in the handbook "Better Quality Services" since September 1999. [45726]

Ms Blears: The Department has reviewed approximately 25 per cent. of its services and activities since September 1999 in line with Government policy in the handbook "Better Quality Services" (BQS).

However, since March 2001 specific BQS activity has been overtaken by a fundamental review of the Department, which covered all its services and activities.

This has been carried out in the spirit of BQS in line with Government policy and has generated a programme of change that focuses on our delivery contract and aims to improve efficiency and effectiveness.

Correspondence

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was, for each year since 1995, the average response time for providing a substantive answer to (a) hon. Members' correspondence, (b) correspondence from members of the public and (c) written parliamentary questions in the (i) Commons and (ii) Lords. [7046]

Ms Blears: The available information is in the table.

Percentage of replies sent to MPs within service first targets of 20 day	members of the public within service first targets of 20 days

1995	79
1996	87
1997	76	4
1998	61	63
1999	47	56
2000	50	80.5
2001	60	87.5

I regret that comparable data about parliamentary questions is not readily available in the form requested because the record management database from which it is drawn is currently not reliable, for the reasons set out in the reply I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Blackpool, North and Fleetwood (Mrs. Humble) on 5 March 2002, Official Report, column 192W.

Delayed Discharge (Barrow and Furness)

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many delayed discharge patients there are in the Barrow and Furness constituency waiting to leave hospital. [45263]

Jacqui Smith: On 17 March 2002, there were 52 delayed transfers of care recorded at Furness general hospital in Barrow. Of these, 32 awaited placement in a nursing or residential home; seven were awaiting completion of assessment; six were waiting for NHS non-acute care; five were there for reasons of patient choice and two for other reasons.

The number of delayed transfers of care in Cumbria is being reduced with the additional funds allocated to Cumbria county council as part of "Building Capacity" and the implementation of the report of the Change Agents, which was commissioned by the Department of Health. This improvement is expected to continue through 2002–03.

Personal Care

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimates his Department has made of the total cost of making the provision of personal care for retired people free. [45508]

Jacqui Smith: I refer the hon. Member to the reply which I gave my hon. Friend for Selly Oak (Lynne Jones) on 7 March 2002, Official Report, column 542W. In making estimates, we have assumed that only a small proportion of self-funders in residential care are of working age, so that the vast majority of the costs relate to older people.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Saville Inquiry

Mr. Blunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the cost of the Saville Inquiry to his Department has been to date; and what his current estimate is of the final cost of the whole inquiry. [46024]

Mr. Browne: The cost of the Bloody Sunday Inquiry to the Northern Ireland Office, as at 22 March 2002, is £56.8 million. The current estimated cost of the Inquiry to the Northern Ireland Office is £120 million.

The £20 million increase as compared with the figure given on 17 December 2001, Official Report, column 40W, is accounted for by two factors. First, an estimated £15 million of net additional costs arises from the transfer of the hearings to London this September. Secondly, the Senior Costs Judge's judgment of 21 March implies additional expenditure of, on best current estimates, around £5 million on solicitors for the families; expenditure on costs arising from this case is expected to run into several hundreds of thousands of pounds.

If my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State's challenge to the Senior Costs Judge's ruling on payments to counsel for the families is unsuccessful, that will add an estimated sum of at least £6 million to the estimated £120 million cost.

These figures do not include costs to other Departments such as the Ministry of Defence.

Mr. Blunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he expects Lord Saville to report his findings. [46023]

Mr. Browne: Publication of the report is a matter for the independent Tribunal. Based on my current understanding of the Inquiry's future timetable, I do not expect the Tribunal to publish its report before 2004.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland further to his answer of 26 February 2002, Official Report, column 757W, on the Saville Inquiry, how much public funding has been provided to the legal representatives of other parties represented at the Saville Inquiry, broken down by each (a) barrister and (b) firm of solicitors involved. [41239]

Mr. Browne: The answer of 26 February set out the amount of public funding that has been provided to the legal representatives of the families and the Northern Ireland Civil Rights Association (NICRA). The majority of the other parties represented at the Inquiry have their legal costs met through the Ministry of Defence. The public funding made available to these parties is therefore a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence.

The Tribunal has allowed certain persons limited legal representation during the course of the hearings. The costs of this representation are paid by the Inquiry. In addition a large number of witnesses have received legal assistance at the statement-taking stage and have had the costs of this met by the Inquiry. The cost of this assistance and representation therefore falls to my Department.

Much of the assistance to witnesses has been provided by solicitors to the families: insofar as it has been, the costs are included in the payments to the solicitors concerned shown in the parliamentary answer of 26 February 2002, Official Report, column 757W. However, a large number of other lawyers from across the United Kingdom and beyond have also been involved in providing assistance to individual witnesses or representing those additional persons referred to above. Given the numbers of lawyers involved it is taking a little time to compute the amounts paid to the individual teams. I will undertake to write to my hon. Friend with this information as soon as possible. A copy of the letter will be placed in the House Library.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Arthur Andersen

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the total cost to her Department has been of services provided by (a) Andersen and (b) Accenture, Andersen Consulting for (i) accountancy services, (ii) consultancy work and (iii) other work in each year since 1997; and if she will make a statement. [32107]

Ms Hewitt: The total costs of contracts awarded by year are set out below.

Company	Service	Year	£
Andersen Consulting (later Accenture)	Consultancy	1999	10,000
Arthur Andersen	Consultancy	2000	594,000
	Consultancy	2001	213,000
	Accountancy	2001	4,100,000

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much work from her Department has been given to Andersen Consulting formally known as Arthur Andersen in each year since 1992. [46221]

Ms Hewitt: Contracts agreed with Andersen Consulting were listed in my reply to my Friend the hon. Member for Great Grimsby (Mr. Mitchell) on 11 February 2002, Official Report, column 61W. Information on contracts for the five years prior to May 1997 is not centrally available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Departmental Events

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will list the (a) conferences, (b) seminars, (c) workshops, (d) exhibitions and

(e) press conferences which have been sponsored by her Department and which took place on non-departmental premises in each of the last four years giving the title, purpose, date and cost of each. [34300]

Ms Hewitt: My Department uses the mechanisms that are the most appropriate and effective in communicating with specific audiences, including all those listed in the question. Some of these events are held on Departmental premises and others at different venues. But no central records are kept that would enable the information requested to be supplied, and it could only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

Publicity Expenditure

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment she has made of the total real terms expenditure of her Department, its agencies and non-departmental public bodies on publicity in each of the years (a) 1997–98, (b) 1998–99, (c) 1999–2000, (d) 2000–01 and (e) 2001–02 (i) to date and (ii) as estimated for the whole of the present year; and if she will break these figures down to indicate expenditure on (A) advertising and (B) press and public relations. [36157]

Ms Hewitt: This information is not held centrally and could only be provided at disproportionate cost.

Insolvency Service

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many warning letters were issued as a result of investigations by the Insolvency Service in each year since 1997. [42071]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The number of warning letters issued were as follows:

1 January 1997 to 31 December 1997:	582
1 January 1998 to 31 December 1998:	549
1 January 1999 to 31 December 1999:	385
1 January 2000 to 31 December 2000:	287
1 January 2001 to 31 December 2001:	228.

The numbers reflect better policy guidance provided to Official Receivers in 1997–98, who have focused investigatory resources on the more serious offences and director disqualification, both of which lead to court hearings and convictions rather than resulting in warning letters.

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what checks are in place to ensure an agreed high standard of correspondence is achieved when the Insolvency Service communicates with customers. [42068]

Miss Melanie Johnson: The Insolvency Service's target for replying to correspondence is published in the Annual Report and in leaflets that are available from the Insolvency Service and can also be found on the website, www.insolvency.gsi.gov.uk.

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what measures are used by her Department to review the (a) performance and (b) efficiency of the Insolvency Service. [42084]

Miss Melanie Johnson: A number of targets are set annually to measure the performance and efficiency of the Insolvency Service. They are published in the Annual Report, a copy of which is available in the Libraries of the House.

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many rogue directors have been reported on the Insolvency Service hotline since its inception; and how many of these (a) in total and (b) as a percentage of total calls have resulted in successful prosecutions. [42076]

Miss Melanie Johnson: By 28 February 2002, 2,978 calls had been received which generated 1,167 substantive complaints. The remaining complainants failed to provide the information requested in support of their complaints.

By that date, 31 related convictions had been obtained and a further 27 written warnings had been issued. 563 remain under investigation and 450 were not proceeded with due to insufficient evidence.

Staff Numbers

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many staff have been employed by her Department in each of the last 10 years. [42461]

Ms Hewitt: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him on 19 March 2002, Official Report, column 295W, by my hon. Friend the then Parliamentary Secretary, Cabinet Office.

Internet/e-Government

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment she has made of (a) internet and (b) e-Government access in rural areas; and what measures she it taking to broaden access. [41917]

Mr. Alexander [holding answer 11 March 2002]: The 2001 UK online annual report: http://www.eennovy.gov.uk/ukonline/champions/anrep—menu.htm detailed progress towards our internet and e-Government targets.

A copy has also been placed in the Libraries of the House.

Correspondence

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, pursuant to her answer of 11 March 2002, Official Report, column 678W, on correspondence, for what reason 21 letters sent to her Department were awaiting a reply; and for how many of the 21 an acknowledgement of their correspondence has been sent to the letter-writer. [43689]

Ms Hewitt: There are several reasons why a letter may not receive an answer within my Department's target of 10 days. On this occasion I am unable to give specific reasons as I am unable to identify which letters were outstanding at the time, but all outstanding correspondence will be dealt with as quickly as possible and my Department will continue to endeavour to respond to letters within 10 days.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the target time will be in 2002–03 for (a) Ministers to reply to letters from hon. Members and (b) officials in her Department to reply to letters received directly from members of the public. [44939]

Ms Hewitt: The agreed target time for my Department to reply to hon. Members is 10 working days for the year 2002–03.

The target for letters received directly from members of the public for the year 2002–03 is 15 working days.

Aerospace Industry

Mrs. Irene Adams: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many jobs she estimates are dependent on the aerospace industry in the United Kingdom. [43919]

Mr. Wilson: The latest figures I have are for 2000. DTI working with the Society of British Aerospace Companies estimates that the UK aerospace industry employed 150,000 and indirectly supported a further 200,000 jobs in the supply chain.

Sellafield

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, pursuant to the answer of 14 February 2002, Official Report, column 529W, on Sellafield, if she will place in the Library the review of the B30 nuclear waste storage facility performed by BNFL. [44286]

Mr. Wilson: I understand no such document exists.

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, pursuant to the answer of 14 February 2002, Official Report, column 529W, on Sellafield, what remedial work has been carried out on the B30 nuclear waste storage facility. [44287]

Mr. Wilson: Management of the B30 facility is an operational matter for BNFL subject to regulations by the Health and Safety Executive's Nuclear Installations Inspectorate (HSE's NII). The effective management of the facility and the historic legacy wastes it contains is a high priority for both the Government and BNFL. BNFL is taking forward a range of work programmes at B30. These are aimed at improving the way the building itself is cared for as well as characterising the contents of the building and retrieving these and converting them into a more stable form.

Legal Costs

David Hamilton: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much her Department has paid to lawyers dealing with chronic bronchitis and emphysema, broken down by firm. [44378]

Mr. Wilson: There are 471 firms of solicitors/organisations who are processing claims in relation to respiratory disease. The following list details the costs for the 10 solicitors/organisations who represent the largest numbers of claims in ascending order based on total claims intimated.

No.	Solicitor	Costs paid (£ million)
1	Thompsons	10.8
2	Hugh James Ford Simey	8.0
3	Union of Democratic Mineworkers	3.0
4	Raleys	4.5
5	Mark Gilbert Morse	0.7
6	Browell Smith & Co	3.5
7	Graysons	2.1
8	Watson Burton	1.5
9	Irwin Mitchells	2.3
10	Randell Saunders	0.5

David Hamilton: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much her Department has paid to lawyers dealing with vibration white finger/carpal tunnel syndrome, broken down by firm. [44379]

Mr. Wilson: There are 460 firms of solicitors/organisations who are processing claims in relation to vibration white finger. The following list details the costs for the 10 solicitors/organisations who represent the largest numbers of claims in ascending order, based on total claims intimated.

No.	Solicitor	Costs paid (£ million)
1	Thompsons	6.0
2	Browell Smith & Co	4.3
3	Union of Democratic Mineworkers	3.7
4	Raleys	3.1
5	Hugh James Ford Simey	3.1
6	Graysons	2.1
7	Moss	1.5
8	Watson Burton	2.0
9	AMS Law	1.1
10	Towells	1.4

Textile Industry

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many firms in the textile industry that received grants from the Department have subsequently ceased production in Britain and utilised grants in overseas locations in each of the last five years. [44559]

Mr. Alexander: Offers of grant from the Department are subject to a finite period of monitoring.

The Department's selective assistance database shows that in the last five financial years to 31 March 2001, 242 offers of Regional Selective Assistance or Enterprise Grant were made in England to firms in the textile sector. Of those which received payments of grant and were subject to conditions of the grant offer letter, 10 firms ceased trading. Eight of these firms went into liquidation. In the other two cases, one closed without notice after receiving £8,000 grant. The second, involving grant of £825,000 was subject to a Management Buy Out and remains active in the UK.

Electricity

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discussions her Department had with representatives of (a) Powergen, (b) East Midlands Electricity and (c) the US Department of Commerce in 1997 and 1998. [44666]

Mr. Wilson: The Department has discussions on a wide range of issues from time to time with UK Electricity Companies and with the Departments of other Governments.

Nuclear Reactors

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what evaluation her Department has made of emerging pebble-bed nuclear reactor design and operation in other countries; and if she will make a statement. [44809]

Mr. Wilson: None. BNFL has a minority investment in the Pebble Bed Modular Reactor (PBMR) project, the feasibility of which is currently being studied. I look forward to seeing the results in due course.

CISWO

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many partnerships CISWO has with Sport England, regional development agencies and the private sector; and how many jobs have these created in the last three years. [45095]

Mr. Wilson: CISWO collaborates with Sport England in many areas in preparing bids for National Lottery money for projects that will develop or enhance local sporting facilities. Such activity is not formalised as a partnership and does not have job creation as an objective although extra employment opportunities may be created. CISWO is associated with seven RDA projects and, as before, although job creation is not a central feature, there has been, for example, an education project in Yorkshire has created five jobs and a similar number at a project in the West Midlands.

CISWO's involvement with the private sector is a matter for CISWO.

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what Government funding has been received by CISWO in each of the last five years. [45096]

Mr. Wilson: CISWO has not received any Government funding in any of the last five years. CISWO was given a cash endowment from the Bristol Coal Corporation upon the Corporation's privatisation in 1994 and, in addition, between 1994 and 1999 received under covenant £1 million per annum from the successor mining companies to the Corporation.

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what requests for Government funding have been made by CISWO this year. [45094]

Mr. Wilson: In October of last year the Chair of the Trustees of CISWO wrote to me seeking a meeting to discuss funding. In January of this year I attended a presentation given by the Chief Executive and a number of the organisation's trustees and at that presentation I undertook to give careful consideration to CISWO's concerns over their future funding requirements.

Post Office

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the operating profits were for the Post Office/Consignia in each of the last 20 years. [44776]

Ms Hewitt: The operating profits figures for the Post Office/Consignia are set out in the company's Annual Report and Accounts. Since 1982 these have been:

Year	£ Million
1981–82	90
1982–83	151
1983–84	131
1984–85	142
1985–86	141
1986–87	130
1987–88	171
1988–89	116
1989–90	78
1990–91	106
1991–92	250
1992–93	264
1993–94	300
1994–95	[1]461
1995–96	387
1996–97	481
1997–98	528
1998–99	394
1999–2000	381
2000–01	[1]22

[1] As restated.

Note:

Profit figures do not include tax, interest, exceptional items or (after 1990–91) sale of assets.

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discussions have taken place about the possible sale of Consignia Holdings plc or its component parts; and if she will make a statement. [44769]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 21 March 2002]: There are no proposals to sell Consignia Holdings, its mail business, Parcelforce or the network of post offices.

Consignia was given commercial freedom by this Government in response to demands from the company and unions. It is therefore entirely logical that Consignia considers it commercial strategy, including relationships or ventures with other operators.

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what proportion of first class letters reached their destination the day after posting in each of the last 20 years. [44788]

Ms Hewitt: This matter falls to the day to day responsibility of Consignia and I have therefore asked the Chief Executive to reply direct to the hon. Member.

Inward Investment

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the total level of inward investment was from (a) the EU, (b) the USA, (c) the G7 countries and (d) Japan into the UK in each of the last 20 years. [44782]

Ms Hewitt: The information is in the following table:

Level of foreign direct investment in the UK 1981–2000
Stock level at year end £ million, current prices

	EU15	USA	G7 total	Japan
1981	3,225	9,559	12,049	324
1984	12,203	19,576	24,237	806
1987	16,363	25,838	35,359	2,039
1988	23,593	28,257	41,441	3,082
1989	28,711	37,093	55,307	3,965
1990	33,707	43,784	65,799	5,648
1991	38,036	44,434	68,453	5,346
1992	39,546	46,001	70,216	4,929
1993	40,266	49,537	73,741	5,427
1994	39,998	49,829	73,683	5,105
1995	43,493	55,129	81,689	5,542
1996	43,774	55,956	85,004	5,888

1998	69,248	93,419	134,140	7,387
1999	107,429	93,469	162,300	4,174
2000	137,468	100,526	195,465	7,770

Notes:
G7 comprises of UK, France, Germany, Italy, Japan, Canada and USA.
Prior to 1987, data were only collected every three years.

Consumer Protection

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans she has to amend the Consumer Protection (Cancellation of Contracts Concluded away from Business Premises) Regulations 1987. [45364]

Miss Melanie Johnson: I have no plans at present to amend the Regulations.

Nuclear Power Stations (Scotland)

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when she expects to make a decision on her responsibility for planning permission in relation to recent legislation on nuclear power stations in Scotland. [45305]

Mr. Wilson: I have no such responsibility.

National Physical Laboratory

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will make a statement on the progress of the PFI project at the National Physical Laboratory, Teddington; what the extent is of (a) delays from the original timetable and (b) cost overruns; and to what extent liability for failure to meet deadlines falls on the (i) Government and (ii) contractor. [45704]

Ms Hewitt: The new accommodation for the National Physical Laboratory is being handed over, as planned, in phases. Nine of 16 modules have been handed over.

The original date for completion of construction of the final module was 22 January 2001. The PFI Contractor's reported date for construction completion is now 12 November 2002.

Since this is a PFI project, construction cost overruns are a matter for the PFI Contractor and liability for failure to meet deadlines does not fall to Government.

Asteroid 2002 EM7

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what monitoring her Department has undertaken of the asteroid 2002 EM7 and its orbit. [46007]

Ms Hewitt: Asteroid 2002 EM7 was first observed on 12 March 2002, four days after it had passed within 500,000 km of the Earth, a distance greater than that between the Earth and the Moon. The object had not been detected previously because its approach had been from the direction of the Sun. Observations have determined that the object takes 323 days to orbit the Sun, and that its next close approach to the Earth will occur on 1 July 2011, at a minimum distance more than eight times greater than that of 8 March 2002. The size of 2002 EM7 is estimated to be between 50 and 100 m.

The Government's approach to Near Earth Objects (NEOs) is to work with its international partners to develop a complementary and co-ordinated response to what is, by its nature, a global issue. A National NEO Information Centre has been established at the National Space Science Centre in Leicester to provide objective information on NEOs to the public and media.

Website Security

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what information posted on the departmental website, or websites of non departmental public bodies reporting to her Department, has been (a) modified or (b) removed as a consequence of the events of 11 September 2001. [46198]

Ms Hewitt: No information has been modified or removed from the core pages of the DTI website as a result of the events of 11 September. Information on changes to other DTI-related websites is not held centrally and could only be provided at disproportionate cost.

Coal Mineshafts

Ross Cranston: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps she is taking to compensate home owners whose properties (a) have suffered a substantial fall in value and (b) are unsaleable because of abandoned mineshafts nearby. [46300]

Mr. Wilson: The Coal Authority or relevant coal mine operator will repair any physical damage caused to a property by an abandoned mineshaft. That being the case, I have no plans to introduce any scheme of compensation in respect of properties the value and saleability of which are allegedly affected by the presence of a mineshaft. Nevertheless, my Department is examining with other interested parties how the difficulties experienced by the owners of property with mineshafts nearby might be addressed.

Ross Cranston: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when she will announce her conclusions on the Heriot-Watt University study on the impact of coal mineshafts; and if she will make a statement. [46262]

Mr. Wilson: The Heriot-Watt University study provided valuable information on the effect of former mineshafts on property values, in particular in Stoke-on-Trent. Subsequent to the study's publication the Department has established a Working Group to examine what steps might be taken to address this issue. The Working Group, which includes representatives from the Coal Authority, the Council of Mortgage Lenders, the Association of British Insurers, the Law Society and the Royal Institute of Chartered Surveyors, met for the first time last month. Good progress has already been made in identifying measures which the various parties might take to improve the situation.

Postcomm

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps she is taking to ensure Postcomm consults all local authorities on its proposals to increase competition in postal services; and if she will make a statement. [45953]

Mr. Alexander: I refer my hon. Friend to answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Morecambe and Lunesdale (Geraldine L Smith) on 26 March 2002 PQ No. 46321.

Geraldine Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment she has made of Postcomm proposals for Consignia and the introduction of competition into postal markets ahead of European proposals. [46230]

Mr. Alexander [holding answer 25 March 2002]: The Government's priority is to ensure the universal postal service and this is Postcomm's primary statutory duty. In exercising its functions Postcomm must act in accordance with its primary and other statutory duties including compliance with EU obligations.

Currently EU legislation allows member states to reserve certain mail services to universal service providers but only to the extent necessary to maintain the universal service. There are maximum limits to the services that may be reserved; but there is no minimum and some EU countries have determined either that they no longer need to reserve services or that the level of service they need to reserve is lower than the maximum limits.

Discussions are in progress to amend the current European Postal Directive with regard to the further opening to competition of Community postal services and when the new Directive is adopted the Government will consider with interested parties what action is necessary for its transposition in the United Kingdom.

Geraldine Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what previous experience Postcomm commissioners have regarding postal services in the United Kingdom. [46251]

Mr. Alexander [holding answer 25 March 2002]: Postcomm was the first body to have a collegiate approach to regulation in the UK. This approach aims to de-personalise regulation and bring a greater range of expertise to bear on regulatory decisions. The experience of the Commissioners was outlined in a press release by this Department on 6 November 2000, copies of which have been placed in the Libraries of the House.

Geraldine Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how the appointments for Postcomm commissioners were advertised; how many applications were received; who appointed the Postcomm commissioners; and what criteria were used for the appointments. [46252]

Mr. Alexander [holding answer 25 March 2002]: The advertising, recruitment and appointments process was conducted by this Department in accordance with the Commissioner for Public Appointments' Code of Practice. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry made the appointments.

Geraldine Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) which district councils and unitary authorities Postcomm have consulted regarding their proposals affecting Consignia; [46229]

(2) if Postcomm has consulted (a) the Steve King Orchestra, (b) Victoria's Jewellers, (c) Lancashire County Council, (d) Lancaster City Council and (e) hon. Members regarding their current proposals affecting Consignia; [46231]

(3) if Postcomm is consulting with selected local authorities on their proposals for Consignia. [46250]

Mr. Alexander [holding answers 25 March 2002]: This is a matter for Postcomm. Interested parties who have concerns about the process or substance contained in the document Postcomm issued on Thursday 31 January should communicate these to Postcomm.

Geraldine Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if Postcomm has indicated to Consignia during the last 18 months that it would not allow an increase in the price of postage. [46249]

Mr. Alexander [holding answer 25 March 2002]: On 10 April 2001 Postcomm received a request from the Royal Mail for increases in a wide range of postal rates including a penny on first and second class post. This request was made under provisions of the Consignia license. Consignia suspended that request on 19 June 2001.

Aggregates Levy

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discussions her Department has had with the Treasury on a delay to the aggregates levy. [46475]

Mr. Wilson: Government Departments continue to have detailed discussions on the implementation of the aggregates levy.

Broadband

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps she is taking to increase broadband coverage in Monmouthshire. [45866]

Mr. Alexander: The Government broadband strategy can be found in the second annual UK Online Report and sets out a number of measures to stimulate broadband supply in areas without coverage.

Last year we announced a £30 million fund to encourage broadband rollout in each region of the country and last week I set out how that money would be spent in each region.

Wales will receive £2.67 million which will be used to: further develop the all-Wales broadband Lifelong Learning Network which will link up all educational facilities, libraries and adult learning centres within Wales with broadband services to allow the public to access broadband services; and develop a wireless broadband project that will utilise wireless technology to enable online communities to use and create digital content.

Coal Health Compensation Scheme

Andy Burnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many applications have been made under the coal health compensation scheme for (a) chronic bronchitis and emphysema and (b) vibration white finger from residents of (i) Leigh constituency, (ii) Wigan constituency, (iii) Makerfield constituency and (iv) Wigan borough; and how many of these applications have been (A) settled and (B) received interim payments. [45265]

Mr. Wilson: The information is in the following tables:

Chronic obstructive pulmonary disease

	Applications[1]	Full and final offers made[2]	Interims made
Leigh	1,467	187	351
Wigan	799	89	202
Makerfield	975	116	266

Vibration white finger

	Applications[1]	Full and final offers made[2]	Interims made
Leigh	598	185	196
Wigan	296	76	107
Makerfield	545	140	201

[1] Statistics are compiled by IRISC, the Department's claims handlers, on a parliamentary constituency basis rather than according to local government boundaries. The above figures represent the bulk of applicants from the Wigan Borough area, but will understate the position to the extent that applications from the constituencies of West Lancashire, Bolton West and Chorley are also from persons resident in the Wigan Borough area.

[2] IRISC are not able to produce individual constituency figures for applications settled. They do provide figures for those claims on which a full and final offer has been made.

Secondments

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many BP employees are on secondment to her Department; for what purposes; on what terms; and how many BP employees have been on secondment to her Department since January 2000. [45889]

Ms Hewitt [holding answer 25 March 2002]: From records held centrally, we currently have two BP employees on secondment into the Department. One is on secondment to the Chemicals and Biotechnology Directorate, based in the USA as a US Chemical Advisor. The other is seconded to Trade Partners UK (BTI) as an Export Promoter for East and West Europe. The secondments are covered by standard contractual arrangements setting out terms and conditions.

In addition, there have been a further two BP employees on secondment to the Department since January 2000, both of whom have now finished their attachments.

Companies House

Mr. Connarty: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what targets she has set the Department's executive agency, Companies House for 2002–03. [47422]

Miss Melanie Johnson: I have set Companies House the following targets for the 2002–03 year.

Operational Targets

To process 99 per cent. of statutory documents within five days of receipt at Companies House; to achieve, on average, a monthly compliance rate for accounts submitted of 95 per cent.;

to ensure that 96 per cent. of all forms submitted to Companies House are captured error-free; and to ensure that 98 per cent. of all images placed on the Companies House image system are error-free.

Questions delegated to the Chief Executive

The Chief Executive to reply within 10 days to all letters from Members of Parliament delegated to her for reply.

Customer Service and Complaints Handling

To ensure that products and services on Companies House Direct are available for 98 per cent. of the time between the supported hours of 7 am and 8 pm, Monday to Friday; to ensure that products and services on the Companies House website are available for 98 per cent. of the time between the supported hours of 7 am and 8 pm, Monday to Friday;

to achieve a score of more than 80 per cent. in each quarterly Companies House Customer Satisfaction Survey; to clear up 90 per cent. of complaints within five days.

Financial Targets

To maintain a unit cost reduction of 3 per cent. in real terms on document registration; to achieve, taking one year with another, a 6 per cent. average rate of return based on the operating surplus expressed as a percentage of average net assets; to pay all bills due within 30 days, or on other agreed credit terms, on receipt of goods or services or a valid invoice, whichever is later.

Universal Bank

Mr. Peter Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if the proposed Universal Bank Account will be available to those who have existing banking facilities. [41932]

Mr. Alexander [holding answer 11 March 2002]: Our operational assumption is that around three million benefit and tax credit recipients will open a POCA, but there will not be a cap on numbers or eligibility criteria for a POCA. The emphasis will be upon ensuring that each customer gets the best account for his or her circumstances. Conventional and basic bank accounts offer more services and do not have the limitations of the POCA and so are likely to be the best option for the vast majority of people.

Astra Windows Ltd.

Mr. Fallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry on what date Companies House was informed that Astra Windows Ltd. had gone into voluntary liquidation. [45926]

Miss Melanie Johnson: Companies House received notice of the appointment of a liquidator and an extra-ordinary resolution to wind up the company on 19 January 2001.

A400M

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when manufacture of the A400M will start in the UK; and how many jobs the programme is expected to (a) generate and (b) safeguard in the North West. [46206]

Mr. Wilson [holding answer 25 March 2002]: Once the A400M contract is activated, I would anticipate that production of the aircraft would begin shortly thereafter.

Airbus UK has estimated that the A400M programme will directly create up to 2,500 high quality jobs—notably in design and advance manufacture. They have calculated that indirect employment could bring that figure to over 8,000. As my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister commented on 6 March 2002, Official Report, column 343W, "Airbus Military is free to select its own suppliers on grounds of performance and cost". It is therefore impossible to estimate how many jobs might be generated in the North West.

European Directives

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment she has made of the cost to business of the European Directive on Parental Leave. [45320]

Alan Johnson: The costs to business of the implementation of the Directive were assessed in a Regulatory Impact Assessment published in 1999 when the Maternity and Parental leave etc. Regulations 1999 were introduced in the UK. At this time, the total costs to business were estimated to be £42 million per year. A further Regulatory Impact Assessment was made when the parental leave regulations were extended in January 2002 to include parents of children aged under five on 15 December 1999. The costs to business of this extension were estimated to be between £7 million and £41 million. Copies of both Regulatory Impact Assessments were placed in the Libraries of the House on publication.

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment she has made of the cost to business of the European Directive on Working Time. [45318]

Alan Johnson: When the Working Time Directive was implemented in October 1998 the broad immediate cost to business was estimated at £1.9 billion. This was increased by £0.4 billion when the paid annual leave entitlement rose from three to four weeks in 1999, and by £30 million with the removal of the 13 week paid annual leave qualifying period in October 2001. The reduction in the record keeping requirements resulting from the 199 amendments to the Working Time Regulations reduced these costs by £13 million.

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment she has made of the cost to business of the European Directive on Pregnant Workers. [45322]

Alan Johnson: The Pregnant Workers Directive was adopted in October 1992, and included measures to encourage improvements in the health and safety at work of pregnant workers and workers who have recently given birth or who are breastfeeding. It included, in particular, provisions entitling workers to minimum periods of maternity leave and setting minimum standards for pay or allowances during maternity leave.

The UK already had in place various statutory provisions for maternity leave and pay prior to the Directive. Some changes were subsequently made as a result of the Directive, and other changes have been made, for unrelated reasons, in the intervening years. The Government has therefore made no recent assessment of the costs of the Directive on its own.

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment she has made of the cost to business of the European Directive on Part Time Workers. [45321]

Alan Johnson: An assessment of the costs of implementing this Directive was made in the Regulatory Impact Assessment which the Government published alongside the Part Time Workers (Prevention of Less Favourable Treatment) Regulations 2000. A copy was placed in the Libraries of the House on publication, and is available on the DTI website at www.dti.gov.uk/er/review.htm. The RIA estimated that direct costs to employers would be around £27.4 million a year.

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment she has made of the cost to business of the European Directive on European Works Councils. [45319]

Alan Johnson: The Department commissioned an independent report into the costs associated with introducing the European Works Council Directive based on a survey of companies with experience of operating such Councils. The results of this study were incorporated into a Regulatory Impact Assessment (RIA), a copy of which is available in the Library and on the DTI website. The RIA identified a range of potential benefits from European Works Councils for employers, employees and the economy as a whole. The benefits in terms of improving industrial relations, boosting productivity and facilitating change would be felt in the longer term and could not be separately quantified. The costs to individual firms of organising European Works Council meetings were expected to range from £47,000 per year to £175,000 depending on the size of the undertaking. This represents a very small proportion of their turnover, and a valuable investment in improved employer-employee relations.

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment she has made of the cost to business of the European Directive on Young Workers. [45323]

Alan Johnson: The Department for Trade and Industry implemented the rest periods and health assessment provisions of the European Directive on Young Workers in respect of those aged from minimum school leaving age to 18th birthday, through the Working Time Regulations 1998. Around 18,000 young workers were estimated to be affected by the implementation of health assessments for adolescent night workers; the costs are estimated to be minimal.

Implementation of the European Directive on Young Workers below minimum school leaving age is the responsibility of the Department of Health.

Radiocommunications Agency

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what targets she has set her Department's Radiocommunications Agency for 2002–03. [47159]

Mr. Alexander: I have set the Radiocommunications Agency the following quality of service targets for 2002–03 in respect of its licensing and enforcement activities, and correspondence. These are in addition to achieving an overall efficiency improvement of 3 per cent. over 2002–02.

Licensing Targets

Category A

Licences that involve no frequency assignment, site clearance or international co-ordination: 100 per cent. of applications for new or varied services to be awarded or rejected (with explanation) within five working days.

Category B

Licences that involve frequency assignment but no site clearance or international co-ordination: 90 per cent. of applications for new or varied services to be awarded or rejected (with explanation) within 15 working days; the remainder to be awarded or rejected within 25 working days or an explanation of the delay to be given.

Category C

Licences that require frequency assignment and site clearance and/or international co-ordination: 90 per cent. of applications for new or varied services to be awarded or rejected (with explanation) within 40 working days; the remainder to be awarded or rejected within 60 working days or an explanation of the delay to be given.

Enforcement

100 per cent. of safety of life services reports of interference to be investigated within 24 hours.

98 per cent. of business customers reports of interference to be investigated within five working days; the remainder within a further five days.

98 per cent. of domestic customers reports of interference to be investigated within one month; the remainder within a further month.

90 per cent. of complaints to be sent a formal case update within 10 working days after the start of an investigation, the remainder within a further 10 days.

Correspondence

I also expect all correspondence from hon. Members delegated to the Chief Executive by Ministers or otherwise for reply, and all written complaints addressed to him about Agency service, to be answered within 10 working days of receipt; the Agency's enquiry point to respond to 95 per cent. of calls within 30 second; and 100 per cent. of valid invoices to be paid within 30 days of receipt (or as agreed with the supplier).

Articles of Association

Mark Tami: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if she will give her consent as holder of the special share to changes in the Articles of Association of BAe Systems plc and Rolls-Royce plc. [47160]

Ms Hewitt: I have reviewed the provisions in place for BAE Systems and Rolls-Royce and have decided to agree to the following changes. In the case of BAE Systems, we have agreed to remove the provision allowing the appointment of a Government Director; to change the current requirements that all Executive Directors are British to a requirement that a simple majority of the Board, including the Chief Executive and any Executive Chairman, are British; and to remove the aggregate foreign shareholding limit. In the case of Rolls-Royce, we have agreed to change the current requirement that 75 per cent. of the Board are British to a requirement that a simple majority, including the Chief Executive and any Executive Chairman, are British; to allow the appointment of a non-British non-Executive Chairman; and to remove the aggregate foreign shareholding limit. There will be no change in the requirements that no individual foreign shareholder, or group of foreign shareholders acting in concert, can hold more than 15 per cent. of the shares in either company. These provisions ensure that neither company can fall under foreign control.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Advertising

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the expenditure was per campaign for the five most expensive media advertising campaigns his Department undertook in the past five parliamentary Sessions including the current parliamentary Session in (a) Scotland, (b) England, (c) Wales and (d) Northern Ireland; and for the last two parliamentary Sessions and the current Session, when each advertising campaign (i) began and (ii) ended in (A) Scotland, (B) England, (C) Wales and (D) Northern Ireland. [37395]

Mr. MacShane: There has only been one media advertising campaign in the last five years in the UK.

Between March–May 1998, the FCO carried out a £1 million television and information campaign for British nationals travelling to France for the World Cup.

The campaign was run in Scotland and England, as they were the only two home teams to qualify.

Information on when elements of the advertising campaign began and ended in Scotland, England, Wales and Northern Ireland could only be provided at disproportionate cost.

Civil Servants (Relocation)

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) how many civil servants in his Department have used the services of Cendent or its subsidiaries (a) to relocate in London and (b) to be housed in London since May 1997; what the name was of the company employed in each case; and what the dates were on each occasion; [42362]

(2) which relocation companies his Department has used when relocating civil servants since May 1997; which relocation companies hold contracts with his Department for the relocation of civil servants; when the contracts were last renewed; where the contracts were advertised; and what the (a) length and (b) value of each contract is. [42363]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 11 March 2002]: None.

Energy Costs

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on energy costs incurred by his Department in each of the last 10 years. [42450]

Mr. Macshane: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Minister of State at the Department of Environment, Food and Rural Affairs on 19 March 2002, Official Report, column 268W.

Israel

Richard Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Government of Israel about overflights by the Israeli airforce in Lebanon. [43483]

Mr. Bradshaw: Embassy officials in Tel Aviv regularly raise overflights with the Israeli authorities, most recently on 26 February 2002. I did so when I visited Israel in July 2001. We remain concerned about continuing tension on the Israeli/Lebanese border. All breaches of the UN delineated "Blue Line", whether by land, sea or air are unacceptable.

Correspondence

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the target time will be in 2002–03 for (a) ministers to reply to letters from hon. Members and (b) officials in his Department to reply to letters received directly from members of the public. [44952]

Mr. Macshane: The FCO target in 2001–02 for ministers to reply to letters from hon. Members is to respond to 89 per cent of correspondence within 20 working days. The target for 2002–03 will be agreed shortly. The FCO target in 2001–02 for replies to letters received directly from members of the public is to respond to 90 per cent. of correspondence within 20 working days. The target for 2002–03 will also be agreed shortly.

Public Service Agreements

Mr Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which public service agreement targets scheduled to be met in 2002 will not be achieved by the due date. [44819]

Mr. MacShane: Information about progress on PSA targets will be published in the Foreign and Commonwealth Office's 2002 Departmental Report.

Anti-personnel Mines

Mr. Frank Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what legal advice he has been given regarding the transit across UK territory of anti-personnel mines by non-states parties to the Ottawa Convention. [45193]

Mr. MacShane: Such transit would be contrary to the United Kingdom's obligations under the Ottawa Convention.

Brahimi Report

Mr. Lazarowicz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent steps have been taken by the Government to encourage the UN to implement the Brahimi report. [44747]

Mr. MacShane: The UK Government support and work towards the implementation of the Secretary General's Report on Peace Operations (Brahimi Report). Many of its recommendations have now been implemented, including those designed to strengthen the Department of Peacekeeping Operations (DPKO), improve pre-deployment inspection and training of contingents and enhance mechanisms for consultation with troop contributors.

Global Crossing

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will place in the Library (a) the contingency plans that his Department has prepared for the contingency that Global Crossing fails, (b) the monitoring reports that his Department's posts in New York and Washington have drawn up of the financial performance of Global Crossing; and if he will make a statement. [44930]

Mr. MacShane: Contingency arrangements are contained in the FCO's contract with Global Crossing, which bars disclosure on the grounds of commercial confidentiality (Exemption 13 of the Code of Practice, on Access Government Information refers). The FCO has kept in touch with posts in Washington and New York, who have monitored local press and market reports on Global Crossing.

Falkland Islands

Mr. Frank Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans have been made for the feasibility study into demining the Falkland Islands; and if he will make a statement. [45192]

Mr. MacShane: In October 2001 a Memorandum of Understanding with the Argentines was concluded to enable a British-led feasibility study funded by the Argentines into demining the Falkland Islands to be carried out. The first Joint Working Party (JWP) meeting on the feasibility study was held in Buenos Aires on 3 and 4 December 2001.

South Africa

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Government of South Africa on the murder of farmers in that country; and if he will make a statement. [45497]

Mr. MacShane: Like the South African Government, we are concerned by the level of crime generally in the country, of which farm attacks are a worrying element. The South African government is working closely with rural communities to tackle the problem.

Macedonia

Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions he has had with his EU counterparts on the issue of the official name of the FYR of Macedonia. [45245]

Mr. MacShane: We have had no recent formal discussions with EU partners on this subject. We continue to encourage the Greek and Macedonian Governments to agree a solution under UN mediation.

Secondments

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many BP employees are on secondment to his Department; for what purposes; on what terms; and how many BP employees have been on secondment to his Department since January 2000. [45886]

Mr. MacShane [holding answer 25 March 2002]: None.

Botswana

Sue Doughty: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what have been the results of Government representations to the Government of Botswana to keep its assurances to maintain basic services for the Kalahari Bushmen and not forcibly remove the Bushmen from the Kalahari reserve; if the planned visit to the reserve by the High Commissioner has taken place; and if he will make a statement. [45882]

Mr. MacShane: The Government of Botswana stopped providing water and other essential supplies to those Bushmen remaining in the Central Kalahari Game Reserve (CKGR) at the end of February despite representations from HMG and others. The Government of Botswana has since said that those Bushmen who remain in the CKGR, estimated at around 60, can remain there if they wish to do so.

Our High Commission in Gaborone will visit the CKGR within the next three weeks to assess the latest situation.

Australia

Margaret Moran: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he last had discussions with the Australian Government regarding Aboriginal affairs. [45972]

Mr. MacShane: In general, Aboriginal affairs are the sole responsibility of the Government of Australia and we do not therefore raise them. But we are in touch with the Australians about the repatriation of Aboriginal remains; my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister discussed this with the right hon. John Howard, the Australian Prime Minister on 4 July 2000 and we have established a working group under the Chairmanship of Professor Norman Palmer to consider the matter. My noble friend Baroness Blackstone, has had further discussions this year with the Australian Minister for Multicultural and Indigenous Affairs.

I myself attended the Aboriginal Yeperenyne Centenary Federation Festival in Alice Springs, Australia, in September 2001.

Thailand

Albert Owen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representation the British Government have made to the Government of Thailand to (a) ascertain the fate of Peter Lionel Sinnott who disappeared in Pattaya on 4 January and (b) encourage the Thai Government to urge the Thai Police to treat the matter with urgency. [45387]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding reply of 25 March]: On 14 February our Ambassador in Bangkok alerted the Director General for Europe at the Thai Ministry of Foreign Affairs to the disappearance of Peter Sinnott.

Since Mr Sinnott's disappearance our Embassy has pressed the Thai police on a number of occasions for information on their progress in locating Peter. In addition, on 18 January and 13 February our consular agent in Pattaya checked with local police stations, hospitals and morgues for information about Mr. Sinnott. On 28 January our Embassy wrote to the Commander of the Tourist Police in Pattaya to register Mr. Sinnott as a missing person. They wrote again on 15 March to express our interest in the investigation into Mr. Sinnott's disappearance and to ask for a report on the action taken by the police to locate him. We will continue to press for this information.

St. Helena

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs who will be representing the Government at the 500th anniversary celebrations of the Island of St. Helena. [46189]

Mr. Bradshaw: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 20 March 2002, Official Report, column 389W.

United States

Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with his United States counterpart in respect of the implications for the future effectiveness of the Nuclear Non Proliferation Treaty of the United States Nuclear Posture Review 2002. [46195]

Mr. Bradshaw: We have discussed the broad findings of the Nuclear Posture Review with the US Administration. We have also had several discussions with the US Administration on issues related to nuclear non-proliferation, including various meetings in view of the forthcoming First Preparatory Committee in the current cycle of the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty Review process. The US continues to confirm the importance it attaches to the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty, which is the cornerstone of non-proliferation.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many persons are employed by his Department to accompany visitors from abroad; and if he will list (a) their names and (b) their salary scales. [46225]

Mr. MacShane: The Conference and Visits Group of FCO Services draws from 46 fee-paid liaison officers who accompany official visitors and guests of Government.

Liaison Officers are remunerated on a daily basis in accordance with their duties for each visitor in accordance with good employer practice, and under Exemptions 8a and 12 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information it is not appropriate to release a list of such freelance employees into the public domain.

Overseas Visits

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list his overseas visits since 7 June 2001. [46223]

Mr. MacShane: Since 1997 the Government have published an annual list of all visits overseas undertaken by Cabinet Ministers costing £500 or more during each financial year. Details of travel undertaken since 1 April 2001 will be published as soon as possible after the end of the 2001–02 financial year. Copies of previous lists are available in the Libraries of the House.

Camp X-ray

Mr. Bailey: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent reports he has received on the situation relating to the British Taliban and al-Qaeda suspects held at Camp X-ray in Guantanamo Bay. [45808]

Mr. Bradshaw: We remain in touch with the US authorities about the position of the detainees at Guantanamo Bay, in particular that of the five UK detainees there. For details of the British detainees welfare, I refer my hon. Friend to my reply of 4 March to my hon. Friend the Member for Glasgow, Anniesland (Mr. John Robertson), Official Report, columns 69–70W.

We welcome the publication of the Procedure for Trials by Military Commission of Certain Non-United States Citizens in the War against Terrorism by the US Government on 21 March.

Gujarat

Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the situation in the Gujarat state of India. [46021]

Mr. Bradshaw: We share the deep concern of Britain's Muslim and Hindu communities over the current religious tensions and violence in Gujarat. We welcome the efforts of the Indian Government in raising the security presence in these areas to restore law and order. We are also concerned by reports that the Gujarat police failed to take adequate steps to reduce the conflict once it became clear that the violence was escalating. Our High Commission in New Delhi will continue to monitor the situation closely.

India is a secular country in which the right to freedom of religion is enshrined in the constitution. However, we continue to raise our concerns over incidents of religious intolerance in India, including attacks against Muslims, Hindus and Christians. We will continue to urge the Indian authorities to ensure the right of freedom of religion is upheld, and that those responsible for attacks on religious minorities are brought to justice.

Vietnam

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations he has made to the Government of Vietnam regarding the persecution of Christians. [46307]

Mr. Bradshaw: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to my hon. and learned Friend the Member for Redcar (Vera Baird) of 26 February, Official Report, column 1159W. Since then the Permanent Under-Secretary at the Foreign and Commonwealth Office has raised our concerns about religious freedom with the Vietnamese Ambassador, and the EU Human Rights Working Group in Hanoi has raised our concerns with the Vietnamese government about their treatment of the Mennonite leader Pastor Quang.

Ministerial Visits (Yugoslavia)

Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he last visited Yugoslavia; and what plans he has to visit in the future. [45244]

Mr. MacShane: Although the Secretary of State has had a number of contacts with Yugoslav leaders, he has not visited the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia since taking up his duties in June 2001. There are no immediate plans for such a visit.

As the Minister responsible for relations with the FRY I have visited Belgrade twice, from 18–19 July 2001, and from 6–7 February 2002 as well as other visits to the former Yugoslavia.

Burma

Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations she is making to the Burmese Government with regard to their treatment of internally displaced Karen people and other minorities; and what resources are being provided to support the Karen refugees leaving Burma for Thailand. [45453]

Mr Bradshaw: The UK has been at the forefront of the international community's effort to press for national reconciliation, respect for human rights and democracy in Burma. The ethnic minority areas of Burma, including those of the Karen, suffer disproportionately as a result of the regime's rule. The EU has adopted a Common Position including an arms embargo, bans on high level visits, items which may be used for torture, non-humanitarian aid, and a visa ban and asset freeze on members of the regime. We are also active in the United Nations, annually co-sponsoring resolutions at the UN General Assembly and UN Commission on Human Rights.

In financial year 2001–02 we have increased funding for the International Committee of the Red Cross, the Burmese Border Consortium and the United Nations High Commission for Refugee's work with Burmese refugees and those internally displaced within Burma.

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent meetings he has had with representatives from Burma; and what was discussed. [45483]

Mr. Bradshaw: Ministerial contact with the Burmese authorities is limited by the EU Common Position. However an FCO official visited Rangoon from 27 February–1 March where he met both Aung San Suu Kyi and members of the Burmese government. The Burmese government is aware of our views about the urgent need for national reconciliation, respect for human rights and the restitution of democracy in Burma.

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the human rights situation in Burma and steps taken by the Government to help the Karen people. [45482]

Mr. Bradshaw: The overall human rights situation in Burma remains poor and a cause of grave concern. The ethnic minority areas, including those of the Karen, suffer disproportionately under the regime's rule. We are currently working with EU colleagues to prepare a resolution to be submitted at the UN Commission on Human Rights that will express our concerns and call upon the Burmese regime to take urgent action to improve the situation.

In 2001–02 we have increased funding for the International Committee of the Red Cross, the Burmese Border Consortium and the United Nations High Commission for Refugees' work with Burmese refugees and those internally displaced within Burma. Both these groups include large numbers of Karen.

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plan he has to bring investment sanctions against Burma (a) unilaterally and (b) with the (i) UN, (ii) EU and (iii) Commonwealth. [45484]

Mr. Bradshaw: The EU has adopted a Common position including an arms embargo, bans on high level visits, items which may be used for torture, non-humanitarian aid, and a visa ban and asset freeze on members of the regime. The EC has also suspended Burma trading privileges in response to the use of forced labour in Burma. In addition, the UK does not encourage trade, investment or tourism with Burma. We do not offer assistance to any British company wishing to trade with Burma. There is hardly any new investment into the country.

There is no consensus at this point to implement a formal ban in any of the international forums listed. Against this background and in consideration of the evolving political situation in Burma, including the gradual release of political prisoners and the lessening of the pressure on opposition parties, there are no plans to pursue formal investment bans at this point. We will follow events closely and will respond proportionately to further developments, positive or negative.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Defence Grants

Mr. Pound: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will publish the (a) aggregate amount of civil defence grants to be made for the financial year 2002–03, (b) amount of grant to be paid in to each local authority and (c) criteria used to determine the allocation between authorities; and if he will make a statement. [46856]

Mr. Leslie: The aggregate amount is £18,968,850 of which £100,000 will be retained as discretionary grant for special projects and special events deemed of benefit to the wider emergency planning community in England and Wales.

The remaining £18,868,850 will be allocated to individual authorities as set out in the table below.

The following formula has been adopted to determine these allocations. First, each authority receives £53,000. Second, each county council receives £12,000 in respect of each shire district within the authority's boundaries. These flat-rate payments account for some 65 per cent. of the aggregate grant in recognition of the fact that every authority, regardless of size and population, must incur similar unavoidable costs in conducting the basic emergency planning function. The remainder of the total grant (approximately 35 per cent.) is then distributed according to the Bellwin threshold in recognition of the fact that population size provides a rough proxy for the scale of the emergency planning that authorities need to undertake.

A simple application of the formula would result in some authorities facing a significant decrease on the grant they had received during the current financial year, whilst others would receive a significant increase. Mindful of the importance of keeping such year-on-year changes within reasonable bounds, a damping has been added to the formula so that no authority loses more than 10 per cent. or gains more than 20 per cent. compared with the current year.

Before reaching decisions on this allocation method, consultations were held with Local Authority representatives on the basis of a draft formula. As a result of the representations made, that original formula was amended to give greater weight to the flat rate element and lesser weight to the element distributed by reference to the Bellwin threshold. The damping was also changed to reduce the floor level for losses.

Local Authority	Grant allocation for 2002–03 (£)
Barking & Dagenham	75,583
Barnet	80,268
Barnsley	75,690
Bath and N.E. Somerset	89,625
Bedfordshire	136,125

Public Appointments (Women)

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister which Government departments are expected to reach the target of equal representation for women in public appointments by 2005. [46501]

Mr. Leslie: Public Bodies: Opening up Public Appointments 2002–05, was published on 14 February. This publication provides the latest targets set by individual departments for increasing diversity on the boards of non-departmental public bodies and other public bodies, and describes the action that departments will take to achieve them. Copies have been placed in the Libraries of the House.

Consultants

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the total cost to his Department was of the use of external consultants in each of the last four years. [35018]

Mr Leslie: The total cost to the Cabinet Office and the Central Office of Information for the use of consultants in each of the last four complete financial years is as follows:

1997–98	£5,531,000
1998–99	£8,098,000
1999–2000	£10,812,000
2000–01	£10,927,000.

The period 1997–98 included £501,049 on e-government IT consultants commissioned by the Central IT Unit (CITU). Expenditure on this topic was £3,138,437 in 1998–99, £5,046,618 in 1999–2000 and £3,543,147 in 2000–01. Expenditure in 1998–99 and 1999–2000 increased to include Y2K work and in 2000–01 a decrease in expenditure in those areas was offset by work on UK Online following an expansion of e-Government work in the 2000 Spending Review. Other Cabinet Office consultancy spend is on research and IT developments.

Mrs. May: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the total cost was of management consultants across all Government departments in the last available year. [43630]

Mr. Leslie: Information for all Government Departments is not held centrally, and could only be provided at disproportionate cost. Individual departments are responsible for their own consultancy arrangements.

For the information relating to my Department, I refer the hon. Member to the answer have given today to the hon. Member for Buckingham (Mr. Bercow).

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the total external spending by his Department was on public private partnership consultants in each of the last four years; how many full-time equivalent consultants were employed over this period; how many billed consultancy days there were per year; what the implied average cost of each PPP consultant was; how many consultancy firms were used by his Department over this period; and if he will make a statement. [43193]

Mr. Leslie: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to him on 6 February 2002, Official Report, column 944W.

Permanent Secretaries

Mr. Davidson: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what (a) number and (b) percentage of permanent secretaries attended (i) Oxford and Cambridge, (ii) independent schools and (iii) both; if he will provide these figures for each of the last 10 years; and if he will make a statement. [43858]

Mr. Leslie: For current holders of Permanent Secretary posts in the Home Civil Service, the figures are:

20 studied for their first degree at Oxford or Cambridge University (59 per cent.);

14 attended independent schools (41 per cent.); and 13 attended both (38 per cent.).

Historic data on the educational backgrounds of Permanent Secretary postholders are not held centrally and could only be collected at disproportionate cost.

Press Office

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many staff in his Department's press office have

(a) termination and (b) redundancy payments in each of the last four years. [41075]

The Deputy Prime Minister and First Secretary of State: None.

Advertising

Hywel Williams: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how much the Government have spent on advertising in each year since 1993 in (a) English, (b) Welsh and (c) Welsh and English. [39518]

Mr. Leslie: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for Twickenham on 12 December 2001, Official Report, column 939W.

Figures for the financial year 1992–93 to 1994–95 are not held centrally, and could only be provide at disproportionate cost.

The only advertising undertaken by the COI is for recruitment. All recruitment advertising is in English.

Consultancy Services

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister, what proportion of work commissioned by Government Departments has been undertaken by (a) Arthur Andersen, (b) Ernst & Young, (c) PricewaterhouseCoopers in each year since 1978. [32808]

Mr. Leslie: Pursuant to my reply of 14 February, columns 562–64, I regret that the information provided was incorrect. The table should have read:

Per cent.

	1997–98	1998–99	1999–2000	2000–01	2001–02 to date[2]
Arthur Andersen	0	0	0	0.51	[2]2.09
Ernst & Young	1.55	10.45	2.05	0.04	[2]0
PricewaterhouseCoopers[1]	[1]0.35	2.19	2.16	5.15	[2]4.40

Notes:
[1] 1997–98 figure for Price Waterhouse and Coopers & Lybrand.
[2] 2001–02 figures for year to end January and subject to audit.

Car and Despatch Agency

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many vehicles in the Government's Car and Despatch Agency are run on (a) petrol, (b) diesel, (c) liquefied petroleum gas, (d) compressed natural gas and (e) other alternative fuels. [45945]

Mr. Leslie: I have been asked to reply.

Responsibility for the Government Car Service and the InterDespatch Service has been delegated under the terms of the Framework Document to the Government Car Despatch Agency. I have asked its chief executive, Mr. Nick Matheson, to write to the hon. Gentleman.

I have placed copies of the letter in the Library of the House.

Confidential Information

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what steps he has taken to co-ordinate a system across Departments by which members of the public can give confidential information. [38198]

Mr. Leslie: The Cabinet Office co-ordinates no such system across Departments.

External Contracts

Pete Wishart: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister (1) which non-accounting and non-information technology external organisations have won new contracts with (a) his Department and (b) executive agencies in each of the past five years; [38762]

(2) which non-accounting and non-information technology external organisations which previously held contracts with his Department (a) won new contracts at the culmination of the existing contracts and (b) won new contracts after a period of inactivity with his Department in each of the past five years. [38763]

Mr. Leslie: The specific information requested is not held centrally and could only be provided at disproportionate cost. However for information on the top 10 largest suppliers to the Cabinet Office for the years since 1997, I refer the hon. Member to the answer which I gave earlier today (PQ 38764).

Pete Wishart: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister, if he will list the 30 largest contracts awarded by his Department from (a) May 1997 to April 1998, (b) May 1998 to April 1999, (c) May 1999 to April 2000, (d) May 2000 to April 2001 and (e) May 2001 to the latest date, indicating in each case the values of the contracts and the companies with which the contracts were placed. [38764]

Mr. Leslie: Listed below are the 10 largest suppliers to the Cabinet Office for each financial year since 1997–98.

Special Advisers

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will list the number and expected cost to his Department of special advisers in (a) 2001–02 and (b) 2002–03. [43276]

The Deputy Prime Minister and First Secretary of State: At 21 March, there are two full time and two part time Special Advisers in my office.

On cost, I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister on 20 March 2002, Official Report, Hansard, column 324W.

Departmental Contracts

Dr. Cable: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will list the 30 largest contracts awarded by his Department from (a) May 1997 to April 1998, (b) May 1998 to April 1999, (c) May 1999 to April 2000, (d) May 2000 to April 2001 and (e) May 2001 to the latest date for which figures are available, stating in each case the values of the contracts and the companies with which the contracts were placed. [43673]

Mr. Leslie: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I have given today to the hon. Member for North Tayside, (Pete Wishart).

PFI/PPPs

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will list the (a) private finance initiative and (b) public private partnership projects which have been delayed. [44878]

Mr. Leslie: The Sunningdale Park Property Project is this Department's only PFI project. It was originally envisaged that the contract would be awarded in 1999. Various complications mean that we are now working towards a start date next month.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the difference was between the price offered in reaching preferred bidder stage and the final contract price for the five largest PFI contracts let by his Department in each of the last four years; and if he will make a statement. [45594]

Mr. Leslie: The Sunningdale Park Project is this Department's only current PFI project and has not yet reached final contract stage. My Department has had no other PFI projects in the last four years.

Crèche Facilities

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what crèche facilities are provided by his Department; and at what cost. [44864]

Mr. Leslie: The Cabinet Office provides crèche facilities for staff at the Civil Service College in Sunningdale, which is run in partnership with the Edith Rose Day Nursery. This service is also available to parents on residential courses at the college.

Staff in London have access to the Westminster Holiday Playscheme, which is available during the school holidays.

Eligible staff in all locations are able to apply for childcare vouchers. These support parents to make their own choices about where and what type of childcare they want for their child. Vouchers are payable over 48 weeks per annum and are for £21 a week for staff who work full time and either have a partner who works full time or are single parents; or pro-rata for staff who work or who have partners who work part-time. Staff using a subsidised nursery place at Sunningdale are not eligible for childcare vouchers.

The Department is conducting a review of childcare and will be taking account of the recommendations in due course.

The Regional Co-ordination Unit and the Government Offices for the Regions have not been included as the information is not held centrally, and could only be provided at disproportionate cost.

A table showing the type of childcare provision in my department; the number of parents who used it; the cost to the department; and the cost per head is below:

Cabinet Office	Type of childcare provision	Number of parents using childcare	Cost to the Department	Cost per head
	Nursery	8	£9,732.97	£134 per week. Subsidy of £41.50 per week for people earning less than £19,000 and £26 per week for people earning less than £24,001.
	Westminster Holiday Playscheme	49	£4,291.59	£17.67 a day up until 30 September 2001. £26 a day from 1 October 2001. Subsidy of 50%.
	Childcare Vouchers	85	£63,384.02	£21 a week for full-time, pro-rata for part-time.
Central Office of Information	Westminster Holiday Playscheme	4	£237	£17.67 a day up until 30 September 2001. £26 a day from 1 October 2001. Subsidy of 50%.

Unpaid Advisers

Mr. Beith: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will list the names of the unpaid advisers appointed by him since June 1997, stating in each case (a) the date of their appointment, (b) the duration of their appointment and (c) the project or projects on which they have been engaged. [43374]

Mr. Leslie: No unpaid advisers have been appointed by the Deputy Prime Minister under the terms of paragraph 51 of the Ministerial Code.

For details of unpaid appointments made by this Department to task forces, review groups and other ad hoc advisory groups, I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Rhondda on 16 November 2001, Official Report, column 958W.

Access to Information

Tony Wright: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will list the administrative manuals and internal guidance which his Department has made public as required by Part 1 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information; and which of these were first made available after May 1997. [45338]

The Deputy Prime Minister and First Secretary of State: The Cabinet Office's internet website contains numerous examples of guidance that have been made public. However, no central record is maintained of what has been made public by the Cabinet Office under the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information.

Open Government

Llew Smith: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what requests have been received by the Cabinet Secretary for the release of documents assessing progress on the release of historic official files under the Open Government Initiative. [46200]

The Deputy Prime Minister and First Secretary of State: No requests have been received personally by the Cabinet Secretary for the release of documents assessing progress on the release of historic files under the Open Government Initiative. There have, however, been a number of requests since 1997 to the Cabinet Office openness contact.

Saville Inquiry

Mr. Blunt: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what costs have been incurred since 28 January by his Department in connection with the Saville Inquiry; and what his estimate is of the final cost to his Department. [46026]

The Deputy Prime Minister and First Secretary of State: Cabinet Office does not employ staff full-time on Bloody Sunday Inquiry work. Since 28 January a few staff have spent a small amount of time dealing with issues relating to the Inquiry, but they absorb this task into their normal duties, so staff time costs are not separately calculated. It is not possible to forecast the final cost to the Cabinet Office because of the uncertainties.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Departmental Publications

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many publications were issued by her Department between 8 June and 26 October. [11837]

Mr. Morley: Our records show that we issued 130 publications, excluded are any reprints of previously published items, posters, official forms and stationery. We have also recorded 33 consultation documents as posted on the DEFRA Website during the period. Publication activity, not centrally managed has not been included, as recovery of this information would be at a disproportionate cost.

Newspaper Advertising

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what has been the expenditure of her (a) Department, (b) agencies and (c) non-departmental public bodies on newspaper advertising by title for each year sine 1997. [26993]

Mr. Morley: Please find a list of the titles used for advertising DEFRA campaigns in national and regional printed media by DEFRA Communications Directorate as from 8 June 2001. The target audience and the information to be conveyed influences the choice of media used. The information for the period prior to 8 June 2001 for the merged bodies within DEFRA, as with the expenditure for the agencies and non-departmental public bodies is not held centrally and could only be supplied at disproportionate cost.

Departmental Expenditure (Publications)

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what her estimate is of the expenditure of her Department on newspaper, magazines and periodicals in each of the last four years. [30091]

Mr. Morley: DEFRA was created on 8 June 2001, the estimated centralised DEFRA expenditure for newspapers, magazines and periodicals via the libraries supporting the Department is £140,000 for the current financial year. Expenditure incurred outside the management of the libraries for this type of expenditure cannot be provided without incurring disproportionate cost.

Departmental Communications

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on the process used by her Department to issue circulars to farmers and growers; how often mailing lists are updated; and what system is in place to ensure that circulars are issued to farmers and growers in an enterprise-specific manner. [33376]

Mr. Morley: The print production, distribution and mailing of circulars to farmers and growers is provided by commercial firms appointed by DEFRA Communication Directorate. The Directorate is provided with mailing lists by relevant policy divisions. It is the responsibility of these divisions to establish and amend the material on such lists.

Fraud

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps she is taking to prevent fraudulent claims for agricultural subsidies; and if she will make a statement. [38823]

Margaret Beckett [holding answer 28 February 2002]: The Rural Payments Agency (RPA) takes rigorous action to prevent fraudulent claims by having in place stringent controls for each of the schemes that it administers. Control plans are set up using risk analysis techniques and are regularly reviewed. RPA Inspectorate carries out pre and post payments checks in accordance with the relevant Community regulations.

RPA Counter Fraud and Compliance Unit carries out an annual programme of scrutiny control audits in accordance with EC Regulation 4045/89 using a systematic approach in order to prevent and detect irregularities and fraud. The Unit's Investigation and Intelligence section makes enquiries into all referred allegations of suspected fraud and conducts a full investigation where appropriate.

Age Discrimination

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what her Department's policy is towards age discrimination. [42567]

Mr. Morley: Age has been integrated into the Department's equal opportunities policy, including a commitment that there should be no unfair discrimination on the basis of age. Departmental Diversity policies also make clear that all staff should be respected and valued.

Staff in administrative and support grades may continue working up to 65 (subject to continued efficiency) and short service concessions are available to those in other grades with less than 20 years' service at normal retirement age.

In line with the recommendation in the Policy and Innovation Unit report, "Winning the Generation Game", the Department is actively considering the case for allowing other staff the option of retirement at up to age 65.

Correspondence

Mr. Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she intends to reply to the letter to her dated 25 January from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton, with regard to Cait Cawley. [42797]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 12 March 2002]: I am sorry for the delay in replying. A response to my hon. Friend's letter was sent on 28 February 2002.

Pollution

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, pursuant to her reply of 5 March 2002, Official Report, column 220W, on pollution control; if she will list the key stakeholders referred to; how her Department uses the comments received from key stakeholders, since when these reports have been published, and if she will place in the Library copies of unpublished reports; if she will provide details of the process by which the reports are considered; if she will list the decisions made on what steps should be taken since these reports were first published; and what steps have been taken to reinforce to local authorities the importance of adopting such practice. [43481]

Mr. Meacher: The key Local Air Pollution Control stakeholders are the members of the Industrial Pollution Liaison Committee and the Industry Forum, which meet twice a year. The Committee and Forum comprise respectively, organisations representing local enforcing authority regulators and trade bodies representing regulated industries. A copy of the statistical report is also now sent to the Environmental Industries Commission, who I recently met to discuss Local Air pollution Control among other matters. Any comments made by these stakeholders are carefully considered.

Statistics have been produced from the annual LAPC statistical survey since it was first undertaken for the year 1991–92 and have from the outset been provided to members of the Committee and (from its establishment) the Forum. A copy of the statistics covering the period 1991–00 is being placed in the Library. The reports for 2000–01 is on the Department's website. In addition, "Local Air Pollution Control in England and Wales; Five Year Report 1991–96" was published in December 1996 and contained a statistical review. The reports are considered by officials and the key findings are reported to Ministers. The statistics have helped inform policy on LAPC throughout the lifetime of the regime.

Officials raised the importance of local authorities adopting cost accounting in discussion with the Local Government Association and, when the opportunity arose, in discussion with individual local authorities. The issue was discussed at the Industrial Pollution Liaison Committee.

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, pursuant to her answer of 5 March 2002, Official Report, column 219W, on local air pollution control, what guidance has been given to local authorities in each case; and if she will (a) provide a definition of low inspection record, (b) state on what date all local authorities were written to, provide details of to whom within each local authority these letters were addressed and place a copy of the standard letter in the Library, (c) provide details of responses to these letters and (d) state what outcomes she expects from the letter to chief executives. [43534]

Mr. Meacher: Guidance on inspection under the Local Air Pollution Control (LAPC) system was issued by the Department of the Environment in 1995 in additional guidance note reference (AQ4(95)). In 2000 local authorities were publicly listed which undertook an average of less than 0.5 inspections per process in a year. In 2001 the threshold was raised to one inspection. Letters were sent on 8 November 2001 to the chief environmental health officer of most of the relevant local authorities; a further four authorities were written to on 28 February 2002. I am placing a copy in the Library of the House. All except two of the local authorities written to on 8 November have responded with improvements they intend to make to their inspection performance. My Department is in contact with the remaining two authorities over their responses. I expect the letter to local authority chief executives to focus the minds of local authorities on the importance of carrying out sufficient process inspection in undertaking their LAPC regulatory functions.

Beef

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what representations she has received from the Scottish Executive concerning the French ban on UK beef since the Barcelona Summit. [45818]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 25 March 2002]: None. However, the Scottish Executive wrote to the Secretary of State on 13 March about remarks made by the new French Minister of Agriculture. The Secretary of State wrote to the French Minister and to the Commission on 15 March. The Commission wrote to the French Government on 20 March seeking observations on France's failure to comply with the ruling of the European Court of Justice (ECJ). This is the first state in a process which may lead to a further ECJ case against France.

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what measures she is taking to promote the export of beef and beef products. [43035]

Margaret Beckett [holding answer 14 March 2002]: The promotion of exports of beef and beef products is primarily the responsibility of the Meat and Livestock Commission (MLC), a non-Departmental Public Body sponsored by DEFRA. DEFRA's International Relations and Export Promotion division liaises closely with the MLC concerning the promotion of exports of British meat, livestock and genetics and the MLC is participating in a number of DEFRA's overseas trade fair stands, missions and other events this year. DEFRA chairs a Beef Exports Liaison Group which includes exporters and the MLC and which will be meeting on 16 April to discuss the best way of promoting beef exports once the trade resumes.

Bio-security

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what percentage of (a) food imports and (b) livestock imports were impounded or refused entry to the UK on the grounds of bio-security in each of the last five years. [43565]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 15 March 2002]: The information below relates to consignments of products of animal origin correctly presented at border inspection posts from non-EU countries but rejected because they did not fully meet import requirements. The reason for rejection is not recorded. Information on other imported food and products of animal origin from other EU member States is not held centrally.

Year	Percentage of imported food of animal origin rejected
1997	1.7% (790 rejected out of 45,842)
1998	2.0% (994 rejected out of 49,152)
1999	2.3% (1,004 rejected out of 42,900)
2000	2.8% (1,274 rejected out of 44,616)
January to November 2001	3.9% (1,690 rejected out of 43,597)

In addition, since April 2001, we have been advised of 1,183 seizures of illegally imported products of animal origin. We do not hold figures for the last five years.

The information below relates to imports of livestock into the UK from all EU and non-EU countries which were rejected or detained because they did not fully comply with the import requirements. The information includes birds and poultry but excludes fish and bees since statistics can only be obtained at disproportionate cost. The reason for rejection or detention is not recorded.

Year	Percentage of imported livestock rejected or detained
1997	0.02% (852 rejected/detained out of 4,289,874)
1998	0.002% (301 rejected/detained out of 15,340,000)
1999	0.0005% (234 rejected/detained out of 40,450,000)
2000	0.007% (534 rejected/detained out of 7,796,332)
2001	0.005% (374 rejected/detained out of 8,391,686)

All figures are provisional and subject to change.

Transitional Derogations

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, pursuant to her answer of 12 February 2002, Official Report, column 276W, on Poland, if she will list the transitional derogations relating to agriculture and fisheries upon which Malta and Poland are negotiating with the European Union. [44100]

Mr. Morley: In the fisheries and agriculture negotiations Malta and Poland have put forward a range of requests relating to issues such as access to their waters by other EU vessels, marketing specifications for agricultural products, and to food processing establishments. These are set out in negotiating documents submitted to the Intergovernmental Conference on enlargement. Detailed disclosure is at the discretion of the candidate country.

Negotiations on agriculture are continuing, but fisheries negotiations with all candidates except Malta and Poland have been provisionally concluded. Details of the requests provisionally agreed are available on the Commission's website: http://www.europa.eu.int/comm/enlargement/negotiations/chapters/index.htm.

Home Energy Efficiency Scheme

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment her Department has made of (a) the average effect on SAP ratings, (b) the average reduction in fuel bills and (c) the energy saving resulting from the measures taken to date of properties subject to the home energy efficiency scheme. [43571]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 18 March 2002]: Information from the scheme managers indicates that:

(a) average improvements in SAP ratings for properties receiving grants under the Scheme range from 12–18 points;

(b) information is not collected on actual reductions in fuel bills. The maximum potential saving is estimated to be in excess of £200 with estimated actual savings, taking account that some of the benefit will be taken in the form of increased thermal comfort, ranging between £110–155;

(c) the estimated CO_2 reduction per property is estimated to be between 1.47–1.89 tonnes/pa.

Hemswell Cliff

Mr. Leigh: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the total tonnage is that can be stored in the Hemswell Cliff Cold Stores; and what alternative storage facilities there are in the UK. [44625]

Mr. Morley: The refrigerated storage capacity of Hemswell Cliff Cold Store is 10,000 tonnes spread equally over two sheds. A Government owned cold storage facility at Locharbriggs near Dumfries, capable of holding 5,000 tonnes is also available to the Rural Payments Agency and further commercial storage can be acquired to supplement these facilities as necessary.

Mr. Leigh: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the annual cost is of providing the refrigerated storage at the Intervention Board facility at Hemswell Cliff. [44627]

Mr. Morley: Hemswell Cliff is one of two Government owned cold stores which are in the process of being sold. The store is currently in care and maintenance mode with average monthly costs of £2,400.

Annual running costs before decommissioning of the refrigeration plant would have been in the order of £260,000. If product was being stored there would also be receipt, handling and discharge fees payable which would vary according to commodity being stored.

Recycling

Dr. Pugh: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how the 2005–06 waste-recycling targets for local waste collection authorities set out in her Department's waste consultation document were arrived at. [44349]

Mr. Meacher: Waste Strategy 200 sets out a commitment to recycle or compost at least 25 per cent. of household waste by 2005. Under the national Public Service Agreement we committed to targets of 17 per cent. household waste recycling/composting by 2003–04 and 25 per cent. by 2005–06.

Taking a baseline of 1998–99 performances, targets for 2003–04 and 2005–06 were calculated for each waste collection and disposal authority in England. 2005–06 targets were calculated as follows:

authorities with 1998–99 rates of under 6 per cent. should achieve at least 18 per cent. by 2005–06; those with 1998–99 rates of between 6 per cent. and 12 per cent. should at least treble their recycling/composting rate by 2005–06; the remainder should recycle or compost at least 40 per cent. of household waste by 2005–06.

These standards were proposed in the consultation document "Best Value and Audit Commission Performance Indicators for 2001–02" and were implemented in the Best Value Order 2001. Performance standards for individual authorities are detailed in the "Guidance on Municipal Waste Management Strategies" published in March 2001.

Flood Relief

Mr Sayeed: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many and what type of waterborne craft were available to the Environment Agency for flood relief purposes in (a) 1998 and (b) 2000; and if she will make a statement. [44705]

Mr. Morley: The information requested is not held centrally by the Environment Agency and cannot be provided without incurring disproportionate costs. However, I understand the total number, by region, of waterborne craft currently operated by the Agency available for deployment in an emergency situation is as follows:

	Number
North East	70
Midlands	54
Southern	17
Thames	119
North West	22
Anglian	18
South West	49
EA Wales	50
Total	399

Additional craft are made available for use in an emergency by bodies such as the RNLI and the Maritime and Coastguard Agency.

Public Service Agreements

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs which public service agreement targets that are scheduled to be met in 2002 will not be achieved by the due date. [44837]

Mr. Morley: Information about progress on PSA targets will be published in the Department's 2002 Departmental Report.

Registered Fishing Vessels

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many registered fishing vessels there were in the United Kingdom in each of the last five years. [45211]

Mr. Morley: The available information is set out below:

The Registered UK Fishing Fleet: 1996 to 2009—United Kingdom (including Channel Islands and Isle of Man)

	Number	*GT 	Power (kW)
1996	8,667	271,875	1,054,927
1997	8,458	269,726	1,026,542
1998	8,271	268,803	1,006,071
1999	8,039	262,777	978,644
2000	7,818	260,333	980,636

RSS and UK Fisheries Department
GT * represents a measure of fleet tonnage, based on International Tonnage Convention 1969, to which the Community fishing fleet is being progressively remeasured. The process should be completed by end 2003. The series gives figures on a consistent basis over the period shown.

Livestock

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans the Government have to remove the 20 day restriction on the movement of cattle. [45445]

Mr. Morley: The interim rules for livestock movements, which we announced on 5 February, allow greater flexibility for farmers to move their animals. The 20 day standstill rule has been waived for some types of movement, subject to conditions and we will continue to keep these arrangements under review. However, veterinary advice is that the 20 day standstill needs to remain in place for the time being as a disease control measure. A copy of a document explaining the Veterinary basis for the Interim movement rules has been placed in the Library of the House and is available on the DEFRA website.

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans she has to review the import regulations pertaining to livestock; and if she will make a statement. [45839]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 25 March 2002]: Movements of farmed livestock within the European Community are subject to harmonised animal health rules which are implemented into national legislation.

These rules set down the animal health conditions that must be met before such animals can be certified for export and they provide for checks to be made on the animals at their premises of destination. The Commission's Standing Committee on the Food Chain and Animal Health keeps the rules under constant review and introduces safeguard measures as necessary to address animal health problems across the Community. Imports into Great Britain of animals susceptible to foot and mouth disease resumed in November 2001 and since then we have been carrying out 100 per cent. post import checks on all such consignments.

Imports of livestock from non-EU countries are also covered by EU rules. Imports are prohibited from countries where there is a known animal health risk. Imports from approved countries must enter the Community via an approved border inspection post where the consignments are subjected to physical, identity and documentary checks.

Parrett Catchment Project

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what salary is paid to the Chairman of the Parrett catchment project; and what his total package is. [45275]

Mr. Morley: I understand that the Steering Group for the Parrett Catchment Project agreed that the Chairman should receive payment up to £3,000 per annum from project funds. The major contributors are Somerset County Council and the Environment Agency.

Hunting with Dogs

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make it her policy to consult Lord Burns over interpretation of his report on hunting with dogs before drafting legislation on the subject, with particular reference to the issues of cruelty and utility. [46360]

Alun Michael: I have emphasised the importance of the Burns Report and met Lord Burns to discuss his report after taking up my present responsibilities. I shall welcome comments from all those who have constructive comments to make following my statement on 21 March.

Farm Tenancies

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the availability of farm tenancies for young farmers; and what plans she has to facilitate more opportunities for new entrants to farming. [45314]

Mr. Morley: A policy evaluation review of the Agricultural Tenancies Act 1995 is currently being carried out by the University of Plymouth. This includes an assessment of the impact the Act has had on the availability of tenancies to new entrants. The Policy Commission on Food and Farming has also made a number of recommendations which are intended to make farming more attractive and accessible to new entrants.

The University of Plymouth review is nearing completion and the final report is expected shortly. We will be considering the recommendations made by the research team in detail over the coming months and at the same time will consider the Policy Commission recommendations on tenancy and new entrant issues.

Incineration

Dr. Pugh: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs with reference to the Government's Waste Strategy 2000 documents, how many tonnes of incineration capacity he estimates will be needed by (a) 2005–06, (b) 2010 and (c) 2015; and on what assumptions these figures are based. [44307]

Mr. Meacher: The Government's strategy, as set out in Waste Strategy 2000, is based on minimising the production of waste and maximising the levels of re-use, recycling and composting of the waste that is produced.

The Regulatory Impact Assessment in Annex C of Part 2 of Waste Strategy 2000 (Cm 4693–2) outlines a wide variety of different waste management scenarios. Variables include different mixes of waste management facilities, different levels of participation in kerbside recycling schemes, and different projections for the increase in municipal waste arisings. There are therefore no single estimates for the level of incineration in these years.

UN Millennium Declaration

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps her Department (a) has taken and (b) plans to take to meet the commitments of the United Nations Millennium Declaration. [44351]

Clare Short: I have been asked to reply. The Millennium Declaration endorsed the Millennium Development Goals, a set of 2015 targets for poverty reduction. We worked hard to get UN agreement to these goals and all of the work of my Department is aimed at reaching these Goals. The Millennium Declaration also called on industrialised countries to reduce trade barriers for least developed countries, debt relief for heavily indebted poor countries, and increased development assistance, particularly for countries with large numbers of people in poverty and effective pro-poor policies.

My Department has also worked hard with others in the Government to achieve agreement at Doha to a trade round which creates significant opportunities for developing countries and poor people. The Heavily Indebted Poor Countries Initiative has led to over $50 billion in debt relief being granted to qualifying countries. This Government has increased UK Official Development Assistance by a third in real terms since 1997. We are committed to making substantial further progress towards the UN 0.7 per cent. target in the next spending round. At the UN conference on Financing for Development in Mexico last week, the European Union announced a commitment to increase average Official Development Assistance as a proportion of gross national income to 0.39 per cent. by 2006, an increase of $7 billion.

My Department will continue to focus its efforts on achieving the Goals set out in the Millennium Declaration. Details of how we have contributed during 2001-02 to achieving the Millennium Development Goals will be published next month in our Departmental Report.

Waste Minimisation and Recycling Fund

Mr. Michael Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how she intends to distribute the waste minimisation and recycling fund. [47162]

Mr. Meacher: Following the recent consultation, we shall very shortly announce how we intend to distribute the Fund. Guidance will be sent to all local authorities and will be available on the DEFRA website. Copies of the guidance and results of the consultation will be placed in the Library of the House.

Scientific and Regulatory Agencies

Dr. Stoate: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans she has to conduct a review of her Department's scientific and regulatory agencies. [47164]

Margaret Beckett: I am today announcing a Review of the three science laboratories; the Veterinary Laboratories Agency (VLA), the Central Science Laboratory (CSL) and the Centre for Environment, Fisheries and Aquaculture Research (CEFAS); and the two regulatory agencies, the Pesticides Safety Directorate (PSD) and the Veterinary Medicines Agency (VMD).

The Review will be conducted by a team attached to DEFRA's Corporate and Service Delivery Directorate General, working in consultation with other Government Departments with an interest. The Review Team will be advised by a Steering Group of a majority of non-Departmental members.

The terms of reference for the Review are:

"To evaluate the effectiveness of the operation of DEFRA agencies, with regard to the Departmental aim and objectives and their relationship with the Department and the sectors they serve."

The Review is to be conducted in two parallel processes:

for those Executive Agencies due for quinquennial review in 2002 (VLA, CSL, CEFAS): to conduct an evaluation of their performance since the date of the last review and to examine their relationship with core-DEFRA, other Government Departments (OGDs) and the Devolved Administrations (DAs); for the regulatory Executive Agencies (PSD and VMD): to take into account the conclusions of, and developments since the completion of their Quinquennial Reviews.

In so doing, the Review will:

analyse the requirements of Government, industry and society for core science facilities and key skills for the provision of R&D, scientific support services, surveillance, policy and regulatory functions, advice and emergency response capability; analyse and identify the work required to support the core requirements; examine the likely trend of DEFRA and other public funders' requirements, including developments in horizon scanning and contingency planning;

consider the possible options and evaluate the best models for delivery of the services and the organisation of the functions required, including policy advice and associated work;

assess the implications for DEFRA, OGDs, the DAs and the Agencies about the choice of those models; assess the implications for non-core activities; and assess the implications for commercial activity.

The Review Team will consult customers, stakeholders, scientific opinion and other interests and will take into account relevant reviews and studies, in particular the SR2002 Science and Research cross-cutting review and DEFRA's prioritisation of science programmes exercise; the work on the development of science in DEFRA, including a new Science and Innovation Strategy; and the Cabinet Office Review of Agency Policy.

In light of the findings of the consultation exercise, the Review will examine the most appropriate freedoms, controls, financial regimes, governance arrangements and performance management to ensure the optimum delivery of a high quality service, providing good value for money.

The Review Team will report with recommendations to Ministers through the Management Board by the end of October 2002.

Interested parties are invited to submit their views to the Review Team by 30 May 2002. Details of how to contact them are contained in DEFRA's news release, issued today.

Air Pollution Control

Mr. Salter: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on the 2002–03 charging schemes for local air pollution control under Part I of the Environmental Protection Act 1990 and Local Authority Integrated Pollution Prevention and Control under the Pollution Prevention and Control Act 1999. [47165]

Mr. Meacher: Charges to cover the costs of local enforcing authorities in regulating processes which are subject to Part I of the Environmental Protection Act 1990 were introduced in April 1991. Interim charges for processes which are subject to the Pollution Prevention and Control Act 1999 were introduced in August 2000.

With the approval of the Treasury, and following consultation with local authority associations and industry, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs has made revised schemes for England in respect of Environmental Protection Act and England and Wales in respect of the Pollution Prevention and Control Act. The schemes specify the scale of fees and charges to take effect from 1 April 2002.

The fees and charges in both schemes have been increased by 1.8 per cent., broadly in line with inflation. However, my Department is writing to local authorities to advise them that if there is not much more widespread adoption of cost accounting practices for LAPC over the next six months this increase may be rescinded at the next review of the charging schemes later this year.

The schemes will be laid before both Houses and copies placed in the Libraries.

Policy Commission Report

Mr. Cawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when the Government will respond to the Policy Commission's report. [47166]

Margaret Beckett: The Prime Minister and the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs today held a seminar with leaders of the farming and food sectors and others with an interest in the environment and the rural economy and identified early actions to drive forward the Commission's report. A new strategy for sustainable farming and food, incorporating a definitive response to the Policy Commission's report will be published in the autumn. Actions to develop and deliver the strategy have been announced, including the publication today of Sustainable Food and Farming—Working Together: a document intended to focus discussion on key issues.

Copies of the document are available from the Libraries of the House. Details of the announcement and the document are also available in electronic form from the DEFRA website, www.defra.gov.uk.

Dangerous Substance Rules

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs for what reason the dangerous substance rules were not updated by June 2001; and when she plans to update them. [40648]

Dr. Whitehead: I have been asked to reply.

Implementation in Great Britain of Commission Directive 2000/21/EC was through amendments to two existing regulations [Notification of New Substances Regs. and Chemicals (Hazards and Information Packaging for Supply Regs.]. The total package of amendments was completed by the implementation date of 13 April 2001.

A similar approach was taken in Northern Ireland where the package of amendments to regulations came into operation on 16 January 2002.

Rural Affairs

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the total cost is of the "Your countryside, You're welcome" (a) launch and (b) campaign. [43082]

Alun Micheal: [pursuant to his reply, 20 March 2002, c. 380]: In my reply to hon. Member on 20 March, I said that the cost of the PR activity to support "Your countryside, Your welcome" was £209,000. I have now received information about other public funds which supported the campaign.

In addition to the £209,000 spent directly by DEFRA referred to in my previous answer, the Countryside Agency has paid £371,000 for regional advertising, and £10,000 towards the development of www.yourcountryside.info—the website for "Your countryside, You're welcome" campaign. The English Tourism Council also spent £8,500 on consumer research and £18,000 on a special publication of "Hidden England". These figures do not include in-house staff costs, nor do they include any expenditure by the over 100 non-governmental organisations involved in the campaign. I am sorry that my original answer referred only to direct expenditure by DEFRA itself.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Census (1901)

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many transactions per second the Internet service provider responsible for the 1901 Census on-line service could provide at the time the service was suspended; and how many transactions per second it will be possible to provide once the programme of enhancements has been completed. [38538]

Ms Rosie Winterton: QinetiQ Ltd, who are responsible for the delivery of the system and service, designed and supplied a system which was to support 18,912,000 static page impressions and 4,800,000 dynamic page impressions for a peak of 1.2 million users per day. This equates to an average of approximately 274 page impressions per second. When the system is again available it is intended that it will be able to provide at least these levels of performance and be considerably more robust. Testing of the updated design and configuration is still continuing to confirm this, before the service is resumed.

Correspondence

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what targets his Department and the agencies it sponsors have for responding to correspondence (a) from hon. Members and (b) from members of the public; and what his Department's performance against such targets has been for each of the last 36 months in both categories. [31006]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Ministers at the Lord Chancellor's Department aim to respond to correspondence from hon. Members within 20 working days. Chief Executives of the Public Record Office and the Land Registry also aim to reply to hon. Members within 20 working days, whilst the Chief Executives of the Public Guardianship Office and the Court Service aim to do so within 15 working days. Statistics for correspondence with hon. Members for the Department and each agency for each of the last 36 months is not readily available and could only be provided at disproportionate cost, but statistics for each of the last three years are as follows:

Percentage of correspondence from MPs answered within target

Per cent.

	1998–99	1999–2000	2000–01	1 April 2001 to 31 December 2001
LCD Headquarters	88	76	73	75
Land Registry[1]	100	91	93	79
Public Trust Office[2]	99	83	78	—
Public Guardianship Office[2]	—	—	—	52
Public Record Office	100	100	96	100
Court Service HQ	99	93	94	94

[1] Figures for the Land Registry are for the calendar years 1998, 1999 and 2000.

[2] The Public Guardianship Office was created on 1 April 2001 when the Public Trust Office ceased to exist.

fbatistics for correspondence with members of the public for the Department and its agencies for each of the last 36 months is not readily available and could only be provided at disproportionate cost, but figures are available for each of the last three financial years, and I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given by the Parliamentary Secretary at the Cabinet Office (column 453W) on 19 July 2001 for figures relating to Lord Chancellor's Department Headquarters, Court Service Headquarters and the Land Registry. Figures for the Public Trust Office, and since 1 April 2001 its successor the Public Guardianship Office, and the Public Record Office are set out in the following table.nb

Percentage of correspondence from members of the public answered within target

Per cent.

	Target	1998–99	1999–2000	2000–01	2001 to 31 December 2001
Public Record Office	10	99	99	100	99
Public Trust Office	[1]—	96	92	89	—
Public Guardianship Office	[2]—	—	—	—	(c) 91.9 (d) 94.8

[1] The standard for dealing with correspondence in the Public Trust Office was to respond to all letters within 10 working days, or to acknowledge letters within three working days and respond fully within 20 working days.

[2] The standard for dealing with correspondence in the Public Guardianship Office is to: (a) respond to 85 per cent. of letters, faxes and e-mails within 15 working days of receipt; and (b) to respond to 95 per cent. of letters, faxes and e-mails within 20 working days of receipt.

Judiciary (Solicitors)

Mr. Cameron: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department (1) how many acting members of the judiciary have been the subject of complaints for their work as solicitors in the last 12 months; and if he will make a statement; [44606]

(2) what powers he has to investigate the conduct of members of the judiciary when they are practising as solicitors. [44425]

Mr. Wills: As Head of the Judiciary, the Lord Chancellor investigates complaints about the personal conduct of both full-time and part-time judicial office holders. He does not, however, investigate complaints against solicitors who are part-time Judges when the complaints relate to their work as solicitors, as this is a matter for the Office for the Supervision of Solicitors and ultimately for the Law Society. The Lord Chancellor has no disciplinary powers in relation to solicitors. If a solicitor who is a part-time judicial office holder is subject to such a complaint, he or she is required to inform the Lord Chancellor's Department of the outcome. The Department is aware of four such complaints in the past 12 months.

Data Protection Act

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if his Department plans to amend the Data Protection Act 1998; and if he will make a statement. [45216]

Mr. Wills: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply that I gave to a similar Question from him on 19 March.

Child Abuse Cases

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department (1) how many cases of child abuse by parents or guardians allowed unsupervised access by the Family Law Court there have been in each of the last five years; what guidelines are in place for judges to deal with such cases; and if he will make a statement; [45434]

(2) what plans there are to review the guidelines given to the Family Law Court in dealing with access cases for children deemed to be at risk of abuse; and if he will make a statement. [45435]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Information about the number of children abused by parents or guardians during court ordered contact is not available. The Ministerial Group on Domestic Violence is considering how to improve the inter-face between the family and criminal jurisdictions to track and record such instances. However, many instances of abuse may go unreported. The "Guidelines on Good Practice in Parental Contact in cases where there has been Domestic Violence", produced by the Children Act Sub-Committee of the Lord Chancellor's Advisory Board on Family Law, apply throughout the Family Justice System. The Guidelines, endorsed by the Government in March 2001, are being monitored and are also subject to research on the outcome of court orders for families.

An analysis of the first survey of the use and effectiveness of the Children Act Sub-Committee "Guidelines for Good Practice on Parental Contact in cases where there has been Domestic Violence" was, in answer to a question from the hon. Member for Enfield North, placed in the Libraries of both Houses on 13 March 2002. A further survey on the operation of the Guidelines will be carried out this May.

Child Killings

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many children have been killed after the Family Law Court granted unsupervised access to the parent or guardian in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [46437]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Information about the number of child deaths during contact visits, where an application for contact or residence is outstanding, or where a residence or contact order is in force, is not available. The Ministerial Group on Domestic Violence is considering how to improve the inter-face between the family and criminal jurisdictions to track and record such instances. I have given an undertaking to the Women's Aid Federation of England to investigate cases in which they allege a child has been harmed during court ordered contact.

CAFCASS

Simon Hughes: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many senior responsible owners there have been in charge of the CAFCASS Support Infrastructure Project since the preparation of the Project Initiation Document; who had this responsibility between July 2001 and January 2002; and if he will make a statement. [46010]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Support Infrastructure Project had three Senior Responsible Officers until the project was put on hold in July 2001.

CAFCASS is currently reviewing its IT strategy to assess its immediate and longer term needs.

Land Registry

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what key performance targets have been set for Her Majesty's Land Registry executive agency for 2002–03. [46793]

Mr. Wills: The following table sets out the key performance targets set by the Lord Chancellor for Her Majesty's Land Registry for 2002–03.

Key Performance Indicators and Targets 2002–03

Indicator	Target 2002–03
Speed
Percentage of office copies and official search applications to be processed within two working days	98
Percentage of registrations to be processed within 20 working days	75
Accuracy
Percentage of registrations processed free of any error	98.5
Overall Satisfaction
Percentage of customers who, overall, are very satisfied/satisfied with the full range of services provided by the Land Registry	Better than 94
Financial
Percentage return on average capital employed	6
Efficiency[1]
Cost per unit in cash terms[2] (real terms[3])	£29.53 (£23.10)
Strategic
Percentage electronic delivery capability of the Land Registry's key services	60
Percentage take up of electronic services	50
Critical Action Points
Draft Rules under the Land Registration Act 2002 ready for consultation	By July 2002
Carry out a major public consultation on the possible system for e-conveyancing and prepare a final report for ministers	By February 2003

[1] This is a milestone towards the HM Treasury-agreed cost per unit target for 2004–05 of £28.78 in cash terms (£21.43 in real terms).
[2] Based on GDP deflator issued by HM Treasury on 20 December 2001 (base year 1992–93).
[3] The real term unit cost in the base year of 1992–93 was £30.65.

Further details of HM Land Registry's targets are published in its Business Plan.

Public Record Office

Mrs. Humble: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what key performance targets have been set for the Public Record Office executive agency for 2002–03. [47157]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The following list sets out the key performance targets that have been set for the Public Record Office for 2002–03.

Public Record Office

Key Performance Indicators 2002–03[1]

Efficiency

KPI 1—Unit Costs of Key Activities

KPI 1A—Selecting and preserving the public records per metre: To ensure that the unit cost does not rise above £107.00.

KPI 1B—Giving Access Onsite: To ensure that the unit cost per information transaction with customers onsite does not exceed £8.80.

KPI 1C—Giving Access Online: To ensure that the unit cost per information transaction with customers online does not exceed £0.15.

KPI 2—Backlog of records in departments reported as being over 30 years old and awaiting review: To reduce the backlog, assessed in January 2002 as 1987 metres, by 115 metres.

Quality of service

KPI 3—The achievement of Charter Standards as follows:

A (i) to make newly opened records and their catalogues available to users in accordance with specified time targets.

(ii) To answer 98.5 per cent. of written correspondence within 10 working days.

(iii) To deliver records to users for consultation in the reading rooms in accordance with specified time targets.

(iv) To supply 98.5 per cent. of copy orders in accordance with the specified targets and standards.

(v) To answer 80 per cent. of telephone calls within 20 seconds.

(vi) To keep 98.5 per cent. of appointments which visitors have made with us within 10 minutes.

B To carry out four onsite satisfaction surveys and to achieve assessments of "good" or "excellent" from 90 per cent. of those expressing a view; to carry out two online satisfaction surveys and to achieve assessments of "good" or "excellent" from 80 per cent. of those expressing a view.

Income generation

KPI 4—To increase revenue generated by commercial activity to £850,000.

Modernising Government

KPI 5—Electronic Records Management:

To support other government departments in achieving the government target for electronic records management by 2004 by:

(i) monitoring progress in departments against milestones and reporting to the Lord Chancellor, the e-Government sub-group and departments every six months and to others as appropriate to the level of action required;

(ii) targeting under-achieving departments and developing action plans to accelerate progress;

(iii) delivering a programme of workshops to support the action plans.

KPI 6—Electronic Service Delivery:

To develop digital access to popular records so that 20,000 digital record images are delivered to customers.

KPI 7—To raise an awareness of the PRO's holdings among under-represented groups in our user profile by means of a rigorous social inclusion programme, the chief components of which are:

(i) To make available 90,000 images online as part of the "Moving Here" project.

(ii) To conduct an evaluation exercise with users (remote, at Kew and at the FRC) of the usability of PROCAT, DORIS and PRO Online.

(iii) To organise an event as part of Black History month and to produce one other targeted event.

(iv) To organise an educational focus event as part of the London String of Pearls Golden Jubilee programme.

[1] More information on these and other key targets is published in the Corporate and Business Plans.

Law Commission

Mr. Borrow: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department when the Law Commission intends to publish its 36th annual report. [46794]

Mr. Wills: The Law Commission has today published its thirty-sixth Annual Report, and copies have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Personal Injury Awards

Chris McCafferty: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department when his Department will publish the impact analysis of the discount rate change for personal injury awards from 3 per cent. and 2.5 per cent. [47158]

Mr. Wills: The Lord Chancellor has today placed in the Libraries of both Houses the analysis of the impact of the discount rate change.

Parliamentary Boundary Reviews

David Wright: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many parliamentary boundary reviews have been undertaken in Shropshire since 1972. [45134]

Dr. Whitehead: I have been asked to reply.

Three reviews have been undertaken by the Boundary Commission for England since 1972.

The third periodic review of all constituencies in England commenced in February 1976 and was completed in February 1983.

An interim review, commenced in December 1986 and completed April 1987 considered the boundaries of Ludlow County Constituency, Shrewsbury and Atcham County Constituency, and The Wrekin Borough Constituency.

The fourth review of all constituencies in England commenced in February 1991 and was completed in April 1995.

DEFENCE

Army Base Repair Organisations

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the future of the Army Base Repair Organisation. [46925]

Mr. Ingram: Following approval by this House and the enactment of the requisite Statutory Instrument, ABRO will become a Trading Fund from 1 April 2002.

This marks a significant stage in the development of ABRO as a flexible organisation able to respond rapidly to the demands placed upon it and equipped to shape its own future in both the defence community and the commercial arenas.

Operating as a Trading Fund gives the Chief Executive additional financial and management freedoms to manage ABRO along commercial lines.

The current Chief Executive, Mr. Michael Hayle, will continue to fill that position after conversion.

Chemical Protection Programme

Jim Dobbin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will publish the information submitted to the Organisation for the Prohibition of Chemical Weapons about the UK's chemical protection programme. [46936]

Mr. Ingram: Under the terms of the Chemical Weapons Convention (CWC) we are required to provide information annually to the Organisation for the Prohibition of Chemical Weapons on the UK's chemical protection programme. The programme is designed to protect against the use of chemical weapons and is permitted by the CWC, with which the UK is fully compliant. In accordance with the Government's commitment to openness, I am placing in the Library of the House a copy of the summary that has been provided to the Organisation outlining the UK's chemical protection programme for 2002.

Analytical Services Agency

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what performance targets have been set for the Defence Analytical Services Agency for 2002–03.[46937]

Mr. Ingram: Key Targets have been set for the Chief Executive of the Defence Analytical Services Agency for Financial Year 2002–03. The targets build on the progress already made by the Agency since it formed in 1992 and are as follows:

Delivery of customer service:

Key Target 1. To meet at least 95 per cent. of the timeliness and quality targets in customer Service Level and Project Agreements, and for National Statistics releases.

Key Target 2. To have at least 90 per cent. of customers saying, in the annual Customer Satisfaction Survey, that they are satisfied with the overall service they receive from DASA.

Quality

Key Target 3. To implement the presentational developments identified in the 2001–02 review of United Kingdom Defence Statistics, and to develop a longer-term strategy for the publication of United Kingdom defence statistics.

Key Target 4. To comply with the National Statistics Protocol on Release Practices by 31 March 2003.

Key Target 5. To conduct a National Statistics quality review of DASA's financial and economic statistics, and recommend improvements in their quality and scope.

People

Key Target 6. To be accredited as achieving the DTI-sponsored Work-Life Balance Standard.

Efficiency

Key Target 7. To make efficiency gains of 3 per cent.

Environmental Sustainability

Mr. Watts: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to publish his Department's approach to environmental sustainability. [46938]

Dr. Moonie: The Ministry of Defence is constantly striving to meet and maintain the highest standards, both for the environment and the wider challenges of sustainable development. To this end we are launching an "Appraisal Handbook for Sustainability and the Environment" on 26 March 2002. Copies will be placed in the Library of the House.

The handbook is an easy-to-follow guide on how to conduct an effective environmental and sustainability screening exercise in applying the Government's policy of sustainable development. It will help MOD planners identify the potential environmental, social and economic impact of proposed programmes, plans or projects.

Investment Approvals Board

Ms Shipley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the role of his Department's Investment Approvals Board. [46939]

Mr. Hoon: The Investment Approvals Board (IAB) will have a broadly similar role to that of the Equipment Approvals Committee (EAC), which it will replace on 2 April. Its membership will consist of the Chief Scientific Advisor (Chair), the Vice Chief of Defence Staff, the Second Permanent Under Secretary of State, the Chief of Defence Procurement and the Chief of Defence Logistics. The IAB, like the EAC, will advise Ministers on major equipment and other investment projects. It will also have responsibility for the scrutiny and approvals processes for investment decisions on all non-equipment investment projects as well as equipment projects, including those considered by delegated approving authorities. It will be a major part of the IAB's task to ensure that proposals for Defence investment are soundly based and deliverable through robust project management and Smart Acquisition processes. There are no changes to the existing arrangements under which Ministers take and announce decisions on major projects.

Missile Defence Systems

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what financial provision has been made in (a) each of the last five years and (b) future years for investigating the possibility of deploying missile defence systems. [38953]

Mr. Hoon: It remains the case that we believe it is as yet premature to decide on acquiring ballistic missile defences to deploy either for defence of the UK or of deployed forces. But we have carried out a range of studies focused on assessing the threat and the feasibility of the technology available to counter it, and continue to do so. A Pre-Feasibility Study was completed in June 1996, and an extension to it was carried out during 1997 and 1998 at a cost of £300K. The Technology Readiness and Risk Assessment Programme (TRRAP) was carried out between 1998 and 2001 at a total cost of £12.5 million. A further programme of work beyond TRRAP to look further at the main technical risk areas it identified, and at the feasibility of defending against more complex and longer range threats, is underway. Studies are also assessing the significance of any capability gap in defence against theatre ballistic missiles, including the role that active theatre missile defence systems might play. The total cost of the current work in this financial year is £3.6 million. This work is due to continue until March 2003 with a similar level of financial provision.

Energy Costs

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on energy costs incurred by his Department in each of the last 10 years. [42443]

Dr. Moonie: The Ministry of Defence units report their energy consumption, not the cost of their energy usage. Therefore, the information requested is not held centrally and could only be provided at disproportionate cost.

Non-proliferation Treaty

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what progress has been made towards implementing the 13 point programme agreed upon at the Non-Proliferation Treaty Review Conference in 2000; and if he will make a statement. [44651]

Mr. Hoon: The United Kingdom regards the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty as the cornerstone of the non-proliferation regime. We remain firmly committed to the Treaty and also to the Final Document agreed at the Non Proliferation Treaty Review Conference in 2000. We are recognised as the most forward-leaning of the Nuclear Weapon States.

This Government has taken a large number of actions to promote nuclear disarmament and non-proliferation. Since 1997, we have reduced our operationally available stockpile to fewer than 200 warheads. We have reduced the readiness of our nuclear forces with only a single Trident submarine on deterrent patrol, carrying 48 warheads against a previously planned ceiling of 96 warheads per submarine. We have signed and ratified the Comprehensive Nuclear Test Ban Treaty and continue to promote its entry into force, and we are still pressing for negotiations to begin at the Conference on Disarmament in Geneva of a Fissile Material Cut-Off Treaty.

In addition to the measures set out above, we have signed and ratified the relevant protocols to both the Treaty of Raratonga (South Pacific Nuclear Weapon-Free Zone) and the treaty of Pelindaba (African Nuclear Weapon-Free Zone). We have placed fissile material no longer required for defence purposes under international safeguards, have been more transparent about nuclear and fissile material stockpiles and begun a national accounting for fissile material produced. We have also begun a programme to develop UK expertise in verifying the reduction and elimination of nuclear weapons internationally.

Human Rights Act

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many cases have been brought against his Department under the Human Rights Act 1998; and what has been the cost in (a) legal fees to defend cases and (b) compensation payments. [45065]

Mr. Ingram: We do not collect central records of all cases in which the Human Rights Act 1998 is relied on. Human rights are now integrated in the general law and are rarely the sole basis for a challenge. We do monitor centrally those cases we consider may be of particular significance to this Department. We have recorded five cases to date.

We do not collect separate information centrally about the cost to public funds, legal fees or compensation payments in case which include a human rights issue. In most cases it will be difficult to single out associated costs relating to the human rights element.

PFI/PPPs

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list (1) the (a) private finance initiative and (b) public private partnership projects which have been delayed; [44873]

(2) what the difference was between the price offered in reaching preferred bidder stage and the final contract price for PPP contracts let by his Department in each of the last four years; and if he will make a statement. [45604]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 25 March 2002]: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what companies are involved in PFI housing projects; how much funding these companies have given so far to his Department's housing projects; who manages PFI housing; how much funding has been given by his Department; and if he will make a statement. [45092]

Dr. Moonie: The Defence Housing Executive (DHE) has contracted with six companies to provide new housing, under public private partnership arrangements. They are:

Covesea

Western Challenge Housing Association

Riverside Housing Association

Bannockburn Homes

Roselead Ltd

TRICOMM Housing Ltd.

Expenditure by the companies concerned is a matter for them. The Ministry of Defence pays them a unitary charge when the housing service contracted for is available. In total payments of £23 million have been made to the end of February 2002. The contractor is responsible for house design, construction, maintenance and life cycle upgrading. DHE is responsible for allocation and occupation management.

Apache

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment has been made of the need for air manoeuvre training for the WAH-64 Longbow Apache programme; and if he will make a statement. [44961]

Dr. Moonie: The requirement for Attack Helicopter units to train within an air manoeuvre environment was identified at an early stage in the Apache programme and a contract to purchase a Collective Training System was placed in late 2000.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what steps are being taken to deal with the capability gaps in the air manoeuvre of the WAH-64 Longbow Apache programme; and if he will make a statement. [44962]

Dr. Moonie: The WAH-64 Longbow Apache programme is a fundamental element of the evolving air manoeuvre capability. It represents a quantum leap in capability, in range of equipment and complexity of the weapon systems. To ensure that Apache contributes fully to air manoeuvre, the capability of this formidable weapon is kept under continuous review. Changes to the programme are recommended should any capability gaps be identified.

Computer Hackers

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what steps are being taken to prevent computer hackers gaining access to the Defence System through the shared working environment used with Future Offensive Air System staff; and if he will make a statement; [44965]

(2) what assessment has been made of the shortcomings of using the shared working environment for Future Offensive Air System staff; and if he will make a statement. [44966]

Dr. Moonie: The Future Offensive Air System Shared Working Environment enables the Ministry of Defence and industry to work more effectively together in line with the principles of Smart Acquisition. The system incorporates proven security technology that has been extensively tested, and has the necessary security accreditation for the data held. This accreditation included an assessment of the risks from computer hackers. Although the system connects MOD and industry users, security mechanisms prevent unauthorised access from the Shared Working Environment to other defence information systems.

MoD Housing

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much money has been spent on (a) building new MoD housing, (b) demolishing MoD housing, (c) rebuilding MoD housing and (d) PFI housing projects year by year since 1997; and if he will make a statement. [44969]

Dr. Moonie: The following tables give details of the amount spent by the Defence Housing Executive by project type and year:

Building new Ministry of Defence housing (adding to the existing stock)

Financial year	£ million
1996–97	Nil
1997–98	8.285
1998–99	6.398
1999–2000	4.123
2000–01	0.239
2001–02	0.540

Demolishing MoD housing (clearing sites and reducing stock)

Financial year	£ million
1996–97	Nil
1997–98	1.509
1998–99	Nil
1999–2000	Nil
2000–01	0.017
2001–02	0.081

Rebuilding MoD housing (demolition/rebuild)

Financial year	£ million
1996–97	2.244
1997–98	1.271
1998–99	1.369
1999–2000	11.960
2000–01	19.146
2001–02	24.166

Insufficient information is available to separate demolition costs from upgrade costs on demolition/rebuild projects.

Public private partnership housing projects

Financial year	£ million
1996–97	Nil
1997–98	Nil
1998–99	Nil
1999–2000	2.7
2000–01	9.7
2001–02	10.6
	(to end Feb. 2002)

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many service personnel and their families were housed in private sector accommodation in each year between 1992 and 1997; and if he will make a statement. [45440]

Dr. Moonie: The information is not available. Prior to 1997 Service personnel who were required to live in private sector accommodation made their own arrangements and were paid an Excess Rent Allowance (ERA). No records are held of the numbers of Service personnel who were in receipt of ERA.

Shoeburyness

Mr. Ivan Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many of the complaints relating to alleged damage as a result of the activities at the Shoeburyness ranges have been substantiated. [45115]

Dr. Moonie: I will write to my hon. Friend and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Ivan Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what has been the total cost of the payments made in each of the five years to householders in the Tendring Peninsula relating to alleged damage to their properties as a result of the activities at the Shoeburyness ranges. [45114]

Dr. Moonie: The total cost of payments made to householders in the Tendering peninsula area in each of the last five years is listed in the following table. The figure for 2001 includes payments up to September 2001, the latest period for which information is currently available. When I have information for the remainder of 2001 I will write to my hon. Friend.

Year	Amount £
2001 (to September)	1,870.00
2000	2,930.08
1999	2,881.32
1998	12,290.73
1997	3,338.00

Munitions Exports

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of whether the export of munitions from the USA to the United Kingdom will be subject to the 2001 Security Assistance Act going through the US Congress. [45102]

Dr. Moonie: The contents of United States legislation are of course a matter for the United States Government. However, I understand that the primary purpose of the draft legislation is not the control of exports; in that respect it does not, in its current form, change the contents or the scope of the US Munitions List, though it does refer to it. It includes some policy recommendations relating to the administration of the United States' export control process but is more concerned with the funding of the United State security assistance programmes with various countries, including non-proliferation work.

FYR Macedonia

Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what military aid is being given by the UK Government to the FYR Macedonia; and what plans his Department has to give military aid to the FYR Macedonia in the next six months. [45243]

Mr. Ingram: A small number of British military strategic planners are providing advice to the Macedonian Ministry of Defence. These planners are led by a United Kingdom Defence Adviser to the Macedonian government, whose role is to advise on Macedonia's NATO Membership Action Plan and on improvements in the Macedonian government's ability to carry out defence planning. The UK provides similar Defence Advisors to the Ministry of Defences of other NATO aspirant nations.

We have a well-established outreach programme of bilateral defence assistance with Macedonia, designed to help establish democratically accountable, cost-effective armed forces that are capable of contributing to national, regional and international security. The programme includes English language training in the UK and at the Military Academy in Skopje; multi-national seminars and courses; arms control training; and assistance with personnel and budgeting matters.

Recently a British Military Advisory and Training Team provided advice on how to conduct low-level counter-insurgency training for the Macedonian Rapid Reaction Brigade, so as to meet Western standards for such training. We expect this programme to continue over the next months and will investigate what military assistance we can best provide for the Macedonian for the longer term.

During 2001 the UK donated a range of non-lethal military equipment to the Macedonian Government. The equipment gifted was body armour, mine detectors, global positioning system devices, a remote control bomb disposal vehicle, and parachute flares.

RAF Lyneham

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when contracts will be issued for the construction of (a) the new gym and (b) the community centre on the NAAFI site at RAF Lyneham. [45458]

Dr. Moonie [holding answer 25 March 2002]: The construction of the Physical Training and Recreation Centre and the Community Centre has been postponed pending the outcome of the Strategic Review. The study will report in the summer and I will be in a position to answer this more fully at that time.

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what infrastructure improvements are (a) in hand and (b) pending at RAF Lyneham. [45459]

Dr. Moonie [holding answer 25 March 2002]: All of the planned infrastructure improvements at RAF Lyneham have been completed for this Financial Year, and only emergency maintenance is currently being undertaken. The number of emergency improvements changes on a daily basis but on 20 March 2002, we estimate that there were some 60 such works being undertaken at the Station. The number of infrastructure improvements runs into many thousands over the year sine they are often very small-scale tasks. If there are specific improvements in which the hon. Member is interested, I will provide details of those.

Harrier Aircraft

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much the upgrade of the RAF's GR7s and Royal Navy's FA2 Sea Harriers to type GR9 Harriers will cost; and if he will make a statement. [46031]

Mr. Ingram: I refer to the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 13 March 2002, Official Report, columns 1166–1167W.

The Royal Navy's Sea Harrier fleet will be withdrawn from service by 2006 and are not part of the Harrier GR9 upgrade programme.

Sexism

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the measures introduced to combat sexism in the armed forces; and if he will make a statement. [46028]

Mr. Ingram: The Armed Forces strive to provide an environment in which every individual is respected and valued and given the opportunity to realise their potential without fear of harassment or unlawful discrimination. All three Services have in place complaints procedures, issue guidance on behaviour, undertake training, and appoint Equal Opportunities advisers in every unit. They monitor results through attitude surveys, focus groups, and longer-term studies. Although the number of complaints of sexual harassment and discrimination are small the Services see no room for complacency and aim to confront unacceptable behaviour at every opportunity.

Helicopter Crash (South Armagh)

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on (a) the casualties injured in the RAF Puma helicopter crash in South Armagh on 17 March and (b) the probable causes of the crash. [46369]

Mr. Ingram: Out of the three RAF crew and six passengers on board, seven were taken to hospital for treatment following the crash, four of whom were detained. As of Monday 25 March one of the casualties remains listed as seriously ill. Our thoughts are with all of the inured.

A Royal Air Force Board of Inquiry has been convened to determine the cause of the accident. However, in the interim, I can confirm that it was not terrorist related.

MoD Police

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the sites from which MoD police have been withdrawn from security duties since 1997, stating in each case the (a) reason for withdrawal, (b) company who have replaced MoD police duties, (c) terms of the contract for such companies, including cost to the MoD per year, (d) expected savings to his Department and (e) the contingency for armed cover; and if he will make a statement. [44721]

Dr. Moonie: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Chinook Crash

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what legal advice he has recently requested in relation to his Department's review of the handling of the investigation into the crash of the ZD 576 Chinook helicopter in June 1994; and if he will make a statement. [45861]

Mr. Ingram: The House of Lords Select Committee expressed the opinion that the applicable standard of proof of absolutely no doubt whatsoever was not met by the Board of Inquiry finding. In the light of these comments, I have asked for further opinion in order to satisfy myself as to whether or not the legal approach adopted at the time was fully justified.

Deployments

Hugh Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many members of the armed forces are deployed in Northern Ireland, broken down by service; and what the equivalent figures were a year ago. [46306]

Mr. Ingram: The number of Armed Force personnel, broken down by service, under the command of the General Officer Commanding Northern Ireland (GOC NI) and stationed in Northern Ireland at the 28 February 2001 and 2002 is set out in the following table.

As at 28 February	Army	RAF	Navy
2001	12,271	1,084	176
2002	12,477	1,046	176

The level of Armed Force personnel in Northern Ireland fluctuates throughout the year depending on the security situation. The GOC NI also has under his command troops that are rear based in Great Britain that can be called forward to the Province as and when required. In addition other troops can be made available to the GOC NI from Land Command if required for example during the marching season.

Hugh Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the strength of the armed forces deployed in (a) the Balkans, (b) Macedonia, (c) Kosovo and (d) Bosnia (i) is and (ii) was a year ago. [46304]

Mr. Ingram: Some 4,900 UK Armed Forces personnel are currently deployed to the Balkans region. Of these 3,000 are deployed for KFOR operations, and 1,900 are deployed for SFOR operations. These numbers are approximate only. Around a dozen Armed Forces personnel are deployed to Macedonia.

One year ago, some 4,800 UK Armed Forces personnel were deployed to the Balkans region. Of these 3,100 were deployed for KFOR operations and 1,700 were deployed for SFOR operations. These numbers are approximate only. In addition, a Defence Attache, a Defence Adviser and two staff assistants were deployed to Macedonia.

TREASURY

Reserve Expenditure

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will provide a breakdown for each financial year since April 1992 of (a) the proportion and (b) the amount in real terms spent from the reserves. [34141]

Mr. Andrew Smith: The level of the Reserve within the overall control limit on departmental spending (Departmental Expenditure Limits since 1998–99, Control Totals previous to that) is set out at the beginning of each financial year in the Financial Statement and Budget Report. Outturn against departments' individual control limits, including any additions made from the Reserve, is given each summer in the Public Expenditure Outturn White Paper.

Tax Credits (Fraud)

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to the answer of 31 January 2002, Official Report, column 515W, how many of the 28 persons prosecuted for working families tax credit fraud were women; and how many of the eight persons receiving a custodial sentence were women. [35257]

Dawn Primarolo: Twenty two of the 28 people prosecuted for WFTC fraud are women. Seven people have received a custodial sentence, of whom five are women. Proportionally, these figures for women are lower in both cases than the proportion of tax credit claimants who are women.

PPP Consultants

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the total external spending by his Department was on public-private partnership consultants in each of the last four years; how many full-time equivalent consultants were employed over this period; how many billed consultancy days there were per year; what the implied average cost of each PPP consultant was; how many consultancy firms were used by the Department over this period; and if he will make a statement. [43195]

Mr. Andrew Smith: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 4 February 2002, Official Report, column 702W.

G-CAT/C-CAT

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the public bodies which have used (a) G-CAT and (b) C-CAT in the last two years; and if he will make a statement. [45444]

Mr. Andrew Smith: In the period of the last two years usage of the G-CAT and S-CAT has been as follows:

333 public sector organisations used the original G-Cat contract, which expired on 30 September 2001;

1,921 public sector organisations have used the new G-Cat contracts, which became live on 1 October 2001;

108 public sector organisations have used the S-CAT contracts.

A list of the organisations using each scheme is being placed in the Library of the House.

Inland Revenue

Bob Russell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer which Minister has responsibility for dealing with complaints about the observation of the rules laid down by the Civil Service Code and Civil Service Management Code by the staff of the Board of the Inland Revenue. [46492]

Dawn Primarolo: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer I gave him on 12 March, Official Report, column 964W.

Valuation Office Agency

Barbara Follett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what targets for the Valuation Office Agency will be set for the year 2002–03. [46857]

Dawn Primarolo: I have set the following key performance indicators for the Valuation Office Agency:

Valuation Accuracy

Contain reductions in 2,000 local Rating Lists to less than 7.5 per cent. in respect of compiled list appeals settled in 2002–03, and to a maximum of 4.7 per cent. of the total compiled list rateable value over the entire life of the 2000 Rating Lists.

Programming

Make draft programmes available by the 30 July each year, publish final programmes by 1 October each year; and to adhere to the start date in 95 per cent. of cases.

Other major tasks

As a step on the path to more public acceptance of valuations in Revaluation 2005, implement by April 2003 the recommendations coming out of the evaluation of the local ratepayer panels pilots.

Customer satisfaction

Improve customer satisfaction, as indicated by annual customer surveys, year on year. In 2002–03, the target will be 85 per cent. satisfaction.

Value for money

Improve value for money by achieving annual productivity gains of at least 2.5 per cent. per year.

Land Services

Bring in fee income to cover its share of VOA costs and to increase income by 10 per cent. year on year. For 2002–03 the income target will be £14.8 million.

People satisfaction

Improve annual satisfaction ratings given by staff for working with VOA. In 2002–03 we will undertake a survey which will act as the baseline against which future performance will be assessed.

Financial "break even"

Recover full resource costs, including a return on capital of 6 per cent., from fees and charges.

Further details are contained in the Valuation Office Agency's Forward Plan, copies of which will be placed in the Library of the House on publication.

National Savings and Investments

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what action is being taken to reduce delays in repayments by National Savings and Investments. [45813]

Ruth Kelly: National Savings and Investments have experienced a higher volume of work across the board, which has caused Savings Certificates repayments to be slightly outside the timescale they aim to achieve. No other products are affected. They are taking this very seriously and have allocated additional staff to processing these payments to bring the back within normal timescales.

Seafarers (Income Tax)

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the case for extending seafarer income tax concessions. [46356]

Dawn Primarolo: The Government keeps all taxes under review and any changes will be made as part of the normal Budget process.

Share Incentive Schemes

Mr. Jack: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much was spent in (a) January, (b) February and (c) March on (i) national newspaper, (ii) regional newspaper and (iii) local newspaper advertisements to promote the use of share incentive schemes. [46366]

Dawn Primarolo: The press advertising campaign for the Share Incentive Plan (SIP) started on 2 March 2002 and is due to run until 4 April 2002. Hence no money was spent on press advertising in January and February.

The breakdown for the March/April expenditure is as follows:

	Cost £	VAT £	Total £
National Press	783,668.33	137,141.98	920,810.31
Regional Press	10,765.15	1,883.90	12,649.05
Specialist Press	29,494.27	5,161.50	34,655.77
National Press Production	18,667.45	952.25	21,933.94
Specialist Press Production	5,441.45	3,266.76	6,393.71

EU Budget

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer which countries will be (a) gross and (b) net contributors to the European Union budget in 2002; how much they will each contribute in net terms; what the gross amount contributed to the European Union budget by each member state will be; and if he will make a statement. [46135]

Ruth Kelly: The Government's latest estimate of the United Kingdom's net contribution to the European Union budget in the financial year 2002–03 can be found in footnote two, table B13 (page 182) of the Pre-Budget Report (Cm5318). The Government does not forecast the contribution to the EU budget of other Member States. However, estimates of gross contributions by all Member States to the 2002 EU budget can be found at Table 7 (page 134) of the Official Journal (L29) of the European Communities (ISSN 0378-6978).

Heavily Indebted Poor Countries

Ms Drown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what percentage of the pledged UK contribution to the HIPC Trust Fund has been paid. [45187]

Clare Short: I have been asked to reply. The UK's pledge to the Heavily Indebted Poor Countries (HIPC) Debt Initiative Trust Fund is US$221 million; in addition, our share of the EC contribution is a further US$85 million. So far, we have paid half of our contribution (US$110 million) into the Trust Fund to help the Regional Development Banks meet their share of HIPC costs. The UK contribution is paid on an as-needed basis, on request by the International Development Association (IDA), which is administering the Fund. As more countries complete the HIPC process in the coming year, we would expect to see further disbursement of our funds.

Customs (Newhaven)

Norman Baker: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) on how many occasions since 1 January 2001 brigading teams have been sent to Newhaven; how many person-shifts were undertaken there by officers based elsewhere; and if he will make a statement;[45878]

(2) what percentage of ships arriving in Newhaven since 1 January 2001 have been subject to customs checks; and of those occasions, what percentage resulted in the discovery of (a) illicit tobacco, (b) illicit alcohol, (c) class A drugs, (d) wildlife products contrary to the terms of CITES and (e) illicit meat; and what has been the value of produce seized in each category; [45877]

(3) what plans there are to alter shift patterns amongst customs officers at Newhaven; and what the financial consequences of these changes will be; [45875]

(4) how many operational customs officers, excluding those undertaking purely office-based functions, are based at Newhaven. [45879]

Mr. Boateng [holding answers 25 March 2002]: It is not Customs law enforcement policy to disclose information on operational deployments of staff or the level or nature of checks at specific locations. However, the deployment, activities and working patterns of Customs staff at Newhaven and other locations are kept under constant review to ensure the most effective and efficient targeting of resources. Since January 2001, Customs officers operating at Newhaven have seized smuggled tobacco products with a total revenue value of around £215,500. Full details of Customs' seizures are published on a routine basis in their Departmental annual reports.

Aggregates Levy

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if the European Commission has given state aids approval for the proposed phasing in of the Aggregates Levy in Northern Ireland. [46311]

Mr. Boateng: We are confident of getting state aid approval from the European Commission shortly for the phasing-in of the levy for aggregates used in processed products in Northern Ireland. The relief will be backdated to 1 April to ensure that no levy is paid on aggregate used to make these products in 2002–03.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the difference was between the price offered in reaching preferred bidder stage and the final contract price for the five largest PFI contracts let by his Department in each of the last four years; and if he will make a statement. [45595]

Ruth Kelly [holding answer 25 March 2002]: The difference between the price offered in reaching preferred bidder stage, and the final contract price for PFI contracts let in the last four years is £11 million per annum. The difference is primarily attributable to the Department's changing requirements between preferred bidder announcement and final contract award.

Money Laundering

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will assess the benefits of restricting the use of cash for payment for goods and services in excess of a determined figure as a means of tackling money laundering; and if he will make a statement. [46202]

Ruth Kelly [holding answer 25 March 2002]: HMT will shortly consult on proposals for revision of the 1993 Money Laundering Regulations, implementing the Second EC Money Laundering Directive and taking into account changes made in the Proceeds of Crime Bill. In this context we will be considering all options to tackle money laundering, in consultation with law enforcement agencies, industry stakeholders and consumers.

Public-Private Partnerships

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the difference was between the price offered in reaching preferred bidder stage and the final contract price for PPP contracts let by his Department in each of the last four years; and if he will make a statement. [45610]

Ruth Kelly [holding answer 25 March 2002]: The Department has not let any PPP contracts over the last four years.

Road Pricing (Lorries)

Chris Grayling: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he expects to make a statement on road pricing for lorries. [45300]

Mr. Boateng: The Government published a consultation document "Modernising the Taxation of Haulage" alongside Pre-Budget Report 2001. The consultation closed on 8 February. The Government is now considering all responses. Any changes to taxation policy would be a matter for the Budget.

Comprehensive Spending Review

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what action he (a) has taken and (b) plans to take to ensure that sustainable development concerns are integrated into the comprehensive spending review process; and if he will make a statement. [28296]

Mr. Andrew Smith: As part of their submission to the Spending Review, departments with a Public Service Agreement have been requested to produce a Sustainable Development Report identifying the sustainable development impacts of their policy priorities. Specific guidance on this aspect of the Spending Review has been circulated to departments and made publicly available. Departmental Sustainable Development Reports are one element of the Spending Review submissions that Ministers will consider and will contribute towards the wider evidence-base of the Spending Review.

Manufacturing Work Force

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list for each constituency in England the percentage of the work force engaged in manufacturing in (a) 1990, (b) 1997 and (c) at the most recent date for which figures are available. [46205]

Ruth Kelly: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Len Cook to Mr. Gordon Prentice, dated 25 March 2002:

Len Cook: As National Statistician I have been asked to reply to your recent question about the percentage of the workforce engaged in manufacturing from 1990.

The available figures are for employee jobs and cover the years 1991, 1997 and 2000. I am placing an extraction from the Nomis database in the House of Commons Library. The Nomis database is available to Members and is accessible by Library staff.

Electoral Registers

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Glasgow, Cathcart (Mr. Harris) of 31 January 2002, Official Report, column 450W, on electoral registers, what guidance he has given to financial institutions needing to obtain electoral registers to carry out their obligations under the Money Laundering Regulations; and if he will make a statement. [46451]

Ruth Kelly: Guidance notes advising financial institutions how to fulfil their obligations under money laundering legislation are produced by industry associations such as the Joint Money Laundering Steering Group, rather than by the Government. HM Treasury is working closely with DTLR, which has lead responsibility for electoral matters, to ensure that institutions are able to meet their legal requirements under any new regulations on sale of the electoral register.

Parliamentary Questions

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he will reply to the hon. member for Truro and St. Austell's question of 15 January concerning sustainable development and the 2002 spending review; and if he will make a statement. [46574]

Mr. Andrew Smith: I have done so today and I have also written to the hon. Gentleman concerning his earlier question.

SCOTLAND

Correspondence

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what the average response time was for responding to departmental correspondence; what percentage of letters took longer than one month for a response; and what percentage took longer than three months for a response in each of the last five years. [37450]

Mrs. Liddell: The Scotland Office was established in its present form on 1 July 1999.

The information is collected in such a format where calculating the average response time could only be obtained at disproportionate cost. However, information relating to our own 15 working day response target is as follows:

in 1999, out of 409 cases, 81.42 per cent. were replied to within the 15 day target;

in 2000, out of 616 cases, 75.49 per cent. were replied to within the 15 day target;

in 2001, out of 408 cases, 74.26 per cent. were replied to within the 15 day target.

in 1999, 0.73 per cent. of cases took longer than one month for a response; in 2000, no cases took longer than one month for a response; and in 2001 4.41 per cent. took longer than one month for a response.

in no cases has the department taken longer than three months to respond.

Capita

Mr. Boris Johnson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many contracts the Department has with Capita; and how much they are worth. [38371]

Mrs. Liddell: My Department has no contracts with Capita Group.

Mr. Boris Johnson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if she will list the contracts that have been awarded to the Capita Group by the Department. [39336]

Mrs. Liddell: The Scotland Office was established in its present form on 1 July 1999.

Since that date, no contracts have been awarded to the Capita Group by my Department.

Ministerial Meetings

Mrs. Lait: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) when she plans to meet Railtrack; and how many times she has met them since becoming Secretary of State for Scotland; [39898]

(2) when she plans to meet the Scottish Higher Education Funding Council; and how many times she has met it since becoming Secretary of State for Scotland; [40346]

(3) when she plans to meet Comunn Nu Gaidhlig; and how many times she has met it since becoming Secretary of State for Scotland; [39886]

(4) when she plans to meet the management of BBC Scotland; and how many times she has met it since becoming Secretary of State for Scotland; [40347]

(5) when she plans to meet the Scottish CBI; and how many times she has met it since becoming Secretary of State for Scotland; [39877]

(6) when she plans to meet the National Air Traffic Services; and how many times she has met it since becoming Secretary of State for Scotland; [39879]

(7) when she plans to meet the Scottish Environment Protection Agency; and how many times she has met it since becoming Secretary of State for Scotland; [39880]

(8) when she plans to meet Highlands and Islands Enterprise; and how many times she has met it since becoming Secretary of State for Scotland; [40350]

(9) when she plans to meet The Wise Group; and how many times she has met it since becoming Secretary of State for Scotland; [39878]

(10) when she plans to meet Scottish National Heritage; and how many times she has met it since becoming Secretary of State for Scotland; [40345]

(11) when she plans to meet the British Council in Scotland; and how many times she has met them since becoming Secretary of State for Scotland; [39885]

(12) when she plans to meet Scottish Business in the Community; and how many times she has met them since becoming Secretary of State for Scotland; [39887]

(13) when she plans to meet the Law Society of Scotland; and how many times she has met them since becoming Secretary of State for Scotland; [39888]

(14) when she plans to meet the Gaelic Broadcasting Committee; and how many times she has met it since becoming Secretary of State for Scotland; [40348]

(15) when she plans to meet Scotrail; and how many times she has met it since becoming Secretary of State for Scotland; [39890]

(16) when she plans to meet the Scottish Police Federation; and how many times she has met it since becoming Secretary of State for Scotland; [39899]

(17) when she plans to meet Forest Enterprise; and how many times she has met it since becoming Secretary of State for Scotland; [39881]

(18) when she plans to meet Scottish Enterprise; and how many times she has met it since becoming Secretary of State for Scotland; [39883]

(19) when she plans to meet the North Atlantic Salmon Conservation Organisation; and how many times she has met it since becoming Secretary of State for Scotland; [39884]

(20) when she plans to meet British Energy plc; and how many times she has met it since becoming Secretary of State for Scotland; [39895]

(21) when she plans to meet The Planning Exchange; and how many times she has met it since becoming Secretary of State for Scotland; [39882]

(22) when she plans to meet the Institute of Directors in Scotland; and how many times she has met it since becoming Secretary of State for Scotland; [39876]

(23) when she plans to meet COSLA; and how many times she has met it since becoming Secretary of State for Scotland; [39889]

(24) when she plans to meet British Telecom in Scotland; and how many times she has met it since becoming Secretary of State for Scotland; [40344]

(25) when she plans to meet Scottish Engineering; and how many times she has met it since becoming Secretary of State for Scotland; [40349]

(26) when she plans to meet the Scottish Chambers of Commerce; and how many times she has met it since becoming Secretary of State for Scotland. [39875]

Mrs. Liddell: I refer the hon. Member to my answer of 25 March.

Winter Fuel Allowance

Mr. Peter Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what steps she is taking to maximise the take-up of the winter-fuel allowance in Scotland. [45341]

Mr. Foulkes: Most people who are eligible for the Winter Fuel Payment do not have to claim. For those people who do need to claim, or who have other queries about the Payments, the Department for Work and Pensions have set up a Winter Fuel Payment help-line; the number is 08459 15 15 15. The DWP have also placed advertisements in the press, issued leaflets and posters and placed information on the internet.

Euro 2008

Mr. Peter Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what support has been offered by her Department to the Scottish Executive in respect of its bid to host the Euro 2008 football championships. [45405]

Mr. Foulkes: My right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State and I have regular contact with the Scottish Executive on a wide range of issues. The Scotland Office supports the decision to pursue a joint bid with the Republic of Ireland. Hosting Euro 2008 would be a tremendous boost for Scotland and the UK, and the Scotland Office will provide appropriate assistance and support.

Election Expenses

Ian Lucas: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if she will publish the returns of election expenses for the 1999 elections to the Scottish Parliament. [45294]

Mrs. Liddell: I have no plans to publish these returns. As required under the Scottish Parliament (Elections etc) Order 1999, the returns of election expenses for the elections to the Scottish Parliament in 1999 were made available for inspection for two years following their receipt. Notices giving details of the times and places at which returns could be inspected were also published as required.

Consultants

Mr. Peter Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much her Department has spent on external consultants in each of the past five years. [46036]

Mrs. Liddell: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Buckingham on 7 March, Official Report, column 511W.

Asbestos-related Diseases

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what recent representations she has received from the Iron Trades Management Services concerning the non-payment of insurance claims to victims of asbestos-related diseases; and what the planned time scale is for future progress on resolving the issue. [45965]

Mrs. Liddell: I made a full statement of the action I have taken to date on all aspects of this matter at the Westminster Hall adjournment debate on 19 March, initiated by my hon. Friend the Member for Glasgow, Anniesland.

Policing

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what discussions she has had with the Scottish Police Federation concerning the pay and conditions proposed to police officers by the Home Secretary; [45960]

(2) what discussions she has had with the Scottish Executive concerning the pay and conditions proposed to police officers by the Home Secretary. [45961]

Mrs. Liddell: Police pay and conditions in Scotland are a matter for the Scottish Executive. I have had no discussions with either the Executive or the Scottish Police Federation.

Rail Links

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what recent representations she has made to the (a) Strategic Rail Authority and (b) Scottish Executive on developing rail links at (i) Glasgow and (ii) Edinburgh International Airports. [45964]

Mrs. Liddell: I have regular discussions with Scottish Executive Ministers on a wide range of issues.

In their recent strategic plan, the SRA highlighted as a medium term priority an investigation of the development of rail links to both Glasgow and Edinburgh Airports.

The Scottish Executive with others, including the Strategic Rail Authority and DTLR, have commissioned an economic and engineering study into rail links to Glasgow and Edinburgh airports. The final phase of the report is expected to be completed in the Autumn.

Scottish Airports

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what recent discussions she has had with the Scottish Executive concerning the number of flights from Scottish airports to those in the UK, Europe and North America. [45962]

Mrs. Liddell: I have regular discussions with Scottish Executive Ministers on a wide range of issues. I also held a "summit" last December with airlines and other interested parties to discuss the prospect of further direct flights from Scottish airports.

As part of a wider consultation on the future development of UK air services, the Government and the Scottish Executive will shortly issue a joint consultation document on air services in Scotland. The document will present the key information to allow an informed and structured debate about future air service and airport development in Scotland.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Gender Pay Gap

Mr. Bercow: To ask the President of the Council what assessment he has made of the extent of the gender pay gap amongst staff in his Department. [40994]

Mr. Robin Cook: My department uses the pay system operated by the Cabinet Office. Accordingly, I refer the hon. Member to the Answer given by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Secretary to the Cabinet Office on 12 March 2001, Official Report, column 956W.

New Deal

Mr. Bercow: To ask the President of the Council (1) how many people have been employed by his Department in each of the last three years under (a) the New Deal for Young People, (b) the New Deal for the Over 50s and (c) the New Deal for Lone Parents; and at what cost, listed by category, to public funds; [44923]

(2) how many people employed by his Department under the New Deal for Young People in each of the last four years have subsequently (a) found unsubsidised employment for more than 13 weeks and (b) returned to jobseeker's allowance or other benefits. [44904]

Mr. Robin Cook: My department has employed one person under the New Deal for Over 50's; who is now a permanent member of staff. This was at no additional cost to my Department. My Department has not yet employed a member of staff under the New Deal for Young People or the New Deal for Lone Parents.

School Visits

Mr. Lazarowicz: To ask the President of the Council if he will bring forward proposals to provide financial assistance to facilitate visits to Parliament by school and youth groups from constituencies located long distances from Westminster. [46274]

Mr. Robin Cook: I have no such proposals, nor could I realistically hold out hope that such substantial expenditure could be found within the present House vote.

PRIVY COUNCIL

Correspondence

Mr. Bercow: To ask the President of the Council what his target time will be in 2002–03 (a) to reply to letters from hon. Members and (b) for the officials in his office to reply to letters received directly from members of the public. [44953]

Robin Cook: I have no plans to change my Department's 15-day target in replying to Members' correspondence, and 20-day target for public correspondence.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

HIV/AIDS

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what the Government have done since 1997 to assist countries with AIDS and HIV to gain access to care and treatment; what antiretroviral drugs have been provided to Third World countries; and if she will make a statement. [46168]

Clare Short: My Department has committed significant resources to support a range of HIV/AIDS programmes, including support for national strategic HIV programmes particularly in Africa and Asia. We are also supporting the development of health systems to effectively deliver care, including home-based and palliative care. In parallel, we are supporting work to build a solid evidence base to inform effective and responsible provision of ART in developing countries. Where functioning health systems do exist we are seeking to help governments to consider the issues surrounding the introduction of ART in the most cost effective and equitable way.

We have also pledged $200 million to the Global Fund to fight AIDS, TB and Malaria (GFATM). The aim of the fund is to support the purchase of essential commodities for tackling HIV/AIDS, TB and Malaria.

Our Working Group on Access to Medicines is bringing together Government, industry and others to find ways of getting medicines for HIV/AIDS and other diseases to the world's poorest at affordable prices. Better health systems are of course vital for getting drugs to the poor. We have committed over £1 billion to health systems strengthening in developing countries since 1997.

Burma

Miss Widdecombe: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what the Government are doing (a) to help relocate Burmese people who have been internally displaced and (b) to restore democracy in Burma. [45075]

Clare Short: The UK contributes to the costs of providing safe refuge and assistance both for refugees and those internally displaced within Burma. In 2001–02 my Department increased funding to the United Nations High Commission for Refugees (£805,000), the Burmese Border Consortium (£350,000) and the International Commission of the Red Cross (£800,000) to support their work with refugees on the Thai/Burma border and those internally displaced.

The UK has long been at the forefront of the international community's efforts to bring about national reconciliation, respect for human rights and democracy in Burma. With EU partners we have adopted a Common Position which includes an arms embargo, a ban on high level visits, on items that might be used for torture, and on non-humanitarian assistance, a visa ban and an asset freeze on members of the regime. The EC has also suspended Burma's trading privileges in response to the use of forced labour in Burma. We are also active in the United Nations, co-sponsoring resolutions at UNGA and UNHCR and actively supporting the UN Secretary General's Special Envoy to Burma's effort to facilitate political progress. An EU Troika visited Burma 19–22 March to gauge the latest political developments and press for progress to be made.

Afghanistan

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what her Department's latest estimate is of access to humanitarian food aid in Afghanistan; and if she will make a statement. [45369]

Clare Short: Since October 2001, the United Nations World Food Programme (WFP) has delivered 370,000 metric tonnes of emergency food aid to the region; over 300,000 metric tonnes of which has been distributed within Afghanistan. WFP assistance is now successfully reaching 6.6 million people in Afghanistan. Needs have been met in most areas, but there remain pockets of unmet needs in places difficult to access due to poor weather and insecurity.

In response to this, WFP is deploying six helicopter-borne rapid assessment teams for assessment and delivery of emergency aid to remote areas in Afghanistan. The teams are tasked with streamlining food aid operations, assessing health conditions, investigating non-food emergency needs, monitoring food distribution and verifying reports by non-governmental organisations (NGOs) on earlier food deliveries. If necessary, the helicopters will also allow WFP to airlift a limited amount of food aid on an emergency basis.

We have contributed £6 million towards WFP's operations inside Afghanistan—for both direct procurement and transportation of food, and for logistical support to help speed up the movement of food aid into the country. We have also supported a number of agencies—the UN, Red Cross and non-governmental organisations (NGOs)—for supplementary feeding and secondary distribution of food inside Afghanistan.

Former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia

Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what financial aid the Government plans to give the FYR Macedonia in the next six months. [45239]

Clare Short: We are providing £3 million to the Government of Macedonia for bilateral balance of payments support. The EC has allocated euros 68 million financial aid of which the UK share is £7.93 million.

Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development (1) what economic aid has been given to the Government of FYR Macedonia by the UK Government in each of the last three years; [45246]

(2) what development aid has been given by the British Government to the FYR Macedonia in each of the last two years. [45240]

Clare Short: During the period 1998 to 2001 DFID has provided £15.041 million of aid of which £12.345 million was humanitarian support. During the same period the EC has provided £139.8 million of assistance of which the UK share is £26.72 million.

International Institute for Democracy and Electoral Assistance

Tony Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will affiliate the United Kingdom to the International Institute for Democracy and Electoral Assistance. [46295]

Clare Short: My Department is currently discussing with the International Institute for Democracy and Electoral Assistance the possibility of working together on specific topics. We are not at this stage considering affiliation.

Commonwealth Development Corporation

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development when she expects the public-private partnership of the Commonwealth Development Corporation to be completed. [44756]

Clare Short: The Government's objectives for CDC is to mobilise increased private investment in developing countries. This is a long-term project which will take many years to complete.

New Deal

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many people have been employed by her Department in each of the last three years under (a) the New Deal for Young People, (b) the New Deal for the Over 50s and (c) the New Deal for Lone Parents; and at what cost, listed by category, to public funds. [44909]

Clare Short: The information is as follows:

	1999	2000	2001
New Deal for Young People	Nil	2	2
New Deal for the Over 50s	Nil	2	Nil
New Deal for Lone Parents	Nil	1	Nil

The cost to public funds, excluding salary costs, was £1,950 in the over 50s category, and £1,080 in the young people category, all incurred in the year 2000.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many people employed by her Department under the New Deal for Young People in each of the last four years have subsequently (a) found unsubsidised employment for more than 13 weeks and (b) returned to jobseekers' allowance or other benefits. [45087]

Clare Short: The information is as follows:

(a) None in 1998 or 1999, one in 2000 and two in 2001;

(b) none in any of the last four years.

Commodity Dependence

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what help her Department is providing to people dependent on the sale of commodities in the developing world. [43667]

Clare Short: The production and sale of commodities is very important to the livelihoods of people in developing countries. For a significant number of the least developed countries commodities account for more than 50 per cent. of merchandise exports. Price volatility is a characteristic of many commodity markets (such as cocoa, coffee and tea) and reflects changing patterns of consumption and production.

DFID believes that better livelihoods for poor people must be at the centre of any strategy for poverty reduction. DFID is currently supporting a significant number of livelihood programmes and projects throughout the developing world. These seek to provide direct benefits to poor people, including those whose livelihoods are linked to commodities. The range of commodities involved is extensive and includes fish, cut flowers, horticultural products, cereals, beverages, oilseeds, as well as roots and tubers.

Improving developing country access to international and regional markets is very important to encourage more processing of commodities and more value added. DFID is working with developing countries to strengthen their capacity in trade. We are also working to tackle tariff and non-tariff barriers to developing country exports, especially those that exist in the European Union. DFID provides support to initiatives that provide more timely market information, contributes to improvements in essential infrastructure (including energy and transport) and works to ensure appropriate legal and regulatory frameworks exist to promote investment.

Human Rights Act

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many cases have been brought against her Department under the Human Rights Act 1998; and what has been the cost in (a) legal fees to defend cases and (b) compensation payments. [45058]

Clare Short: There have been no such cases.

Aid Funding

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what aid funding was made available by her Department to countries during 2001. [43941]

Clare Short: In 2000–01, the last complete financial year, my Department spent £1.4 billion on bilateral development assistance in 167 countries and £1.3 billion through our donations to multilateral development agencies. In 2001–02 bilateral spending is estimated to rise to £1.65 billion in a similar number of countries while our contribution to multilateral development agencies is projected to increase to £1.4 billion.

Prison Labour

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will list the countries with which her Department had discussions in 1998 with regard to the use of prison labour for making goods imported into the United Kingdom; and if she will make a statement. [43925]

Clare Short: My Department has had no such discussions, in 1998 or since.

Third World

Mrs. Irene Adams: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what action the Government are taking to alleviate illiteracy in the Third World. [43931]

Clare Short: Helping developing countries achieve the millennium development goal of universal primary education by 2015 is DFID's major focus for tackling illiteracy. Increasing access to good quality primary education and ensuring that children are literate when they leave school is essential for development and poverty reduction. Since 1997 the Government has committed over £650 million to support sustainable education systems in developing countries able to provide high quality primary education for all children. We will do more.

We will also give increasing attention to helping developing countries tackle adult illiteracy and poverty reduction. Improving literacy practice for adults continues to be an integral part of many different sectoral programmes supported by DFID, such as transport, water, health, small business development, environment, livelihoods and governance. Our new Background Briefing paper, "Improving livelihoods for the poor: the role of literacy", examines the way in which literacy features in such programmes and the key issues that have emerged as different parts of DFID have considered the ways in which literacy and poverty interrelate. It highlights principles of good practice (drawing on recent experience), examines potential entry points and identifies challenges for DFID in giving greater priority to literacy in our commitment to poverty reduction.

Zimbabwe

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement on her development programme in Zimbabwe following the election results. [44754]

Clare Short: The election outcome is likely to accelerate poverty and hunger in Zimbabwe. The UK is continuing to work with others to urge policy changes on the part of the Zimbabwe Government to halt the catastrophic decline in agriculture, the economy, and social services. In parallel, we are providing humanitarian assistance through the UN and non-governmental channels, and helping to address the HIV/AIDS epidemic that affects 1 in 3 adults.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much money her Department has pledged to the World Food Programme to help deal with food shortages in Zimbabwe; and how much has been spent. [44894]

Clare Short: We have pledged £6 million to the UN Humanitarian Assistance Programme, of which £3.5 million is for food. Of the contribution for food £2.5 million has been spent. We have also contributed £86,000 toward the cost of the UN's Relief and Recovery Unit in Harare which is helping to appraise emergency needs, plan, negotiate and monitor emergency assistance on behalf of the UN and donors.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what difficulties her Department is facing in the delivery of humanitarian aid to Zimbabwe; and what action is being taken to overcome such difficulties. [46275]

Clare Short: DFID has provided £4 million to partner NGOs to feed 400,000 children and vulnerable adults for the past six months. The main difficulty has been in obtaining adequate supplies of maize. With growing national shortages suppliers have been unable to fulfil their contracts. However, the NGOs, working collectively, are generally managing to make alternative arrangements to import food directly.

DFID has worked closely with the UN's Humanitarian Assistance and Recovery Programme, providing £6 million for both food and medical supplies. The impact of this has been hampered by the lateness of the Zimbabwe Government appeal, the time taken to assemble the UN team, and the sparseness of donor responses.

As a wider national food emergency looms, DFID is keeping the situation under review, though what can be done will be greatly affected by the extent to which the Government of Zimbabwe allows a conducive policy environment.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development whether humanitarian aid provided to Zimbabwe has been seized by Government militia in the last 12 months. [46276]

Clare Short: We have had no reports of humanitarian aid being seized. There have been isolated incidents where militias have attempted to include themselves on the list of beneficiaries, though in all cases the non-governmental organisations implementing programmes have managed to have them removed peacefully.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what conclusions she has drawn from the recent elections in Zimbabwe in respect of the New Partnership for African Development. [44199]

Clare Short: The situation in Zimbabwe highlights the damage caused by abusive economic and political governance to economic development in Africa. The decision to suspend Zimbabwe from the Commonwealth demonstrates that the leaders involved in developing NEPAD understand the damage the Mugabe regime has done to the people of Zimbabwe and to African development.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what changes she will make to her development policy to countries in southern Africa following the election in Zimbabwe. [44755]

Clare Short: None at present. Our co-operation with southern African countries will continue to be based on our understanding of their needs and policies. We will continue to provide humanitarian and HIV/AIDS related assistance in Zimbabwe. A further decline in the Zimbabwe economy, and the food shortages there which are likely to persist into next year, will have an impact on the economies of its neighbours which all development agencies will take into account.

India

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development (1) what assessment she has made of the impact of the Vision 2020 project in Andhra Pradesh in India on the local population as regards (a) displacement of population, (b) loss of homes and (c) loss of employment; [46280]

(2) what assessment she has made of the environmental impact of the Vision 2020 project in Andhra Pradesh in India as regards (a) GM crops and (b) use of pesticides; [46279]

(3) if she will make a statement on the sustainability of the Vision 2020 project in Andhra Pradesh, India. [46281]

Clare Short: I refer the hon. Member to my answer to Ms Joan Ruddock on the subject of Andhra Pradesh and Vision 2020, Official Report, column 477W, 20 July 2001. Vision 2020 is not a project, and it is not possible for an assessment to be made of its impact on the issues identified in the questions.

Monterrey Conference

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement on the United Kingdom's contribution to the Monterrey United Nations Conference on Financing for Development on 18 March. [46294]

Clare Short: The United Kingdom played a leading role in the preparatory process leading up to the Monterrey Conference in helping to formulate the EU position for the Conference. The EU worked hard during the negotiations of the text of the outcomes document: the "Monterrey Consensus". This is a good document, in which developing countries commit to set in place the pro-poor economic policies and good governance that is required to attract foreign direct investment and mobilise domestic resources; and donor countries commit to provide enhanced support to developing countries through providing more and better quality oda, through opening up markets to trade access in the context of the Doha process, and through ensuring that the HIPC process provides sustainable debt relief. The UK also played a leading role in developing the package of commitments announced by the EU at Monterrey, which includes a commitment to increase EU aid volume from an average of 0.33 per cent. to an average of 0.39 per cent. by 2006—which represents an additional 7 billion dollars per annum. Baroness Amos and I represented the UK at the Conference itself. I chaired a round table on financing sustainable development and participated in a round table on partnerships. Baroness Amos held a press conference to publicise the DFID/HTM paper on the case for aid and participated in a round table on coherence.

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement on her Department's policy in respect of sustainable development, with specific reference to the United Kingdom's participation in the Monterrey Conference on 18 March. [46293]

Clare Short: In the "Monterrey Consensus" document which was agreed at the Financing for Development Conference, the nations of the world agreed that developing countries need to set in place pro-poor economic policies and good governance in order to attract foreign direct investment and mobilise domestic resources. Donor countries need to provide more and better oda; provide better market access for developing country products through the Doha negotiations; ensure that the HIPC process provides heavily indebted poor countries with a sustainable exit from debt, and take concrete steps to give developing countries a stronger voice in the international financial architecture. The UK Government, throughout the Financing for Development process, has promoted the view that development assistance should be untied and should be targeted on poor countries with large numbers of poor people and good policies; and that donors should harmonise their procedures to reduce the burden on developing country governments; should move away from stand-alone projects towards direct support through government budgets where possible; should strengthen government accounting and audit capacity so as to enable a greater use of budget support by donors; and should provide aid in support of country-owned poverty reduction strategies.

The Government believes that the Monterrey Consensus, alongside the WTO Doha Declaration, provides an excellent basis for a new global partnership to tackle poverty eradication and manage globalisation so that it works for all the world's people, including the poorest. We hope that the World Summit on Sustainable Development, at Johannesburg in September, will build on these outcomes, and help to identify means of implementation.

A full outline of how my department is contributing to the delivery of the Government's commitment to global sustainable development will be published in our Departmental Report next month. Priorities are set out in the two White Papers on International Development (which can be found on www.dfid.gov.uk or obtained from the DFID Public Enquiry Point). In addition, my department has considered the full sustainable development implications of its bid for resources as part of the Spending Review.

EU-funded Projects (Middle East)

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development which EU-funded projects in the (a) West Bank and (b) Gaza Strip have recently been damaged by Israeli retaliatory attacks; what the damage incurred was; and what the value of the damage sustained was. [46308]

Clare Short: The European Commission is currently assessing the damage caused to EU-funded projects by Israeli attacks. To date approximately 22 projects have been destroyed or seriously damaged, including basic infrastructure projects (schools, labs, tarmac, water supply). The most notable example is the destruction of the runway and buildings of Gaza airport. The latest estimate of damage is about €19 million.

I will write with details of the damaged or destroyed projects and place a copy in the Library of the House.

Lakshmi Mittal

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development (1) how many loan applications her Department has received from (a) Mr. Lakshmi Mittal and (b) LNM Holdings, and referred to (i) the Foreign and Commonwealth Office and (ii) the Department for Trade and Industry; [43764]

(2) how many loan applications her Department has rejected from (a) Mr. Lakshmi Mittal and (b) LNM Holdings. [43763]

Clare Short: To the best of my knowledge, my Department has not received any direct applications for loans from (a) Mr. Lakshmi Mittal or (b) LNM Holdings.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development (1) if she will support at the World Bank Mr. Lakshmi Mittal's expected application for a loan to make further payments to the Romanian Government for the SIDEX steel plant; [43768]

(2) what instructions she has received from the Office of the Prime Minister on support for Lakshmi Mittal's expected application for a loan from the World Bank to make further payments to the Romanian Government for the SIDEX steel plant. [43769]

Hilary Benn: To the best of my knowledge no such application has been made. If one is received Departmental officials will consider its merits in the usual way.

SIDEX

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what investigations into the conduct and financial stability of LNM/Ispat projects overseas were initiated by her Department before it decided to support the proposed loan by the European Bank for Reconstruction and Development to assist the purchase of SIDEX in Romania. [44577]

Clare Short: Adherence to sound banking is one of EBRD's three core principles. The Bank routinely prepares rigorous financial analysis and integrity due diligence for all investments. We do not duplicate EBRD procedures.

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what conditions were attached to each of the loans given by the International Bank of Reconstruction and Development to LNM/Ispat for the acquisition of steel works with particular reference to those attached to the subsequent closure or sale of the steel works in question. [44482]

Clare Short: The International Bank for Reconstruction and Development has not made any loans to LNM/Ispat for the acquisition of steel works.

The International Finance Corporation made loans to Caribbean Ispat Ltd in Trinidad and Tobago in 1995 and to Ispat Karmet in Kazakhstan in 1997 for projects relating to steel works. The IFC negotiates appropriate financial and other conditions with individual clients.

Yugoslavia

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assistance her Department is providing to Yugoslavia to help that country deal with its refugee problem. [46267]

Clare Short: Humanitarian assistance in the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia, including assistance for refugees, is co-ordinated by the United Nations Office for the Co-ordination of Humanitarian Affairs, and the European Commission Humanitarian Affairs Office (ECHO). The UK provides funds for these agencies, including 19.7 per cent. of the ECHO budget.

We have already agreed with the FRY authorities that our bilateral programme will focus on providing technical assistance for institution and capacity building, and for economic and social reform, as described in our Country Strategy Paper. Within this strategy we are developing a £3.2 million social policy reform programme that will improve the delivery of social welfare, health, employment and education services. This programme pays particular attention to refugees and internally displaced persons. We are also working closely with the World Bank in the design of a credit package aimed at improving social welfare, education and health services.

Zambia

Virginia Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development when she last visited Zambia; what assistance her Department is providing to Zambia; and if she will make a statement on her Department's assistance for Mechanics for Africa. [45833]

Clare Short: I last visited Zambia in November 2000.

In the current financial year we estimate that we will spend around £41 million in Zambia. We concentrate on four key areas: good governance and human rights, sustainable livelihoods, health and education, and HIV/AIDS. We are working closely with the World Bank on plans to mitigate the effects of Anglo-American's withdrawal from mining operations in Zambia.

My Department is not currently providing assistance to Mechanics for Africa, although we are aware of their work in Zambia. They have been given advice on applying to the British High Commission's Small Grants Scheme.

Disability

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assistance she offers to developing countries in dealing with disability issues. [46268]

Clare Short: The Department for International Development is currently supporting nearly 40 projects and programmes around the world with a focus on the rights and needs of people with disabilities. In the past year we have approved in excess of £154 million of new funding for work in this area (£136 million for the polio eradication programme). The global drive to reduce poverty will also bring many benefits, in reducing some of the key causes of disability and improving the quality of life and opportunities for people with disabilities.

DFID's strategy on disability is set out in an issues paper published in February 2000, called "Disability, poverty and development". We work closely with Governments, the voluntary and private sectors, and the bilateral and multilateral donor communities, to ensure that disability is addressed in the context of the fight against poverty and the realisation of human rights for all.

Commonwealth Aid

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what the total financial value was of aid and assistance give by the United Kingdom to each member country of the Commonwealth in each of the last five years. [45675]

Clare Short: The information requested is set out in the following table.

DFID has a regional programme in the Pacific; figures on countries in the region that are members of the Commonwealth are not available separately.

Angola

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assistance her Department is providing to the peace process in Angola following the death of Jonas Savimbi. [44892]

Clare Short: Since the death of Jonas Savimbi we have made a contribution of £200,000 to help expand the services of Radio Ecclesia beyond Luanda to the Angolan provinces. Radio Ecclesia is the only fully independent radio broadcaster in Angola able to operate nationwide. It is well known as a key source of objective news reporting and political analysis within Angola, essential to the building of a lasting peace settlement. I plan to visit Angola next week to discuss with the Government the opportunities to achieve peace in Angola and the wider region. I had a very useful preliminary meeting with the Angolan Foreign Minister on these issues last week.

Democratic Republic of the Congo

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assistance her Department is providing to the peace process in the Democratic Republic of the Congo; and if she will make a statement on the talks taking place in South Africa. [44891]

Clare Short: To date DFID has provided £525,000 in support of the direct costs of the Inter-Congolese Dialogue. This is supplemented by a contribution of £650,000 to the Radio Okapi project which is disseminating information on the peace process to the Congolese people, and £160,000 to assist peace and reconciliation in the Kivus. We continue to press all signatories to the Lusaka Peace Agreement to honour their commitments and work constructively towards a full peace settlement in the region. It is paramount that the delegates currently engaged in the Sun City talks avoid further prevarication and commit themselves to the critical task of reaching agreement on arrangements for a transitional government and timetable for free elections. Much time has already been lost in the Dialogue and it is crucial that real progress is now seen, for the sake of all of the people of the region.

Rwanda

Mr. Ivan Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much aid the Government have sent to Rwanda from 1997 to 2001; and what plans the Government have to send aid in the futu[illegible] [45112]

C[illegible]e Short: Between 1997 to 2001 the UK provided £89[illegible]illion in development assistance to Rwanda. In 199[illegible] the UK made a 10-year commitment with the Go[illegible]rnment of Rwanda to help their post-conflict rec[illegible]very and enable them to meet the International D[illegible]elopment Targets. We have provided around £[illegible] million in development assistance this financial year a[illegible] expect our support to continue at least at this level ov[illegible] the next few years.

Gaza Strip

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will make a statement on the results of the midwifery training project funded by her Department to improve standards of midwifery in the Gaza Strip; and how many midwives it has trained. [43872]

Clare Short: The Gaza Midwifery project was established in 1999 to improve safe motherhood by developing the capacity of the midwifery profession in Gaza. The project will have trained 27 midwives by June 2002, and plans to train a total of 89 by June 2004. The current crisis has adversely affected the implementation of training, but enrolment and graduate numbers remain over 80 per cent. of that originally envisaged.

Turkey

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what discussions she has had with the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry regarding Amec's application to the Export Credits Guarantee Department to cover its work in Turkey. [44200]

Clare Short: I have not had any involvement in this case. My department worked closely with ECGD to agree a new set of business principles, including the incorporation of sustainable development criteria. My department is involved in the productive expenditure screening process for applications relating to those countries receiving International Development Association (IDA) funding. We do not get involved in individual export credit applications in non-IDA countries such as Turkey.

Occupied Territories

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what the results have been of her Department's funded water and sanitation projects in (a) Jabalia and (b) Anabta in improving water supplies to the Palestinians in the Occupied Territories. [43875]

Clare Short: The project in Jabalia has led to improvements in both the quality and quantity of water for household consumption. Sanitary standards have also increased as the majority of households are now connected to a new sewage network. To ensure these gains are sustained a programme of hygiene and sanitary education is being implemented.

The quality of the water network in Anabta has improved by 90 per cent. At least 75 per cent. of households are connected to the new sewage network. However, the current crisis is affecting the implementation of the project with equipment embargoed by the Israeli Port Authorities, and access for project staff becoming increasingly difficult.

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what effect the aid given to the Palestinian Authority's Minister for Education by her Department has had on her Department's capacity to manage (a) planning of teacher training, (b) school development and (c) the teaching of English in that region. [43874]

Clare Short: The Palestinian Authority is responsible for planning teacher training, school development and teaching English. Between 1995–2000 we have provided technical assistance in these areas. Nearly all schools in the Palestinian Authority have benefited in some way from this.

(a) all primary school head teachers, and most secondary school heads, have participated in a School Review and Development Planning programme, and over 12,000 teachers have received support for their personal development;

(b) we piloted in a limited number of schools the development of management expertise focused on the preparation of guidelines and operating procedures. The final assessment of the project found that institutional capacity within the targeted schools had greatly increased;

(c) English language training was not a component of this assistance.

The work of United Nations Relief and Works Agency (UNRWA) includes an education programme for Palestinian refugees. The UK supports UNRWA's work, providing £25 million in 2001.

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what plans she has to address unemployment in the occupied territories. [43873]

Clare Short: We are supporting the World Bank's Employment Generation and NGO Capacity Building Programmes, both of which are designed to tackle rising unemployment in the Palestinian Territories. We have also contributed to the United Nations Relief and Works Agency's (UNRWA) Emergency Appeal, which includes employment creation schemes for Palestinian refugees.

Poverty Reduction Strategy Papers

Ms Drown: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will amend poverty reduction strategy papers—PRSPs—so that at decision point there is scope for greater financial flexibility to take into account changing factors and amendments to the plan can be made before completion point. [45191]

Clare Short: Poverty Reduction Strategy Papers (PRSPs) are country-owned documents produced by Heavily Indebted Poor Countries (HIPC), setting out how they intend to use the resources available to them—including from debt relief—to tackle poverty more effectively. We place great importance on this process, which involves consultation with civil society and the international donor community.

Under the HIPC Debt Initiative, countries receive interim debt relief once they reach Decision Point, at which stage they are required to produce an interim PRSP—a road map setting out what action needs to be taken to produce a full PRSP by Completion Point. Clearly, their circumstances may have changed by the time they reach Completion Point when the relief becomes irrevocable. The UK has worked to encourage agreement that the debt sustainability of countries will be reviewed at Completion Point, and that additional relief will be provided, in exceptional cases, where there has been fundamental changes in a country's circumstances due to external adverse factors.

Ms Drown: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what action she is taking to address the difference between the growth rate built into Malawi's PRSP and its actual growth rate. [45190]

Clare Short: We and other donors are advising the Malawi Government on the necessary conditions for higher growth. Prerequisites are restoration of macroeconomic stability, and improved economic and financial management. The Government has recently declared its intention to proceed with key reform measures. If successful, these should lead to higher private sector led growth.

Conflict Resolution

Mr. Lazarowicz: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what support her Department is giving to non-governmental organisations (a) in the UK and (b) elsewhere to enable them to undertake peacemaking, peacebuilding and conflict resolution activities. [44731]

Clare Short: My Department provides support to both UK-based and overseas non-governmental organisations through a number of sources, including through the Civil Society Challenge Fund and through our geographical programmes. We also have Partnership Programme Agreements (PPAs) with 11 UK-based NGOs and PPAs with a further four NGOs are under discussion. Expenditure under these PPAs in the 2002–03 financial year is expected to total £56,300,000. A substantial proportion of these agencies are working in localities which are either in conflict or have recently experienced conflict: peacemaking, peacebuilding and conflict resolution activities are therefore a key part of the challenge of promoting sustainable development and reducing violent conflict.

Mr. Lazarowicz: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps she is taking to develop her Department's work in the field of conflict and humanitarian affairs. [44733]

Clare Short: Violent conflict remains one of the most important obstacles to reducing poverty. My Department is developing its work in the field of conflict prevention and peacebuilding both directly through our work in developing countries and with two conflict prevention pools jointly managed by DFID, the Ministry of Defence and the Foreign and Commonwealth Office.

More than 20 countries in sub-Saharan Africa are currently devastated by or are recovering from violent conflict and 20 per cent. of the continent's population live in countries affected by armed conflicts. Through the Africa Pool, an inter-Departmental strategy has been developed for conflict prevention and peacekeeping in Africa, which focuses on geographic and thematic priorities. The Strategy involves working with international partners to support African Governments and institutions to prevent and resolve conflict at country and regional level.

We have focused particular attention on securing peace and stability in Sierra Leone and contributing to the establishment of durable and lasting solutions to the conflicts in the Great Lakes and Sudan. More broadly, my Department will continue to work on building inclusive and accountable governance structures, including security sector reform, strengthening state institutions and improving people's livelihoods, all of which contribute directly to conflict prevention and peacebuilding in Africa. With regard to Security Sector Reform, working with other donors and with international organisations and institutions, my Department has been active in developing policy as well as in implementing practical reform measures.

We also continue to address the issues raised by the Report of the Panel on UN Peace Operations, better known as the Brahimi Report, to help improve the ability of the UN to deal with complex peace operations. Activities have to date focussed on developing the resources for information gathering and analysis in and around the United Nations, and we are now discussing further activities with the UN Department of Peace Keeping Operations to further strengthen their operational capabilities.

Under the Global Conflict Prevention Pool, my Department, in close co-operation with FCO and MOD, is implementing a £19.5 million programme that seeks to reduce the uncontrolled proliferation of small arms and light weapons. We will continue to clarify and address the relationship between the uncontrolled proliferation of small arms and light weapons, insecurity and underdevelopment.

We have also developed a methodology to help development agencies assess possible development interventions in countries at risk of violent conflict. This methodology has been endorsed and picked up by other donor agencies in their conflict prevention work.

DFID is also active in its support of conflict prevention work at regional and international levels and through contributions to multilateral agencies, including the United Nations and the EU. We provide core support for the strengthening of the key humanitarian agencies—UNHCR, OCHA, WFP and the Red Cross family, as well as UNDP, UNICEF and the OHCHR—in addition to contributing to specific appeals during emergencies. We continue to be heavily involved with humanitarian mine action, primarily through the UN Mine Action Service. This includes mine clearance, developing indigenous capacity and the development, testing and trailing of suitable technologies.

My Department will continue to focus on improving and strengthening the disaster response mechanism that exists under the co-ordination of the United Nations at both local and global level to respond to disasters around the world. Following a disaster, most lives are saved in the first few hours by immediate local effort. We are therefore working to build local, national and regional capacities for effective response.

Mr. Lazarowicz: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what contribution her Department is making to the training of UN personnel engaged in peacemaking, peacebuilding and conflict resolution. [44730]

Clare Short: In the Report of the Panel on UN Peace Operations published in August 2000 (better known as the Brahimi Report), emphasis was placed on the importance of equipping UN personnel with the necessary skills in peacebuilding and conflict prevention.

We have been supporting a number of training initiatives for UN personnel (and others), notably, the UN Staff College training course in Early Warning and Preventive Measures, which provides UN field and Headquarters staff with basic skills in conflict analysis, as well as a comprehensive guide to the UN prevention process through the use of case studies. We have been supporting this course since its development in 1998 and over 720 UN staff have been trained to date.

In addition to this, we support the Fellowship Programme in Peacemaking and Preventive Diplomacy at the United Nations Institute for Training and Research (UNITAR). This training in conflict analysis, with a particular focus on negotiation and mediation, is designed for mid-level UN officials and National Government Civil Servants.

My Department also provides capacity building support to the Office of Emergency Programmes in UNICEF and the Bureau for Crisis Prevention and Recovery in UNDP.

This supports a range of institutional development activities, from policy development to monitoring and evaluation. It also supports in-house training activities with a particular focus on conflict and other humanitarian emergencies. The training programmes not only benefit the staff in these specialised units, but also other Headquarters staff, and of course, field staff.

In conjunction with the Canadian government we have sponsored the development, production and implementation of gender training materials for personnel involved in peace support operations. They emphasise women's role in conflict-reduction and peacebuilding activities.

Mr. Lazarowicz: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much has been spent by her Department on conflict resolution activities in the 2001–02 financial year. [44748]

Clare Short: During the financial year 2001–02 my Department expects to spend £4,500,000 on activities whose primary purpose was conflict prevention. We are also jointly responsible for expenditure on conflict prevention initiatives under the Africa Conflict Prevention Pool and the Global Conflict Prevention Pool, together with the Ministry of Defence and the Foreign and Commonwealth Office. Excluding peacekeeping costs, expenditure under the Africa Conflict Prevention Pool this financial year is expected to total £12,220,000 and expenditure for conflict prevention programmes under the Global Conflict Prevention Pool is expected to total £26,100,000.

Mr. Lazarowicz: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what support her Department is giving to courses furnishing civilians with the necessary skills to participate in peacemaking, peacebuilding and conflict resolution. [44732]

Clare Short: My Department supports a number of organisations providing formal and informal training opportunities to civilians in peacemaking, peacebuilding and conflict resolution activities. Civil society in developing countries has a key role to play in preventing and resolving conflicts, and organisations such as religious groups, the media, business and non-governmental organisations are often effective in promoting dialogue and reconciliation, as part of wider efforts to address the sources of tension and grievance which give rise to conflict.

Correspondence

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what the target time will be in 2002–03 for (a) Ministers to reply to letters from hon. Members and (b) officials in her Department to reply to letters received directly from members of the public. [44941]

Clare Short: The target time for reply to all correspondence received by DFID from Members of parliament and the public remains unchanged at 15 working days; in line with the target time prescribed by the Cabinet Office. In 2001, DFID replied to 87 per cent. of MPs letters and 90 per cent. of letters/e-mails sent direct to our Public Enquiry Point, within the 15 day target. The correspondence figures for all Government departments are published annually by the Cabinet Office.

Crèche Facilities

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what crèche facilities are provided by her Department; and at what cost. [44856]

Clare Short: There are no crèche facilities provided by my Department. We do provide holiday playschemes at both our Headquarters sites.

Our site in East Kilbride operates under a three-way partnership made up of DFID, Inland Revenue and Scottish Nuclear. Our site in London is part of the Whitehall Holiday Playscheme, run by the Cabinet Office at three sites in central London and open to a large proportion of Government Departments.

Secondments

Dr. Tonge: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many members of staff were employed by her Department on secondment from non-governmental organisations in (a) 1999, (b) 2000 and (c) 2001. [45232]

Clare Short: The information is as follows:

1999: 2

2000: 4

2001: 4.

Access to Information

Tony Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will list the administrative manuals and internal guidance which her Department has made public as required by Part 1 of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information; and which of these were first made available after May 1997. [45401]

Clare Short: Since November 2001, the Department for International Development has made available the following administrative manuals and internal guidance under its Freedom of Information Pilot Publication Scheme: Office Instructions; Evaluation Guidelines and Records Management Guidance.

Such guidance was not made available proactively under the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information.

Public Service Agreement

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development which public service agreement targets scheduled to be met in 2002 will not be achieved by the due date. [44810]

Clare Short: The information on Public Service Agreement targets set by my Department between April 1999 and April 2002 will appear in DFID's Departmental Report which will be published in April.

PFI/PPPs

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if she will list the (a) private finance initiative and (b) public private partnership projects which have been delayed. [44884]

Clare Short: DFID have no Private Finance Initiatives or Public-Private Partnerships which have been delayed.

Criminal Damage

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what the cost has been of criminal damage to her Department's buildings in each of the last four years. [44836]

Clare Short: There have been no costs attributable to criminal damage to my department's buildings over the specified period.

Celebrations

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what arrangements her Department has made to celebrate (a) St. Patrick's Day, (b) St. George's Day, (c) St. Andrew's Day and (d) Her Majesty the Queen's Golden Jubilee; and how her Department celebrated St. David's Day. [42295]

Clare Short: No arrangements have been made to celebrate any of these dates.

PRIME MINISTER

Public Bodies (Chairmen)

Mr. Forth: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list the appointments made by his Department since 1 May 1997 of chairmen of (a) non-departmental public bodies, (b) commissions, (c) inquiries, (d) agencies and (e) task forces; and if he will list their (i) term of office, (ii) salary and (iii) known political affiliation (A) past and (B) present. [33896]

The Prime Minister: I refer the right hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend, the Deputy Prime Minister, on Monday 25 March, Official Report, columns 586–9W.

Lord Birt

Norman Baker: To ask the Prime Minister if he was informed of Lord Birt's financial connections when he appointed him to his present transport role; and if he will make a statement. [34144]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 7 February 2002]: Lord Birt was appointed in accordance with the rules set out in paragraph 51 of the Ministerial Code. I am satisfied that there is no conflict of interest.

Consultants

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Prime Minister what the total cost to his Office was of the use of external consultants in each of the last four years. [35017]

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him by my hon. Friend, the Parliamentary Secretary, Cabinet Office today.

Publicity Expenditure

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list the publicity and advertising campaigns run by his Office in each of the last four years, specifying the (a) purpose, (b) cost to public funds, (c) number of staff involved and (d) method of evaluation in each case. [39100]

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him by my hon. Friend, the Parliamentary Secretary, Cabinet Office on Monday 25 March, Official Report, column 589W.

Press Office

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Prime Minister how many staff in his press office have received (a) termination and (b) redundancy payments in each of the last four years. [40944]

The Prime Minister: None.

Peers (Salaried Appointments)

Mr. Mudie: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list those peers appointed since May 1997 who have been given salaried posts by Government Departments, indicating the salary involved in each case. [40870]

The Prime Minister: The information requested is not held centrally and could only be obtained at disproportionate cost. In respect of my office, I have appointed Baroness Morgan as a special adviser. In accordance with Exemption 12 of Part II of the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information, details of individual salaries are not disclosed in order to protect the privacy of the individuals concerned.

Information on the membership of the boards of public bodies, and their remuneration, is set out in the annual publication Public Bodies. Similar information in respect of membership of Task Forces, Ad Hoc Advisory Groups and reviews is set out in the annual report on Task Forces, Ad hoc Advisory Groups and Reviews. Ministerial appointments are set out in the List of Ministerial Responsibilities. All three documents are published and copies are available in the Library of the House.

Human Rights Act

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Prime Minister how many cases have been brought against his Office under the Human Rights Act 1998; and what has been the cost in (a) legal fees to defend cases and (b) compensation payments. [45066]

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him by my hon. Friend, the Parliamentary Secretary, Cabinet Office on Monday 25 March, Official Report, column 585W.

LNM Holdings

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Lewes (Norman Baker) of 4 February 2002, Official Report, column 690W, whether he assesses the allegations made relating to (a) Mr. Mittal and (b) representatives of LNM to be unsubstantiated and unjustified; and if he will make a statement. [46447]

The Prime Minister: I have nothing further to add.

Disabled People

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Prime Minister what recent representations he has had further to his welcome on 5 July 2000 for Rehabilitation International's Charter for the Third Millennium, with particular reference to developments in relation to the Charter's call for a UN Convention on the Rights of Disabled People; and what reply has been sent. [45829]

The Prime Minister: I refer my right hon. Friend to the answer I gave my right hon. Friend the Member for Manchester Gorton (Mr. Kaufman), on 25 March 2002, Official Report, column 620–1W.

Petition (Isle of Wight)

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Prime Minister what his response is to the petition of residents of the Isle of Wight delivered to No. 10 Downing Street on 19 March. [46309]

The Prime Minister: I have asked my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry to reply on my behalf.

Gavin Martin Taylor

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Prime Minister when he expects to respond to the letter from the hon. Member for the Isle of Wight concerning the death of Gavin Martin Taylor. [46310]

The Prime Minister: My hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Health will be replying to the letter this week.

SOLICITOR-GENERAL

Ministerial Visits

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Solicitor-General how many overseas visits she has made since 7 June 2001. [46172]

The Solicitor-General: Since 7 June 2001, I have made one visit overseas to the Pontignano conference in Italy from 21–23 September 2001.

Counsel (Ethnic Monitoring)

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Solicitor-General what ethnic monitoring she has initiated concerning use of counsel by her Department. [46170]

The Solicitor-General: As to civil work, since the introduction of a competitive appointments system in 1998 all applicants to be included in panels of junior counsel maintained by the Attorney General and as standing counsel have been asked to complete an equal opportunities monitoring form which asks them to indicate their ethnic origin. Completion of the form is voluntary. The method of selection for the panels and the operation of the panel system is being reviewed.

As to criminal work apart from the Crown Prosecution Service and the Serious Fraud Office, a panel of junior counsel conducting cases on behalf of HM Customs and Excise, the Inland Revenue, the Department of Work and Pensions/Health, the Department of Trade and Industry, DEFRA, the Health and Safety Executive and the Environment Agency is being set up.

All applicants to be considered for the panel and, in the recently concluded appointments exercise for the Customs and Excise and the Department of Trade and Industry, as standing counsel, have been invited to complete an equal opportunities monitoring form, completion of which is voluntary.

As to the Crown Prosecution Service, all applicants to be considered for lists of junior counsel maintained by the CPS are invited to complete an ethnic monitoring form on a voluntary basis. The CPS maintains a national database with details of the ethnicity and gender of all counsel on its lists. Since July 2001 the CPS has been monitoring its distribution of work to counsel by ethnicity and gender. A computer program has been developed to facilitate data collection which will be made available in all CPS areas within the next few months. The information currently being gathered is shared with the Bar and the distribution of work is discussed at regular liaison meetings, which take place on all circuits.

The Serious Fraud Office is in the process of establishing a new counsel "pool" containing the names of counsel considered suitable for SFO work, who have been referred by their Heads of Chambers. When accepted by the Director for inclusion in the SFO "pool", counsel are invited to complete an individual ethnic monitoring form on a voluntary basis. When the new pool has been in operation for a year, the results of this monitoring will be reviewed.

The Law Officers are committed to promoting diversity and equal opportunity. Advertisements for all recruitment exercises state that members of ethnic minorities are particularly encouraged to apply.

Auld Report

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Solicitor-General what representations she has received concerning the Auld Report; and if she will make a statement. [46232]

The Solicitor-General: I have discussed issues raised by Sir Robin Auld's Report of his Review of the criminal courts with many individuals, including Crown Prosecutors, defence practitioners and hon. Members, and I have also taken part in three of the Ministerial "roadshows", in Newcastle, Birmingham and Cambridge, where the Report was discussed with a wide range of interested parties.

Formal representations on the Report, of which there have been over 400, have been received on behalf of the Government by the Lord Chancellor's Department.

Customs and Excise

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Solicitor-General what progress has been made in implementing the recommendations made by his Honour John Gower QC and Sir Anthony Hammond KCB QC in their report on prosecutions conducted by the Solicitor's Office of HM Customs and Excise. [46855]

The Solicitor-General: In the Parliamentary Answer given by the then Attorney General on 12 March 2001, Official Report, column WA68, he announced that the Government had accepted all the recommendations in principle, but had opted for a phased approach to implementation.

Since that announcement, the Prosecutions Group of the Solicitor's Office has forged ahead with a rapid programme of change, to enable it to deliver legal services of a high quality in a responsive and flexible way. New managers and staff have been recruited, the organisation has been restructured, and working practices are being reformed.

The Parliamentary Answer also referred to accountability for the prosecutions function moving from the Commissioners to the Attorney General on 1 April 2002.

Final agreement has not yet been reached on the implementation of Recommendation 4 of the Gower/ Hammond Recommendations, which recommended that in relation to the prosecution function the Solicitor for the Customs and Excise should not be funded by the Commissioners, but should have his own ring fenced budget and be accountable for his own expenditure.

This Recommendation is accepted in principle by the Government, but there are technical issues relating to the establishment of a separate vote which require further time to resolve. The Government is committed to the full implementation of Recommendation 4 no later than 1 April 2003, but in the meantime the Prosecutions Group budget will remain as part of the Customs and Excise vote, though it will be separately identified and managed by the Solicitor for the Customs and Excise, and financial Accounts/Reports will be produced as if that budget has been established as a separate vote.

As a consequence of these revised arrangements, the Attorney General will not assume full accountability for the prosecutions function from 1 April. Instead, from that date the following arrangements will apply:

(1) The Commissioners (and Treasury Ministers) will be responsible for, and accountable to Parliament for:

anything done in the course of an investigation; enforcement policy, including the resources to be deployed;

prosecution policy ie the seriousness with which offences should in general be treated and wider issues of Departmental policy such as the disclosure of informants; decisions on alternatives to prosecution such as compounding, civil evasion action etc.

(2) The Law Officers will be responsible for, and accountable to Parliament for:

the quality of legal advice given by Investigation Legal Advisers;

the quality of the Prosecutions Group casework decision making in relation to cases referred to that Group for prosecution;

the application (the Prosecutions Group having consulted with Customs Administrators, as appropriate) of prosecutions policy and public interest factors to individual defendants in cases referred to the Prosecutions Group for prosecution.

Inspection of the Prosecutions Group by the CPS Inspectorate will commence on 1 April 2002, and the Prosecution Group will proceed with the trials referred to in the previous Parliamentary Answer.

The Government is satisfied that the arrangements that will apply from 1 April strengthen the involvement of the Attorney General with the difficult and complex criminal casework conducted by the Solicitor's Office, maintain the momentum of change that has been established and preserve an appropriate position on Parliamentary accountability.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Immigration

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to replace the application forms for foreign nationals wishing to apply for leave to remain in the United Kingdom. [46682]

Angela Eagle: The current application forms are valid for use only until 14 April 2002. Revised forms will be prescribed before then. They will be available shortly. From the time they are issued until 14 April 2002, applications may be made on either the new forms or the present versions. Only the new forms may be used for applications made on or after 15 April 2002. Copies will be placed in the Library when they are available.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the reasons are for the delay in forwarding immigration status letters in Case Ref. No. Z1010863/4; and if he will make a statement. [43084]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 14 March 2002]: I wrote to my hon. Friend about this case on 25 March 2002.

Police Performance Indicators

Lawrie Quinn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will announce the (a) ministerial priorities and (b) Best Value performance indicators for the police for 2002–03. [46683]

Mr. Denham: I am pleased to announce that the statutory instruments have now been laid before the House. The Ministerial Priorities, which will come into effect on 1 April 2002, are:

to help create safe communities by reducing crime, anti-social behaviour and disorder through effective partnership working, including reducing the availability and use of Class A drugs; to reduce the fear of crime in all sections of the community and in particular to increase the trust and confidence in policing amongst minority ethnic communities; and to increase the number of offences for which offenders, and particularly persistent offenders, are caught and brought to justice, in partnership with other criminal justice agencies.

Subject to the approval of both Houses, the Best Value Performance Indicators will also come into effect on 1 April 2002. My right hon. Friend, the Home Secretary, has honoured his undertaking to the police that he would make a significant reduction to the number of indicators to focus police effort where it is most needed. The full list will be placed in the Library in the next few days.

The Home Secretary will, by the summer, introduce a performance indicator on tackling persistent offenders. Persistent offenders must be caught and dealt with to protect the public from their activities. An indicator to measure police success in driving up performance will be introduced as soon as data collection systems are in place.

Office Accommodation

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress has been made on his plans for new office accommodation for the Home Office and Her Majesty's Prison Service staff working in Central London. [46684]

Mr. Blunkett: A contract has been awarded to Annes Gate Property plc, for a new development on the site of the former Department of Environment offices at Marsham Street. The contract is for a period of 29 years and involves the construction of new office accommodation, its long-term maintenance, and provision of facility management and business support services. The net present cost of the contract is around £311 million at current prices. The demolition of the existing building at Marsham Street will start as soon as possible. On current plans, completion of the new development is expected to be Spring 2005. Westminster City Council have already given planning consent for the re-development of the site which includes mixed office, residential and commercial development. The Department plans to vacate five of its existing office buildings in central London after the move to Marsham Street.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Malins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what written representations have been made to him in the last three months concerning staffing levels and staff training at Yarl's Wood; and if he will place copies to the Library. [38669]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 28 February 2002]: Oral representations were made to my right hon. Friend, the Home Secretary during his visit to Yarl's Wood removal centre on 18 March 2002. The issues of staff levels and staff training at Yarl's Wood will naturally be amongst those covered by the Immigration and Nationality Directorate inquiry into the incident.

Mr. Leigh: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if the Asylum Seeker Accommodation Centre proposed for Hemswell Cliff will require a staff of between 200 and 300; from where they will be recruited; and what training they will receive; [44648]

(2) what training employees of accommodation centres will receive and at what estimated annual cost; [44645]

(3) what assessment has been made of the need for additional public transport if the Hemswell Cliff development proceeds; [44647]

(4) what consultation with the local health authorities takes place before an accommodation centre is established; [44646]

(5) what the estimated annual running cost of the proposed Asylum Seekers Accommodation Centre at Hemswell Cliff is; [44649]

(6) what steps he is taking to ensure that all member states of the European Union meet the provisions of the Geneva Convention relating to asylum seekers; [44599]

(7) if additional funding will be given to Lincolnshire Police if an Accommodation Centre for Asylum Seekers is built at Hemswell Cliff; [44644]

(8) what the annual budget of the National Asylum Support Service in the last financial year was; and the estimated budget for the current financial year; [44641]

(9) what consultations have taken place to ensure that no further strains will be put on the provision of dental services in Lincolnshire if an asylum seekers' accommodation centre is built at Hemswell Cliff. [44598]

Angela Eagle: It is estimated that an accommodation centre with around 750 residents would require between 200 and 300 staff. These are likely to include a mixture of locally recruited staff, together with some who transfer from elsewhere in the country. Staff training, and its cost, will be a matter for the contractors selected to run the sites.

Transport implications will form a part of the planning process for the trial Accommodation Centres. We will provide for transport for residents where necessary.

We will consult local service providers as part of the planning process. Department of Health officials will act as the initial conduit between the Home Office and the National Health Service (NHS) in respect of accommodation centres once the sites have been selected.

This is a matter for contractors who will run the centres. Bids to operate Accommodation Centres have not yet been invited.

I am satisfied that in most respects our European partners are already meeting the quite broadly defined provision of the Geneva Convention. However, it is true that there are differences in the way the Geneva Convention is interpreted and there are variations in asylum practice among Member States. This is why the United Kingdom (UK) government has committed itself to helping establish a common European asylum system, which can respond effectively to the challenge that global movements of people present and help limit unwarranted secondary movement of asylum seekers between European Union (EU) states.

The Government has opted in to all the European asylum proposals to date and in doing so continues to exert maximum influence during negotiations. Of particular significance in reaching consensus on a common application of the Geneva Convention is the proposal for a Council Directive on minimum standards for the qualification and status of refugees, presented by the European Commission in November 2001. One of the key aims of this draft directive is to establish a common interpretation of Article 1A of the Geneva Convention, the grounds for refugee status. The definition of prosecution adopted by the Commission reflects the current UK position.

Hemswell Cliff is just one of a number of places that are being considered as a possible suitable site for an Accommodation Centre for Asylum Seekers. A final decision has not yet been taken. We have no plans to vary police grant in areas where asylum facilities may be located.

The budget for National Asylum Support Services (NASS) in 2000–01 was £38* million. This figure includes grants totalling £22 million* to the voluntary sector for the provision of services to asylum seekers and refugees.

Total spending on asylum support in the year 1 April 2000 to 31 March 2001 was £751 million*. This includes grant payments of £580 million* to local authorities and the Scottish Executive for provision of accommodation and support for asylum seeking adults and families under the Interim Regulations and for unaccompanied asylum seeking children (UASC). A further £12 million* was paid to local authorities and the Scottish Executive directly by NASS under contracts to provide accommodation and related services for dispersed asylum seekers.

£46 million* was paid directly by NASS to private sector accommodation providers for the provision of accommodation and related services to dispersed asylum seekers.

The budget for the current financial year, 2001–02, is £36 million*. This figure includes grants totalling £18.1 million* to the voluntary sector for the provision of services to asylum seekers and refugees.

The budget for asylum support for 2001–02 is £1,094 million*.

No consultations have taken place on the provision of dental services in Lincolnshire in relation to the potential site at Hemswell Cliff. Health care will be provided at Accommodation Centres and we will consider how best dental services can be provided in consultation with the Department of Health.

* All figures rounded to nearest £ million.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what guidelines he has issued on the establishment of centres housing asylum seekers in remote rural areas; [45163]

(2) if he will make a statement on the security criteria for centres housing asylum seekers in remote rural areas. [45166]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 25 March 2002]: No guidelines have been issued. Home Office officials are currently looking at a number of potential sites, but no decisions have yet been taken. A wide range of factors, including transport, environmental, and health and safety issues, will be taken into account before the final site selection is made.

In making final decisions on preferred sites, we will take all the relevant factors into account including security, to which the hon. Member refers. These assessments have not yet been made.

Leave to Remain

Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many applications to remain in this country have been (a) granted and (b) refused under the domestic violence concession; and if he will make a statement. [44441]

Angela Eagle: Up to the end of 2000, the latest available data from case records, show that 93 applications were made under the terms of the concession, of which 63 have been granted settlement and 30 have been refused.

Public Appointments

Fiona Mactaggart: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many appointments to public bodies have been made through his Department (a) from April 2000 to March 2001 and (b) since 31 March 2001; and how many of these were (i) men and (ii) women. [42164]

Angela Eagle: The number of men and women appointed, or re-appointed, by Ministers in this Department to bodies sponsored by this Department during the periods in question is as follows:

Period	Men appointed	Women appointed
1 April 2000 to 31 March 2001	296	176
1 April 2001 to 28 February 2002	204	142

Summary information contained in 'Public Bodies 2001', which was published on 14 February 2002, shows that as at 31 March 2001, women held 34 per cent. of appointments made to the boards of public bodies, and people from ethnic minority backgrounds held 4.8 per cent. of appointments. This is an increase of 1 per cent. and 0.4 per cent. respectively on the previous year. The position in the Home Office was better than the average: on 31 March 2001 women held 40 per cent. of all appointments to Home Office sponsored NDPBs, and people from ethnic minority backgrounds held 9.1 per cent.

The Home Office has included the following in its objectives to be achieved by March 2005:

1. "To increase the number of women applicants for appointments to public bodies so as to achieve an interim target of 45 per cent. women appointees by 31 March 2005."
2. "To ensure that women, people from ethnic minority backgrounds and disabled people are each represented in line with these targets on the different types of bodies, and in responsibility, including the Chair and Vice-Chair."

To achieve these objectives the Department will, amongst other measures:

1. Employ targeted advertising to encourage under-represented groups to apply.
2. Seek possible candidates using candidate lists held by other government departments.
3. Continue to monitor the composition of the different types of bodies sponsored by the Home Office and the proportion of women, people from ethnic minority backgrounds and disabled people in positions of Chair and Vice-Chair.

Anti-Drugs Co-ordinator

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many times the United Kingdom Anti-Drugs Co-ordinator held meetings with members and officials of the United States Government between 18 February 2000 and 3 August 2001; when and where each of these meetings took place; and which (a) United States Government departments and (b) members and officials of the United States Government were involved in each meeting; [43447]

(2) how many times the United Kingdom Anti-Drugs Co-ordinator has held meetings with members and officials of the United States Government since 3 August 2001; when and where each of these meetings took place; and which (a) United States Government departments and (b) members and officials of the United States Government were involved in each meeting. [43446]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth: Between 18 February 2000 and 3 August 2001 the former United Kingdom Anti-Drugs Co-ordinator held meetings in his office with members and officials of the United States (US) Government on three occasions as follows:

On 18 February 2000 he met Wendy Chamberlain, Principal Deputy Assistant for International Narcotics Law Enforcement Affairs in the US together with Mike McManamon, Drugs Enforcement Agency (DEA) Attaché and George Dragnich, Counsellor for Labor and Social Affairs from the US Embassy in London; on 23 August 2000 he met Congressman John Mica, together with Mike McManamon and Sharon Pinkerton, Mr Mica's assistant; on 6 March 2001 he met George Dragnich and Su Zann Lamb, Justice and Home Affairs Liaison Officer at the US Embassy London.

Following the election last year, responsibility for delivering the National Drugs Strategy transferred to the Home Secretary. Since 3 August 2001, my right hon. Friend, the Home Secretary has met with John Ashcroft, United States (US) Attorney General (11–12 December 2001) and James Sensenbrenner, Chair of the House of Representatives Judiciary Committee (17–18 January 2002). Both meetings took place in London.

Keith Hellawell, who is now employed part time as the Home Secretary's expert adviser on drugs, has met only one official from the United States Government since 3 August 2001. The official was Keith Eddins who is employed as the US First Secretary covering Justice and Home Affairs issues at the US Embassy in the Czech Republic. The meeting took place at the British Embassy in Prague on Wednesday 20 February 2002.

Court Attendance

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many days are lost annually by professional health staff required to attend court to give evidence of injury incurred by pensioners who have been subjected to physical assault; and what the estimated cost of this is to the public service in each of the last three years. [38768]

Mr. Hutton: I have been asked to reply. The information requested is not collected centrally.

WALES

Human Rights Act

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many cases have been brought against his Department under the Human Rights Act 1998; and what has been the cost in (a) legal fees to defend cases and (b) compensation payments. [45073]

Mr. Paul Murphy: None.

Creche Facilities

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what creche facilities are provided by his Department; and at what cost. [44863]

Mr. Paul Murphy: None.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Publicity Expenditure

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what assessment she has made of the total real terms expenditure of her Department, its agencies and non-departmental public bodies on publicity in each of the years (a) 1997–98, (b) 1998–99, (c) 1999–2000, (d) 2000–01 and (e) 2001–02, (i) to date and (ii) as estimated for the whole of the present year; and if she will break these figures down to indicate expenditure on (A) advertising and (B) press and public relations. [36159]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Expenditure from the Department's central advertising and publicity budget is as follows (in real terms):

	£ million
1997–98	11.9
1998–99	14.3
1999–2000	10.3
2000–01	15.0
2001–02 (to end January)	6.0
2001–02 (estimated)	11.7

In addition to expenditure from this central budget, expenditure from budgets allocated to individual programmes will also include spend on publicity related activity. It is not possible, except at disproportionate cost, to separately identify all such publicity related expenditure. It is possible to identify expenditure on advertising and on public relations drawn from all budgets and this is as follows (in real terms):

	Advertising (£m)	Public relations (£m)
1997–98	11.0	0
1998–99	16.8	0.6
1999–2000	12.4	0.1
2000–01	29.7	0.8
2001–02 (to end January)	17.7	0.6
2001–02 (estimated)	17.7	0.6

Information on expenditure by agencies and non-departmental public bodies is not held centrally.

Celebrations

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what arrangements her Department has made to celebrate (a) St. Patrick's Day, (b) St. George's Day, (c) St. Andrew's Day and (d) Her Majesty the Queen's Golden Jubilee; and how her Department celebrated St. David's Day. [42300]

Mr. Ivan Lewis [holding answer 11 March 2002]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport gave to the hon. Member for Suffolk South on 11 February, Official Report, columns 58–59W.

The Department has made no specific arrangements to celebrate St. Patrick's Day, St. George's Day, St. Andrew's Day or St. David's Day.

Examination Results

Mr. Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) how many, and what proportion of pupils achieved five or more GCSEs at A* to C grades in each year between 1997 and 2001; [45335]

(2) how many and what proportion of pupils achieved five or more GCSEs at A* to C grades, where those grades included an A* to C grade in each of English, maths and science, in each year between 1997 and 2001. [45333]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The number and proportion of 15-year-old pupils that achieved five or more GCSEs at A* to C grades, including English, mathematics and science in England are in the table:

	Number	As percentage of 15-year-old pupils
1996–97	194,708	33.2
1997–98	197,179	34.3
1998–99	207,272	35.7
1999–2000	214,181	36.9
2000–01	226,879	37.6

The number and proportion of 15-year-old pupils that achieved five or more GCSEs at A* to C grades in England are in the table:

	Number	As percentage of 15-year-old pupils
1996–97	264,892	45.1
1997–98	266,431	46.3
1998–99	278,560	47.9
1999–2000	285,727	49.2
2000–01	301,521	50.0

Consultants

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will estimate the number of former teachers and headteachers working for firms of consultants providing services for her Department, local education authorities and schools. [45710]

Mr. Ivan Lewis [holding answer 25 March 2002]: The Department for Education and Skills does not collect this information. The former occupation of consultants is a matter for individual consultancy companies as employers.

Connexions

Phil Hope: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how the Connexions service will be evaluated. [46325]

Mr Ivan Lewis: The evaluation of the Connexions Service will build on the experience of the pilot studies using a combination of opinion surveys, impact studies and a programme identifying effective practice.

Opinion surveys. These will cover the views of young people including non-users of the Connexions Service and the opinions of the key stakeholders involved with each Connexions Partnership. Run annually, using a standard set of questions, these surveys will make it possible to monitor changes in views towards the Service over time as Connexions is rolled out nationally.

Impact studies. This component of the evaluation strategy will look in detail at Partnership activity to assess how effective the service has been in helping young people. The focus will be on the range of interventions made by a personal adviser and the intention is to track a selected cohort of young people over time to assess outcomes.

Identifying effective practice. The third component of the strategy is to secure prompt feedback about what works operationally and what constitutes effective practice. A rolling programme of studies will be commissioned covering specific issues relevant to the key delivery areas of the Service.

Faith Schools

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will list the faith schools which receive public funding, specifying the amount in each case. [45760]

Mr. Timms: There are approximately 5,000 voluntary schools maintained by Local Education Authorities (LEAs) in England with either a religious or church-related character. LEAs' Section 52 budget statements do not identify these schools separately; it is therefore not possible to provide the information requested without incurring disproportionate costs. All LEA maintained schools are funded on a similar basis, via a local formula methodology, which is based predominately on pupil numbers, along with other specific factors which relate to individual schools' needs.

NVQs (Grants)

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what (a) the number of grants paid out and (b) the average grant allocation given to individuals to obtain National Vocational Qualification level II was in each of the last five years. [45626]

Margaret Hodge: There is a range of support payments available to eligible students and trainees studying towards National Vocational Qualification Level 2, including: Education Maintenance Allowances paid to young people who stay on at school or college and available on a pilot basis in 30 per cent. of England; Access Funds paid to students in cases of hardship and also used to fund residential support for certain specified courses for which a young person needs to live away from home; Training Allowances for 16–24 year olds in unwaged work based learning; and help with the childcare costs of those in learning. In addition, the Department provides significant funding to cover the tuition costs of the education and training provided to individuals.

It is not possible, however, to identify either the total number of NVQ Level 2 students helped or the average value of financial assistance received by individuals. Information held by the Department does not differentiate between those individuals studying towards NVQ Level 2 and those aiming for other types and levels of qualification.

Schools

David Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what her policy is on surplus places in schools; and if she will publish the numbers and percentages of surplus places for each local education authority in England [46933]

Mr. Timms: Our policies are focused on raising educational standards. It is wasteful for resources to be locked into maintaining surplus places in schools. Wherever possible these should be freed up and directed towards improving standards. In planning school provision, local education authorities should look for opportunities for removing surplus capacity, with a view to bringing supply and demand for school places into better balance. Their initial focus should be on those schools with 25 per cent. or more of their places unfilled, having particular regard to standards at those schools. The overall aim should be to maximise parental preference and to provide good quality education in the most cost-effective way. The Department's annual survey of surplus places allows us to monitor how local education authorities are meeting this challenge. The Audit Commission has again drawn attention to this issue and, with District Auditors, is promoting good practice.

Local education authorities have again made progress in the removal of surplus places. The survey returns indicate that there were 699,770 surplus school places in January 2001, representing 9 per cent. of the total capacity of 7.8 million places. This is an overall reduction of 10,219 places on the 2000 figures. Since 1998 a total of 74,050 surplus places have been removed. This reduction means that more money will be spent raising school standards rather than maintaining empty buildings.

The following tables are based on the returns made by the local education authorities in respect of all maintained primary and secondary schools in their area. They set out the numbers of surplus places as at January 2001 for each local authority area, listing primary and secondary separately, together with the proportion that these represent of total capacity. They also highlight the numbers of schools which at that date had surplus of 25 per cent. or more, and at least 30 surplus places, together with the proportion that these represent of the total number of schools.

The number of schools with 25 per cent. or more surplus places has again risen for the second successive year, to 2,441 compared with 2,406 in 2000. As with the 2000 survey, the number of primary schools in this category has risen (2,139 in 2001 which represents 12 per cent. of all primary schools, compared to 2,013 (11 per cent.) in 2000) while the number of secondary schools has declined (302 in 2001, which represents 9 per cent. of all secondary schools, compared with 393 (11 per cent.) in 2000).

The returns also provide the Department with details of the action authorities propose to take on schools with 25 per cent. or more surplus. The returns indicate that in many cases action is being taken, or is planned. Where planning strategies are unclear in areas with particularly high levels of surplus, the Department will be following up with the authorities concerned.

[2] Actual surplus is defined as the difference between capacity and number on roll for all schools where capacity exceeds number on roll.
[3] Schools with less than 30 surplus places are not included.

Schools Private Finance Initiative Projects

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what new schools private finance initiative projects she will support for signature in 2003–04; and if she will make a statement. [46932]

John Healey: Fifty-three Local Education Authorities have recently submitted proposals to the Department, seeking funding support through PFI credits for school based projects aiming to sign in 2003–04. These proposals represent a PFI credit requirement of over £3 billion. Following a rigorous appraisal of the bids by the Department's officials, we are today announcing that 21 projects, representing more than £900 million PFI credits in total, have been approved in principle and will be invited to prepare outline business cases for further consideration. Proposals representing around £750 million are expected to sign in 2003–04, and the remainder in 2004–05.

This is a very substantial package of investment. It will support the Government's drive to improve the learning environments in schools, and will also help to further raise standards for children, the school workforce and the wider community.

Details of the projects to be supported are being published today in a Departmental Press Notice and I have arranged for copies to be placed in the Libraries of the House.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Public Service Agreements

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) if the public service agreement target for the transfer of responsibility for underwater archaeology was achieved on time; [46093]

(2) which public service agreement targets scheduled to be met in 2002 will not be achieved by the due date. [44814]

Dr. Howells: The transfer of responsibilities in respect of underwater archaeology to English Heritage is dependent on legislation to extend English Heritage's remit out to the limit of the territorial waters of the UK adjacent to England. Provision for this was included in the Government's Culture and Recreation Bill which fell before the last election, thus preventing us meeting this element of the PSA target. Similar provisions are included in Baroness Anelay's National Heritage Bill which is currently before Parliament and is receiving Government support. We are hopeful that the transfer will take place in the near future.

Information about progress on PSA targets will be published in the Department's 2002 Departmental Report.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if the PSA target that 80 per cent. of public libraries should have Internet connections by 2002 will be met on time. [46095]

Dr. Howells: The £100 million lottery funded programme to connect all public libraries to the Internet is proceeding well with 71 per cent. of libraries in England now online and is expected to meet the year end deadline by which time all libraries will be online.

British Tourist Authority

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will make a statement on the recent activities of the British Tourist Authority in attracting foreign visitors to Scotland. [44794]

Dr. Howells: The British Tourist Authority's recent activities to attract visitors to Britain have all featured Scotland prominently, for example, the new Britain's Royal Heritage map features Scottish locations such as Glamis and The Queen's View. The Hidden Britain campaign, launched last year, highlights 14 routes through less well-known parts of Britain, including Blair Atholl and Pitlochry. In addition, the BTA's Bollywood Movie Map identifies locations throughout Britain, including Scone Palace and Brechin, which have been used in over 20 Indian films.

Items in Lieu of Tax

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the cost was of (a) the storage and (b) the upkeep and maintenance of items accepted in lieu of tax by the Inland Revenue in the last 12 months; and which Department is responsible for these costs. [45219]

Dr. Howells: Items which are accepted in lieu of tax by the Inland Revenue are allocated to nominated institutions which will display them to the public. Therefore any costs for their storage, upkeep and maintenance are borne by these institutions in the same way that they will bear the costs of any other item kept by them.

Tourism Statistics

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what plans she has to change the collection of tourism statistics; and if she will publish these statistics on the departmental website. [45218]

Dr. Howells: We are currently examining what cost efficient changes to the current system of collection of tourism statistics might be made.

Tourism statistics are already available on the STAR UK website (www.staruk.org.uk) which was established jointly by the National Tourist Boards and DCMS.

Odsal Stadium

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what discussions her Department has had with interested parties on the redevelopment of Odsal Stadium, Bradford. [45578]

Mr. Caborn: My Department has had no such discussions with the interested parties involved in the redevelopment of the Odsal Stadium, but my officials are aware of the proposed scheme. I visited Odsal Stadium on one of my regional visits.

Pub Opening Hours

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) what measures she has taken to allow pubs to open at later hours; [45481]

(2) what assessment she has made of the impact of pub opening hours on the binge drinking culture; [45479]

(3) what statutory restrictions there are on pubs opening at late hours; and if she will introduce legislation to allow pubs to open at any time. [45480]

Dr. Howells: The White Paper "Time for Reform: Proposals for the Modernisation of Our Licensing Laws (Cm 4696)", published on 10 April 2000, set out our views on the problem of binge drinking and our plans for reforming the alcohol and public entertainment licensing laws in England and Wales, including the hours during which alcohol may be sold or supplied to the public at public houses and other premises. The existing law establishes permitted licensing hours outside of which licensed premises may not sell or serve alcohol without the special permission of licensing justices; and their consent may only be granted in particular circumstances.

The existing fixed closing times are artificially early. They actively contribute to binge drinking at the end of normal opening time, and result in significant numbers of intoxicated people on our streets simultaneously. This in turn leads to peaks of disorder around closing times. To counter and minimise public disorder resulting from fixed closing times, we intend to introduce flexible opening hours as a condition of the licences of each venue, with the potential for some to operate up to 24 hour opening on each day of the week, subject to consideration of the impact on local residents. These changes require the amendment of primary legislation and we intend to introduce a Bill to that end as soon as Parliamentary time permits.

Free Television Licences

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many pensioners in Portsmouth have benefited from free television licences; and if she will make a statement. [46441]

Dr. Howells: TV Licensing, which administers the free television licence scheme for the BBC as Licensing Authority, is not able to provide geographical breakdowns of the number of free licences issued. However, estimates based on the 1991 Census indicate that there were approximately 14,600 people aged 75 or over in the Portsmouth, North and Portsmouth, South constituencies.

Educational and Sports Facilities

Laura Moffatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will make a statement regarding her assessment of the benefits of combining community sports facilities with educational facilities on a single site. [46460]

Mr. Caborn: Enhancing facilities is an integral part of the Government's PE and school sport strategy, being delivered jointly by the Department for Education and Skills and the Department for Culture, Media and Sport. The Space for Sport and Arts programme is providing £130 million, and the New Opportunities £541 million within England alone, to ensure schools have the facilities they need to deliver PE and school sport whilst also opening up schools so the wider community can also benefit from the new facilities.

Gambling Review Body

Mr. Ivan Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when she will publish her conclusions on the report of the Gambling Review Body. [46680]

Tessa Jowell: We have today laid before both Houses a document setting out the Government's detailed response to the report of the Gambling Review Body. This paper, A Safe Bet for Success, sets out the Government's vision for a modern system of regulation for gambling in Great Britain. We shall bring forward a Bill to give effect to our proposals when Parliamentary time permits.

Media Ownership Rules

David Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when she will publish the results of the recent consultation on media ownership rules. [46681]

Tessa Jowell: I am today publishing a summary of the responses to the Consultation on Media Ownership Rules published by my Department in November 2001. This will be available on the Department's website (www.culture.gov.uk). The summary is intended to help all interested parties understand the issues and the arguments that have been put forward on this complex and important area. The Government's decisions on these issues will be announced alongside the draft Communications Bill which we hope to publish around the end of April.

I am arranging for copies of the summary to be placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Lottery Grants (Distribution)

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) if she will take steps to improve the levels of Lottery grants to (a) Barrow-in-Furness and (b) Wear Valley; [46422]

(2) what appraisal she has made of Lottery funding levels for (a) Barrow-in-Furness and (b) Wear Valley; [46420]

(3) if she will discuss with Lottery distributing bodies the level of grants to (a) Barrow-in-Furness and (b) Wear Valley. [46421]

Mr. Caborn: According to the information supplied to us by the distributing bodies for the national lottery awards database, Lottery funding per capita made to date in the Barrow-in-Furness and Wear Valley local authority areas is £144.03 and £89.77 respectively. This compares to a median value of £91.76 per capita for UK local authorities. The Government is committed to ensuring that all areas in the UK benefit from Lottery funding and is working with distributors to achieve this.

PFI/PPPs

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) what the difference was between the price offered in reaching preferred bidder stage and the final contract price for PPP contracts let by her Department in each of the last four years; and if she will make a statement; [45611]

(2) what the difference was between the price offered in reaching preferred bidder stage and the final contract price for the five largest PFI contracts let by her Department in each of the last four years; and if she will make a statement. [45596]

Dr. Howells [holding answer 25 March 2002]: The Department for Culture, Media and Sport, has had no involvement with Private Finance Initiative contracts in any of the last four years.

Correspondence

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when she will reply to the letter of 19 December 2001 from the hon. Member for Fareham, concerning his constituent Mrs. Miolk. [45804]

Dr. Howells: I replied to the hon. Member on 25 March 2002 and I apologise for the delay in replying.

HEALTH

MRSA

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the extent of MRSA in NHS hospitals. [43728]

Yvette Cooper: Early data on Methicillin Resistant Staphylococcus Aureus rates for every acute trust in England were published on 8 February 2002 in the Public Health Laboratory Service Communicable Diseases Report. This is the first phase of a comprehensive and mandatory surveillance system for healthcare associated infection.

Barnsley Primary Care Trust

Mr. Illsley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he is taking to reduce the shortfall in the 2002–03 budget of the Barnsley primary care trust. [43729]

Ms Blears: South Yorkshire Strategic Health Authority and the Northern Directorate of Health and Social Care are currently working with the Barnsley health community to tackle the financial situation.

NHS Beds (North-West)

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what change there has been in the number of NHS beds in hospitals in the north-west since 1997. [43732]

Jacqui Smith: There has been a marked increase in the number of acute hospital beds.

In 1996–97, there were 16,792 acute beds in hospitals in the North West of England (excluding North Cumbria Health Authority) and by 2000–01, this had increased to 17,224. This represents an increase of 432 (2.6 per cent.).

The figures for total beds, given in the following table, show a more appropriate provision of care outside the hospital environment.

Staffed beds in wards open overnight—Average daily total for the financial year

	1996–97	1997–98	1998–99	1999–2000	2000–01

Nursing Home Charges

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the average level of nursing home charges. [43733]

Jacqui Smith: The level of nursing home fees will vary from area to area and will reflect local market conditions. According to Laing & Buisson, consultants in health and community care, the average weekly nursing home fee in private homes for older people in the United Kingdom in March 2001 was £393 per week.

Health Service Accountability

Roger Casale: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he is taking to promote public accountability in the health service; and if he will make a statement. [43734]

Ms Blears: We are giving members of the public the chance to monitor review and make reports and recommendations on the local health service through Patients' Forums; setting up the Commission for Patient and Public Involvement in Health to ensure everyone gets the opportunity to be involved; and giving locally elected councillors the role of scrutinising local health services.

Hospital Mergers

Mr. Lilley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to analyse the impact of hospital mergers on health outcomes for patients. [43735]

Mr. Hutton: Achieving good health outcomes for patients must be the most important consideration in any service change.

New arrangements following the Health and Social Care Act 2001 mean that local authority Overview and Scrutiny Committees (OSCs) will have power to scrutinise local services.

Where a proposed service change is contested by the OSC, I am establishing an Independent Reconfiguration Panel, to provide independent advice on the suitability of the proposed service changes. Its recommendations will assess proposed changes against clear criteria, including quality of care, community health needs, accessibility and resourcing.

Cancer Treatment

Mr. Francois: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to visit Southend Hospital to discuss the provision of cancer treatment for people in South East Essex. [43737]

Jacqui Smith: A meeting has been arranged for 28 March by Eastern Regional Office to which local hon. Members, councillors and officials from Essex Strategic Health Authority designate have been invited to allow fuller discussion of the provision of cancer treatment for people in South East Essex.

Dr. Evan Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will announce whether the targets of (a) a maximum one month wait for breast cancer treatment and (b) a maximum one month wait for urgent GP referral to treatment for children's and testicular cancers and acute leukaemia have been met in England. [42498]

Yvette Cooper: The standards of a maximum wait of one month from diagnosis to first definitive treatment for breast cancer and one month from urgent general practitioner referral to treatment for children's and testicular cancers and acute leukaemia came into effect at the end of December 2001. Central monitoring began on 1 January 2002 and data will be published on a quarterly basis.

Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on his policy on waiting times for cancer treatment. [43747]

Yvette Cooper: The NHS Cancer Plan sets out our strategy to reduce waiting times for cancer patients. The ultimate goal is that no one should wait longer than one month from an urgent referral for suspected cancer to the beginning of treatment except for a good clinical reason or through patient choice. There is a series of staged milestones towards this goal: new targets introduced for 2001 were a maximum one month from diagnosis to treatment for breast cancer and a maximum one month from urgent GP referral to treatment for acute leukaemia and children's and testicular cancer. By 2005 there will be a maximum one month wait from diagnosis to treatment and a maximum two month wait from urgent GP referral to treatment for all cancers. Achievement of these targets will be supported by investment in workforce and equipment, and by service redesign through the Cancer Services Collaborative.

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of progress towards the reduction of waiting times for cancer treatment. [43753]

Yvette Cooper: The NHS Cancer Plan sets out a series of staged milestones towards the goal that no one should wait longer than one month from an urgent referral for suspected cancer to the beginning of treatment except for a good clinical reason or through patient choice. A two week outpatient waiting time standard was introduced in December 2000 and in the last quarter 95.1 per cent. of urgent referrals for suspected cancer were seen within two weeks. Standards of a maximum wait of one month from diagnosis to first definitive treatment for breast cancer and a maximum one month from urgent GP referral to treatment for children's and testicular cancers and acute leukaemia came into effect at the end of 2001. Central monitoring of these standards began on 1 January 2002 and data will be published on a quarterly basis.

Health Inequalities

Mr. Neil Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on progress to address health inequalities by changes to the funding formulae for health authorities/primary care trusts. [43738]

Yvette Cooper: The Government have made good progress. An interim health inequalities adjustment of £130 million was introduced for 2001–02 allocations. This has been extended to £148 million for 2002–03, to be shared between 54 Health Authorities. The Government are also reviewing the existing weighted capitation formula used to distribute NHS funding. By 2003 reducing inequalities will be a key criterion for allocating NHS resources to different parts of the country.

Ambulance Service

Mr. Heath: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average response time was for the attendance of an emergency ambulance over the last 12 months in each English region. [43739]

Ms Blears: Latest provisional management information indicates that, at the end of February 2002, 28 out of the 32 ambulance trusts in England were achieving the Government's key target of responding to 75 per cent. of immediately life threatening 999 calls within eight minutes.

All ambulance trusts are expected to achieve the 75 per cent. target during 2002.

Booked Hospital Admissions

Mr. Rammell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on progress in achieving booked admissions across the NHS. [43740]

Mr. Hutton: The National Booked Admissions Programme began in 1998. Every acute NHS trust is now booking patients in at least two specialties or high volume procedures. By the end of March 2002 more than five million patients will have benefited from the programme.

A fourth wave of the programme, "Moving to Mainstream", began in September 2001 and will shift booked admissions to mainstream NHS activity.

Nurse Recruitment (London)

Ann Keen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the latest figures for nurse recruitment in London were in the last 12 months. [43741]

Mr. Hutton: As at September 2001, there were 58,000 qualified nurses, midwives and health visitors working within the London Region—an increase of 3,400 compared to September the previous year. In London over 660 qualified nurses midwives and health visitors have returned to the NHS since April 2001. There are currently a further 124 nurses and midwives undertaking special training, who will return to the NHS shortly.

School Free Fruit Scheme

Joyce Quin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the free fruit scheme in schools. [43742]

Yvette Cooper: The National School Fruit Scheme will entitle every four to six year old with a free piece of fruit each school day from 2004. £42 million from the New Opportunities Fund is enabling the rapid expansion of the Scheme across England. This starts in West Midlands next term reaching 250,000 children in over 2,000 schools.

Dentistry

David Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the access to NHS dental treatment for the residents of north-west Leicestershire; and if he will make a statement. [43745]

Yvette Cooper: Figures are not collected by constituency but as of 31 January 2002, General Dental Service registration rates for Leicestershire were: adults—45 per cent. (England 43 per cent.); children—63 per cent. (England 60 per cent.).

NHS dentistry registrations were 463,074—up 3,666 on the previous year. Ninety eight per cent. of the population was within a five mile (urban) or 10 mile (rural) radius of dentists accepting new patients. Everyone was within 15 miles of an NHS dentist.

The number of GDS dentists in Leicestershire as of 31 December 2001 was 284 compared with 282 the previous year.

Mrs. Brooke: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assistance he is giving to support NHS dentistry in Dorset. [43752]

Ms Blears: In 2000–01, Dorset Health Authority (HA) was awarded £110,000 from the Dental Care Development Fund. In 2001–02, the HA allocation for the Modernisation Fund was £458,900. The HA has also been allocated £37,000 from the Dentistry Action Plan Fund.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what percentage of dentists on health authority lists practise full time in the NHS; [44410]

(2) what percentage of dentists on the Government Dental Council register (a) practise in the General Dental Service full time in the UK and (b) practise in the General Dental Service full time for the NHS in the UK. [44412]

(3) what percentage of dentists on the General Dental Council who qualified outside the United Kingdom and who have been on the Health Authority General Dental Service lists within the last 10 years are no longer on the Health Authority lists; [44405]

(4) what percentage of dentists on the General Dental Council Register who qualified outside the United Kingdom and who are on the Health Authority General Dental Service lists have been on these lists for over five years; [44406]

(5) what the ratio is of new dentists who have qualified from UK dental schools to dentists who are drawing their NHS pension; and if he will list this ratio for each of the previous 20 years; [44408]

(6) what percentage of dentists on the General Dental Council Register qualified outside the United Kingdom; and of this number, what percentage are on the Health Authority General Dental Service lists; [44407]

(7) what the ratio was of male to female new dental graduates from UK dental schools (a) last year and (b) for each of the previous 20 years. [44411]

Ms Blears [holding answer 21 March 2002]: Dentists on health authority lists are self-employed principal dentists. They do not have a standard working week and can vary their working hours.

The Office of Manpower Economics carried out a survey of principal dentists in Great Britain in March 2000. They reported that 81 per cent. of dentists describe themselves as full-time and 19 per cent. are part-time. Twenty per cent. of all principal dentists are both full-time and also work fully in the NHS. A further 5 per cent. are part-time and work fully in the NHS.

Dentists who work as assistants and vocational dental practitioners are not covered by this result because Health Authorities are not required to hold lists for them.

Dentists on health authority lists are self-employed principal dentists. They do not have a standard working week and can vary their working hours.

In March 2000 the Office of Manpower Economics (OME) carried out a survey into the hours of work and workload of principal dentists taking any part in the General Dental Service (GDS) in Great Britain.

The survey found that 81 per cent of principals in the GDS considered themselves as carrying out dental work full-time. This would be equivalent to about 16,158 of the 19,948 principals in the GDS in the UK at 31 December 2001. The survey found that one quarter of full-time principals spent 100 per cent. of their time on GDS work. This would be equivalent to 4,040 principals at December 2001.

Thirty one thousand five hundred and seventy seven dentists were on the General Dental Council (GDC) Register at 1 January 2002. Sixteen thousand one hundred and fifty eight principals estimated to be doing dental work full-time are equivalent to 51 per cent. of the GDC total. The 4,040 principals estimated to be doing dental work full-time and spending 100 per cent. of their time in the GDS are equivalent to 13 per cent. of the GDC total.

These percentages will exclude dentists working part-time or as assistants or vocational dental practitioners or dentists working in other dental services and dentists not working.

Forty four per cent. of principal dentists who qualified outside the United Kingdom and have worked in the General Dental Service (GDS) in England within the last 10 years were not on a health authority list at 31 December 2001.

Dentists who work as assistants and vocational dental practitioners are not covered by this result because health authorities are not required to hold lists for them.

Ninety one per cent. of principal dentists on a Health Authority list who qualified outside the United Kingdom have worked in the General Dental Service (GDS) in England for more than five years as at 31 December 2001.

Dentists who work as assistants and vocational dental practitioners are not covered by this result because Health Authorities are not required to hold lists for them.

The ratio of students obtaining their first registrable dental qualification from UK dental schools to the number of dentists retiring from the General Dental Service for each of the years 1983 to 2000 is shown in the table.

The retirement information is from Pension Agency records. The date of retirement may be the actual date of retirement or the date a pension was awarded or the last date on the Agency's computer systems. Some retiring dentists may not have held a General Dental Service (GDS) post on retirement e.g. they may have retired from a consultant post.

Fifteen per cent. or 4,643 of the 31,577 dentists registered with the General Dental Council (GDC) at 1 January 2002 qualified from dental schools outside the United Kingdom.

At 31 December 2001 2,094 dentists who had qualified outside the UK were on health authority lists in the General Dental Service (GDS) in England. This represents 45 per cent. of the 4,643 dentists who had qualified outside the UK who were registered with the GDC as of 1 January 2002. Health authority lists cover principal dentists only and exclude assistant dentists and vocational dental practitioners working in the GDS.

Information on the number of dentists who had qualified outside the UK and are practising in the GDS in Scotland, Wales or Northern Ireland can be obtained from the relevant devolved administrations.

The number of male and female students who have obtained their first registrable dental qualification from UK dental schools is shown in the table for each of the academic years 1989–90 to 2000–01. Also shown is the ratio of male to female graduates.

The information is not available for the years before 1989–90.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of dentists registered on the General Dental Council are (a) resident in the UK and (b) registered at an address in the UK. [44413]

Ms Blears [holding 21 March 2002]: No information is available on the place of residence of dentists registered with the General Dental Council (GDC).

The country of the registered address of dentists on the GDC register at 1 January 2002 is shown in the table.

European Traditional Medicines Directive

Mr. Tredinnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what categories of products that are currently on sale in the UK will be left outside of the scope of the proposed European directive on traditional medicines; and if he will make a statement. [43746]

Ms Blears: There are many categories of products currently on sale in the UK which the European Commission's proposals for a Directive on Traditional Herbal Medicinal Products are not intended to cover. However, specifically in relation to products which are currently sold legally as unlicensed herbal remedies under Section 12(2) of the Medicines Act, 1968, there are a number of reasons why a proportion of existing products might not satisfy the terms of the proposed Directive. The most likely reasons might be: failure to meet safety or quality standards, or failure to demonstrate that the remedy or corresponding products (that is, comparable herbal medicines) had traditional use. In many such cases in should be possible for companies to make changes—for example improving quality standards or making adjustments to the ingredients or strength of specific products—in order to comply with the terms of the Directive.

Subject to a successful outcome to European negotiations, the introduction of a systematic regulatory framework for traditional herbal medicines should result in improved public health protection, enhanced public confidence in herbal medicine and the continuing availability of a very wide range of remedies.

Perinatal Morality

Margaret Moran: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what measures he is taking to reduce perinatal mortality. [43748]

Yvette Cooper: We are continuing to support the work of the Confidential Enquiry into Stillbirths and Deaths in Infancy, to improve understanding of how these deaths can be reduced. The tragedy of perinatal mortality has links with poverty, deprivation and exclusion. We are addressing these underlying causes through the "Sure Start" initiative, including pilot programmes to provide personal co-ordinated support for pregnant teenagers, and parents under the age of 18. We are also investing more in the provision of maternity and neonatal intensive care and seeking to ensure the most effective configuration of these essential services.

NHS Pensions

James Purnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether he plans to equalise the calculations for NHS widows' and widowers' pension provision by including women doctors' pension contributions prior to 1988. [43749]

Mr. Hutton: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given to the former Member for North Norfolk (Mr. Prior) on 13 January 1999, Official Report, column 212.

Rehabilitation Services

Hugh Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the Government are doing to improve rehabilitation services for people of working age. [43750]

Jacqui Smith: We are working with the Department for Work and Pensions and the Health and Safety Executive on job retention and rehabilitation pilots to test different health and employment strategies to help people with long term sickness or disability to remain in their jobs.

We have commissioned guidance for health and social services on promoting employment opportunities for people with mental health problems to meet the requirement of Standard One of the National Service Framework (NSF) for Mental Health.

The NSF on Long Term Conditions will have a particular focus on the needs of people with neurological disease, brain and spinal injury, as well as some of the common issues faced by people with a long-term condition such as rehabilitation.

Primary Care

Alan Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the impact of the transfer of responsibilities from health authorities to PCTs on community initiatives and preventive care. [43751]

Mr. Hutton: As part of the transfer of responsibilities from health authorities to primary care trusts all local communities are required to ensure that community initiatives and preventive care are incorporated into Health Improvement Plans and local strategic development plans.

Hospital Consultants

Mr. Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of hospital consultants are contracted (a) full-time and (b) part-time to the NHS. [43754]

Mr. Hutton: The table shows the number of hospital medical consultants by contract in England as at 30 September 2001. The table gives a break down of contract holders on national terms and conditions of service by (a) whole time, (b) maximum part time and (c) part time. The number of honorary contract holders is also provided.

Hearing Services (High Street Opticians)

Caroline Flint: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received regarding the delivery of digital hearing aids and other hearing services via high street opticians. [43727]

Jacqui Smith: My hon. Friend raised this issue in the House on 7 November 2001, Official Report column 131WH and on several occasions since. My hon. Friend the Member for Mitcham and Morden (Siobhain McDonagh) has also raised this issue and I will be meeting her in April.

Digital Hearing Aids

Mrs. Calton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will allow Stepping Hill Hospital in Stockport to be one of the next group of sites to provide digital hearing aids. [41941]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 11 March 2002]: We have received expressions of interest from several Health communities not yet involved in the modernising hearing aid services project. Decisions will be made shortly, based on a number of criteria including geographical distribution, preparedness, and the support of the whole local health community.

Communications Aids

Mr. Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will make a statement on the use to which the funding announced on 27 March 2001 to provide communications aids to children with hearing difficulties has been put; [42657]

(2) what guidance has been given to (a) health authorities, (b) primary care groups and (c) social services departments about the provision of communication aids for those who are hard of hearing; and if he will make a statement; [42684]

(3) if he will publish the guidelines given on 27 March 2001 about the provision of communication aids to those with hearing difficulties. [42683]

Jacqui Smith: The "Guide to Integrating Community Equipment Service", published on 27 March 2001, set out the vision for the scope of services that users should expect to receive, and indicated the steps that organisations will need to take to achieve the vision.

Our intention, as stated in a circular to local authorities and health authorities in March 2001, is that the services should look to use some of the additional funding for community equipment services on communication aids for people with impaired speech. No specific guidance on communication aids for children or adults with hearing difficulties has been issued. It is for local services to determine the equipment they will provide.

Overseas Treatment

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if it is his policy to include Southampton University Hospitals NHS Trust in the pilot scheme to allow NHS patients to be treated abroad. [43736]

Mr. Hutton: Southampton University Hospitals NHS Trust does not fall within any of the three Health Authority areas involved in the overseas pilot. However, if the Trust needs to have patients treated overseas the pilot sites would be willing and able to assist, using their existing contracts with French and German providers.

Delayed Hospital Discharges

Richard Younger-Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress he is making in tackling the problem of delayed discharge in the national health service. [43744]

Jacqui Smith: The latest published figures for December 2001 of people aged over 75 whose discharge was delayed was 5,117. This represents around a 12 per cent. reduction compared to the same period in 2000.

Unlicensed Medicines

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the number of websites based in the UK that are offering for sale (a) licensed, (b) unlicensed and (c) both licensed and unlicensed medicines; if he will list those sites his Department has identified; and if he will make a statement. [38820]

Ms Blears: An accurate figure for the number of websites based in the United Kingdom offering medicines for sale is not known because websites are opened and closed often with very short timespans, which makes quantification extremely difficult. Furthermore sites are often routed through many Internet Service Providers to disguise their origins. Therefore it would be disproportionate to investigate the origin of all sites.

The Medicines Control Agency takes appropriate action against any website of which it is aware that is operating within the UK in breach of UK law and regulations.

Ministerial Private Offices

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the running costs were of (a) his Ministers' private offices, separately identifying expenditure on staff and (b) his Department in each year from May 1997 to the nearest date for which the information is available. [40985]

Ms Blears: Information is available for the financial years 1997–98 to 2000–01. The running costs for Ministers' private offices and the Department for each of these years is shown in the table.

(a) Ministers' Private Offices

£ thousands

	Total	Staff	Non staff
1997–98	1,849	1,385	464
1998–99	2,144	1,564	580
1999–2000	2,653	1,983	670
2000–01	2,947	2,323	624

(b) Departmental administration expenditure (including agencies)

	£ million
1997–98	249
1998–99	257
1999–2000	273
2000–01	300

Health Service Organisations (Costs)

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the annual costs of (a) the Commission for Health Improvement, (b) the National Care Standards Commission, (c) the National Clinical Assessment Authority, (d) the National Patient Safety Agency and (e) the National Institute for Clinical Excellence will be for 2002–03, and the following three years. [40884]

Ms Blears: The central Departmental revenue funding which has been reserved for 2002–03 is set out in the following table:

Organisation	Funding for 2002–03 in £ millions
Commission for Health Improvement	34.0
National Care Standards Commission	88.1
National Clinical Assessment Authority	13.3
National Patient Safety Agency	15.0
National Institute for Clinical Excellence	14.8

Decisions on the level of funding for 2003–04 to 2005–06 will be made in the light of the work on the 2002 Spending Review.

ME

Mr. Blizzard: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will (a) collate, (b) evaluate and (c) disseminate best practice found in NHS trusts offering services for ME sufferers. [41816]

Jacqui Smith: The Chief Medical Officer commissioned a report from the CFS/ME independent working group, which was published on the 11 January. Copies of the report and its annexes are available at the following website: www.doh.gov.uk/cmo/publications.htm. The report recommended the development of service networks to increase knowledge and understanding of the condition, and this is something we would support.

Although there are currently no specific plans to collate, evaluate and disseminate best practice in NHS trusts offering services for ME sufferers, we are committed to take other action which will help spread best practice. A referral to the National Institute of Clinical Excellence (NICE) to provide guidance on management and treatment is something we will consider.

We are also ensuring that the External Reference Groups who will be developing the two National Service Frameworks (NSF) for both children's services and adults with long term conditions, consider this report and its recommendations for improving treatment and care.

Social Workers

Vernon Coaker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to raise the status of social workers; and if he will make a statement. [42243]

Jacqui Smith: We have established the General Social Care Council (GSCC) to raise the standard of social care and increase the protection of the public. The GSCC will do this by promoting high standards in the training of social workers and other social care staff, publishing codes of practice, setting out the standard of conduct expected of social care workers and by registering the workforce, starting with qualified social workers in 2003. In order to maintain registration with the GSCC individuals will be expected to keep their practice and training up to date. We have also announced a change to the social work qualification from a two-year diploma in social work to a three-year degree level qualification.

The term Social Worker is often used by people working in social care who do not hold a social work qualification. When sufficient numbers of qualified social workers have been registered by the GSCC we shall take steps to protect the use of the title social worker to those who have a social work qualification and who are registered as such with the GSCC. It will be an offence under the Care Standards Act 2000 for anyone to misrepresent his/her self with the intention of deceiving.

Last year we started a three year recruitment and retention campaign. One of the objectives of the campaign is to raise awareness of social work and to improve the image of social workers.

Care Homes

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many care home beds there were, broken down by local authority in England in each year since 1997. [42237]

Jacqui Smith: Information on the total number of residential care places by Local Authority for the years 1997 to 2001 is shown in Table 1. Information on nursing care beds by Health Authority is shown in Table 2.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many care homes have closed in (a) Shropshire and (b) the West Midlands since 1997. [44677]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 21 March 2002]: The information on the number of residential and nursing care homes in Shropshire and West Midlands is shown in the table at 31 March each year. A copy has been placed in the Library.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment his Department has made of the extent to which people are inappropriately placed in (a) residential care homes and (b) nursing homes; and what steps he is taking to ensure appropriate placements. [45627]

Jacqui Smith: The Audit Commission's report "The coming of age", published in 1997 and subsequent work by the Department of Health, confirmed that better assessment and the development of preventative and rehabilitative services, could lead to more appropriate and effective permanent placements of state-funded individuals in residential care and nursing homes.

Since then through the NHS Plan and the National Service Framework for Older People, the Department has introduced a single assessment process to ensure that individual's needs are assessed in the round, and funded the development of a range of preventive and intermediate care services. These developments will help to ensure that older people and other adults, wherever possible, are only admitted to residential accommodation when necessary.

Strategic Health Authorities

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what ceiling he has put on start up costs for the new strategic health authorities; and whether this is in ratio to the size of the population served. [42172]

Mr. Hutton: New Strategic Health Authorities will have a cap on their staffing numbers of 75 staff and £4 million running costs but the exact amount per authority will be determined by their franchise plan. The functions of the strategic health authorities are substantially the same across all 28 irrespective of size of the population they serve.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what his estimate is of the costs of establishing the North Yorkshire and Humberside Strategic Health Authority (a) in new purpose-built health premises on the York Science Park and (b) by converting the existing NHS property at Willeby. [42094]

Jacqui Smith: The only cost incurred in provisionally locating and establishing the Strategic Health Authority (StHA) HQ for North and East Yorkshire and Northern Lincolnshire is for the rent of two offices in the York Science Park for February and March 2002. This will be approximately £3,500. This is the Project Office for the Strategic Health Authority pending a discussion about its permanent location.

On 20 March 2002, the StHA shadow Board discussed the option appraisal and work in progress to produce an outline business case. It was unanimously agreed that appropriate criteria had been used to inform the option appraisal on the location of the StHA and that the decision made by the Chairman and Chief Executive (Designate) to accept the recommendation of the York Science Park was supported. Formal consideration of the outline business case will be part of the first StHA Board Meeting on 18 April 2002.

All the existing NHS accommodation, including the accommodation currently occupied by the East Riding and Hull Health Authority at Willerby, is proposed for future use in each locality and will largely accommodate primary care trust staff including shared services to support these organisations. For this reason, no estimate was made of the cost of establishing the North and East Yorkshire and Northern Lincolnshire StHA HQ at Willberby.

Folic Acid

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what plans he has to introduce folic acid supplements into flour; [42086]

(2) what assessment he has made of the costs and benefits of the introduction of folic acid into flour. [42085]

Yvette Cooper: A consultation document on whether or not to fortify wheat flour with folic acid was issued in July 2000 jointly by the Department and the Food Standards Agency (FSA). This was based on the Committee on Medical Aspects of Food and Nutrition Policy (2000) conclusion that fortification of wheat flour with folic acid would help reduce the number of births affected by neural tube defects. The consultation responses have been analysed and a summary is posted on the DH website.

Following the consultation, the Department and FSA undertook or commissioned further work to address concerns raised. This work included a preliminary cost-benefit analyses. However, there are considerable uncertainties on key costs and effectiveness variables. The analyses took account of the increased risk of neuropathy in the elderly as well as the benefits of reduced risks of birth defects.

The policy options will need to be considered by the FSA Board as well as Health Ministers. The UK Health Departments and the FSA held a stakeholders meeting on 18 March 2002 to discuss the issue and inform policy decisions.

Breast Cancer

Mrs. Calton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what provision is being made to ensure that there are sufficient specialist breast cancer consultants, surgeons and nurses in the North West in the next 10 years. [41939]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 11 March 2002]: The NHS Plan set out our commitment to increasing the workforce and the NHS Cancer Plan confirmed our commitment to investment in the cancer workforce. Cancer networks (including those in the North West) nationally have recently been completing a number of toolkits which have looked at both clinician and nursing posts. Cancer networks are expected to audit their workforce requirements as part of the national standards for cancer. This is monitored through the peer review appraisal process. This information will continue to be used so that appropriate workforce development programmes are in place, which will help ensure that sufficient numbers of breast cancer consultants, surgeons and nurses are in place for future years.

Indium III Octreotide Imaging

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which NHS hospital trusts are able to offer Indium III Octreotide imaging tests. [42276]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 11 March 2002]: The approved name for the radiopharmaceutical Indium III Octreotide is Indium III Pentetreotide. A list of the National Health Service hospital trusts where clinicians hold certificates to administer this product for imaging tests is shown in the list.

Diabetes

Mr. David Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) whether the national standards framework for diabetes delivery strategy will include a commitment to a systematic approach to targeted screening of at risk groups for Type II diabetes; [42711]

(2) what recent research his Department has commissioned into the numbers of children diagnosed with type II diabetes resulting from obesity; [42722]

(3) what assessment he has made of the long-term potential financial savings to the NHS to be made from screening for Type II diabetes. [42710]

Jacqui Smith: Diabetes is becoming more common, even among children, as the population becomes more overweight and sedentary. We are taking forward a wide range of work across Government to tackle obesity, to increase physical activity and improve diet, especially among children. Prevention of diabetes is one of the key areas covered by the Diabetes National Service Framework standards, published last December.

We have asked the UK National Screening Committee to assess the benefits and drawbacks of screening for Type II diabetes. The Committee will make recommendations in 2005.

Mental Health

Virginia Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what the budget of the Mental Health Review Tribunal is; and what plans he has to increase research for the Mental Health Review Tribunal; [42939]

(2) when he last met the Chairman of the Mental Health Review Tribunal; and if he will make a statement. [42940]

Jacqui Smith: Expenditure on the mental health review tribunal in 2000–01 is likely to be just under £12 million, the cost of running the administrative function is just under £2 million. Figures for actual expenditure will not be available until after the end of the financial year.

The Department currently has no plans to commission new research for the mental health review tribunal but does, as part of its normal activity, collect and analyse data to support both the judicial and administrative functions of the tribunal.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has not had occasion to meet any of the four regional chairmen for the tribunal in England.

Nursing Staff

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 4 March 2002, Official Report, column 141W, on nursing staff, what his targets are for filling modern matron posts; and what additional funding has been made available to help fill these posts. [42620]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 12 March 2002]: When launching guidance to the NHS in April 2001, we announced that there would be around 2,000 matrons throughout the NHS by 2004, and 500 in post by April 2002. Posts are funded from general allocations to Health Authorities.

GP Surgeries

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (i) GP surgeries and (ii) single handed GP surgeries there have been in each of the last five years for which figures are available, broken down by (a) region and (b) health authority. [42586]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 12 March 2002]: The information requested is shown in the table. The table identifies all General Practitioner partnerships (but not individual GP surgeries) including those "partnerships of one", by region and health authority. Some GPs who practice without being in partnership with another doctor may have a salaried Assistant or may work in a group practice.

Appeals Panels

Ms Drown: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he is taking to ensure that NHS trusts establish appeals panels promptly. [40018]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 12 March 2002]: The Department is currently discussing new doctors' disciplinary procedures with the British Medical Association. This will include the handling of local appeals by NHS employers.

The aim is to develop a national system that will provide for fair, quicker and more effective local procedures.

Blood Donation

Mr. Havard: To ask the Secretary of State for Health who, on behalf of his Department, is conducting the assessment into the possible exclusion of transfusion recipients giving blood; and how many years in retrospect the assessment will cover. [42794]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 12 March 2002]: The Advisory Committee on the Microbiological Safety of Blood and Tissues has asked the Department's Economics and Operational Research Division to assess the impact of excluding transfusion recipients from donating blood on possible secondary infections of variant CJD, assuming blood to be infective. This risk assessment is still in progress and consequently no decision has been taken into the possible exclusion of transfusion recipients giving blood.

Health Expenditure

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to the answer given to the hon. Member for Oxford, West and Abingdon (Dr. Harris) of 5 March 2002, Official Report, column 391W, on health expenditure, if he will list the expenditure on health by weighted head of population in real terms for each health authority area, to include expenditure accounted for by (a) the Dental Practice Board and (b) the Prescription Pricing Authority. [42800]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 12 March 2002]: Expenditure per weighted head of population is not a reliable indicator to compare different health authorities. Allocations per weighted head are a much more reliable indicator.

Expenditure by the Dental Practice Board and the Prescription Pricing Authority is not attributed to individual health authorities in their annual accounts.

Public Appointments

Fiona Mactaggart: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many appointments to public bodies have been made through his Department (a) from April 2000 to March 2001 and (b) since 31 March 2001; and how many of these were (i) men and (ii) women. [42158]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 12 March 2002]: The number of men and women appointed, or re-appointed, to bodies sponsored by this Department during the period in question is as follows.

Period	Men appointed	Women appointed
1 April 2000–31 March 2001	1,125	942
1 April 2001–28 February 2002	836	693

As well as appointments made by Ministers, the figures include appointments made by the National Health Service Appointments Commission to NHS trusts, health authorities and primary care trusts since the Commission's establishment in April 2001.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many answers to parliamentary questions, are more than (a) two weeks and (b) three months outstanding; and if he will make a statement. [43926]

Ms Blears: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the right hon. Member for Bromley and Chislehurst (Mr. Forth) on 13 March 2002, Official Report, column 1147W.

As at the end of business on 25 March there were 22 parliamentary questions outstanding that were due for answer on or before 28 February.

Correspondence

Joyce Quin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he will reply to the letter from the right hon. Member for Gateshead, East and Washington, West dated 19 November 2001 relating to Dr. Sheikh, a constituent. [44291]

Mr. Hutton: A reply was sent on 15 March.

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he intends to reply to the letter dated 4 December 2001 addressed to the Minister for Local Government and transferred to his Department on 10 January about the availability of benefits to the disabled within unitary authorities. [44305]

Jacqui Smith: A reply was sent on 12 March.

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Health for what reason the letter of 26 September 2001 to him from the hon. Member for Fareham was answered on 15 March. [45802]

Jacqui Smith: I apologise for the delay in replying to your letter of 26 September. This was caused by the letter being mislaid within the Department.

Home Care

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 12 March 2002, Official Report, column 1022W, on home care, how many households, in each of the last five years for which figures are available received (a) up to five contact hours, (b) five to 10 contact hours and (c) more than 10 contact hours of intensive home care during a survey week (i) per thousand head of population aged 65 or over and (ii) per total number of people aged 65 or over. [44673]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 21 March 2002]: The available information is shown in the following table.

Households receiving home help/home care by contact hours
Rates per 1,000 households and 1,000 population aged 65 or over

		Percentage of households receiving
Up to 5 hours	69	65	62	59	58
5 to 10 hours	30	20	21	25	23
More than 10 hours	—	15	17	19	19
Number of households receiving intensive home care[1]	—	61,200	67,000	72,100	76,400
Rate per 1,000 households 65+	—	12	13	14	15
Rate per 1,000 population 65+ (C28)	—	7.8	8.8	9.2	—

[1] From 1998 intensive home care/home help is defined as six or more visits with more than 10 contact hours, prior to this the criterion was six or more visits with five or more contact hours

Hospital Patients

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 13 March 2002, Official Report, column 1141W, on people remaining in hospital, what estimate he has made of the cost of, and what assessment he has made for the case for, social services departments being charged by the NHS for people who remain in hospital, after being medically discharged; and if he will make a statement. [44675]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 21 March 2002]: I refer the hon. Member to the response I gave him on Wednesday 13 March 2002, Official Report, column 1141W.

Primary Health Care Trusts (Wirral)

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the membership of the two primary health care trusts for the Wirral. [44994]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer 21 March 2002]: The non-executive members of the Primary Care Trusts are as follows:

Bebington and West Wirral PCT
Mr. Charles Pursglove (Chair)
Mr. James Burns
Mrs. Marion Cureton
Dr. William Foggin
Mrs. Ruth Shaw
Mrs. Alexandra Wall
Wallasey and Birkenhead PCT
Mrs. Muriel Downs MBE
Mr. Raymond Allen
Lord Michael Chan
Mr. Frederick Corkhill
Mrs. Rosaleen Dixon
Mr. Peter Russell.

Hospital Readmissions

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many readmissions within 30 days there were to hospitals in Shropshire in (a) 1999, (b) 2000 and (c) 2001. [44678]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 21 March 2002]: The Department of Health publishes statistics on emergency re-admission to hospital within 28 days of the last, previous discharge from hospital.

The figures in the table are from The Royal Shrewsbury Hospital. This is the only hospital within the Shropshire Health Authority that has data that meets this statistic.

	Number of discharges	Number of re-admissions	Percentage of re-admissions, indirectly age and sex standardised
2000–01	42,786	2,821	6.53
1999–2000	41,212	2,495	6.00
1998–99	40,293	2,360	5.85

Care Home Beds

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many care home beds were available in (a) 1997, (b) 1998, (c) 1999, (d) 2000 and (e) 2001 in Shropshire. [44680]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 21 March 2002]: The information on the number of residential and nursing care beds in Shropshire is shown in the table at 31 March each year.

Residential and nursing care beds in Shropshire[1], 1997 to 2001
At 31 March Rounded numbers

	Total number of registered care beds	Residential care beds	Nursing care beds[2]
1997[3]	5,000	3,090	1,920
1998	5,950	4,030	1,920
1999	5,430	3,470	1,970
2000	5,320	3,390	1,930
2001	5,310	3,430	1,880

[1] Information on residential care for 1999 onwards is presented for Shropshire County Council and Telford and Wrekin Unitary Authority.
[2] Includes beds in private hospitals and clinics.
[3] Nursing beds relate to the period 1 October 1996 to 31 March 1997.

NHS Purchasing and Supply Agency

Brian White: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the NHS Purchasing and Supply Agency will publish its annual business plan. [46859]

Ms Blears: We are pleased to announce that the NHS Purchasing and Supply Agency's annual business plan has been published and copies have been placed in the Library.

Medical Devices Agency

Mr. Pound: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish the key targets for 2002–03 for the Medical Devices Agency. [46860]

Ms Blears: We have agreed the Agency's key targets for 2002–03 and copies have been placed in the Library.

Nursing and Midwifery and Health Professions Councils

Alan Keen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if appointments have been made to the Nursing and Midwifery and Health Professions Councils in readiness for their formal establishment on 1 April. [46929]

Mr. Hutton: The Nursing and Midwifery and Health Professions Orders 2001 provide for the Privy Council to make appointments to the new Councils. I can confirm that members have accepted the invitations to serve for a three-year term from 1 April 2002. The following is a list of their names.

No Secrets Guidance

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will make his policy to include adult protection indicators arising from the implementation of No Secrets in the performance indicator framework; and if he will make a statement. [45634]

(2) when the Social Services Inspectorate plans to inspect social services' implementation of the No Secrets guidance. [45625]

Jacqui Smith: This Department is not currently planning to inspect local councils for compliance with the "No Secrets" guidance. We have commissioned the Centre for Policy on Ageing to undertake an analysis of all local council multi-agency codes of practice. Once the results of this work are made available a decision will be made on the need to follow up the "No Secrets" guidance.

At present there are no plans to include a specific adult protection indicator in the Personal Social Services Performance Assessment Framework. There are however several existing indicators of relevance to adult protection (for example emergency admissions, avoidable harm from falls and hypothermia, clients receiving reviews and inspections of residential care). A decision on including a specific adult protection indicator will be made once the Centre for Policy on Ageing have concluded their analysis.

Community Pharmacists

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he is taking to utilise community pharmacists in the review of medication of older people. [45642]

Jacqui Smith: The NHS Plan set a target for all Primary Care Trusts to have schemes in place so that people get more help from pharmacists in using their medicines by 2004.

The National Service Framework (NSF) for Older People highlighted the importance of medication review and the role pharmacists can play in helping older people take their medicines more effectively.

We are investing in medicines management services including through the collaborative hosted by the National Prescribing Centre. This initiative will build on and complement other local initiatives through which community pharmacists are involved in reviewing the medication of older people, as promoted in the NSF.

Nursing Care Payments

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list those homes which have received a letter from the Minister of State, Department of Health, the hon. Member for Redditch (Jacqui Smith), following representations regarding the failure to pass on the free nursing care payments to residents. [45698]

Jacqui Smith: I wrote to four national care home providers about their fees and charging structures in the light of the introduction of National Health Service funded nursing care following the receipt of correspondence from concerned individuals. As a result of the responses received, on 11 March I announced my intention to issue a national model contract; to amend regulation 5 of the Care Home Regulations; and to ask the National Care Standards Commission to ensure that the minimum standard relating to contracts was enforced.

Domiciliary Care

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what measures are in place to prevent (a) financial, (b) sexual, (c) physical and (d) mental abuse against older people in home care settings. [45624]

Jacqui Smith: Statutory guidance on the prevention of elder abuse, "No Secrets", was issued on 20 March 2000 to councils with social services responsibilities. This required the implementation of local multi-agency codes of practice by 31 October 2001.

Care providers registered with the National Care Standards Commission will be required to comply with the protection of vulnerable adults scheme from 1 August 2002.

The National Care Standards Commission will take account of National Minimum Standards for domiciliary care agencies in deciding whether agencies comply with the forthcoming Domiciliary Care Agencies Regulations. The prevention of financial, sexual, physical and mental abuse in the home care setting will be an essential part of the National Minimum Standards.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he plans to publish the Protection of Vulnerable Adults consultation document. [45635]

Jacqui Smith: We are planning to begin a consultation exercise involving all relevant stake-holders within the next few months.

Care Home Standards

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps the National Care Standards Commission will take with those care homes that fail to comply with the Care Standards Act 2000 Part 11, section 11(1) by 1 April. [45630]

Jacqui Smith: Providers who have submitted applications for registration by 31 March 2002 will be given transitional protection from section 11(1) of the Care Standards Act until their application can be processed by the National Care Standards Commission. Providers who fail to submit their application for registration by 31 March will be committing an offence under section 11(1) of the Act. However, before taking prosecution action as set out at section 11(5), we would expect the Commission to take account of the relevant circumstances.

Bioterrorism

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what actions the Government have undertaken to warn the public (a) about possible bio-terrorist attacks and (b) of the symptoms of smallpox. [44010]

Mr. Hutton: The Department has not issued guidance to the public about possible bio-terrorist attacks as it is not currently considered that a specific or credible threat exists to the UK.

Guidance was issued to all health authorities and Regional Directors of Public Health on the procedures to be followed in the event of a deliberate release of smallpox and other biological agents on 17 October 2001. At the same time, guidance for medical and laboratory staff was issued by the Public Health Laboratory Service on 17 October 2001. This is available on the PHLS website: http://www.phls.co.uk/advice/smallpox—guidelines.pdf. This is also available to the public. Guidance is also available to the public from NHS Direct.

Primary Care Trusts

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how he plans to deal with the revenue consequences of capital schemes which are in progress, but not yet in use, in making allocations to PCTs; and if he will list the (a) PCTs affected and (b) related capital schemes. [46413]

Mr. Hutton: We currently allocate funding to health authorities, and they allocate funding to primary care trusts, on the basis of the relative needs of their populations. A weighted capitation formula is used to determine each health authority and primary care trust's fair share of available resources, to enable them to commission similar levels of services for populations in equal need.

In future the intention is that allocations will be made direct to primary care trusts. This is subject to the passage of legislation through Parliament. Allocations will continue to be based on the principle of weighted capitation. PCTs will meet the revenue consequences of capital schemes that are in progress but not completed from these allocations.

Information for (a) and (b) is not centrally available.

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how he plans to allocate money to PCTs in order that they can meet expenditure associated with functions delegated to them; and when such allocations will be made. [46414]

Mr. Hutton: We currently allocate funding to health authorities, and they allocate funding to primary care trusts, on the basis of the relative needs of their populations. A weighted capitation formula is used to determine each health authority and primary care trust's fair share of available resources, to enable them to commission similar levels of services for populations in equal need.

In future the intention is that allocations will be made direct to primary care trusts. This is subject to the passage of legislation through Parliament. Allocations will continue to be based on the principle of weighted capitation.

We announced allocations to health authorities for 2002–03 on 6 December 2001. Health authorities are setting initial primary care trust allocations for 2002–03 for those functions for which primary care trusts will be responsible from 1 April 2002. Subject to Parliament the intention is that further functions will be devolved to primary care trusts from 1 October 2002. Primary care trust allocations will be reset to cover these functions.

Faversham Cottage Hospital

Hugh Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health further to his answer of 19 March 2002, Official Report, column 308W, on cottage hospitals, what funding is available to Faversham Cottage Hospital to develop its role. [46312]

Hazel Blears: The information requested is not collected centrally. The information is available from the Chairman of the East Kent Community NHS Trust.

Ashford and St. Peter's Hospitals NHS Trust

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many trolley waits of over four hours in locations other than within the accident and emergency department there were at the Ashford and St. Peter's Hospitals NHS Trust in each month between January 2001 and February 2002; [46503]

(2) how many operations were cancelled on the day before an operation had been scheduled at the Ashford and St. Peter's Hospitals NHS Trust in each month between January 2000 and February 2002. [46502]

Ms Blears: This is day to day management information and is not available centrally.

Information is not collected centrally in the format requested.

Information on the number of operations cancelled at the last minute for non-medical reasons, and breaches to the standard to re-admit patients within one month following such cancellations, are collected on a quarterly basis at health authority level and placed in the Library. The latest figures are for Quarter 2 (July–September) of the 2001–02 financial year.

NHS Finance

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what the overspend is in each NHS trust, PCT and health authority; [45937]

(2) what his assessment is of the likely level of (a) underspending and (b) overspending in the NHS in 2001–02; [45936]

(3) which (a) NHS trusts and (b) health authorities are expected to exceed their resource limits in 2001–02; and by what amount the resource limit is expected to be exceeded in each case. [46416]

Mr. Hutton: We are in discussions with NHS Trusts, health authorities and PCTs about managing their end-of-year positions. The information requested will be available when the annual audited accounts are completed and published.

Smoking-related Deaths

Mr. Ian Davidson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, how many deaths there have been since May 1997 from stroke; how many of these were smoking related; and what plans he has to introduce a bill on tobacco advertising and promotion. [18463]

Jacqui Smith [pursuant to her reply, 5 December 2001, c. 367W]: I regret that my previous reply was incorrect. It should read as follows:

The table shows the number of deaths from cerebrovascular disease, including stroke, which occurred in the United Kingdom.

Year	United Kingdom (all ages)
1995	69,395
1996	68,506
1997	66,352
1998	66,018
1999	64,515

Source:
Office of National Statistics; ICD 9 430-438

The latest available UK figure for the number of deaths from cerebrovascular disease, including stroke estimated to be caused by smoking is 7,300 deaths among those aged 35 and over (1995 data). These deaths represent approximately 11 per cent. of all deaths from cerebrovascular disease in the UK in that year (Christine Callum, The UK Smoking Epidemic: Deaths in 1995. Health Education Authority, 1998).

We have recently announced that we will take the Tobacco Advertising and Promotion Bill through the House of Commons. The Second Reading will take place on 9 April 2002.

TRANSPORT, LOCAL GOVERNMENT AND THE REGIONS

Ports

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what representations he has received about state support to British ports. [45302]

Mr. Jamieson: We have received representations about the proposed Great Yarmouth Outer Harbour Project and about the ferry service from the Port of Rosyth to Zeebrugge. We believe that port developments and port operations should not in general need public subsidy. However, if a project has the potential to justify worthwhile economic and environmental benefits, it may qualify to be considered for an element of public funding.

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will make a statement on the differing levels of state assistance provided to European Union ports. [45301]

Mr. Jamieson: The European Commission included a report on public financing and charging in European ports in its Communication on Ports, published in February 2001. We believe that state funding and subsidies are an important factor affecting competition between European ports, and we have urged the Commission to take a further look at these issues.

British Seafarers

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions, pursuant to his answer of 20 March 2002, Official Report, column 348W, on British seafarers, what performance indicators are used by his Department to assess the impact of (a) the Support for Maritime Training Scheme and (b) the Tonnage Tax on the training and employment of British seafarers. [46359]

Mr. Jamieson: The indicators are the number of trainees as given in the reply of 20 March 2002, Official Report, column 348W, to the hon. Member's previous question.

We recognise that this falls short of the approximately 1,400 recruits a year estimated by academic studies to meet current needs at sea and future posts in the onshore maritime sector. The validity of this estimate is to be reviewed. We believe that the recent changes to the SMarT scheme, together with the tonnage tax training commitments, will lead to a significant increase in seafarer recruitment.

Short Sea Shipping

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions, pursuant to his answer of 20 March 2002, Official Report, column 350W, on short sea shipping, when he will publish the proposals being considered by his Department for a short sea shipping employment grant. [46362]

Mr. Jamieson: We are awaiting the industry to publish their proposals.

Maritime and Coastguard Agency

Mr. Miller: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions when he expects to announce the key targets for the Maritime and Coastguard Agency for 2002. [46926]

Mr. Jamieson: I will shortly place in the Libraries of both Houses a copy of the Agency's Business Plan, which includes its key targets for 2002–03. The key targets are:

to decide on the appropriate search and rescue response to accidents and life threatening situations, and initiate action if necessary, within five minutes of being alerted in at least 95 per cent. of incidents; to introduce three pilot search and rescue accident prevention projects targeted at the most common incident categories and measure their impact by 31 March 2003;

to build on the risk based approach to improve the focus of ship inspections, and deliver at least 96 per cent. of the planned inspections based on that approach; to increase the percentage of available surveyor time spent on surveys, inspections and related operational work by 5 per cent.

to achieve an 80 per cent. customer satisfaction rating as a result of a survey of the shipping industry; and to improve our performance by 5 per cent. in regard to Service Standard 4: Issue Notices of Eligibility for admission to seafarers' examinations.

EU State Aid

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions, pursuant to his answer of 20 March 2002, Official Report, column 350W, on EU state aid, if he will publish the assessments made by his Department of the operation of EU state aid rules on the encouragement of national flag shipping and seafarer employment. [46361]

Mr. Jamieson: Our assessment, in response to the EU Commission's enquiries, is that the current state aid rules allow for increasing UK ship registration and seafarer employment. The assessment cannot be published as it contains commercially sensitive information.

Ferry Links

Mr. Peter Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what steps he is taking to encourage expanded ferry links between Scotland and Northern Ireland via the Lockryan ports. [45917]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer 25 March 2002]: The provision of ferry services is a matter for decision by individual ferry operators and port authorities.

Swanwick

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what assessment his Department has made of closures of air traffic control sectors by the centre of Swanwick since it began operations; what the (a) dates of (b) nature of and (c) reasons for closures were; and if he will make a statement. [45652]

Mr. Jamieson: These are operational matters for National Air Traffic Services as the operator of Swanwick and the Civil Aviation Authority (CAA) as the independent aviation safety regulator. The CAA is satisfied that the operational arrangements at Swanwick are safe and it is scrutinising the performance of the system closely.

Air Cargo

Mr. Peter Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what the total net change in air cargo movements has been since 1997 for each UK airport. [45308]

Mr. Jamieson: This information is not available in the form requested.

Galileo Project

Mr. Peter Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions when he expects the Galileo Project for positioning to be completed; and when he expects it to be made compulsory for air movements in EU airspace. [45307]

Mr. Jamieson: The upcoming Transport Council on 26 March is expected to take decisions on the development and validation phase (2002–05) of Galileo, the European Commission's global navigation satellite system. The Government understands that Galileo is expected to become operational in 2008 and that the future Galileo aviation requirements have yet to be determined.

Airports

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what assessment he has made of the impact of the proposed international airport in Northern France on the airports in the South East of England. [45247]

Mr. Jamieson: The South East and East of England Regional Air Services Study (SERAS) has not undertaken an assessment of the impact of the proposed airport in northern France on airports in the study region. It should be noted that the proposed French airport is a long way from London—about the same distance as Manchester.

Slot Allocations

Mr. David Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions when he plans to make a decision on the application for public service obligation on the Gatwick to Inverness route; and if he will make a statement on the decision of Scot Air to delete the Inverness to London-City route and its implications for security of access from Highlands to London. [45140]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer 21 March 2002]: The Government will make an announcement on the application to impose a public service obligation on the Gatwick to Inverness route shortly. Scot Air's decision to cease to operate air services between Inverness and London City was a commercial one for the airline. Two other airlines continue to provide air services between Inverness and London.

NATS

Mr. Peter Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what assessment has been made of future funding requirements for NATS. [44338]

Mr. Jamieson: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to my hon. Friend the Member for Ealing North (Mr. Pound) on Wednesday 20 March 2002, Official Report, column 353W.

Airlines

Mr. Pound: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what proposals he has to pay compensation to airlines affected by the closure of US, Israeli and central London airspace following the terrorist attacks in the USA on 11 September; and if he will make a statement. [46927]

Mr. Jamieson: Following my right hon. Friend's announcement on 13 December 2001, Official Report, columns 103–04W, of a scheme of financial assistance to airlines, applications for compensation have been received. These have now been scrutinised and my right hon. Friend has decided that assistance totalling some £39.7 million will be paid to 11 airlines.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions on what basis state aid will be paid to airlines; which ones will receive it; whether such subsidy will be made available to all UK airlines who can prove financial loss due to the events in the USA on 11 September in proportion to the downturn in traffic they have experienced since that time; whether such subsidy will include meeting losses that can be shown to have been incurred by UK airports; and if he will make a statement. [9352]

Mr. Spellar: Following my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State's announcement on 13 December 2001, Official Report, columns 103–04W, of a scheme of financial assistance to airlines, applications for compensation have been received. These have now been scrutinised and my right hon. Friend has decided that assistance totalling some £39.7 million will be paid to 11 airlines. Air 2000, Airtours, BA, bmi British Midland, Britannia, British European, JMC, KLM uk, Monarch, Scot Airways, Virgin Atlantic. Airports were not eligible under the scheme.

Airport Security

Mr. Lazarowicz: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions (1) pursuant to the answer of 19 March 2002, Official Report, column 232W, on airport security, which United Kingdom (a) airports and (b) airlines have signed up to the Voluntary Commitments on Air Passenger Rights; [46449]

(2) what non-legally binding commitments are set out in the Voulntary Commitments on Air Passenger Rights. [46444]

Mr. Jamieson: Twenty UK airports have signed up to the Airport Passenger Service Commitment. They are Aberdeen; Belfast International; Birmingham International; Bournemouth; Bristol International; Cardiff International; East Midlands; Edinburgh; Exeter International; Glasgow; Humberside; Leeds Bradford; Liverpool; London Gatwick; London Heathrow; London Luton; London Stansted; Manchester; Norwich International; Southampton.

Ten UK airlines have signed up to the Airline Passenger Service Commitment. They are Air 2000; Airtours International (now MyTravel Airways); bmi British Midland; Britannia Airways; British Airways; British European Airways; JMC Airlines; KLM(UK); Monarch Airlines; Virgin Atlantic Airways.

The Airport Passenger Service Commitment covers 11 areas, with signatories agreeing to: provide assistance to persons with reduced mobility; display passenger information on legal rights; provide assistance during periods of significant delays or disruption; improve airport access and ground transportation; provide appropriate infrastructure for check-in, baggage and security; regularly maintain equipment; ensure that sufficient trolleys are available; provide clear way-finding and staffed information desks; keep all public areas clean at all times; ensure that customer comment and complaint procedures are clear and effectively managed; produce regular consumer reports on levels of passenger satisfaction.

The Airline Passenger Service Commitment covers 14 areas, with signatories agreeing to: offer the lowest fare available through each of their direct outlets; honour the agreed fare after payment; notify passengers of known delays, cancellations and diversions; assist passengers facing delays; deliver baggage as quickly as possible; allow telephone reservations to be held or cancelled without commitment or penalty within 24 hours; provide prompt refunds; provide assistance to passengers with reduced mobility and passengers with special needs; meet passengers essential needs during long on-aircraft delays; take measures to speed up check in; reduce the number of passengers who are involuntarily denied boarding; provide information to passengers regarding commercial and operational conditions; provide information on the operating carrier; and be responsive to passengers' complaints.

The full text of the Commitments can be found on the website of the Air Transport Users Council at http://www.auc.org.uk.

Air Traffic Control

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions (1) pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Cotswold (Mr. Clifton-Brown) of 5 March 2002, Official Report, column 177W, on air traffic control, if the estimate provided included (a) the direct internal costs referred to in his answer of 11 March 2002, Official Report, column 742W, (b) controller relocation and training costs and (c) interim costs of expanding the West Drayton Centre while Swanwick was non-operational; and if he will make a statement; [44450]

(2) if he will provide a definition of commissioned cost he used in the answer; and if he will make a statement. [44574]

Mr. Jamieson: The figure of £623 million quoted in my answer of 5 March, comprises the capital and revenue costs, together with costs associated with bringing the system into operation (which include costs of operation, maintenance and support of the Swanwick site). The figure includes the direct internal costs and the controller relocation and training costs, but not the interim costs of expanding the West Drayton centre prior to Swanwick becoming operational.

Heathrow

Lawrie Quinn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will announce his decisions on the applications to extend the Heathrow Express and the Piccadilly Line to the proposed fifth terminal at Heathrow Airport; and if he will make a statement. [46934]

Mr. Byers: When I gave approval on 20 November last to the building of a fifth terminal at Heathrow, I said that I shared the inquiry Inspector's view on the importance of these two proposed railway extensions to the case for approving the new terminal. I therefore imposed conditions requiring two railway extensions to be provided before the core terminal building is opened. I also said that I was minded to make the necessary Orders under the Transport and Works Act (TWA) authorising the proposed railway extensions, and to grant planning permission for this development.

I was, however, unable at that stage to grant the necessary approvals for the railway works. This was because I wished to attach planning conditions giving satisfactory control over the railway development, but these conditions had not been discussed at the inquiry. I therefore set out in my November letter the conditions I was minded to impose and invited comments. I have subsequently received comments from interested parties which have shown a good measure of agreement for the conditions I proposed, and which have helped me to finalise their wording.

I have therefore now decided to make the TWA Orders and to give planning approval for the Heathrow Express and Piccadilly Line extensions. Copies of both decision letters, which include the full sets of conditions for these works, have been placed in the Library of the House.

PFI/PPPs

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will list the (a) private finance initiative and (b) public private partnership projects which have been delayed. [44877]

Dr. Whitehead: In this Department, the only PPP/PFI project where contract signature is likely to be reached later than originally planned is the Health and Safety Laboratory Estate Rationalisation project which I expect to be signed shortly.

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what role his Department played in the transfer of (a) real estate and property and (b) other assets to the shadow PPP infracos. [45656]

Mr. Jamieson: The Secretary of State gave consent for the necessary transfers in accordance with the provisions of the London Regional Transport Act 1984 (as amended).

London Underground

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what changes relating to reputational externalities were made in the Ernst & Young, London underground PPPs Value for Money Review, between the receipt of a copy from Ernst & Young and the presentation of the copy to the House on 5 February; and if he will make a statement. [46448]

Mr. Jamieson: No such changes were made.

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions whether he intends to appoint an interim arbiter for the London Underground PPP; and under what powers and specification he is able to make such an appointment. [46381]

Mr. Jamieson: I refer the hon. Member to the answers given on 5 March 2002, Official Report, column 170W, and 12 March, Official Report, column 920W.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what assessment he has made of the ability of London Underground rolling stock to operate on main lines beyond the terminal points of the tube network. [45880]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer 25 March 2002]: This is a matter for London underground (LU). LU's rolling stock is purpose-designed and the Underground uses a four-rail system and operates to different rules from the main line. These differences make it difficult for LU rolling stock to operate beyond the existing network. However, there are short sections of the main line over which LU has long standing running rights and which have been specially adapted for this purpose.

LU has carried out an assessment of a section where they plan to extend the Metropolitan line to Watford Junction (the Croxley Link). This involves a short section of new line and then a connection to the Euston/ Watford Junction main lines.

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will make a statement on the safety case that will be required to be conducted by the Health and Safety Executive before the transfer of London Underground to Transport for London; and what implications this has for contracts between infracos and London Underground under the PPP. [45660]

Mr. Jamieson: London Underground, as the operator of trains, stations and infrastructure, is responsible for preparing a safety case. The Health and Safety Executive considers whether the safety arrangements made out in the case, if implemented, are capable of delivering safety.

HSE is currently considering London Underground's revision of its existing case, which sets out safety arrangements with its infrastructure companies in the private sector. Acceptance of these arrangements by HSE is necessary before the Tube modernisation plans can proceed. Whether a further revision will be necessary to cover transfer of London Underground to Transport for London depends on the extent of any further changes to safety arrangements that may be involved.

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions which aspects of the modernisation plans for the London Underground have been set as requirements by his Department; and what the mechanism is by which these requirements have been set in each case. [45654]

Mr. Jamieson: The Government do not have powers to set specific requirements in relation to London Underground's plans for the modernisation of the Tube. London Underground shares the Government's objectives of improving the Tube and ensuring that there should be no privatisation, that safety be maintained or improved and that the contracts should only go ahead if they represent value for money.

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions (1) pursuant to the answer of 11 March 2002, Official Report, column 736W, on London Underground, who in Government have been involved in the discussions on increased public grants to support the tube modernisation programme with Transport for London; on what dates discussions have take place; and what reference has been made to the infraco contracts in discussions with Transport for London; [45662]

(2) what discussions he (a) has had and (b) plans to have with other parties regarding increased public grants to support the tube modernisation programme. [45655]

Mr. Jamieson: Tripartite discussions have begun between officials of my department, London Underground and Transport for London on the overall level of grant provision over the first seven and a half years of the Tube modernisation contracts. It is envisaged that a number of further discussions will take place between the three parties before the grant determination process is concluded.

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions, pursuant to the answer of 11 March 2002, Official Report, column 737W, on PPP Infracos, who has statutory powers to take over work from the London Underground PPP Infracos; and under what legislation. [45708]

Mr. Jamieson: Under the plans for the modernisation of the Underground, three infrastructure companies will carry out work to maintain and modernise the Tube's infrastructure under contract to London Underground. The contracts provide powers for London Underground to take over the work of the infrastructure companies if necessary for safety or other reasons.

As referred to in my answer of 4 March 2002, Official Report, column 85W, the Greater London Authority Act 1999 provides statutory powers for an infrastructure company to be managed under a PPP administration order.

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions, pursuant to the answer of 7 March 2002, Official Report, column 555W, on London Underground, how many revisions of the draft PPP contracts were received by his Department; on which dates; and what the reasons were for the revisions in each case. [45623]

Mr. Jamieson: As stated in my answer of 7 March 2002, Official Report, column 555W, London Underground has shared revisions to draft contracts with DTLR throughout the process of developing the proposals for the modernisation of the Underground. Details of the number and dates of changes could only be provided as disproportionate cost. The reasons for any changes are a matter for London Underground, but throughout the aim has been to ensure that the public sector gets the best value for money overall.

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what correspondence was received from (a) Transport for London, (b) the London Mayor and (c) London Transport on the London Underground PPP in the week preceding 7 February; and if he will place the correspondence in the Library. [42113]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer 11 March 2002]: Consistent with the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information exemption on internal discussion and advice, it would not be appropriate to place such correspondence in the Library.

Central Railway

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what assessment he has made of the impact on Chiltern Railway passenger services of (a) the construction and (b) the operation of the Central Railway project. [46314]

Mr. Jamieson: The impact on the operations on the existing network is among the key areas that the SRA will be examining in its further detailed assessment of Central Railway's proposals.

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions, pursuant to his answer of 15 March 2002 to the hon. Member for Luton, North (Mr. Hopkins) Official Report, column 1276W, on the Central Railway, if he will place in the Library a copy of the Strategic Rail Authority's report on the Central Railway proposal. [46367]

Mr. Jamieson: I am arranging for a copy of the SRA's consultants' report to be placed in the library.

Mr. Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions on what date he received the report of the SRA on the proposed Central Railway Project. [39106]

Mr. Jamieson: The SRA first notified my Department of the conclusions of its high level review on 20 September and discussions about the proposal are continuing.

Rolling Stock

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions, pursuant to the answer of 15 March 2002, Official Report, column 1271W on rolling stock, what proportion of the new vehicles entering service between 1999 and 2001 were ordered after 25 February 1999; when the remainder were ordered; and where information regarding the refurbishment of railway rolling stock is held. [45669]

Mr. Jamieson: 15 per cent. of these vehicles were ordered after 25 February 1999. Of the remainder, 53 per cent. were ordered in 1998 and 32 per cent. in 1997. None was ordered between 1 January 1999 and 24 February 1999. Information about refurbishment of rolling stock is held by the rolling stock leasing companies (ROSCOs).

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what rules the Health and Safety Executive applies to the loan of rolling stock by preservation societies to train operating companies. [45304]

Mr. Jamieson: Provided that the vehicles have not been deleted from the Library list of rolling stock permitted to run on the network, and they have not been modified, they are covered by "grandfather" rights and do not require further approval under the Railway and Other Transport System (Approval of Works, Plan and Equipment) Regulations.

However, the Railway Safety Regulations 1999 prohibit Mark 1 rolling stock from carrying fare paying passengers from 1 January 2003 unless the vehicles are modified to reduce the risk of overriding or an exemption has been granted for their use. These regulations also prohibit trains from running on the mainline railway that are not protected by a train protection system such as TPWS. The operation of the vehicles will also need to be addressed in the duty holder's Railway Safety Case.

Railtrack

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions whether the Government have approached the European Commission about the possible extension of state aid approval for Railtrack in administration beyond September. [45347]

Mr. Jamieson: No approach has been made.

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what estimate he has made of the additional state aid approval that would be required to extend Railtrack administration for an additional six months beyond the end of September. [45299]

Mr. Jamieson: No such estimate has been made.

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what estimated funding levels were included in the 10 year plan for the level of income assessed for Railtrack by the Regulator for Control Period 3. [45677]

Mr. Jamieson: The original 10-year Plan, published in July 2000, assumed that Railtrack's income in Control Period 3 would be based upon our projections for the fixed element of Railtrack's track access charges. This involved a 2 per cent. increase in real terms for fixed track access charges in 2001–02 and a 2 per cent. reduction in real terms for each of the subsequent nine years.

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what percentage increase the 10-year Plan includes for Railtrack income between Control Period 2 and Control Period 3. [45678]

Mr. Jamieson: No detailed breakdown is currently made of how much of the 10-year Plan funding in the Control Period 3 years (2006–07 to 2010–11) will be for Railtrack or for other individual companies. The level of income for Railtrack's successor in CP3 will depend upon the nature of the company and will be determined by the Rail Regulator through a Periodic Review, having regard to his statutory duties under section 4 of the Railways Act 1993.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions (1) what system of assessment is in place to monitor the work of Railtrack plc and the Rail Regulator in repairing and replacing rail track; and if he will make a statement; [44635]

(2) what assurances the Government have received from Railtrack plc and the Rail Regulator that the track is being repaired and replaced to a proper level of safety; and if he will make a statement. [44605]

Mr. Jamieson: The Office of the Rail Regulator (ORR) receives monthly information from Railtrack on the physical condition of its track. Railtrack also supplies monthly reports on the numbers of broken rails and other incidents that cause delay. These reports are shared with the Health and Safety Executive (HSE) and regular liaison takes place between the ORR and HSE so that the safety implications and performance of Railtrack are fully understood.

In addition there is now in place a system of independent reporters who make an assessment directly to the Rail Regulator of the adequacy of Railtrack's stewardship of the network. The Regulator does not repair or replace track and so no system of monitoring his activities exists.

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions whether he is able to provide financial guarantees for commercial funding to the Railtrack administrator beyond 30 September. [40233]

Mr. Jamieson: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given yesterday, 25 March 2002, by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State to my hon. Friend, the Member for Scarborough and Whitby (Lawrie Quinn) [ref. 45966]. I would also refer the hon. Member to the Statement made to the House yesterday by the Secretary of State.

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions (1) when he will have to make a further application for state aid consent to the European Commission if the process of ending Railtrack administration is delayed; [36316]

(2) how much the application for state aid consent from the European Commission for Railtrack was for; [36313]

(3) how much contingency funding the Government have allowed for in the state aid application to the European Commission for Railtrack. [36315]

Mr. Jamieson: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given yesterday, 25 March 2002, by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State to my hon. Friend the hon. Member for Scarborough and Whitby (Lawrie Quinn) [ref. 45966].

Channel Tunnel

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what recent discussions he has had with (a) the EU Commissioner for Transport and (b) his French counterpart on the suspension of rail freight services through the Channel Tunnel. [46134]

Mr. Jamieson: Rail freight services through the Tunnel have been severely disrupted since November last year as a result of the actions of would-be illegal immigrants at SNCF's Fréthun yard. The Government is extremely concerned at the impact of this disruption on UK businesses. My Department, and others, are in regular contact with both the European Commission and the French Government on this matter.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what the impact has been on his rail freight targets under the 10 year transport plan of the suspension of rail freight services by SNCF through the Channel Tunnel. [46133]

Mr. Jamieson: We will be producing a review of the 10 Year Plan in July this year.

ScotRail

Mrs. Lait: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what discussions he has had with National Express about the train drivers' strikes against ScotRail; and if he will make a statement. [46355]

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what discussions his Department has had with National Express regarding the industrial dispute by employees of ScotRail; if his Department has given instructions to the company relating to the company's pay offer to drivers; and if ministers have intervened in giving advice to National Express on this matter. [46480]

Mr. Jamieson: Neither DTLR Ministers nor their officials have given any instructions or advice to National Express or ScotRail concerning ScotRail's pay offer to its drivers.

Rail Freight (Harwich–Colchester Line)

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what representations he has received on proposals to increase rail freight on the line between Harwich and Colchester; and if he will make a statement. [46187]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer 25 March 2002]: My Department receives representations from time to time about rail freight to the Haven Ports. As part of its Freight Strategy, the Strategic Rail Authority is developing proposals to upgrade rail links to Harwich and Felixstowe.

Strategic Rail Authority

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions, pursuant to the answer of 6 March 2002, Official Report, column 369W, on the Strategic Rail Authority for what reasons (a) the expected amount of private investment under the plan will not exactly match that envisaged under the 10-year Plan and (b) infrastructure renewals are defined as investment. [45496]

Mr. Jamieson: The Strategic Rail Authority have indicated in their Strategic Plan that the total amount of private sector investment envisaged will be very similar to that envisaged in the 10-year Plan. They have also indicated that the precise amount will depend on the pace of negotiations and the terms that can be negotiated.

Infrastructure renewals, which are the replacement or updating of railway assets to make them fit for use on the railway network, create assets that have a useful life over more than one accounting period. Under accounting rules, they can therefore be properly accounted for as investment to be amortised over the expected accounting life of the assets. Railtrack's current accounting policies reflect this, as did British Rail's when that organisation still existed.

SWT Franchise

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what impact the SRA consultation on the franchising structure of the South West Trains and Wessex areas will have on the timetable to complete the new SWT franchise agreement. [45297]

Mr. Jamieson: The consultation process is not expected to delay completion of the new South West Trains franchise agreement.

Train Drivers

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many train drivers were working in the rail industry in November 1998. [45429]

Mr. Jamieson: This information is not held centrally in the form requested. According to ATOC information, in April 1999 there were 8,684 established drivers of passenger trains.

Train Operating Companies

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will place in the Library the franchise agreement ancillary document D for each of the train operating companies. [40872]

Mr. Byers: These documents are available for inspection at the Strategic Rail Authority's offices, in accordance with section 73 of the Railways Act 1993. I have arranged for copies to be placed in the Library.

Railways

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what benchmarks and baseline periods he will use to assess the performance of the rail network in the next five years. [45351]

Mr. Jamieson: We published on 18 February a quarterly set of key indicators against which progress on improving the railways could be measured. They are intended to provide a benchmark for future reference. The baseline period is April–June 2001. The indicators focus on the issues that matter most to passengers: punctuality, reliability, safety and quality. The first quarterly update was published on 18 March. The next will be published on 6 June.

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions for what reason the total length of the electrified rail network has fallen since 1997. [45350]

Mr. Jamieson: The reduction referred to represents a very small proportion of total network length, about 0.2 per cent., and is an operational matter for Railtrack. I am not aware that it is attributable to a single factor.

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what recent discussions he has had with (a) the Strategic Rail Authority, (b) the Association of Train Operating Companies, (c) train operating companies, (d) the Rail Passenger Committee and (e) other passenger representatives regarding (i) rail fares and fare regulation and (ii) Network railcards. [45416]

Mr. Jamieson: The SRA is conducting a review of fares policy and will report to Ministers. The Association of Train Operating Companies has met with Ministers to explain their proposals for the SouthEast Network Card.

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what targets he has set for his rail performance measures to be met by March 2005. [45418]

Mr. Jamieson: The Government's 10 Year Transport Plan sets out clear targets for Rail focusing on increasing the number of passengers and volume of freight using the railways, and on tackling overcrowding. We do not intend to introduce yet further targets, but rather to have a set of benchmarks against which progress and improvements can be judged.

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what changes have taken place in the last five years to railway discount cards; what changes are planned; and if he will make a statement. [45417]

Mr. Jamieson: The Strategic Rail Authority (SRA) requires franchised train operators to continue to offer the Young Person's, Disabled Person's and Senior Citizen's railcards on the same terms as applied before privatisation. Train operators also operate commercial railcard schemes such as the Network Railcard (for travel in the South East) and the Family Railcard, whose terms are a matter for the train operators, and which are not subject to regulation by the SRA.

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many staff are employed in each key area of the railway industry; what the total requirement for staff in each key area is; what assessment he has made of staff shortage numbers in each key area; how many individuals are (a) in training and (b) trained for each key area; and how many individuals have (i) retired and (ii) left employment in each key area since 1995. [45500]

Mr. Jamieson: Information from the Railway Industry Training Council indicates that approximately 140,000 people are employed in rail related work. The most recent information available indicates that in 2001 approximately 1,200 vacancies were reported as hard to fill. It is estimated that 5,500 people were in training for employment in the industry in 2001. No information is held centrally on numbers of people leaving the industry.

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions, pursuant to the answer of 15 March 2002, Official Report, column 1271W, on rail summit targets, what issues arising from the National Rail Summits are not being taken forward through the SRA Strategic Plan. [45670]

Mr. Jamieson: The broad thrust of the Rail Summits—improving both the rail network and its performance—is the fundamental goal of the Strategic Rail Authority (SRA) and its Strategic Plan. That improvement will only come, as the Plan has made clear, through action to stabilise the industry and get back to basics now and through significant investment in renewal and enhancement of the network, in order to provide increased capacity for passenger and freight services. The SRA is currently engaged in delivering both of these.

Barcelona Summit

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will make a statement on the discussions and resolutions of the Barcelona Summit related to transport. [45349]

Mr. Spellar: I am pleased to report that there was substantial progress made at the Barcelona summit in a number of areas related to transport, consistent with Her Majesty's Government's objectives.

The summit outcomes and discussions will advance the liberalisation of the transport sector, in particular, the calls to: progress work on the Second Railway Package; liberalise public transport more generally; achieve a Single Sky in air traffic management in 2004; take decisions on the proposed rules on airport slot allocation by the end of 2002; and, adopt by December 2002 the pending proposals on port services.

In addition, the summit called for the Council and the European Parliament to adopt revised guidelines and financial rules on the Trans-European Networks (TEN) and welcomed progress on the Galileo satellite navigation system. The Council was requested to conclude its work on the proposed Regulation on HGV Drivers' Hours. There were also discussions on the proposed directive for fairer transport tariffs across different modes of transport by 2004.

I should also refer the hon. Member for Epsom and Ewell to the Prime Minister's statement to the House on 18 March on the outcomes of the summit.

10-Year Plan

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will list the rail projects in the 10-year Plan on which development work has already started. [45348]

Mr. Jamieson: Examination of the high-level feasibility of all of the rail projects listed in the 10-year Plan is either under way or has already been completed. The SRA's Strategic Plan lists at page 49 the major projects to which the SRA is already committed or which are prioritised for delivery by 2010.

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions, pursuant to his answer of 25 February 2002, ref. 37093, on 10-year Plan funding, for what reason £1.5 billion of advanced grants to Railtrack has resulted in an increase in the 10-year Plan total. [40604]

Mr. Jamieson: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend, the Chief Secretary on 26 February 2002, Official Report, columns 1207–08W.

Multi-modal Transport Studies

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many multi-modal transport studies are behind schedule; and if he will make a statement. [46111]

Mr. Jamieson [holding answer: Monday, 25 March 2002]: The Multi-Modal Studies programme contains 22 Studies which were split into three tranches. Five Studies from tranche 1 have so far reported to Regional Planning Bodies with recommendations. We have announced our decisions on three of these.

From the remaining 17 Studies, two Studies from tranche 3 of the programme are expected to commence later this year. Nine studies from tranches 1 and 2 have been given time extensions. This is due to the complexity of the Study process, and the need for some additional work identified during the course of the Studies. Ten Studies are now due to report by summer 2002 and a further three Studies by December 2002. The remaining four Studies will report in 2003.

Concessionary Fares

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will publish the results of his survey with local authorities to assess the impact of the introduction of the statutory minimum requirement for concessionary fares introduced under the Transport Act 2000. [46858]

Ms Keeble: My Department will be publishing the results of the survey on 28 March. A copy of the Statistics Bulletin will be placed in the Library and will be available on my Department's website (www.dtlr.gov.uk) shortly.

The statutory minimum requirement for concessionary fares was introduced in Spring 2001 and guarantees all elderly and disabled people half-fare or better on local bus services, with a free bus pass.

The survey of local authorities in England was undertaken at the end of last year to assess the impact of the introduction of the statutory minimum requirement in each local authority area. The survey showed that over 50 per cent. of local authorities now offer a more generous concessionary fares scheme than before the introduction of the statutory minimum requirement, and 17 local authorities have introduced a concessionary fares scheme where none previously existed.

Ninety four per cent. of local authorities offer a half fare concession for elderly people and 90 per cent. offer half fare for disabled people. The remaining local authorities either offer flat rate fares or free travel. Just under half of local authorities offer concessions on modes of public transport other than local buses.

Vehicle Clamping

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what assessment he has made of (a) how many vehicles have been clamped and (b) how much revenue has been obtained from car clamping in each year since 1997. [46164]

Ms Keeble: Wheel clamping is undertaken on both the public highway and private land as a means of enforcing parking restrictions. There is no central record of the number of vehicles that have been clamped in particular years.

Parking Fines

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what assessment he has made of how much revenue has been obtained from parking fines in each year since 1997. [46165]

Ms Keeble: Parking fines are issued by local authorities and the police service. The table below sets out the information available to the Department on total local authority income from parking in England and Wales. This is published in Local Government Financial Statistics; England and Welsh Local Government Financial Statistics. The figures include income from penalty charge notices and excess charge notices as well as parking charges—the Department does not have a breakdown of these elements.

Year	Income[1] £
1997–98	652,644,000
1998–99	668,929,000
1999–2000	739,645,000
2000–01	799,719,000

[1] Covers all local authority income from parking, including fines.

The following table shows the number of fixed penalty notices (FPNs) issued by police forces in England and Wales for obstruction, waiting and parking offences and estimated related income, which accrued to the Consolidated Fund, in each of the years since 1997 for which figures are available was as follows:

Year	Number of FPNs	Estimated FPN income £
1997	2,199,000	45,590,000
1998	2,118,000	44,425,000
1999	1,808,000	38,087,000
2000	1,595,000	33,877,000

Road Safety

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions (1) how much money his Department spent on producing free road safety literature in 2001; and how much money it plans to spend on producing it in 2002; [45666]

(2) how his Department markets the free road safety literature it produces. [45667]

Dr. Whitehead: The Department has committed approximately £750,000 to producing free road safety literature in the year 2001–02 in support of the Think! road safety campaign. It is envisaged that a similar amount will be spent on this next year.

The Department markets its road safety literature via Road Safety Officers, Police forces, private sector and voluntary organisations who are active in support of national or local road safety campaigns. It also targets teachers and parents via exhibitions and advertising and editorials in the educational media. The literature is used on sites and in meetings throughout the country to spread road safety best practice to the public. All literature is also available on the Think! Road Safety website at www.think.dtlr.gov.uk.

M4 Bus Lane

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what assessment he has made of the effect on congestion of the operation of the bus lane on the M4 motorway since its introduction. [45971]

Mr. Spellar: The Transport Research Laboratory (TRL) monitored use of the bus lane during its first year of operation. A copy of their report was placed in the House of Commons Library in January 2001.

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what plans he has to change the bus lane on the M4 motorway to a carriageway for general use. [45970]

Mr. Spellar: The Highways Agency has recently consulted interested parties on a proposal to increase the speed limit between Junction 4 and the elevated section of the M4 from 50 to 60 mph and to allow motorcycles to use the M4 bus lane.

Alternative Fuels

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions (1) what estimates he has made of the number of vehicle refuelling points in the UK in each of the last four years for (a) liquefied petroleum gas, (b) compressed natural gas and (c) hydrogen/fuel cell technology; [45896]

(2) what estimates he has made of the number of vehicles in the UK for each of the last four years which were powered by (a) liquefied petroleum gas, (b) compressed natural gas and (c) hydrogen/fuel cell technology; [45895]

(3) what (a) representations he has received from and (b) meetings he has had with vehicle manufacturers on measures to create incentives for investment in higher volumes of vehicles propelled by road fuel gases after 2004; [45894]

(4) if he will make it his policy to set a target for the UK's consumption of liquefied petroleum gas as a road fuel as a proportion of total fuel consumption for vehicle propulsion. [45897]

Mr. Jamieson: My Department sponsors the Energy Saving Trust's Powershift programme which provides grants towards the cost of purchasing cleaner fuel vehicles. Last year, following an extensive consultation with vehicle manufacturers and fuel suppliers, I announced changes to the programme which offered higher levels of grants for manufacturer-approved LPG vehicles. This move is intended to encourage more manufacturers to invest in the development of production-line LPG vehicles. My Department maintains close links with vehicle manufacturers to keep track of their plans to introduce LPG models.

The Government's general policy has been to encourage the wider use of LPG through fuel duty incentives and purchase grants offered under the Powershift programme rather than by setting an outright target for LPG consumption. Where Government does set targets these will tend to be based on environmental performance rather than specifying particular fuels or technologies.

The table shows how the numbers of LPG vehicles and refuelling points have increased in the UK over the last four years (figures supplied by the LP Gas Association).

Year	Number of vehicles	Number of refuelling points
1998	3,500	150
1999	13,000	285
2000	39,000	610
2001	65,000	1,000

The take up of natural gas vehicles has been much slower. Over the last four years the population of natural gas vehicles has grown by around 50 vehicles per year with a total of 10 refuelling points over the same period.

Hydrogen fuel cell technology is still in its infancy and there are, as yet, no hydrogen refuelling points for vehicles in the UK. However, the Government will be supporting a hydrogen refuelling point to be used in conjunction with a trial of three fuel cell buses in London expected to start in 2003.

Vehicle Emissions

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions (1) what information he has collated on the effectiveness of particulate traps, as fitted to vehicle diesel engines, for the reduction of emissions of (a) $PM_{2.5}$ particles and (b) oxides of nitrogen; [45898]

(2) if he will make a statement setting out the measures and policy objectives, including targets, the Government have to reduce emissions from road traffic of (a) benzene, (b) 1,3 butadiene, (c) particulates and finer particles (PM_{10} and $PM_{2.5}$), (d) carbon monoxide, (e) sulphur dioxide and (f) oxides of nitrogen. [45946]

Mr. Jamieson: The effectiveness of diesel particulate filters has been the subject of a number of studies in recent years. All show that these filters can effectively remove more than 90 per cent. of particulate matter including all particulates that would contribute to the $PM_{2.5}$ value.

Controls of oxides of nitrogen is not the objective of a particulate filter, but depending upon the specific system design, reductions can be achieved. Departmental research on heavy-duty engines has shown that systems comprising an oxidation catalyst and particulate filter can reduce NO_x by approximately 10 per cent.

The Government's measures and policies for tackling air pollution from road transport, industry and other sources are set out in the Air Quality Strategy for England, Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland, published in January 2000. It includes ambient air quality standards for benzene, 1,3 butadiene, particles (PM_{10}) carbon monoxide, sulphur dioxide, nitrogen dioxide, lead and low level ozone and objectives for their achievement between 2003 and 2008. Proposals were issued last year to strengthen the objectives for PM_{10}, benzene, carbon monoxide and introduce a new objective for polycyclic aromatic hydrocarbons. The current advice from the advisory Expert Panel on Air Quality Standards is that PM_{10} provides the most appropriate basis for an air quality standard rather than the finer fraction particles $PM_{2.5}$.

Traffic Noise Pollution

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what policies the Government have in place to reduce traffic noise pollution; and if he will make a statement. [45944]

Mr. Jamieson: Since 1996 all new vehicles have had to meet stringent noise standards before entering service. No further reductions in noise limits are planned in the short term but the UK is participating in the United Nations Economic Commission for Europe (UNECE) Working Group on vehicle noise which is examining the scope for further noise reductions. Requirements restricting the noise from tyres are being introduced in stages from this year in accordance with EU Directive 2001/43/EC.

The 10-year Transport Plan extended the Government's commitment to reducing trunk road noise by stating that lower noise road surfacing will be used for all future maintenance and new construction work. All concrete roads on the national network will be resurfaced with this quieter material by March 2011. Current plans are that at the end of the 10-year Plan period some 60 per cent. of the national road network will have a lower noise surface.

A programme of work is also underway to provide noise mitigation measures on certain trunk roads built or altered before 1988 prior to current methods of assessing traffic noise being adopted.

Night Time Deliveries

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions when his Department will announce a relaxation of night time delivery curfews for gas-powered trucks; what studies he has made of the impact on the environment in the neighbourhood around supermarkets; and what definitions he will apply to the relevant vehicles. [45123]

Mr. Spellar: My Department is currently involved in a joint initiative by the Commission for Integrated Transport and the Freight Transport Association to explore the scope for Local Authorities to consider flexibility in delivery restrictions in exchange for better environmental performance by the distribution industry resulting in less disturbance to local residents. The aim is to develop a Code of Practice which would result in a significant reduction in the noise and other nuisance commonly associated with urban deliveries. This would enable deliveries to be carried out outside peak congestion hours, more flexibly and efficiently with fewer vehicles. Improved distribution would also help to ensure that products are available on the shelves at the times people want to buy them. The use of gas-powered vehicles might be amongst the appropriate "best practice" measures considered by local authorities in determining whether to ease delivery restrictions.

Fire Service

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions, pursuant to his answer of 14 March 2002, Official Report, column 1200W, on extra training for the Fire Service, if he will place in the Library the guidance on mass decontamination methods that has been provided for Fire Authorities by central Government; and where information on the additional training for firefighters since 11 September is held. [45336]

Dr. Whitehead: I have arranged for copies of the letter from Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Fire Services to all Chief Fire Officers dated 19 December 2001, (Dear Chief Officer Letter July 2001), which contains the central guidance on mass decontamination, to be placed in the Libraries of the House. Information on the additional training for firefighters since 11 September is held by individual Fire Brigades.

Civil Defence

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what budget allocation his Department has made to support civil defence planning at national level. [45356]

Mr. Jamieson: The Department for Transport, Local Government and the Regions' civil emergency co-ordination unit has a budget in 2001–02 of £711,000 for administration and programme resources.

In addition, the Fire Service Inspectorate have three officers working full time and other officers part time on issues as part of the "New Dimension" review following the events of 11 September. The Operational Practices section of the Inspectorate deals with civil defence planning as part of its references. The approximate costs of providing the above support are:

Salaries—£140,000 pa.

Expenses—£20,000 pa.

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions whether the Department has been involved in updating contingency plans to deal with a major civil emergency since 11 September. [45355]

Mr. Jamieson: The Department's contingency plans for dealing with a major civil emergency have been reviewed in light of the events which took place on 11 September. In addition, the Department is actively involved in the Government wide post 11 September review of Civil Contingency arrangements.

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will list the organisations which have responsibility for civil defence planning in the UK. [45352]

Mr. Christopher Leslie: I have been asked to reply.

Local authorities have the main responsibility for preparing civil defence plans. They will need to include others with a role to play such as the emergency services, health authorities, utilities, transport operators, voluntary organisations and government departments and agencies.

The Civil Contingencies Secretariat at the Cabinet Office was established in 2001 in order to aid co-ordination of civil defence matters at a national strategic level.

Telecommunications

Jim Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what steps are being taken to force public sector agencies in the South West to obtain best value for telecommunications services; and to what extent such agencies are being encouraged to use broadband. [33728]

Mr. Alexander: I have been asked to reply.

The Office of Government Commerce (OGC) is responsible for delivering value for money improvements in procurement by the public sector. My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister has asked OGC to consider what more can be done to help Government departments and other public sector organisations buy broadband more effectively.

In addition I recently detailed the allocation of a £30 million RDS broadband such with the South West RDA being awarded a £3.78 million package to encourage take up and rollout in their region.

EU Directives

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will list the European Union directives and regulations relating to his Department that have been implemented in each of the last four years, specifying (a) the title and purpose of each, (b) the cost of public funds of each and (c) the cost to businesses of each. [39119]

Dr. Whitehead: The information requested is not held centrally and providing it would involve disproportionate cost. Regulatory impact assessments are produced for all proposals, including those originating in European legislation, likely to impose significant costs on businesses in the UK and are made available in the Libraries of the House. We do not hold information on the costs of implementation to public funds or businesses.

Electoral Register

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions when he intends to publish the consultation document on the Electoral Register. [45881]

Dr. Whitehead [holding answer Monday, 25 March 2002]: The difficult and complex issues involved are necessitating very careful consideration and we hope to publish our policy paper on access to the electoral registers after Easter.

Free Literature

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many (a) local authorities, (b) schools and (c) companies ordered DTLR free literature in 2001. [45668]

Dr. Whitehead: The dissemination of DTLR Free Literature is contracted to an external distribution contractor. The contractor is unable to provide the information in the exact form requested but can provide the following information.

During calendar year 2001:

(i) 18,432 orders were received from 3,862 different address points within local authorities;

(ii) 1,358 orders were received from 1,107 different school addresses; and

(iii) 16,078 orders were received from 10,180 different company addresses.

Privatisation

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if his Department has a standard definition of (a) privatisation, (b) part-privatisation, (c) public private partnership, (d) private finance initiative and (e) not for profit company (i) to which they must or have worked and (ii) which they have developed. [45673]

Dr. Whitehead: The Government set out its definitions for the various types of public private partnership in "Public Private Partnerships—The Government's Approach" published in April 2000 and is available from the Libraries of the House.

Council Officers (Libel Actions)

Mr. Patrick Hall: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what guidance he has issued to local authorities on the use of public funds to support costs incurred by council officers who have pursued libel actions; and what plans he has to review such guidance. [42666]

Dr. Whitehead: No guidance has been issued to local authorities. However, section 101 of the Local Government Act 2000 makes provision for the Secretary of State, by order, to give local authorities a power to provide indemnities to their members and officers. We intend to consult on the scope of this power in due course. The consultation paper will clarify the circumstances in which authorities will be allowed to indemnify their members and officers against costs that they might incur.

Finance (Liverpool)

Mrs. Ellman: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what revenue and capital support he plans to make available to local government services in Liverpool in 2002–03. [44395]

Dr. Whitehead: Liverpool City Council will receive a general grant for the funding of revenue expenditure (excluding local authority housing) of £432.9 million under the Local Government Finance Settlement for 2002–03. Of the special and specific grants paid by this Department, Liverpool will receive £15.1 million from the Neighbourhood Renewal Fund. They will also receive Housing Revenue Account subsidy (HRAS) calculated on the basis of claims yet to be made by the authority. The amount of HRAS claimed for 2001–02 is some £97 million, including a Major Repairs Allowance of over £17 million for capital repairs to their stock.

In 2002–03, Liverpool will receive £31.4 million basic credit approvals to support other capital spending as part of the single capital pot. They will also receive £9.9 million capital grant for Local Transport Plan administration. Additionally, £1.4 million Disabled Facilities Grants, and £0.4 million transitional private sector renewal grants are available to Liverpool, dependent on receipt of eligible grant claims.

Local Government Finance

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what the criteria are for the use of local authorities' section 33 arrangement to reclaim VAT as applied to (a) the New Deal for Communities partnerships and (b) registered social landlords (i) wholly and (ii) partially comprising stock transferred from a local authority. [43494]

Ms Keeble: This is a matter for local authorities, New Deal for Communities partnerships and registered social landlords to resolve with Customs and Excise.

Local Authority Finance

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what the average level of local authority debt in England is (a) in cash terms and (b) as a percentage of their budget; and if he will make a statement. [46039]

Dr. Whitehead: The average level of local authority debt in England, as at 31 March 2001, is £95 million per local authority. This figure is 70 per cent. of their total budgeted revenue expenditure for 2001–02. These figures cover the London boroughs, Metropolitan Districts, Unitary authorities, Shire counties, Shire districts and the Isles of Scilly.

Local authority debt finances capital investment. Long-term borrowing to finance capital expenditure is regulated by Government through the issue of credit approvals.

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will list the debt-free authorities in England, broken down by the parties which control them. [46038]

Dr. Whitehead: The 108 English local authorities listed below, together with the parties which control them, have reported that they had debt-free status as at 30 September 2001:

Capital Payments and Receipts (CPR2) 2001–02
Definition: An authority is debt-free if (a) at 31 March 2001, the authority's credit ceiling was nil or a negative amount and (b) at 30 September 2001, the authority had no money outstanding by way of external borrowing other than short-term borrowing or hard to redeem debt, as defined in Regulation 154 of the Local Authorities (Capital Finance) Regulations 1997.

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what proposals he has to require debt-free local authorities to pay into a central fund. [46037]

Ms Keeble: Our proposals for local government funding are set out in the recent Local Government White Paper—"Strong Local Leadership—Quality Public Services". They include the introduction of an arrangement for pooling a proportion of housing capital receipts arising in debt-free authorities to fund new housing investment where the need is greatest. This will mirror the arrangements that apply to non debt-free authorities. We are not proposing that this pooling should apply to receipts already realised.

EU Directives

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what assessment the Government have made of the cost to British farming of the Vibrations Directive. [45700]

Dr. Whitehead: The Health and Safety Executive's Regulatory Impact Assessment of the Vibration Directive is available in the House of Commons Library. It assesses the cost of the Directive to industry as a whole; no assessment has been made of the costs to individual sectors.

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what assessment the Government have made of the impact of the noise directive on small manufacturers. [45701]

Dr. Whitehead: The Health and Safety Executive's Regulatory Impact Assessment of the Physical Agents Noise Directive is available in the House of Commons Library. It includes an assessment of the impact of the Directive on small firms.

Human Rights Act

Mr. Woodward: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what monitoring his Department undertakes on local authorities to ensure compliance with the Human Rights Act 1998 when undertaking best value reviews of services. [45812]

Dr. Whitehead: The Department does not monitor compliance with the Act. The DETR, along with Home Office and the LGA published the document "A New Era of Rights and Responsibilities—core guidance for public authorities" in October 2000, to draw authorities' attention to the requirements of the legislation. Beyond this, compliance is a matter for the individual authority.

Wembley National Stadium

Mr. McCabe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what assessment he has made of the proposals for car parking arrangements and public transport contained in the planning application for Wembley National Stadium, with specific reference to (a) the requirements for a 90,000 seat world class sporting venue, (b) the transport and environmental needs of the Brent area and (c) the Government's vision for a 21st century transport system. [46323]

Ms Keeble: It is for Brent Council to form a view of the content of the planning application.

Fatal Farming Accidents

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many fatal farming accidents there were in England and Wales in the last 12 months. [45209]

Dr. Whitehead: Figures for fatal injuries in farming for 2001–02 will be available by September 2002. The provisional figures for 2000–01 show 38 work-related fatal injuries in farming in England and Wales.

Football Stadium

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions when the public inquiry into the redevelopment of Odsal Stadium will start. [45478]

Mr. Byers: The planning application was called in on 19 February 2002. The Planning Inspectorate is making the inquiry arrangements in accordance with the Town and Country Planning (Inquiries Procedure) (England) Rules 2000. The target is to arrange inquiries within 22 weeks of the date of call-in.

Asbestos-related Illnesses

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions (1) if he will make a statement on the criteria for compensation for asbestos-related illnesses contracted at work; [45206]

(2) if he will introduce legislation to ensure compensation for individuals who have contracted asbestos-related diseases after working with asbestos for more than one employer; [45208]

(3) if he will make a statement about the apportionment of responsibility between employers in cases where an individual suffering from asbestos-related illness has been employed by several employers. [45207]

Dr. Whitehead: The recent judgment of the Court of Appeal in the Fairchild case has the effect of preventing people suffering from work-related mesothelioma who worked for more than one employer from seeking compensation through the courts. On 13 February 2002, Official Report, column 401W, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State announced that my Department will use the compensation scheme that the Department administers under the Pneumoconiosis etc. (Workers' Compensation) Act 1979 to make payments to people affected by the Fairchild judgment, provided that they meet the other conditions of eligibility under the scheme.

The House of Lords will hear an appeal against the judgment of the Court of Appeal on 22–23 April. We will determine whether we need to act further in the light of the outcome of the appeal.

Care Homes

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many appeals for (a) the demolition and (b) the conversion of nursing and residential homes the Planning Inspectorate has considered in the past 12 months. [45296]

Ms Keeble: The provision of information on planning appeals is the responsibility of the Planning Inspectorate. I have asked the Inspectorate's Chief Executive, Mr. Chris Shepley, to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Chris Shipley to Mr. Chris Grayling dated 26 March 2002:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your Question about planning appeals involving the demolition or conversion of nursing and residential homes.

The Planning Inspectorate does not record the existing land use of a site that is subject to appeal; just the proposed one, together with the development description give at the time of the planning application. To identify any appeals that fall into the categories you require, we have had to rely on the description also including existing usage.

We can identify a total of 13. Four included the demolition of a home, all of which were dismissed. Of the nine involving converting a home to another use, five were allowed and four dismissed.

North West Regional Assembly

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what the annual cost is of the North West Regional Assembly. [45343]

Dr. Whitehead: The North West Regional Assembly is a voluntary body which receives funds from a number of sources. It is responsible for its own budget and publishes its accounts annually. The Department has made available £0.5 million for the Assembly in this financial year and proposes to make available £0.6 million in 2002–03.

Urban Renewal

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will make a statement on recent inner city regeneration initiatives. [45377]

Ms Keeble: The Urban White Paper Implementation Plan issued in March 2001 sets out how a wide range of initiatives across Government are supporting the objectives of the White Paper to deliver an urban renaissance. The Implementation Plan and six-monthly Implementation Bulletin (due to be re-issued in March 2002) provide an account of progress to date, as well as the key objectives we aim to deliver on over the next two years. Both documents can be found on my Department's website: www.regeneration.dtlr.gov.uk.

We are working closely with 24 towns and cities across the country to take forward the urban agenda. These efforts will feed into the Urban Summit 2002. This will take place on 31 October and 1 November at the ICC in Birmingham. The Summit will reconfirm the Government-wide commitment to urban renaissance, celebrate success in bringing about change and identify where further action is needed, and evaluate the recommendations in the White Paper.

The Government's vision for neighbourhood renewal was set out in the Neighbourhood Renewal National Strategy Action Plan, launched by the Prime Minister in January 2001. It aims to deliver economic prosperity, safe communities, high quality schools, decent housing and better health to the poorest parts of the country.

This approach focuses Government programmes explicitly on deprived areas, many of which are located in inner cities, and requires local people and the public and private sectors to work in partnership. Government departments, local government and other public service providers are expected to bend their mainstream budgets to meet better local needs in deprived neighbourhoods. Departments have been set a series of minimum standards known as floor targets—for the first time they will be judged on the areas where they are doing worst and not on the national average.

Extra resources are being directed to the 88 most deprived local authority areas to kickstart the strategy, including the Neighbourhood Renewal Fund, worth £900 million over three years.

The strategy is co-ordinated and driven forward by the cross-cutting Neighbourhood Renewal Unit based in DTLR. Further information on the National Strategy for Neighbourhood Renewal, including updates on progress, can be found on the Neighbourhood Renewal Unit website: www.neighbourhood.gov.uk.

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will list, in date order from June 1997, the Government (a) reports and (b) white papers relating to urban renewal and social inclusion. [45376]

Ms Keeble: Government reports and White Papers relating to urban renewal and social inclusion, in date order, are as follows:

(a) Reports (All were produced by the Social Exclusion Unit, unless stated otherwise)

Truancy and School Exclusion (May 1998)

Rough Sleeping (July 1998)

(b) White Paper

Bringing Britain Together: A National Strategy for Neighbourhood Renewal (September 1998)

The Urban White Paper "Our towns and cities: the future—Delivering an urban renaissance" (November 2000) DETR.

Development Land Trusts

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will make a statement on his Department's policy towards development land trusts. [37468]

Ms Keeble [holding answer Tuesday, 26 February 2002]: "Development Land Trusts" is not a term that the department is aware of. If my hon. Friend would care to write to me, I will investigate further.

Deaths at Work

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many deaths at work occurred in London in 2001. [45180]

Dr. Whitehead: Twenty six employees and self-employed people were fatally injured at work in Greater London in 2001.

Planning Inquiries

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will set out the criteria by which a public inquiry on planning is designated as a major inquiry. [45449]

Mr. Byers: A Code of Practice, "Preparing for Major Inquiries in England" outlines procedures for handling major inquiries under the Planning Acts in England. The Code is set out in Annex 4 of DETR Circular 5/2000 "Planning Appeals: Procedures (Including Inquiries into Called-in Planning Applications)".

Paragraph 4 of the Code indicates that it is intended for application in cases where the development proposal is of major public interest because of its national or regional implications, or the extent or complexity of the environmental, safety, technical or scientific issues involved, and where for these reasons there are a number of third parties involved as well as the applicant and the local planning authority.

Housing

Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions (1) what information his Department has collated on the proportion of former council tenants who purchased a property on the open market with the aid of a cash incentive scheme grant and who were subsequently unable to maintain their mortgage payments; [44464]

(2) what proportions of local authority properties released for letting as a result of the cash incentive scheme in each Government office region in each of the past four years were let to (a) a homeless household, (b) a transfer applicant and (c) a waiting list applicant. [44462]

Ms Keeble: Forty six local authorities have been running cash incentive schemes in 2001–02. The detailed information requested is not available centrally.

Ms Oona King: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will commission research to update the Review of the Cash Incentive Scheme 1994–97. [44463]

Ms Keeble: Two substantial research programmes have already been carried out into the Cash Incentive Scheme. Both showed that Cash Incentive Schemes could play a valuable part in freeing up council housing for households in housing need and in supporting moves into home ownership. We have no plans at present for any further research work on these Schemes.

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will list the banding status of local housing authorities since performance bandings in the Housing Investment Programme were first introduced. [43025]

Ms Keeble: I am arranging for a copy of a table showing the performance banding assessments for all housing authorities given in the annual Housing Investment Programme exercise since these were first published in 1997 to be placed in the Libraries of the House. Six authorities—Bolton, Derby, Ipswich, New Forest, Portsmouth and Southampton—have been assessed in the top performance band in each of the five years.

Mr. Hopkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what the average management costs are for large scale voluntary transfer housing associations in the most recent year for which figures are available. [46370]

Ms Keeble: The Department does not hold this information.

Housing Transfers

Mr. Hopkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how much expenditure has been incurred by each local authority in transferring its stock to RSLs; and what he estimates the cost will be in (a) 2002–03 and (b) 2003–04. [46365]

Ms Keeble: The Department does not hold this information.

Introductory Tenancies

Margaret Moran: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many introductory tenancies have been terminated on the grounds of (a) antisocial behaviour and (b) rent arrears each year since their introduction. [43071]

Ms Keeble: This information is not collected centrally.

Property Management

Brian White: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions when he intends to consult on how to tackle poor standards amongst certain managers of property let on residential long leases; and if he will make a statement. [46928]

Ms Keeble: My Department intends to issue a consultation paper entitled "Improving the Standard of Residential Leasehold Management" on Friday 5 April. The paper is a response to widespread concern about the variable standards of management in the residential leasehold sector. It explores various options for improving standards, each of which has its own advantages and disadvantages.

The Government is issuing this paper to stimulate a constructive and informed debate which will assist us in making our decision. Copies of the paper will be placed in the House Library.

Noise Insulation

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what requirements for noise insulation exist in the case of the conversion of residential dwellings into a larger number of units. [45749]

Ms Keeble: The sound insulation between dwellings is controlled under Part E of the Building Regulations. Building Regulations 5 and 6 deal with Material change of use and sub-paragraphs 5(g) and 6(e) make it clear that Part E applies when a building which contains at least one dwelling undergoes a change of use such that it contains a greater or lesser number of dwellings than it did oreviously.

Starter Homes Initiative

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions (1) if he will list (a) the areas and (b) the number of households within each area which have benefited from the Starter Homes Initiative so far; [44985]

(2) what the outturn expenditure so far incurred each year under the Starter Homes Initiative by his Department is; [44984]

(3) what the estimated public expenditure expected to be incurred each year under the Starter Homes Initiative by his Department is. [44983]

Mr. Byers [holding answers Thursday, 21 March 2002]: We have provided £250 million for the Starter Home Initiative over the three years 2001–02 to 2003–04. Outturn expenditure figures for 2001–02 and the numbers of key worker households that have benefited are not available at present.

Following the allocations in September 2001, schemes have been set up in local areas; priorities have been agreed with employers; and applicants have been assessed and instructed to select properties.

Regional Assemblies

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how much the Government contributed to each of the regional assemblies in the last year for which figures are available. [46186]

Dr. Whitehead: In 2001–02, the Government is contributing £500,000 to each voluntary regional assembly.

Regional Assemblies

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what plans the Government have to establish regional assemblies in England; and what the implications will be for the shire counties. [45835]

Dr. Whitehead: The forthcoming Regional Governance White Paper will set out our proposals for elected regional assemblies for England, including the implications for local government.

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how much the regional assembly board in the South West is paid; and what payments members are entitled to. [45282]

Dr. Whitehead: This is a matter for the Assembly which is a voluntary body.

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what role the South West Regional Assembly has in determining Government policy in the South West. [45273]

Dr. Whitehead: The South West Regional Assembly has an important role in the region in both scrutinising the regional development agency and in acting as a strategic focal point for the region. The Government is keen to take account of the Assembly's view, but there is no direct role in determining Government policy in the South West.

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how much funding the regional assembly in the South West receives from (a) Government and (b) local sources. [45283]

Dr. Whitehead: The South West Regional Assembly (SWRA) is a voluntary body funded by local authorities and others in the region. Last year the Government announced £500,000 worth of funding for the SWRA as part of the £15 million fund for regional chambers over three years. The SWRA have recently submitted their plans for 2002–03 and 2003–04 amounting to a bid for £1.2 million from the fund. Other elements of the Assembly's budget are a matter for the Assembly.

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what type of projects in the South West Regional Development Agency's area the regional assembly may (a) reject and (b) recommend. [45277]

Dr. Whitehead: The assembly has no role in the SWRDA's decisions on projects.

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what criteria he has set for joint working between regional development agencies and regional assemblies; and which is the lead organisation. [45276]

Dr. Whitehead: The Regional Development Agencies Act 1998 allowed for the Secretary of State to issue directions to require a RDA to have regard, in formulating and reviewing its strategy, to any views expressed by the chamber. No directions have been issued under this provision as the voluntary arrangements between the RDAs and chambers have precluded the need for this.

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what role the regional assembly has in scrutinizing the working of regional development agencies; and if the regional assembly may turn down recommendations made by regional development agencies. [45281]

Dr. Whitehead: The Regional Development Agencies Act 1998 allowed for the Secretary of State to designate a voluntary grouping of stakeholders in the region as the regional chamber for the regional development agency (RDA), and each region now has a designated chamber (or assembly). It also allowed for the Secretary of State to issue directions to require a RDA to have regard, in formulating and reviewing its strategy, to any views expressed by the chamber. No directions have been issued under this provision as the voluntary arrangements between RDAs and chambers have precluded the need for this.

e-Government

Barbara Follett: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what plans he has to pay grant to (a) provide e-voting pilots and (b) help local authorities achieve the vision of e-Government set out in their implementing electronic Government statements. [47163]

Mr. Raynsford: As part of the package of funding previously announced under the £350 million Local Government On-Line (LGOL) Programme, I have today laid before the House a Special Grant Report containing powers for my Department to Pay £4.1 million of grant to provide 15 e-voting pilots, £200,000 to each local authority that has submitted a satisfactory Implementing Electronic Government (IEG) Statement (to support the work set out in that Statement), and a further £200,000 to authorities that submit a satisfactory updated IEG and that demonstrate they have used the first £200,000 to good effect.

The Report will also enable £50,000 of grant to be paid to fund the dissemination of best practice from the e-government pathfinders, and allow the 24 LGOL funded e-government pathfinders to continue, where necessary, past 31 March 2002 in order to complete their pioneering work.

Arms-length Management

Mr. Hopkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how much his Department estimates the average local authority will spend in setting up an arms-length management organisation, with specific reference to (a) employment or purchase of legal and other professional, (b) new accommodation, (c) new staff and (d) regrading of existing posts. [46371]

Ms Keeble: We have made no estimates of these costs, which will depend on each authority's circumstances. In 2001 a working group chaired by the Local Government Association, in which my Department participated, developed and published model legal documentation for arms length housing management organisations (ALMOs), so helping to reduce authorities' individual legal costs. We will continue to work closely with authorities and the local government associations to ensure that ALMOs are established and operate efficiently.

Departmental Leak Inquiry

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if the leak inquiry being undertaken by the Permanent Secretary has been completed; and if he will publish the findings. [45978]

Mr. Byers [holding answer Monday, 25 March 2002]: The internal investigation into apparent leaks from DTLR between 11 and 14 February has been completed. Reports on internal investigations are not published. Consideration is being given to whether disciplinary action should be taken against any member of staff as a result of this investigation in accordance with procedures in the DTLR Staff Handbook.

Self-funding Safety Camera Project

Mr. McLoughlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many statements his Department has issued to counter mis-reporting of its self-funding safety camera project in the media, since it was launched in April 2000. [46245]

Dr. Whitehead: There have been two press releases (on 13 August 2001 and 3 December 2001) which mention the results from the pilot scheme of camera funding.

No record is kept of oral statements made by the press office to the media.

Research and Policy Programmes

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what changes to the management of research and policy programmes in his Department (a) have taken place since May 1997 and (b) are planned. [46337]

Mr. Jamieson: The Department continues to modernise and improve the approach taken to the management of research and policy programme, through a wide variety of means. It is not possible to list separately, all projects which contribute to this aim over the period specified.

Public Engagements

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if he will list his public engagements since 8 October 2001. [45450]

Mr. Byers: I have carried out engagements across the country and in Europe.

Ministerial Meetings

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions when he last met (a) Ian McAllister and (b) Ian Coucher. [45357]

Dr. Whitehead: It is not the normal practice of the Government to release details of meetings or discussions with private individuals or companies.

Reports

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions, pursuant to the answer of 13 March 2002, Official Report, column 1090W, on reports, if he will place a copy of the standard terms and conditions referred to in the Library. [45676]

Dr. Whitehead: The information requested has been placed in the Libraries of the House.

HSE

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what technical support contracts were awarded by the Health and Safety Executive between 1 January and 31 December 2000. [45657]

Dr. Whitehead: HSE has a number of Framework Agreements with various suppliers of technical support services. These are listed in Annex 1 together with the number of jobs and the value of work undertaken by the supplier(s) for HSE during the specified period.

In addition to the work carried out under these Framework Agreements, a number of individual pieces of technical support work were contracted during the period 1 January 2000 to 31 December 2000 and are listed at Annex 2.

Both Annexes have been placed in the Libraries of the House.

Correspondence

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what the target time will be in 2002–03 for (a) ministers to reply to letters from hon. Members and (b) officials in his Department to reply to letters received directly from members of the public. [44950]

Dr. Whitehead: This Department's target for 2002–03 is for Ministers to respond to 76 per cent. of letters from hon. Member within 15 working days and 90 per cent. within 20 working days. For letters received directly from members of the public, the target for the centre of the Department for 2002–03 is for officials to respond within 15 working days. Our executive agencies also have a 15 working days target for such correspondence, with the exception of the Rent Service (five days), the Fire Service College (seven days) and the Driving Standards Agency (10 days).

Human Rights Act

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many cases have been brought against his Department under the Human Rights Act 1998; and what has been the cost in (a) legal fees to defend cases and (b) compensation payments. [45067]

Dr. Whitehead: We do not collect central records of all cases in which the Human Rights Act 1998 is relied on. Human rights are now integrated in the general law and are rarely the sole basis for a challenge. We do monitor centrally those cases which we consider may be of particular significance to this department. We have recorded 68 cases to date.

We do not collect information centrally about the costs to public funds, legal fees or compensation payments in cases that include a human rights issue. In most cases it will be difficult to single out associated costs relating to the human rights element.

Public Service Agreement

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions which public service agreement targets scheduled to be met in 2002 will not be achieved by the due date. [44818]

Dr. Whitehead: Information about progress on PSA targets will be published in the department's 2002 Departmental Annual Report.

New Deal

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many people employed by his Department under the New Deal for Young People in each of the last four years have subsequently (a) found unsubsidised employment for more than 13 weeks and (b) returned to jobseeker's allowance or other benefits. [44907]

Dr. Whitehead: This information is not held by this Department.

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many people have been employed by his Department in each of the last three years under (a) the New Deal for Young People, (b) the New Deal for the Over 50s and (c) the New Deal for Lone Parents; and at what cost, listed by category, to public funds. [44926]

Dr. Whitehead: This Department and its agencies have employed 77 New Dealers to date. Records are not kept centrally of the separate categories.

New Deal recruits take up existing vacancies so extra costs to public funds are limited to the subsidy, where appropriate, and any additional training and development which may be needed. These amounts are not held centrally.

Crèche Facilities

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what crèche facilities are provided by his Department; and at what cost. [44865]

Dr. Whitehead: The Department for Transport, Local Government and the Regions (Central) currently provides 12 subsidised nursery places in two London nurseries run by Westminster Children's Society and subsidises four nursery places for DTLR(C) staff in Hastings. In 2001–02 the Department also, exceptionally, paid subsidy on the first year costs of 4.5 places for DTLR(C) staff in Temple Quay, Bristol.

The DTLR also participates in the Westminster Holiday Playscheme. In 2001–02, DTLR staff took up 51 places on the scheme.

The Department's budget for 2001–02 for the provision of the subsidised element of its childcare provision was £50,600. The Department pays approximately 45 per cent. of the cost of places at the London nurseries—parents meet the remaining proportion. Places at the holiday playschemes are 50 per cent. subsidised by the Department.

The Department is conducting a review of childcare provision in DTLR(C), which will make recommendations on a range of options—including childcare vouchers.

Ministerial Private Offices

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what the running costs were of (a) his Ministers' private offices, separately identifying expenditure on staff and (b) his Department in each year from May 1997 to the nearest date for which the information is available. [40984]

Dr. Whitehead: (a) The table shows the total administration and pay expenditure on Ministers' Private Offices. The figures for the years prior to 2001–02 are in cash terms and relate to the Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions prior to changes in Departmental responsibilities following the last election. The forecast for 2001–02 is on a resource basis.

(b) The running costs for the Department have been published in the individual years' appropriation accounts and resource accounts, which are available in the Libraries of the House.

Administration costs expenditure

	1997–98 Expenditure	1998–99 Expenditure	1999–2000 Expenditure	2000–01 Expenditure	2001–02 Forecast
Private office total	n/a	2,475	2,475	2,517	2,132
of which Pay	n/a	1,371	1,498	1,597	1,309

Departmental Procedures

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if it is the policy of his Department for him to be consulted about (a) the discussions on the resignation of a senior official, (b) a decision to secure the resignation of a senior official, and (c) a decision to suspend a senior official. [41282]

Mr. Byers [holding answer 7 March 2002]: Staffing and disciplinary matters within the Department are handled in accordance with the DTLR Staff Handbook, which reflects the provisions of the Civil Service Management Code. The Permanent Secretary informs or consults me as appropriate within this framework in relation to senior staffing matters.

Jo Moore

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions whether Jo Moore received a one-off payment from public funds following her resignation. [40090]

Mr. Byers [holding answer 4 March 2002]: Personnel matters of this kind are a confidential matter between the individual and the Department.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions whether Jo Moore is employed by his Department. [40089]

Mr. Byers [holding answer 4 March 2002]: I refer the hon. Member to the Statement I made to the House on 26 February 2002.

Mr. Mark Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions what severance package was offered to Ms Jo Moore as a result of her resignation. [40176]

Mr. Byers: Personnel details of this kind are a confidential matter between the individual and the Department.

Press Office

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions, pursuant to his reply of 19 March, if he will list the Government departments to which press officers leaving his Department since June 2001 have transferred. [46120]

Mr. Byers: DTLR press officers have transferred to the following government departments or agencies:

Cabinet Office;

Home Office;

Office of Fair Trading;

Health and Safety Executive; and British National Space Centre.

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions if Ian Jones is suspended on full pay. [45973]

Mr. Byers: I understand that Mr. Jones is currently suspended on full pay pending a decision whether to bring disciplinary charges against him. This decision will be taken in due course following the procedures laid down in the DTLR Staff Handbook.

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions who was between Mr. Ian Jones and Sir Richard Mottram in the reporting line of the former at the time of his suspension. [42585]

Dr. Whitehead [holding answer Tuesday, 12 March 2002]: The acting Director of Communication.

Departmental Filler Advertisements

Mr. McLoughlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions (1) how many television filler advertisements his Department produced in 2001; and how many it intends to produce in 2002; [46237]

(2) how much air-time was allotted to his Department's television filler advertisements, indicating the channels used, in 2001; and how much air-time it expects to be allotted in 2002. [46238]

Dr. Whitehead: The Department has produced eight new TV fillers in the financial year 2001–02. Five of these cover road safety and three, which were modifications of previous TV advertising, cover fire safety. We have also updated five existing fire safety fillers. The total cost committed was £219,745.

The eight new fillers will be launched at the beginning of the new financial year and we will monitor their success to inform future strategy, including the need to produce additional films.

Figures returned by TV stations indicate an estimated total of 19,765 transmissions will have been secured by the end of March 2002, equivalent to £3.2 million worth of airtime. Coverage was achieved on BBC, ITV, Channel 5 and various satellite channels.

We expect the value of airtime received to increase in the next financial year as our research has indicated that TV stations are more receptive to newer films.

Mr. McLoughlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions (1) how much air-time was allotted to his Department's radio filler advertisements, indicating the radio stations used, in 2001; and how much air-time it expects to be allotted in 2002; [46242]

(2) how many radio filler advertisements his Department produced in 2001; and how many it intends to produce in 2002; [46241]

(3) how much of his Department's road safety publicity budget was spent on producing radio filler advertisements in 2001; and how much it intends to spend on producing radio filler advertisements in 2002. [46240]

Dr. Whitehead: In the financial year 2001–02 the department committed £21,545 for producing two radio fillers for road safety which were launched a month ago. We intend to commit an estimated £50,000 in 2002–03 to produce up to five radio fillers for fire safety campaigns.

The Department's previous fillers (as DETR) secured at least 1,000 transmissions to publicise foot and mouth information and the role of the Drinking Water Inspectorate. Actual transmissions will be higher but not all stations provide returns. It is too early to know the number of transmissions secured by the new road safety fillers.

We expect increased coverage in 2002–03 as the number of our fillers and radio use of them increases. Due to commercial sensitivity, we are unable to provide details of which stations have aired fillers.

Road Safety Publicity

Mr. McLoughlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how much of his Department's road safety publicity budget was spent on television campaigns in 2001; and how much it intends to spend on television campaigns in 2002. [46235]

Dr. Whitehead: The Department committed approximately £5.2 million to its Think! road safety television campaigns in 2001–02. It is expected that a similar amount will be committed in 2002–03.

Mr. McLoughlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how much money his Department spent on road safety publicity in 2001; and how much it intends to spend in 2002. [46234]

Dr. Whitehead: The Department committed approximately £12.9 million to the Think! road safety campaign in 2001–02. A budget of £13.4 million has been agreed for 2002–03.

Mr. McLoughlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how much of his Department's road safety publicity budget was spent on radio campaigns in 2001; and how much it intends to spend on radio campaigns in 2002. [46239]

Dr. Whitehead: The Department committed approximately £2.2 million to radio campaigns in the year 2001–02. It is expected that a similar amount will be committed in 2002–03.

Press Releases

Mr. McLoughlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many press releases his Department's press office has released in support of its self-funding safety camera project, since it was launched in April 2000. [46244]

Dr. Whitehead: There have been two press notices concerning the netting off scheme for safety cameras since that date. On 13 August 2001, my Department announced new rules on visibility and the results from the first year of the pilot scheme. On 3 December 2001 new rules on the colour of cameras was announced. The notes to editors contained the previously published figures.

A press notice on 26 July 2001 made mention of speed cameras as a means of cutting speeding.

Mr. McLoughlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, Local Government and the Regions how many press releases were issued by his Department's press office in 2001 (a) on road safety topics and (b) on other topics. [46243]

Dr. Whitehead: (a) DETR (central)/DTLR (central)

Road Safety topics—31

(b) DETR (central)/DTLR (central)

Other topics—531.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Retirement Ages

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will list the retirement ages that apply to the employees of his Department and its agencies, including how many and which categories of employees are affected by each; and if he will make a statement on his Department's policy on flexible retirement. [32824]

Malcolm Wicks: All staff in the Department other than the Senior Civil Service, a total of 129,342 (99 per cent.) can elect to remain in employment until age 65. At present the retirement age for staff in the Senior Civil Service is set by the Cabinet Office at 60, although there is the option to retain members beyond the age of 60 if it is judged to be in the public interest and the Department is satisfied about the fitness and efficiency of the individual to carry out his or her duties.

We are committed to ending age discriminatory practices and Government ministers, through the Cabinet Office, are actively working towards removing the current barriers for members of the Senior Civil Service.

Pensioners

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many retirement pensioners are receiving (a) housing benefit and (b) council tax benefit in (i) Great Britain and (ii) each region of Great Britain. [39547]

Malcolm Wicks: The information is in the table.

Retirement pensioners receiving housing benefit and council tax benefit in Great Britain and by region: May 2000

Region	Retirement pensioners receiving housing benefit	Retirement pensioners receiving council tax benefit
Great Britain	1,490,000	2,153,000
North East	93,000	130,000
North West	189,000	289,000
Yorkshire and the Humber	147,000	209,000
East Midlands	99,000	150,000
West Midlands	150,000	232,000
East	125,000	183,000
London	176,000	223,000
South East	155,000	216,000
South West	103,000	161,000
Wales	71,000	112,000
Scotland	182,000	248,000

Notes:

1. The figures are based on a 1 per cent. sample and are subject to sampling error.
2. The data refer to people claiming housing benefit, who may be single people, or one of a couple or a family. More than one person claiming can live in one property, for example two or more adults in a flat or house share arrangement.
3. The figures have been rounded to the nearest thousand.
4. The totals may not sum due to rounding.
5. Retirement pensioners are defined as people where either they and/or their partner are receiving state retirement pension.

Child Poverty

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will provide the basis for ministers' calculations concerning the number of children who have been lifted out of poverty by the measures introduced by his Government; and what assessment he has made of how many children would be lifted out of poverty by such measures if the take-up rate of social security benefits was 100 per cent. [45288]

Dawn Primarolo: I have been asked to reply.

As a result of personal tax and benefit measures announced in the last Parliament there are an estimated 1.2 million fewer children living in households with incomes below 60 per cent. of the median (after housing costs) than there otherwise would have been. Families with children have very high take-up rates for social security benefits. It would make very little difference whether estimated or 100 per cent. take-up rates were used to calculate the impact of tax and benefit measures on child poverty.

Bereavement Benefit

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, (1) pursuant to his answer of 25 February 2002, ref. 32742, Official Report, column 771W, how many complaints he has received on this subject; [39178]

(2) pursuant to his answer of 25 February 2002, Official Report, column 771W, ref. 32742, if he will make a statement on form BD8. [40293]

Malcolm Wicks: Bereavement Benefits were introduced on 9 April 2001 and are available to both men and women for the first time. They concentrate the help available where and when it is needed most, on immediate needs and on families with children.

Form BD8, registration of notification of death, which is issued by registrars to bereaved people for social security purposes, was amended to incorporate the new bereavement benefits introduced from April 2001.

We have received no complaints about form BD8.

Performance Targets

David Cairns: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what performance targets he has set for the (a) Appeals Service, (b) Disability and Carers Service and (c) Child Benefit Centre for 2002–03. [46930]

Mr. Darling: The targets I have set the Appeals Service, the Disability and Carers Service and Child Benefit Centre are given below.

Further information on the Appeals Service plans for 2002–03 is contained in their individual business plan, which has been published today. Copies have been placed in the Library.

Business plans for the Disability and Carers Service and Child Benefit Centre will be published shortly.

The Appeals Service Targets 2002–03

Waiting Times

The average waiting time for an appeal to be heard will be no more than 14 weeks from the time of receipt by the Appeals Service;

The number of cases over 24 weeks old as at 1 April 2002, will be reduced by at least 30 per cent. by 31 March 2003;

For cases returned by the Commissioner, the average waiting time for an appeal to be re-heard will be no more than 10 weeks from the date of return to the Appeals Service in at least 75 per cent. of cases.

Local Variations

The range of waiting time variations between our local offices will be reduced by a factor of at least 5 per cent. per annum over a two-year period.

Disability and carers service targets 2002–03

	Normal rules claims	Special rules claims	Renewal claims	Reconsiderations	Supersessions	Appeals	Accuracy (%)
Disability Living Allowance (DLA)	43 days	8 days	32 days	39 days	49 days	40 days	96
Attendance Allowance (AA)	27 days	8 days	23 days	38 days	38 days	40 days	96
Invalid Care Allowance (ICA)	32 days	n/a	n/a	95% in 70 days	n/a	40 days	95

Note:

Normal rules claims: Claims on which a qualifying period must be served before benefit can be awarded.

Special rules claims: Claims on which no qualifying period has to be served before benefit can be awarded because the claimant is terminally ill and has a life expectancy of less than six months.

Renewal claims: Claims to renew an existing award of benefit that was made for a finite period. This can be made up to six months before the expiry of the existing award.

Reconsiderations: Applications for review of an initial decision where the application is made on "any grounds" (i.e. dissatisfaction) within one month of the dates of the original decision.
Supersessions: Applications for review of an initial decision where the application is made more than one month after the initial decision.
Appeals: Any case where an independent Tribunal looks afresh at a decision.

Ms Y. Allen

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions for what reasons Ms Y. Allen of Salcombe, Devon was not informed when undertaking a two-year therapeutic counselling course under the new deal scheme that funding would be awarded for the first year only and that only outline sources of alternative funding would be available for the second year; and if he will make a statement as to the impact on (a) employers and (b) new deal participants of funding courses for less than 12 months. [31181]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: The administration of the New Deal is a matter for the Chief Executive of the Employment Service, Leigh Lewis. I have asked him to reply to the hon. Member.

Letter from Clare Dodgson to Anthony Steen dated 11 February 2002:

As the Employment Service is an Executive Agency, the Minister of State has asked me to reply direct to your letter of 12 December 2001, enclosing one from Ms Yvonne Allen of 23 Round Berry Drive, Salcombe, Devon, concerning the funding of her course. This is something that falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Operating Officer of the Agency.

I was naturally concerned to learn of the difficulties Ms Allen is facing. To enable me to respond fully to the issues raised, I contacted Diana Ross, the Regional Director for the South West, and asked her to look into this matter for me.

It may be helpful if I first provide some background information. As you may be aware, Ms Allen undertook the Education and Training Opportunity option which is available to clients taking part in the New Deal for 25plus initiative. To be eligible for the provision clients must be over the age of 25, unemployed and at the time Ms Allen commenced New Deal 25plus, claiming Jobseeker's Allowance for two years or more.

Ms Ross tells me that prior to starting her training Ms Allen agreed an Individual Training Plan with her New Deal Personal Adviser. This states that her objective was to complete the Advanced Certificate in Therapeutic Counselling and gives the dates of the funding, which are from September 2000 to June 2001.

I understand that after completing this funded opportunity, Ms Allen was then invited to discuss her next steps towards finding work with her New Deal Personal Adviser, Fiona Cardrick. At this point, Ms Allen expressed a wish to pursue further training to gain the Diploma in Therapeutic Counselling. Fiona explained that as Ms Allen had already received a year's funding under the Education and Training Opportunity option, she was not eligible for further funding through New Deal. I should add that since New Deal began, it has always been the clearly stated policy to offer funding under the Education and Training Opportunity option for a maximum of one year. I can confirm that Ms Allen has received the maximum amount of funding allowed for participants on this option and that she was made aware of the limitations on funding at the outset.

I understand that Ms Allen is currently considering other sources of funding and has had further discussions with Fiona Cardrick, her Personal Adviser about her next steps.

I am sorry to send what I know will be a disappointing reply, but I hope it is helpful in clarifying the situation.

Guardian's Allowance

David Cairns: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will change the conditions for receiving Guardian's Allowance. [46931]

Malcolm Wicks: Guardians Allowance (GA) is currently paid to people bringing up a child whose parents have either died, or where there is a surviving parent who cannot be traced, or who is serving a prison sentence of five years or more.

From 1 April 2002, we will extend entitlement to GA to those caring for children with a surviving parent who has been ordered by a court to be detained in a hospital, or sentenced to a term of imprisonment for two years or more. This will help to allow more children to remain within their extended family.

Correspondence

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, when he will reply to the letter of 17 January from the hon. Member for Fareham, concerning Mrs. McDonald. [45805]

Maria Eagle: I replied to the hon. Member on 25 March 2002.

Minimum Income Guarantee

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, how many pensioners are claiming the minimum income guarantee in the Clwyd, South constituency. [41388]

Mr. Nick Brown: As at November 2001, there were 2,500 Minimum Income Guarantee claimants in the parliamentary constituency of Clwyd South.

Long-Stay Patients (Benefits)

Annabelle Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, (1) what considerations led to the figure of £14.50 allocated to those in long-stay hospitals who are in receipt of a state benefit; [45144]

(2) when the last review was carried out into benefit receipt for patients in long-stay hospitals; and whether there are plans to review the system in the near future. [45145]

Maria Eagle [holding reply 21 March 2002]: We have considered carefully the impact of the current rules which reduce certain benefits paid to pensioners and people of working age after six weeks of hospitalisation. The down rating of benefits preserves the principle that the State should not make double provision. It also recognises that a substantial number of people leave hospital before six weeks.

We consider the six week rule strikes a fair balance between what the state should provide financially and the provision individuals should make for themselves.

however, we also recognise that people have on-going financial commitments whilst in hospital. We therefore announed on 5 March 2002 that we have decided to extend the period before benefits are downrated by a further seven weeks to the 13 week stage. This will mean that people previously affected by the six week rule will be able to keep their benefits untouched if their period of stay in hospital is under 13 weeks. This will account for the majority of stays.

We will introduce this change to coincide with the introduction of Pension Credit.

The hospital personal allowance, currently £14.50 per week, is intended to provide for small personal items not provided by the hospital and is set by legislation. The amount is currently set as a percentage of Retirement Pension, which is reviewed every year. Benefit is restricted to this amount because, generally speaking, the National Health Service can be said to have assumed, to a large degree, the responsibility of providing for patients who have spent more than 52 weeks in hospital. There are no plans to change the amount by which benefits are reduced for hospital inpatients who have been in hospital for more than 52 weeks.

PFI/PPPs

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will list the (a) private finance initiative and (b) public private partnership projects which have been delayed. [44874]

Mr. Darling: None of the Department's 10 PFI/PPP projects have been delayed beyond the expected or forecast contract close date.

Payments to contractors under PFI are not usually made until the service is available. As I explained in my statement 20 March, Official Report, column 316W, that in one case, developing the new Child Support computer system, testing work is not yet complete. The Department will not pay EDS for the system until it meets the standard required.

New Deal

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what his latest estimate is of the (a) number and (b) proportion of participants in the New Deal for Young People who have left the scheme for unknown destinations. [44899]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: Figures on young people who leave the New Deal for unknown destinations are contained in the regularly published Statistical First Releases which are available in the Library.

Energy Costs

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will make a statement on energy costs incurred by his Department in each of the last 10 years. [42442]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: I refer the right hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Minister for Rural Affairs (Alun Michael) on 19 March 2002, Official Report, Volume 382, column 268W.

Celebrations

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what arrangements his Department has made to celebrate (a) St. Patrick's Day, (b) St. George's Day, (c) St. Andrew's Day and (d) Her Majesty the Queen's Golden Jubilee; and how his Department celebrated St. David's Day. [42299]

Malcolm Wicks: There are certain days of the year known as "named days" when the Union flag must be flown from Government buildings. The days include St. David's day (in Wales), St. George's day (in England), St. Andrew's day (in Scotland) but not St. Patrick's day. In the Department for Work and Pensions there are no celebrations other than raising the Union flag.

Consideration is being given to the Union flag flying protocol for the Jubilee. The Union flag will fly on Coronation Day (2 June), as this is a named day.

I should also like to refer the hon. Member to the reply the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport gave to the hon. Member for South Suffolk (Mr. Yeo) on 11 February 2002, Official Report, columns 58–59W. In the Department for Work and Pensions all staff will be given the additional public holiday on 3 June 2002 to celebrate Her Majesty The Queen's Golden Jubilee.

Minimum Income Guarantee

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will estimate how many of the single pensioners who fail to take up their entitlement to the minimum income guarantee are aged 80 years or above. [32615]

Mr. Nick Brown: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available can be found in the publication "Take Up of Income Related Benefits: Statistics for 1999–2000", copies of which are available in the Library.

Working Families Tax Credit

Andy King: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what steps have been taken by his Department to ensure that the tapers determining the amount of housing and council tax benefit to which the recipients of working families tax credit are entitled do not result in a lower income in work after rent and council tax than out of work after receiving 100 per cent. housing benefit and council tax benefit. [29534]

Malcolm Wicks [holding reply 25 January 2002]: We are transforming the welfare system from a passive organisation paying out benefits to an active system that fights poverty, creates opportunity and helps people become self-sufficient.

In support of these aims we are ensuring that work pays. The Working Families Tax Credit and the National Minimum Wage have for the first time guaranteed a minimum income for working families with children. These measures together guarantee that every family with children where at least one person is working 35 hours a week will receive a minimum income of £225 a week, or almost £12,000 a year.

Entitlement to Housing Benefit and Council Tax Benefit is assessed by comparing a person's net income, less income disregards, with the amount they would receive on Income Support or income-based Jobseeker's Allowance. For each pound that their income exceeds this level, the amount of benefit payable is reduced by fixed tapers. For people moving from welfare into work these tapers ensure they are better off.

For people in work, who receive a pay rise, the combined effect of the tapers in Working Families Tax Credit, Housing Benefit and Council Tax Benefit means they remain better off. If Working Families Tax Credit was not taken into account in Housing Benefit and Council Tax Benefit families who worked longer hours or took better paid jobs would be worse off as they would face high marginal deduction rates.

Housing Benefit Fraud

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will make a statement on the Department's policy towards providing incentives for local authority procedures for reducing housing benefit fraud. [34423]

Malcolm Wicks: Our immediate priority for Housing Benefit is to work with local authorities to drive up standards across the board, tackle fraud and error and promote work incentives. We have introduced a wide range of measures providing incentives for local authorities to tackle housing benefit fraud.

In November 1997 we launched the Benefit Fraud Inspectorate to help raise standards in secure housing benefit administration. The BFI has so far published 116 reports helping local authorities to tackle weaknesses in their services and identifying and spreading good practice.

In April 1998 we tightened the criteria for establishing fraud to prevent abuse of the Weekly Benefit Savings scheme which was originally introduced in 1993.

In May 1998 we introduced the Verification Framework to help prevent fraud and error from entering the housing benefit system and help to detect it when it occurs. £160 million has been made available from April 2001 to fund local authorities which sign up to the Verification Framework, and over 75 per cent. of authorities have now done so.

In April 2001 we introduced a comprehensive new anti-fraud scheme for local authorities that provides a broader range of financial incentives to prevent, detect, punish and prosecute fraud than did the old Weekly Benefit Savings scheme. To fund these two schemes we have made £180 million available since April 2001. Sixty-three authorities adopted the new scheme in April 2001 and the remaining authorities will do so in April this year.

New Deal

Mrs. Irene Adams: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people in Paisley, North have (a) entered work and (b) are in unsubsidised employment through the New Deal Programme. [43915]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: The available information is in the table.

Number of people entering jobs in Paisley, North (up to the end of December 2001)

Programme	Total	Unsubsidised jobs
New Deal for Young People	636	585
New Deal 25 plus	197	163
New Deal for Lone Parents	[1]191	191
New Deal 50 plus	[1]129	129

[1] Subsidised employment is not available through the New Deal for Lone Parents or New Deal 50 plus. All jobs for these programmes are therefore unsubsidised.

Note:

Information at constituency level is not available for the New Deal for Disabled People and the New Deal for Partners.

New Deal Evaluation Database

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions since the New Deal for Young People began, how many participants have joined the scheme (a) once, (b) twice, (c) three times and (d) more than three times. [44095]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: At December 2001, 741,000 people had entered the New Deal for Young People programme. Of these 104,550 clients have entered the programme twice (14 per cent. of all entrants), 14,200 (2 per cent.) have entered three times, and 1,880 (0.2 per cent) more than three times.

Means-tested Benefits

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions by what date he estimates the number of pensioners qualifying for means-tested benefits to fall to the level that existed in 1995. [43935]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: The number of pensioners currently receiving one or more income related benefits is below the level in 1995, and has been in every year since 1995.

Benefits Agency (Slough)

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will make a statement on each of the violent incidents that took place at the Benefits Agency Office at Slough during February. [45196]

Mr. Nicholas Brown [holding reply 21 March]: On 1 February at 15.25 a person forced his way through a door between the public counter into the caller staff area. He verbally threatened a member of staff and made physical contact with him (touching him on the nose) although he did not physically harm him. The police had been called immediately and they arrested the person. A review risk assessment was carried out on 4 February.

On 15 February a male member of the public fatally stabbed a female member of the public. Police have arrested a man in connection with the incident. A further risk assessment has been carried out and recommendations sent to local management.

Winter Fuel Allowance

David Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many pensioners in Telford are in receipt of the winter fuel allowance. [41426]

Mr. Nick Brown: Figures for this year are not yet available. Details of last year's payments are in the Library.

Minimum Income Guarantee

Mr. Woodward: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many pensioners in (a) St. Helens South, (b) St. Helens MBC area, (c) Merseyside, (d) the North West and (e) England are eligible to claim the minimum income guarantee. [44717]

Mr. Nick Brown [holding reply 21 March 2002]: Estimates of the number of people eligible for the Minimum Income Guarantee are not available below National level. Figures for the number of pensioners who may be entitled to but are not receiving the MIG are contained in the publication, "Take Up of Income Related Benefits: Statistics for 1999–2000".

The figures in the report pre-date the MIG take up campaign in May 2000 which, up to the end of January 2002, has resulted in 128,163 additional successful claims—pensioners are on average £20 a week better off as a result.

The table shows the number of MIG recipients as at November 2001, by area:

Thousands

Area	Number of MIG claimants
St. Helens South Parliamentary Constituency	3,200
St. Helens MBC	6,300
Merseyside	6,180
North West GOR	24,540
England	1,459,200

Benefit Fraud

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people were prosecuted for housing benefit or council tax benefit fraud in the last year for which figures are available; how many of those prosecutions were successful; and if he will break down the succesful prosecutions by type of punishment. [44097]

Malcolm Wicks: Information on the number of people successfully prosecuted for housing benefit and council tax benefit fraud in the last year for which figures are available is in the table. Information is not held centrally on successful prosecutions by type of punishment.

Fraud investigations conducted by Local Authorities (LAs) 2000–01

	Number
Cases referred to the LA fraud/investigation section for further action	460,000
Cases referred to the LA fraud/investigation section for further action that were investigated	370,000
Cases where fraud was established and a Weekly Benefit Saving was claimed	100,000
Cases referred by LAs for prosecution	2,300
Successful prosecutions	1,100

Notes:
1. The data refers to benefit units, which may be a single person or a couple.
2. The figures have been rounded to 2 significant figures.
3. Data is not available for all 409 Local Authorities. These totals include estimates for Local Authorities that have not responded which are based on historical and regional data. This type of estimate is standard practice in reporting totals where there have been non-respondents.

New Deal for Young People (NAO Report)

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions when he intends to reply to the National Audit Office report entitled "The New Deal for Young People". [43100]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: The Government's response to the National Audit Office Report "The New Deal for Young People" and the subsequent Public Accounts Committee Report will be published in the Treasury Minute. The Treasury Officer of Accounts is responsible for publishing the Treasury Minute approximately two months following publication of the Public Accounts Committee Report.

Defaulters

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assessment has been made of the likely number of defaulters on grounds of principle; and what steps he is taking to address the issue. [44438]

Malcolm Wicks: No such assessment has been made. We do not accept that any non-resident parent who can afford to support their children has the right to deny children such support.

Despite continued improvement in the rate of compliance over the last few years, at the moment, only around half of non-resident parents pay all the maintenance due or the support of their children. The aim of the Government's reforms is to see a marked increase in those numbers. The new scheme will be rigorously enforced; the simplicity of the new rules will enable the Agency to devote substantially more resources to enforcement. In the meantime, pending the start of the new scheme, I continue to look to the Agency to secure the best possible rate of compliance achievable under the current scheme.

It is important to remember the effect of regular payments of child maintenance. It can transform the lives of lone mothers and their children; where the families are dependent on income support, providing a stable income can help lone parents into work.

Annuities

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, pursuant to his answer of 4 March 2002, to the hon. Member for Northavon (Mr. Webb), Official Report, column 8, on annuities, if he will set out the calculation on which his estimate of 18 million beneficiaries of the state second pension is based. [43349]

Mr. Nick Brown [holding reply 14 March 2002]: A breakdown of the 18 million people expected to gain from the introduction of the state second pension is in the table:

million

Low earners	Moderate earners	Carers	Long-term disabled
4.5	9.5	2.2	2

Figures for low and moderate earners were calculated by the Government Actuary's Department using an earnings distribution based on the New Earnings Survey. Estimates for carers and long-term disabled people were based on the Family Resources Survey and Department for Social Security administrative data.

These figures are consistent with the projections contained in the report by the Government Actuary on the financial effects on the National Insurance Fund of the Child Support, Pensions and Social Security Bill 1999.

Council Tax

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, pursuant to his answer of 5 July 2001, Official Report, column 271W, on council tax, what proportion of pensioner households and how many pensioners in total, paid (a) more than five per cent., (b) more than 10 per cent. and (c) more than 15 per cent. of their gross income in council tax in 2000–01. [42546]

Mr. Ian McCartney: Forty per cent. of pensioner households in Great Britain paid more than 5 per cent. of their gross income (net of council tax benefit) in council tax in 2000–01, 8 per cent. of pensioner households paid more than 10 per cent., and 2 per cent. paid more than 15 per cent.

From April 2002 this Government will be spending an extra £6 billion a year in real terms on pensioners as a result of policies, including the Minimum Income Guarantee, free TV licences and Winter Fuel Payments, introduced since 1997.

Notes:

1. For the purpose of this analysis, council tax is taken to be net of council tax discount and council tax benefit.

2. These figures are from the Family Resources Survey 2000–01 (Great Britain).

3. Gross income is net of tax credits and council tax benefit.

4. A pensioner household is one where the head is over state pension age.

5. The estimates are based on sample counts, which have been adjusted for non-response using grossing factors that control for region, council tax band, tenure and a number of demographic variables. Estimates are subject to sampling error and to variability in non-response.

6. All percentages have been rounded to the nearest 1 per cent.

Housing Benefit Regulations

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions when the proposed amendment to the Housing Benefit Regulations will be brought into force to enable an ex-owner to claim housing benefit provided five years have elapsed since he or she ceased to own a property. [44802]

Malcolm Wicks [holding reply 21 March 2002]: The regulations were amended by SI 2001 No. 487, The Housing Benefit (General) Amendment Regulations 2001, which were laid before Parliament on 27 February 2001 and came into force on 21 May 2001.

Child Support

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will place in the Library a copy of (a) each of the CSA's monthly Business Information Bulletins since April 2001, (b) the CSA Board's quarterly review of its progress, (c) the CSA's Risk Management Framework and report on Risk Management and (d) the CSA's Latest Controls report from December 2001. [32548]

Malcolm Wicks: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the Chief Executive, Mr. Doug Smith. He will write to the hon. Member.

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what consideration will be given in the new child support system to fathers who have identical incomes and costs of travel to work and (a) who have different housing costs, and (b) who have former partners who have different incomes. [44434]

Malcolm Wicks: We believe a simple scheme is the right way forward, because the complexity of the current scheme is one of the major causes of the current administrative problems. Every non-resident parent has different costs or responsibilities. Any attempt to take account of them all would lead to the reinvention of the complexity of the current formula.

The Government accepts that some parents have special, exceptional expenses that make complete reliance on a percentage-based assessment unreasonable. That is the justification for the variations system.

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the average maintenance assessment is for child support; and what the estimated average maintenance calculation is under the new scheme. [44435]

Malcolm Wicks: This information is in the tables.

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what factors underlay the decision to reform the child support system; and on what date the reforms will be brought into effect. [44439]

Malcolm Wicks: Research commissioned for the White Paper of July 1999, "A new contract for welfare" found that the child support system was failing the children it was set up to help. A major part of the problem is that the existing formula for assessing maintenance is too complex. As a result too few resources have been available for enforcement. Consequently currently only around half of those Non-Resident Parents with an assessment pay all of the maintenance that is due. The Government therefore decided to simplify the child support system basing it on a simple percentage of the non-resident parents net income. It will be transparent and easier to understand so allowing a more customer focused Child Support Agency to spend less time calculating maintenance and more time chasing payments.

As far as the start date for the new scheme is concerned, I refer the hon. Member to the statement given by my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State, on 20 March 2002, Official Report, columns 315–16W.

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions when existing cases will be brought into the new scheme for child support; how they will be treated when (a) there is an application on foot for revision or supersession, (b) the assessment is the subject of an appeal and (c) applications for an assessment are pending at the date of implementation. [44440]

Malcolm Wicks: The Government has made clear that existing cases will be brought onto the new system only after it is clear that the new scheme is operating effectively. Parents will be given advance notice of the new liability.

If existing clients make or have made an application for revision or supersession of, or appeal against, their maintenance assessment, that application will be dealt with under current rules. If appropriate, any change will be reflected in the conversion calculation.

Where a maintenance assessment is pending when the new scheme is introduced for new cases, it will be treated in one of two ways. If no effective date has been set, it will be processed under the new rules; if an effective date has already been set, the current scheme will apply.

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what estimate he has made of the rate of compliance under the new child support formula; and what the present rate of compliance is. [44436]

Malcolm Wicks: The rate of compliance in the current year to January 2002, is 70.9 per cent. In the new child support scheme we expect compliance to rise to at least 75 per cent.

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what plans he has to set up a child support council. [44430]

Malcolm Wicks: My right hon. Friend is not persuaded that there is a need for such a body.

The Child Support Agency has set up fora for ongoing discussion with major stakeholders in the area of child support. These function well as a formal mechanism for dialogue between the Agency and the significant interested parties.

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will make a statement on when the changes to the CSA will come into force. [43893]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 18 March 2002]: I refer the hon. Member to the statement given by my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State, on 20 March 2002, Official Report, columns 315–16W.

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the maximum percentage is of net income that a non-resident parent can be asked to pay in child support maintenance under the CSA system for (a) one child, (b) two children and (c) three children. [33265]

Malcolm Wicks: Under the current Child Support provisions, the maximum percentage of net income that a non-resident parent can be expected to pay is 30 per cent. regardless of the number of children. This increases to 33 per cent. where the non-resident parent is paying child support maintenance arrears. Exceptionally, where the non-resident parent has failed to make or keep to an agreement to pay arrears of maintenance he or she can be required to pay up to 40 per cent.

Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will list his areas of responsibility in connection with the Child Support Agency. [43077]

Malcolm Wicks: My right hon. Friend has overall responsibility for the policy and legislation in relation to child support. Day to day operation of the child support scheme is in the hands of the Child Support Agency, an Executive Agency of the Department. Its Chief Executive is accountable to my right hon. Friend, via the Permanent Secretary.

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions when he last met the Solicitors' Family Law Association to discuss forthcoming changes in the Child Support Agency's maintenance formula; and if he will make a statement. [44267]

Malcolm Wicks [holding reply 20 March 2002]: My right hon. Friend has held no meetings with the Solicitors' Family Law Association over the last 12 months to discuss the changes in the child support system.

Zimbabwe

Vernon Coaker: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) what benefits are available to

British citizens leaving Zimbabwe to resettle in the UK because of the internal problems in that country; and if he will make a statement; [31190]

(2) what recent discussions he has had with the Foreign Secretary about the numbers of British citizens likely to leave Zimbabwe for the UK and the impact on the social security budget; and if he will make a statement. [31191]

Malcolm Wicks: Officials across government stay in very close contact about the situation in Zimbabwe. On 14 January 2002, there were 25,054 British nationals registered with the British High Commission in Zimbabwe. We do not know how many of these people may wish to remove to the United Kingdom as there is no requirement for them to inform the High Commission if they plan to leave Zimbabwe, or of their destination. It is not therefore possible to estimate the potential impact on the social security budget.

British citizens leaving Zimbabwe to resettle in the United Kingdom currently have the same access to benefits as any other British citizen returning from abroad. If they claim income-related benefits within two years of arrival in the United Kingdom they must demonstrate that they are habitually resident in this country, in addition to satisfying the normal conditions of entitlement.

Departmental Sponsorship

Jim Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will list the financial resources and initiatives sponsored by his Department in the last 12 months for Dorset which are additional to the Government SSA grants. [29893]

Malcolm Wicks: The information is in the table.

Benefit Deductions

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what plans he has to (a) abolish, (b) reform and (c) freeze non-dependent deductions for housing benefit and council tax benefit. [45127]

Malcolm Wicks: For 2002–03, for the second year running, we are freezing the levels of non-dependant deductions while uprating the qualifying income thresholds. I also refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 14 November 2001, Official Report, column 787W.

Scottish Parliament

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions for what reason no devolved administration Minister attended the 2415 European Union Council of Ministers (Employment and Social Policy) meeting on 7 March; which particular suggestions or matters of concern from the Scottish Executive were raised in their absence by the UK Government delegation; and what information is being provided by his Department to guarantee effective post-council scrutiny by the European Committee of the Scottish Parliament. [44316]

Malcolm Wicks [holding reply 19 March 2002]: The composition of the UK delegation to specific Council of Ministers meetings is decided in accordance with the Concordat on the Co-ordination of EU Policy Issues.

For information about the meeting on 7 March I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 20 March to the hon. Member for Clydesdale (Jimmy Hood). Post-council scrutiny by the European Committee of the Scottish Parliament is a matter for that Parliament and for the Scottish Executive. Reports of Council meetings are available to Scottish Executive officials and officials stand ready to provide other information in line with the provisions of the Concordat.

Job Sharing

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will make a statement on the extent of job sharing in his Department. [41042]

Malcolm Wicks: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave on 26 February 2002, Official Report, column 1261W.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions for what reason housing benefit statistics produced by his Department exclude extended payment cases. [41786]

Malcolm Wicks: Extended payments of Housing Benefit were introduced in 1996 and are available when an Income Support or an income-based Jobseeker's Allowance claim ends due to a person starting work (or increasing their hours and/or earnings) which is expected to last at least five weeks. They can be paid for four weeks and remove the uncertainty faced by many people about whether they will be able to pay their rent and council tax between the last payment of benefit and receipt of their first wages.

As these claims are a fixed period award of Housing Benefit for up to four weeks they were originally excluded from all Housing Benefit statistics to make sure they did not inflate or distort the figures. They were, however, collected for internal use and they have been included in a footnote to tables in the Housing Benefit and Council Tax Benefit Quarterly Summary Statistics since November 1999.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, pursuant to his answer of 13 February 2002, Official Report, column 500W, on the departmental expenditure limit, to the hon. Member for Blackpool North and Fleetwood, what aspects of the administration of housing benefit and council tax benefit appeals have been transferred to the Lord Chancellor's Department. [44294]

Malcolm Wicks: The Lord Chancellor's Department has responsibility for the Social Security Commissioners. From 2 July 2001 people can appeal against a Housing Benefit or Council Tax Benefit decision to an independent appeal tribunal administered by the Appeals Service. A further appeal against the decision of these tribunals can be made to the Social Security Commissioners. Funds were transferred to the Lord Chancellor's Department to cover the costs of administering these appeals.

Attendance Allowance

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if attendance allowance will be paid to claimants who are recipients of the free care for the elderly scheme due to be introduced by the Scottish Executive; and if he will make a statement. [45967]

Maria Eagle: Attendance Allowance is intended to provide a contribution towards the extra costs faced by severely disabled people as a result of their disabilities.

In accordance with the Great Britain-wide rules which aim to avoid duplicate provision, Attendance Allowance is not paid to people living in residential care homes or nursing homes who receive financial help—which includes the provision of free personal care—with their placement from public funds.

Child Benefit Centre (Tyne and Wear)

Mr. Lazarowicz: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what performance targets are in place relating to the handling of complaints and inquiries to the Child Benefit Centre at Washington, Tyne and Wear. [44255]

Malcolm Wicks: The Child Benefit Centre has performance targets for the handling of complaints and enquiries. These are published in the Child Benefit Centre's Statement of Service. The aim is to answer all complaints, whether verbal or written within seven working days. Enquiries by letter will normally be answered within 10 working days.

Pension Credit

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions under what circumstances (a) two pensioners of the same sex living at the same address and (b) two pensioners of different sexes living at the same address would separately be entitled to claim the proposed pension credit. [42957]

Malcolm Wicks: There will be no provision for two members of the same sex to claim Pension Credit jointly.

Residence at the same address will not be the sole factor in deciding whether two pensioners of different sex should claim Pension Credit separately or jointly. Rather, of particular importance is the nature of their relationship and whether or not they were living together as husband and wife in a single household unit within that building. Each case will be considered on its individual merits, in the same way as for Minimum Income Guarantee now.

Pensions

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, pursuant to his answer of 11 February 2002, Official Report, column 104W, on pensions, what his definition is of good information; and if this includes information on loss of entitlement to means-tested benefits. [38317]

Malcolm Wicks: The government objective is to provide information that is, and continues to be, accurate and relevant to enable people to plan effectively for their future income in retirement.

At the point at which such information is produced, it is not possible to forecast an individual's possible entitlement to means tested benefits at state pension age.

However, there are a number of leaflets that give information on government support to those on low incomes and the impact that other income may have on their future pension entitlement.

These leaflets include IS20—a Guide to Income Support, MIG1L—on the Minimum Income Guarantee for people aged 60 or over, GL16—Help with your rent and GL17—Help with your council tax.

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what reports his Department publishes on public sector pension schemes. [43348]

Malcolm Wicks [holding reply 14 March 2002]: None. Responsibility for Public Sector Schemes rests with HMT.

Pension Payment

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what guidance is given to those approaching pensionable age as to the methods of pension payment; and if he will make a statement. [35992]

Malcolm Wicks: Approximately four months before reaching State Pension age (60 for a woman, age 65 for a man) an automatic claims package is issued to prospective pensioners provided the customer's current address is held on the computer.

This contains form BR833 which sets out the options of how to make a claim for State Retirement Pension and leaflet AC1 which explains the benefits of payment straight into a bank account. The claim form gives the customer the option of payment by order book or payment straight into a bank or building society account.

We are modernising the service we offer to pensioners and since November 2000 customers can make a claim over the phone with an experienced operator to guide them through the claim form. As part of this process callers are explained the methods of payment available i.e. either order book or payment straight into a bank or building society account. The claim form is thereby tailored to the particular circumstances of that customer and is returned for them to sign and date. All they need to do then is to send the completed form to their nearest processing centre.

From 2003, payments directly into a bank or building society account will become the Department's normal method of payment. This is a more modern, secure and efficient way of paying benefits and pensions, already chosen by over 40 per cent. of all customers and 60 per cent. of new pensioners.

The Department has been aware of FRS17 throughout its development, a process that has taken several years.

Ministers and officials hold regular consultations with those involved with the pensions industry. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State met representatives from the ASB on 27 February.

There are many factors tending to increase the costs and risks faced by employers who choose to offer defined benefit occupational pension schemes including longer life expectancy and lower expected future investment returns. It is not possible to isolate the effects of FRS17 from these other factors.

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what arrangements he has made to offer (a) state basic and (b) state second pension eligibility to workers earning less than the lower earnings limit from April. [42953]

Maria Eagle: Qualifying carers or disabled people who are earning less than the Lower Earnings Limit will be given automatic entitlement to State Second Pension. This will benefit approximately four million people.

None.

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what guidance he issues to companies that offer an occupational pension scheme on including pension surpluses in payments to former employees; and if he will make a statement. [43961]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: Since 1986 the Inland Revenue has required pension funds which are funded in excess of 105 per cent of their liabilities to reduce their surplus. This may be done in a variety of ways, including improved benefits to scheme members, employer or employee contribution holidays and taxable refunds to the employer sponsoring the scheme. The Pensions Act 1995 requires that, before any refund is made to an employer, all current and future pensions in payment should be increased annually in line with the Retail Prices Index up to a maximum of 5 per cent., that trustees should satisfy themselves that the use of the surplus is in the interest of the members, and that members should be notified of the proposal in the manner set out in law.

The trust deed for each pension scheme may also regulate the way that surpluses can be reduced. If the trustees propose to make a payment to the employer, and this is permitted by the trust deed, members can challenge their decision through the Occupational Pensions Regulatory Authority (Opra) if they believe that the statutory procedures have not been followed. If the trust deed does not permit payments to the employer, the trustees may apply to Opra to change the scheme rules in order to allow payment.

My right hon. Friend has not issued formal guidance on the operation of the Pensions Act 1995. Opra issues guidance on a variety of topics. Note 3, published in 1998, deals with Opra's role in the payment of surplus.

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what plans he has to allow provision for representation of pension members on pension trustee boards. [43954]

Mr Nicholas Brown: The Government is currently in the process of strengthening the law relating to the nomination and selection of trustees to ensure that every occupational pension scheme has member-nominated trustees. We do not think it was right to force schemes to have member trustees from particular categories of membership, because that would erroneously give credence to the idea that trustees have a representative role, which they do not. The duties and responsibilities of all the trustees are the same, regardless of how they come to the post.

The timing of this work will depend on the outcome of the broader simplification review being undertaken by Alan Pickering which is due to report in June, but we remain firmly committed to increasing the number of member trustees generally.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people living in England and Wales are in private pension schemes. [43923]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: There are an estimated 13.2 million people of working age in England and Wales contributing to a private pension.

Notes:

Working age is 16–59 for women and 16–64 for men.

Numbers are rounded to nearest 100,000.

Estimates based on Family Resources Survey 2000–01 and may be subject to a margin of error.

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, pursuant to his answer of 11 July 2001, Official Report, column 566W, on the Pensions Education campaign, when the summary of the quantitative tracking research on the pensions education marketing campaign will be placed in the Library. [44201]

Malcolm Wicks: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him on 22 October 2001, Official Report, volume 373, column 54W, ref. 7901.

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what methods his Department uses to identify the names and addresses of people four months away from state pension age, in order to contact them about claiming their retirement pension; and if he will make a statement. [45183]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: Data held by the Inland Revenue on the National Insurance Recording System is used to identify people within four months of the relevant age.

The data is passed to the Department's Pensions Computer System (PSCS) and a claim package is issued.

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will estimate the average pensioner income as a percentage of average earnings in (a) 1997–98, (b) 1998–99, (c) 1999–2000, (d) 2000–01 and (e) the last year for which figures are available. [43357]

Mr. Nick Brown [holding answer 14 March 2002]: Not all the information requested is available. The information that is available is presented in the following table.

Average pensioner income as a percentage of average earnings

Year	Average pensioners' incomes (a) £	Average earnings (b) £	(a) as percentage of (b)
1997–98	209	368[1]	57 per cent
1998–99	224	385[1]	58 per cent
1999–2000	235	400[1]	59 per cent

Notes:

1. Average earnings estimates relate to April 1997, April 1998 and April 1999.

2. Pensioners are defined as single (non-cohabiting) people over state pension age (65 for men, 60 for women) and couples (married or cohabiting) where the man is over state pension age.

3. Average pensioners' incomes are defined as mean gross weekly income of all pensioner units in Great Britain and are expressed in current prices rounded up to the nearest one pound.

4. Average earnings figures are taken from the New Earnings Survey and are defined as mean gross weekly earnings of full-time employees on adult rates, in Great Britain, whose pay for the survey period was not affected by absence, rounded to the nearest £1.

5. Percentages have been rounded to the nearest 1 per cent.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will estimate the average time taken by his Department to answer (a) a named day question and (b) an ordinary written question tabled by (i) all hon. Members and (ii) the hon. Member for Northavon in (A) this and (B) the previous session. [43327]

Maria Eagle: The information for this session up to 20 March 2002 is in the table. Information for previous session is not available.

Age Discrimination

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what his Department's policy is towards age discrimination. [42580]

Malcolm Wicks: We recognise the importance of tackling age discrimination in the workplace. We have already provided voluntary guidance to help employers adopt age positive employment practices. We are consulting extensively with employers, individuals, and expert groups and, by 2006 we will legislate against age discrimination in the workplace.

As an employer, the Department is committed to equality and valuing diversity within its workforce, and specifically to age diversity and non-discrimination on age grounds. In support of this policy we are working to ensure that our practices will be compliant with future age legislation. The Departmental retirement age for all staff below Senior Civil Service level was increased from 60 to 65 with effect from 1 April 2000 and staff have the choice to retire at any time between these ages. All staff are positively encouraged to take appropriate development opportunities regardless of age including promotion and change of duties. We acknowledge the skills and experience of our staff and are committed to utilising these to provide the best possible public service.

Winter Fuel Payment

Mr. Ivan Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will estimate how many pensioners in the Harwich constituency are (a) entitled to and (b) have taken up the winter fuel payment. [45116]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: I refer the hon. Member to the Written Answer I gave the hon. Member for South East Cornwall (Colin Breed) on 18 March 2002, Official Report, column 153W.

Pension-related Benefits

James Purnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what estimate he has made of how much money would be accrued by the delay in payment of pension-related benefits, by two years in comparison to the payment of such benefits at 65 years if the retirement age were increased to 67 years. [43649]

Mr. Nicholas Brown [holding reply 20 March 2002]: Currently state pension age is 65 for men and between 60 and 65 for women, depending on their date of birth. From 2020 state pension age will be 65 for all.

If the state pension age were increased to 67 in 2020–21, we estimate that the gross savings on state pension expenditure in that year would be around £6.2 billion, in 2002–03 prices.

Benefit Fraud

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what lessons have been learnt from the prosecution pilots in which DSS lawyers helped local authorities to prosecute people suspected of benefit fraud; and whether the scheme will be replaced. [42514]

Malcolm Wicks: The prosecution pilots showed that provision of legal services and advice to Local Authorities can help raise the profile of Local Authority prosecutions and encourage Local Authorities to pursue prosecutions and sanctions. The assistance provided through these pilots is just one aspect of the help being provided by the Department to Local Authorities to increase the professionalism of their investigation work.

From April 2002, all Local Authorities will be participating in a new incentive scheme that provides greater financial support for prosecution-related work. We are also considering afresh what help Departmental solicitors might give Local Authorities who wish to impose sanctions on and, where appropriate, prosecute those who commit benefit fraud.

Age Discrimination

Mr. MacDougall: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) what plans his Department has to introduce legislation on age discrimination in employment before the EU directive is implemented; [42397]

(2) what consultations his Department is having regarding the EU directive on age discrimination in employment; [42402]

(3) what organisations his Department is having discussions with regarding the EU directive on age discrimination in employment. [42403]

Mr. Nick Brown: The introduction of the employment related age discrimination legislation, and the consultations on its development, are the responsibility of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry.

The Department for Work and Pensions leads in challenging ageism in employment with its Age Positive campaign that is vigorously promoting the business benefits of employing an age diverse workforce. The campaign focuses on the Code of Practice on Age Diversity in Employment and a wide range of research and development activities with both public and private organisations to help employers develop non-ageist employment practices that will help them prepare for the future legislation. Integral to this is the Age Positive Website (www.agepositive.gov.uk) that was launched in December.

WBS Subsidies

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assessment he has made of the National Audit Office's comments in the Appropriation Accounts, HC335, on the fall in WBS subsidies during 2000–01; and whether the Department intends to revise the weekly benefits savings rules. [42512]

Malcolm Wicks: The Weekly Benefit Savings (WBS) scheme was introduced in April 1993 to encourage Local Authorities to undertake activity to combat benefit fraud. It is based on a system of rewards and penalties for the amount of fraud detected.

Changes were made to the scheme in 1998 following concerns from the National Audit Office and Audit Commission that WBS was being inappropriately claimed in cases where fraud had not been established or a fraud investigation had not been properly undertaken. It was therefore decided to tighten the WBS claiming criteria and limit the amount of WBS claimed in certain circumstances.

This tightening of the criteria was followed by a large reduction in the WBS savings scored by Local Authorities in 1998–99 and 1999–2000. To address this, increased rates of additional subsidy were made payable to Local Authorities and a reduced level of penalty was introduced in April 1999.

In January 2000 the Department announced that it would replace WBS with a new anti-fraud incentive scheme over two years from April 2001. Sixty three Local Authorities took up the new scheme in 2001–02 with the remainder joining in April 2002.

Households Below Average Income Survey

Mr. Jim Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, pursuant to his Answer of 6 November 2000 to the hon. Member for Havant, Official Report, column 92W, if he will estimate the same data for each region and nation of the UK; and if he will also express the estimates as a percentage of the total numbers of pensioners and children the figures represent. [37885]

Mr. Nick Brown: Such information as is available is in the tables. However, estimates of year on year change at regional level should be viewed with caution, as sampling error may be large in relation to the change itself.

Notes:
1. All figures are estimates and are taken from the Households Below Average Income (HBAI) data set which is derived from the Family Resources Survey (FRS). The FRS does not include Northern Ireland.
2. The estimates are sample counts, which have been adjusted for non-response using multipurpose grossing factors that control for tenure, Council Tax band and a number of other variables. Estimates are subject to both sampling error and to variability in non-response. The income measure used is weekly net (disposable) equivalised household income (that is to say income that is adjusted to reflect the composition of the household).
3. The estimates are presented on both a Before Housing Costs (BHC) and an After Housing Costs (AHC) basis in line with HBAI conventions. Figures are also provided including and excluding the self-employed, as research suggests that, for self-employed people, income as reported in surveys is often a poor indicator of living standards.
4. Estimates for the numbers of pensioners and children living in households below 60 per cent. median income by region have not been provided as the FRS grossing regime does not permit the provision of reliable estimates of numbers, as distinct from percentages. This issue does not affect either GB level estimates of numbers nor regional estimates of percentages. The grossing methodology in the FRS is currently being reviewed with one aim being to resolve this issue.

Basic Pensions

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will change the practice of starting a pension from the Monday following a person's 60th or 65th birthday. [37423]

Mr. Nicholas Brown: Entitlement to Retirement Pension begins with the pay-day on or following the pensioner's 60th or 65th birthday. Changes in entitlement, for example a decrease because of a prolonged stay in hospital, also takes effect from the pay-day following the change in circumstances. The same rule applies with the termination of the award. The principle of paying Retirement Pension in whole weeks stems from the fact that the benefit is traditionally paid in advance.

There are no plans to change the present arrangements for paying Retirement Pension.

Personnel Issues

Mr John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what was the (a) percentage and number of rail journeys undertaken on first class tickets, (b) average cost of a first class journey by rail and (c) total cost of rail travel in each of the past four years broken down by grade of civil servant. [37509]

Malcolm Wicks: The information requested for the percentage, number and average cost of first class journeys is not available. As part of their terms and conditions of employment, first class tickets are available for senior staff undertaking long business journeys or working en route. The department has a contract with an external agent for the provision of rail tickets over £15. Over each of the last three calendar years (1999–2001) the department has purchased an average of £7.2 million worth of tickets.

FRS17

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) what assessment his Department made of the impact on occupational pensions of FRS17 prior to its implementation; [37781]

(2) what representations his Department received from employers concerning the introduction by the Accounting Standards Board of FRS17 prior to its implementation; [37782]

(3) whether his Department was consulted about the planned timescale for the introduction of FRS17; [37783]

(4) when he was first informed by the Accounting Standards Board about the planned adoption of FRS17; [37784]

(5) whether his Department consulted employers concerning the introduction by the Accounting Standards Board of FRS17 prior to its implementation; on what dates; and what the contents of those consultations were; [37785]

(6) what representations his Department made to Accounting Standards Board concerning the introduction of FRS17. [37786]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 27 February 2002]: FRS17 is an accounting standard introduced by the Accounting Standards Board (ASB) which is entirely independent of Government. Financial reporting standards are introduced after a long period of public consultation which offers an opportunity for those with an interest to make representations to the ASB.

The Department has been aware of FRS17 throughout its development, a process that has taken several years.

Ministers and officials hold regular consultations with those involved with the pensions industry. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State met representatives from the ASB on 27 February.

There are many factors tending to increase the costs and risks faced by employers who choose to offer defined benefit occupational pension schemes including longer life expectancy and lower expected future investment returns. It is not possible to isolate the effects of FRS17 from these other factors.

DEFENCE

Training Expenditure

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the expenditure is on training in the (a) Royal Navy and Royal Marines, (b) the Army and (c) the RAF in (i) the UK and (ii) Scotland. [32459]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 1 February 2002]: The latest best estimates for the amounts spent by the Services' Training Agencies on individual training for the Royal Navy, Army and RAF in the last 12 months are respectively: £403.6 million; £894 million and £404.5 million. These figures are approximate and are in accordance with Resources Accounting and Budgeting (RAB) procedures which incorporate consumption figures not included in a cash budget.

For the Royal Navy, a small proportion of trainee days are spent in Scotland, but separate costs are not recorded for these activities by the Naval Training and Recruiting Agency. The Army Training and Recruiting Agency estimates that its total expenditure in Scotland in the current Financial Year will be £22 million. The majority of the RAF Training Group Defence Agency's training establishments are based either in England or Wales, but the in-year cost of their Outdoor Activity Centre in Scotland for the current financial year is £675,000.

The cash costs of Royal Marines individual training for financial year 2001–02 are projected to be £39.9 million. It is not possible to identify separately Royal Marines training expenditure in Scotland.

Training costs falling to the Service Commands are not held centrally and could only be provided at disproportionate cost.

Deployment

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many (a) army personnel, (b) navy personnel and (c) RAF personnel are deployed on operations; and what percentage is deployed on operations in each case. [45684]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 25 March 2002]: The number of personnel deployed on operations is as follows:

Service	Number	Percentage
Naval Service	3,938	11
Army	19,895	20
RAF	4,480	9

These figures include both joint and single service deployments and are shown as a percentage of trained strength.

Naval Service figures are as at 25 March 2002.

Army and RAF figures are as at 1 March 2002.

Helicopters

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the serviceability rate is of (a) Gazelle, (b) Lynx, (c) Sea King, (d) Chinook and (e) Puma helicopters. [44660]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 19 March 2002]: The serviceability rate for the month of February for (a) Gazelle, (b) Lynx, (c) Sea King, (d) Chinook, and (e) Puma helicopters is shown in the following table:

Aircraft type	Average serviceability rate	Aircraft numbers (actual operating fleet)
Gazelle	55%	116
Lynx	57%	131
Sea King	61%	84
Chinook	56%	27
Puma	64%	35

The hon. Member should note that these figures represent an average taken over the whole month of February. Serviceability figures are influenced by a number of factors and fluctuate daily.

Chinook Crash

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether it is his policy only to review the findings of the air marshals on the reasons for the crash of the ZD 576 Chinook helicopter on 2 June 1994 if there is new evidence in this case; and if he will make a statement. [45860]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 26 March 2002]: As my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State for Defence made clear in the House on 19 March 2002, it is necessary to look very carefully at the report published by the Select Committee in the other place. We are conducting a detailed study of its analysis of the facts and the interesting technical views expressed. Were new evidence to be determined, this would of course, be fully evaluated.

Anti-aircraft Defences

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether anti-aircraft defences in the United Kingdom have combat identification of friend and foe facilities; and what steps he is taking to ensure that all anti-aircraft defences can use information from air traffic control systems. [46612]

Mr. Ingram: I can confirm that all Ministry of Defence Rapier Ground Based Air Defence assets are equipped with combat identification friend or foe facilities. These assets would be integrated within the military Airspace Surveillance and Control System and communicate, co-ordinate and integrate with military air traffic control services as necessary. A joint operating instruction combining civil and military air traffic control and air defence actions within United Kingdom flight information regions has recently been published which enhances co-ordination of airspace activity. It is planned that Royal Marine and Army man portable air defence systems will have friend or foe identification facilities by 2008 and 2004–05 respectively.

West Freugh Airfield

Mr. Peter Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will retain external consultants to investigate the potential for future commercial development at West Freugh airfield. [45915]

Dr. Moonie [holding answer 25 March 2002]: The position has not changed since I answered a similar question from the hon. Member on 21 January 2002, Official Report, column 558W.

Mr. Peter Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what criteria were used by the Airfield Regulator in assessing the safety of future operations at West Freugh airfield. [45916]

Dr. Moonie [holding answer 25 March 2002]: The criteria used by the Regulator to assess the safety of future operations at West Freugh airfield were the adequacy of safety infrastructure and the number of aircraft movements. Regulatory minima are set for both the overall number of movements and the number of fast jet movements in order to maintain the currency of air traffic controllers. The numbers of aircraft movements at West Freugh had fallen below these regulatory minima, leading to the decision to cease full-time airfield operations.

Mr. Peter Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many air traffic movements were handled at West Freugh airfield in each of the last five years; how many were (a) civilian and (b) military; and of the military movements, from which countries they were from. [45918]

Dr. Moonie [holding answer 25 March 2002]: The following aircraft movements took place at West Freugh between 1997 and 2001:

Date	Military	Civilian	Total
1997	5,946	5,694	11,640
1998	4,636	7,208	11,844
1999	7,236	1,152	8,388
2000	5,976	—	5,976
2001	3,186	—	3,186

The figures shown do not include overflights. The bulk of military movements shown are in support of the United Kingdom armed forces activities. Foreign aircraft movements are not identified separately in our records.

Mr. Peter Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when, prior to the announcement of 20 March on closure of the airfield, the next scheduled re-surfacing of the West Freugh airstrip was due to be completed; and at what projected cost. [45975]

Dr. Moonie [holding answer 25 March 2002]: Two programmes of re-surfacing work were recommended for 2002 and 2003 at an estimated cost of about £1.6 million and £0.19 million respectively. However, neither task was included in the maintenance plan and completion dates were not allocated.

Property Managers

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which areas have no property managers in post; how the property in these areas is being managed; and if he will make a statement. [46438]

Dr. Moonie: There are no areas of the Defence Housing Executive which currently do not have Property Managers in post. There are vacancies for two Property Managers at the present time but the posts are currently occupied by other experienced staff from within the relevant property management office on temporary promotion, pending the recruitment of permanent replacements. Property Managers are assisted in their tasks by Assistant Property Managers and other staff.

HMS Sheffield

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to the answer of 14 March 2002, Official Report, column 1179W (1) if he will list those who gave statements but were not called to give evidence; how many of those who made a statement expressed a wish to give evidence; and if he will make a statement; [45836]

(2) on HMS Sheffield, whether Ministers have reviewed the information now available; and if he will make a statement; [45838]

(3) whether the Board of Inquiry into the sinking of HMS Sheffield were given copies of all statements; whether all 98 people were offered as witnesses; who decided which of them were called to give evidence and be cross-examined; and if he will make a statement. [45837]

Mr. Ingram: As I informed the hon. Member in my reply to his previous questions on HMS Sheffield, I am satisfied that the Board of Inquiry was conducted in a professional and proper manner and no new information has become available that would warrant the re-opening of this tragic incident. We have no record of any individual who made a statement expressing a wish to give his evidence through being interviewed by the Board. The statements taken from the surviving crew members were available to the Board of Inquiry. The Board interviewed witnesses where it was believed that doing so could assist in its inquiries. The decision as to which witnesses were interviewed was the responsibility of the Board. To publish a list of those who provided statements to the Sheffield Board of Inquiry would be a breach of the Data Protection Act 1998 and a breach of confidentiality, unless the permission of all the individuals involved was first obtained. This could only be provided at disproportionate cost.

HMS Invincible

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he plans to withdraw HMS Invincible from service before 2012. [46459]

Mr. Ingram: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 15 January 2002, Official Report, column 125W, to my hon. Friend the Member for Chorley (Mr. Hoyle)

Procurement

Laura Moffatt: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what account his Department takes of a firm's good practice in (a) training and (b) employment practice in awarding procurement contracts. [46484]

Dr. Moonie: The Ministry of Defence recognises that supplier training and employment practices are important for the timely delivery of the quality goods and services the MOD requires. The MOD will normally contract only with suppliers who have achieved an appropriate, certified quality management standard. Additionally, it will usually make use of qualification questionnaires and associated tools to help assess a potential supplier's suitability for a contract both before and after invitations to tender are issued. The MOD's standard contract terms also remind suppliers of their obligations under the Racial Discrimination and, where appropriate, Fair Employment (Northern Ireland) Acts.

Correspondence

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the target time will be in 2002–03 for (a) Ministers to reply to letters from hon. Members and (b) officials in his Department to reply to letters received directly from members of the public. [44955]

Dr. Moonie: In 2002–03, the Ministry of Defence target time for replies to both Ministerial and Treat Official correspondence is within 15 working days.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the average length of time taken to answer letters to Ministers has been in the last 12 months; and if he will make a statement. [43949]

Dr. Moonie: Information is published annually by the Cabinet Office on the volume of correspondence from Members of Parliament received by Ministers and Agency Chief Executives; Departments' and Agencies' handling targets; and their performance in meeting these [illegible] The Report for 2001 is due to be published shortly.

New Deal

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how many people have been employed by his Department in each of the last three years under (a) the New Deal for Young People, (b) the New Deal for the Over 50s and (c) the New Deal for Lone Parents; and at what cost, listed by category to public funds; [44921]

(2) how many people employed by his Department under the New Deal for Young People in each of the last four years have subsequently (a) found unsubsidised employment for more than 13 weeks and (b) returned to jobseeker's allowance or other benefits. [44903]

Dr. Moonie: Data on the number of New Deal appointments under the programme for Young People was recorded from the beginning of the scheme until April 2001. From then, data also included the over 50s and lone parents programmes. Since October 2001 data has not been held centrally on the New Deal programmes. Available data are detailed in the following table:

Financial year	Lone parents	Over 50s	Young people aged 18–24	Total numbers recruited under New Deal (includes those aged 25 and over)
1998–99	n/a	n/a	11	17
1999–2000	n/a	n/a	35	58
2000–01	n/a	n/a	20	43
2001–02 (until October 2001)	0	2	6	10

Forty-two New Deal recruits subsequently became permanent members of staff. Others who have left the scheme will have had the opportunity to acquire new skills and enhance their marketability for employment elsewhere, but information is not held on whether they returned to jobseekers allowance or other benefits. New Deal recruits take up existing vacancies so extra costs to public funds are limited to the subsidy, where appropriate, and any training and development that may be needed. Details of costs are not available and could only be provided at disproportionate cost.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

CFCs

Dr. Pugh: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions she has had with her EU counterparts on the handling by the European Commission of the issue of CFCs in refrigerator insulating foam. [44929]

Mr. Meacher: My colleagues and I have not discussed the issue of the European Commission's handling of the clarification of the meaning of Article 16 of EC Regulation 2037/2000 with Environment Ministers from other Member States.

We are taking urgent action to ensure recovery facilities are put in place in the UK as quickly as possible. A mobile plant is already operational in Lewes, and we expect that several static plants will be established at various sites around the UK by July, to ensure that the UK will be able to meet its obligations to recover and destroy CFCs from refrigeration insulating foam.

Dangerous Substance Rules

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, pursuant to the answer of 11 March 2002, Official Report, column 793W, on dangerous substance rules, if she will place in the Library copies of the correspondence between the Government and the Commission relating to the reasoned opinions referred to; and if she will make a statement on how the Government are dealing with these Reasoned Opinions. [44727]

Mr. Meacher: No, Reasoned Opinion infraction cases are confidential matters between Member States and the Commission.

Environmental Impact Assessment

Mr. Burnett: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when the second draft of the Environmental Impact Statement on the Ashmoor disposal site will be completed; and if drafts will be placed in the Library. [45922]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 25 March 2002]: The first draft of the Environmental Impact Assessment for the site at Ashmoor is being revised to take account of comments received from the various interested parties we consulted. There is further work to be done and I cannot yet say when it will be completed but we are progressing matters as quickly as possible.

I see no reason to place copies of the draft Assessments in the Library but I will arrange for a copy of the final version to be placed there in due course.

Pesticide Tax

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what monitoring there has been of the annual financial commitments given by the farming unions and the Crop Protection Association in respect of the voluntary measures in place of a pesticide tax; and if she will make a statement. [45923]

Mr. Morley: Some initial monitoring of costs has been carried out by the Steering Group for the voluntary package. The Steering Group are aiming to produce an Annual Report of progress in April/May 2002 which is expected to contain details of costs incurred during the first year of the programme. It is intended that this report will be made widely available and I will place copies in the Library of the House.

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what payments have been received from (a) farming unions and (b) the Crop Protection Association since the introduction of the voluntary measures package. [45924]

Mr. Morley: No payments have been received in connection with the voluntary package of measures to minimise the environmental impact of pesticides nor will they be in the future. The farming unions and the Crop Protection Association have estimated the costs to themselves associated with implementing the voluntary package and they will be expected to show actual costs as the programme progresses.

Sustainable Development

Mr. Simon Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on her Department's preparations for the forthcoming World Summit on Sustainable Development. [46334]

Mr. Meacher: DEFRA, working closely with other departments, is leading on the UK's domestic and international preparations for the World Summit on Sustainable Development (WSSD). The Department is represented on MISC18, the Cabinet Committee set up to co-ordinate, develop and deliver the Government's strategy for WSSD. DEFRA also chairs two official level groups which co-ordinate preparations across Government. My officials are fully involved in the international preparations for the Summit and are attending the third preparatory meeting in New York which started on 25 March.

DEFRA also leads on the development of a cross Whitehall communications strategy to raise awareness of the Summit. We are working closely with local authorities, NGOs, business and other organisations to ensure that we engage a wide range of stakeholders in the Summit. DEFRA has also developed the government sustainable development website (www.sustainable-development.gov.uk) to include information on WSSD.

Packaging Waste

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) whether the 2001 United Kingdom business package waste recovery and recycling targets for (a) recovery and (b) material-specific recycling were met; and whether the percentage levels of business packaging waste recovery and recycling in the United Kingdom in 2001 satisfied the stipulations of the EU Packaging Waste Directive 1994; [46357]

(2) what the percentage levels of (a) business packaging waste recovery and (b) business packaging recycling were in the United Kingdom in 2001. [46358]

Mr. Meacher [holding answer 26 March 2002]: The recovery and recycling targets in article 6(1) of the EC Directive on Packaging and Packaging Waste—94/62EC—were implemented in Great Britain by the Producer Responsibility Obligations (Packaging Waste) Regulations 1997 (as amended).

In order to comply with the requirements in the Directive, recovery and recycling targets for 2001 under the packaging regulations were 56 per cent. for recovery and 18 per cent. for material-specific recycling of packaging waste. Final figures for 2001 are not yet available, but data received to date suggest that, if all obligated parties met their obligations, these targets should be met. This would mean that the UK had recovered 4.6 million tonnes of packaging waste in 2001 ie 50 per cent. We would expect to recycle some 45 per cent. We also anticipate that all materials will meet the 15 per cent. material-specific recycling target in the Directive, with the possible exception of plastic.

EU Fishing Rights

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what her assessment is of the economic benefit to the United Kingdom of European Union fishing rights agreements (a) with third countries south of the EU and (b) with third countries north of the EU. [45514]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 26 March 2002]: The United Kingdom's fishing industry has a negligible interest in fisheries agreements south of the EU so no assessment has been carried out. Fisheries agreements with countries north of the EU are of considerable importance to UK fishermen. However, the economic benefit cannot be assessed precisely since it depends on availability of fishing opportunities which can vary year on year and actual catches taken.

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what steps the Government have taken to ensure that the funding assigned to conservation within the money spent on the acquisition of EU fishing rights agreements with third countries is spent on the purpose for which it was intended in countries (a) north of the EU and (b) south of the EU; [45512]

(2) what assessment the Government have made of the environmental impact of EU fishing rights agreements with third countries (a) north of the EU and (b) south of the EU. [45513]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 26 March 2002]: It is the responsibility of the European Commission on behalf of the EU to ensure value for money and to assess environmental impact in relation to international fisheries agreements to which the EU is party. It is the United Kingdom's view that, certainly in relation to many of the southern agreements, the Commission's performance of these tasks needs to be improved. We have expressed this view in the Council of Ministers and will be looking for the issue to be addressed in the forthcoming review of the Common Fisheries Policy.

EU Directives

Mr. Breed: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many EU directives were received by her Department and its predecessor departments; and what the average time taken to implement such directives was from (a) 1990 to 1996 and (b) 1997 to 2002. [40698]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 5 March 2002]: The Department does not hold information in the form requested. This information could only be assembled at disproportionate cost.

Catering Services

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the cost was of (a) in-house canteen and (b) other catering services provided by her Department in each of the last four years. [38932]

Mr. Morley: The Department has only been in existence since June 2001. To collect this information retrospectively from the component parts that now make up DEFRA would involve disproportionate cost.

Golden Jubilee

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much the Department has spent on the Queen's Jubilee in each of the past three years; how the money was allocated; and if she will make a statement. [44595]

Mr. Morley: Any such expenditure has not been separately identified by the Department.

Worldwide Web

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate she has made of the number of farming businesses which are connected to the worldwide web. [38828]

Margaret Beckett [holding answer 28 February 2002]: Internet access is becoming an essential business tool for agriculture and information on computer and internet usage by farmers was collected in the December 2001 Survey of Agriculture. The results are due to be published in early April.

Farming and Food

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans she has to respond to the report of the Policy Commission on the Future of Farming and Food; and if she will make a statement. [39399]

Mr. Morley: The Commission's report will make a substantial contribution to a new strategy for sustainable food and farming, which we aim to launch in the autumn. This will be a response to the report but will go further than that. We will work with a wide range of stakeholders to determine how best to take forward the Commission's ideas and deliver positive changes on the ground. As responsibility for addressing the Commission's recommendations rests with industry and other organisations as well as Government, we will be looking for their active involvement.

Countryside Agency

Mr. Liddell-Grainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what criteria are being applied to determine applications for appointments to the Countryside Agency after 1 April; on what date the advertisements for applicants was placed in the national press; what timescale was anticipated for drawing up the list for applicants for interview at the time the advert was first placed; when it is expected that such interviews will now take place; what measures were taken to encourage applicants in addition to the national advertising campaign and on what dates those measures were taken; what the political balance is of board members; what the political balance is intended to be after the appointments are made; and if she will make a statement. [45271]

Alun Michael: The criteria applied to determine the applications for the appointments to the Countryside Agency were that applicants should have a general interest and experience of countryside issues, and preferably have specific expertise in the areas of rural business/rural enterprise, rural development or the voluntary sector. In addition we made clear that we were particularly seeking applications from candidates based in the West Midlands or South West England.

Advertisements were placed in the national press on 13 and 16 September 2001, with a closing date of 11 October 2001. Our intention was to appoint up to two candidates. In line with our normal timetable, a shortlist of candidates for possible interview was drawn up in November, four shortlisted candidates from South West England were interviewed in January and one has now been appointed. The deadline for applications from candidates based in the West Midlands was extended to 11 February 2002 and this was advertised on the DEFRA and Countryside Agency websites. We are now considering the applications from candidates based in the West Midlands, received both before and after the original deadline, and hope to interview a shortlist in May. However, there is no fixed number for the number of people on the Board, and only one member is leaving the Board in April; so we will not necessarily appoint a second person this year.

In addition to the national advertising campaign, which included information being posted on the DEFRA and Countryside Agency websites, we approached 160 organisations with an interest in countryside issues in September 2001 asking them to suggest candidates. We also made a limited number of further approaches in the West Midlands for additional suggestions in January.

Appointments to the Board of the Countryside Agency are not made on the basis of political affiliation.

Badgers

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what is the present estimated number of badgers in England and Wales. [45248]

Mr. Morley: Based on two surveys, the first conducted in the mid-1980s and the second in the mid-1990s, the number of badgers in Great Britain is estimated to be between 300,000 and 400,000.

Water-based Sport and Recreation

Mr. Hepburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many enclosed waters of one hectare or more in size there are in (a) South Tyneside, (b) Tyne and Wear and (c) the North East; and how many of these are known to be used for sport and recreation. [45249]

Alun Michael: Our research report, "Water-Based Sport and Recreation: the Facts" was published in December 2001. The researchers found that 73 of the 169 enclosed water spaces of one hectare or more in the North are used for sport and recreation. The report does not provide separate figures for South Tyneside, Tyne and Wear and the North East.

Mr. Hepburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many clubs are associated with inland water sport and recreation in (a) South Tyneside, (b) Tyne and Wear and (c) the North East. [45250]

Alun Michael: Our research report, "Water-Based Sport and Recreation: the Facts" was published in December 2001. The researchers conducted interviews with 58 national stakeholder organisations in England and Wales and also undertook a questionnaire survey of 1,250 local clubs, associations and organisations. The report does not detail how many clubs are associated with inland water sport and recreation in South Tyneside, Tyne and Wear and the North East.

Mr. Hepburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she will announce what action she plans to take on the research report "Water Based Sport and Recreation: the Facts". [45251]

Alun Michael: Officials recently met British Waterways, the Countryside Agency, the Countryside Council for Wales, the Environment Agency and Sport England as the other sponsors of the research along with other interested Government Departments. We are considering what action to take in the light of the report's findings.

New Deal for Market Towns

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs which market towns have received grants for regeneration under the New Deal for Market Towns, stating (a) the amount and (b) the purpose of each grant. [46600]

Alun Michael: The Market Town Initiative is being taken forward on DEFRA's behalf by the Regional Development Agencies, working with the Countryside Agency and local partners and using the £37 million of Government funding announced in the Rural White Paper. We hope that match funding will raise the figure to some £100 million. The Department does not plan to monitor the amount and purpose of individual grants made in each town. The process at a local level is important in itself. Most towns are still at the stage of community consultation prior to agreeing action plans, and few project grants have been approved. I understand the total grant allocation by RDAs to individual towns remain indicative. The table below lists the towns included in the programme to date.

GM Crops

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the approved buffer zone is between GM crop trial plantations and non-GM crops; on what basis it was arrived at; and what equivalent buffer zone is in use in other EU countries where GM crop trials are taking place. [43036]

Margaret Beckett [holding answer 14 March 2002]: There is no single approved buffer zone between GM crop trials and non-GM crops. The conditions governing each trial, including the separation distance between GM plants and other crops, are determined on a case-by-case basis and set out in each consent.

The basis for the size and nature of the buffer zone on other conditions is to restrict the impact of the GM crop on the environment. The distances are dependent on the reproductive characteristics of the GM crop, the nature of the modification and whether any alternative form of risk management is in operation (eg flower removal, pollen barrier).

These distances are set after consultation with the Advisory Committee on Releases to the Environment (ACRE), the Government's statutory advisory committee on matters relating to the release of GMOs to the environment, which examines all applications for GM trials. ACRE advises on the basis of the best scientific evidence available and experience gained from previous releases and, for example, by the seeds industry in the use of separation distances to secure specific levels of seed purity amongst conventionally bred plant varieties.

The legislation governing GM crop trials derives from European Union directives, so similar principles are followed in other EU countries.

Wild Animals

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) how many cases of illegal possession of wild animals there have been in each of the last five years; and if she will make a statement; [45437]

(2) what assessment has been made of the effectiveness of procedures for preventing unlicensed possession of wild animals; and if she will make a statement. [45436]

Mr. Morley: There are several pieces of legislation for which my Department is responsible that regulate the possession of wild animals (including wild birds), but details of illegal keeping are not readily available.

The Dangerous Wild Animals Act 1976, which regulates the possession of some wild animals, was reviewed last year by independent consultants to examine its effectiveness. The Act is administered and enforced by local authorities and no records are held centrally. However, the consultants report, which has been put on the website, contains some information about prosecutions, though it is not limited to the last five years and is not necessarily comprehensive.

The review highlighted a number of shortcomings, including some relating to enforcement. We have sought views on the report's recommendations from stakeholders and shortly will be preparing our proposals on how we intend to address the shortcomings. The public will be invited to comment.

Laying Hens

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if the enriched cages to be permitted in England under the Welfare of Laying Hens Directive 99/74/EC will need to provide more than 250 cubic centimetres of which shall be usable. [45316]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 26 March 2002]: Council Directive 99/74/EC lays down minimum requirements for enriched cages, including cage area per hen and usable area. It is intended that the Directive will be implemented in England without being added to in any way. If further changes are proposed, there will be a full public consultation.

Parish Councils

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what information supported the designation of (a) Gatcombe parish council and (b) Newchurch parish council. [44281]

Alun Michael: Neither Gatcombe parish council nor Newchurch parish council have been classified as "barely active". The work which is being undertaken by the Countryside Agency towards a national indicator of community vibrancy is not a categorisation of parish councils or their effectiveness. The National Indicator uses as a proxy for community vibrancy measures of the opportunities for members of a community to contribute to community activities.

The information used was collected as part of the Agency's Rural Services Survey from parish clerks and comprised the presence of a village hall or similar local meeting place, the presence of a public house, incidence of local traditions and events and contested parish council elections. Full details are set out in the Countryside Agency's State of the Countryside Report 2001 where it was noted that there is a marked relationship between the indicator score and population size. The indicator was reported at the national level.

Livestock Movements

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many drop-offs will be allowed by her Department from a single auction pick-up of cattle moving through market; what checks will be made by divisional veterinary managers on farms seeking qualification for multiple drop-offs; and when she intends to make an announcement. [46385]

Mr. Morley: At present, multiple drop offs are only permitted from a market if (a) stock are being dropped off at slaughterhouses only or (b) for cattle only, if they are moved to no more than five farms.

A Veterinary Inspector will check to ensure that anyone applying for their premises to be a drop off point understands the conditions linked to approval and to ensure that the premises are capable of meeting the standards set. For example, he must be satisfied that suitable cleansing and disinfection facilities are available and that there are sufficient gates and hurdles to prevent animals escaping during the unloading process.

Further details of the conditions that apply to multiple pick-ups and drop offs are available at: www.defra.gov.uk/footandmouth/movements/transport/index.htm.

Foot and Mouth

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will publish the letter of appointment agreed between the Government and Dr. Anderson in relation to his duties as Chairman of the Lessons Learned Inquiry. [38841]

Margaret Beckett [holding answer 28 February 2002]: No. It is not normal practice to publish such letters of appointment.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Gibraltar

Mr. Dodds: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what action Her Majesty's Government have taken to prevent ill-treatment of Gibraltarians at the Gibraltar-Spain border; [43430]

(2) what recent reports he has received about (a) the nature and (b) the extent of problems experienced by Gibraltarians resulting from Spanish border authorities. [43429]

Peter Hain: Ministers and officials have raised our concerns about border delays on numerous occasions with their Spanish counterparts, including during the Brussels Process talks. We have also raised our concerns with the European Commission on several occasions.

The Commission announced on 19 March the closure of its investigation into restrictions at the border between Gibraltar and Spain, having concluded that "there was no evidence to legally support claims that the checks carried out by the Spanish authorities . . . are disproportionate and therefore incompatible with Community law".

The Spanish Government also confirmed on 19 March that in response to requests made by the UK during the Brussels Process talks a new second channel would be opened, aimed at significantly speeding up the passage of private vehicles across the border between Spain and Gibraltar. The new channel became operational on 21 March. We welcome this.

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions his Department had with the European Commission on its recent investigation into Spanish/Gibraltarian border restrictions. [45472]

Peter Hain [holding answer of 26 March]: Ministers and officials have raised our concerns about border delays on numerous occasions with their Spanish counterparts, including during the Brussels Process talks. We have also raised our concerns with the European Commission on several occasions.

The Commission announced on 19 March the closure of its investigation into restrictions at the border between Gibraltar and Spain, having concluded that

Saville Inquiry

Mr. Blunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what costs have been incurred since 24 January by his Department in connection with the Saville Inquiry; and what his estimate is of the final cost to his Department. [46025]

Peter Hain: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 24 January 2002, Official Report, column 999W. This Department has incurred no costs since 24 January 2002.

Departmental Visits

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on what dates Ministers in his Department have visited United States Government military bases and establishments on United Kingdom territory since 1 January 1999; which Ministers were involved; and what facilities were visited. [43475]

Mr. MacShane: We have no record of any Foreign and Commonwealth Minister visiting a military base staffed by US personnel on British territory since 1 January 1999.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Public Guardianship Office

Mr. Burnett: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department when she expects to introduce the planned fee increases at the Public Guardianship Office for new applications to the Court of Protection; and whether public consultation will take place beforehand. [45921]

Ms Rosie Winterton: No date has yet been set for the introduction of changes to the fees charged by the Public Guardianship Office, although it is planned to lay statutory instruments before both Houses soon. Proposed changes have been discussed with members of the Public Guardianship Office's Consultative Forum. The Consultative Forum includes representatives from voluntary organisations with an interest in issues affecting the Public Guardianship Office's clients and from the Law Society. Members of the Consultative Forum are working with my officials to recommend improved guidelines for remission of fees, so that those who would suffer real hardship as a result of having to pay fees will be able to have them remitted.

Court Closures

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many courts he has closed since 7 June 2001. [46175]

Mr. Wills: No county court or Crown Court centre has been closed since this date.

Magistrates' courts committees are not statutorily required to inform the Lord Chancellor's Department of proposed courthouse closures which are not subject to an appeal by its paying authority or authorities.

It is the Government's policy that decisions concerning the number, location and future of magistrates' courts are for each magistrates' courts committee to determine, in consultation with its local paying authority or authorities. 11 magistrates' courthouses have been closed since 7 June 2001.

Adoption Bill

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what representations she has received concerning the Adoption Bill. [46176]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Secretary of State for Health presented the Adoption and Children Bill to the House of Commons. However, I have received 50 representations on the Bill.

Correspondence

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department when she expects to reply to the letter of 4 February from the hon. Member for Torbay, regarding Mrs. Skilton of Torquay. [43028]

Ms Rosie Winterton: My Noble Friend, Baroness Scotland, has now replied. I am sorry we were not able to reply to the hon. Member's letter within departmental deadlines.

TREASURY

Vehicle Excise Duty

Chris Grayling: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his policy is on the classification of motorbikes of over 600cc used by courier companies as leisure vehicles for vehicle excise duty. [45859]

Mr. Boateng: The consultation on reforming vehicle excise duty for motorcycles was published alongside the 2001 Pre-Budget Report. The consultation closed on 8 February, the Government are currently carefully considering the responses, which numbered over 12,000. Any changes to taxation policy will be announced in the context of the Chancellor's Budget judgment.

Road Fuel

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will make it his policy to encourage motorists through the tax system to change to use the cleanest available fuels; [45949]

(2) if he will make it his policy to maintain the road fuel duty differential. [45948]

Mr. Boateng (holding answer 25 March 2002]: The Government set duty differentials to encourage the production and use of cleaner fuels, and the development of alternative transport fuels. We announced in Budget 2001 that, to provide the stability needed for the merging road fuel gas market, duty on road fuel gases (such as liquefied petroleum gas) would not be increased in real terms until 2004 at the earliest.

Financial Services Industry

Mr. Lazarowicz: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps he is taking to ensure that fund manager and stockbroking firms do not levy unjustified charges on their clients. [45784]

Mr. Andrew Smith: The Myners review of institutional investment reported that the costs of broking commissions were subject to insufficiently clear scrutiny and control. The Government took forward the recommendations of the review, and following a period of consultation, issued a set of principles of investment for pension funds, and 10 questions for trustees to ask fund managers to ensure that they understand charges. A review of progress will start in March 2003 to decide how successful the principles have been in bringing about change.

For retail investors, CAT standards and stakeholder pensions impose strict limits on charges by financial institutions.

VAT Registration

Mr. Jim Murphy: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what his estimate is of the annual lost revenue due to the illegal use of UK VAT registration numbers; [46112]

(2) what his estimate is of the number of illegally obtained VAT registration numbers in each of the last three years. [46113]

Mr. Boateng: No such estimates exist.

Mr. Jim Murphy: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what consideration he is giving to the tightening of VAT registration procedures for VAT numbers. [46114]

Mr. Boateng: Customs selectively apply extended checks aimed at identifying fraudulent applications, including making visits before registration is granted and applying conditions to the registration, where appropriate. Cases are monitored on an individual basis to ensure a balanced approach between facilitating business and protecting the revenue.

In addition, Customs are working to automate their validation, verification and risk scoring system by September 2002.

Smuggling

Laura Moffatt: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment has been made of the loss of revenue to the South East economy caused by the smuggling of (a) alcohol and (b) tobacco in the last three years. [46433]

Mr. Boateng: No such estimates are currently available. However, estimates of the tax revenue lost from smuggling of alcohol and tobacco into the UK were set out in "Measuring Indirect Tax Fraud" published by HM Customs and Excise alongside the Pre-Budget Report.

Aggregates Levy

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of (a) the increase in recycling of construction and demolition waste and (b) the reduction in demand for virgin aggregates as a direct result of the aggregates levy. [45737]

Mr. Boateng: Research suggests that there is significant scope for increased use of recycled construction and demolition waste. The levy is designed to encourage use of this material as an alternative to virgin aggregate, thereby reducing demand for the latter.

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the long term impact of the aggregates levy in Northern Ireland once the levy has been fully phased in. [45738]

Mr. Boateng: Phasing in the levy for aggregate used in processed products will allow the industry in Northern Ireland time to adjust, and to use greater amounts of recycled and alternative materials in their products.

Sir Robert Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what criteria he will adopt for setting the rate for the aggregates levy in future years. [46406]

Mr. Boateng: As with all taxes, the aggregates levy will be reviewed at each Budget.

Public Services

Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if his Department has commissioned external research into its paper on public services productivity; and if he will make a statement. [46573]

Mr. Andrew Smith: No.

Press Office

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many staff in his Department's press office have received (a) termination and (b) redundancy payments in each of the last four years. [41072]

Ruth Kelly: None.

HEALTH

Wheelchairs

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what measures his Department is taking to reduce the number of adverse incidents involving wheelchairs. [45146]

Ms Blears [holding answer 21 March]: The Medical Devices Agency (MDA) has specific responsibility on behalf of the Secretary of State to safeguard public health where medical devices are involved. Within this overall remit, MDA has a specific unit responsible for wheeled mobility devices where adverse incidents concerning the safety or quality of wheelchairs are considered.

The MDA unit works with users, manufacturers, trade associations, professional groups, service providers, and other Government departments where appropriate to reduce safety problems for users both in the short and in the longer term. If the unit finds that there is a need for improvement in a wheelchair design, usage instructions or manufacturing process then appropriate action is taken with the manufacturer/ supplier. When necessary Safety Warning notices are widely distributed which incorporate the actions required to reduce specific problems with wheelchairs that are already in use. Advice or written guidance on wider issues relating to the safety of wheelchair users is also given where root cause, or trend, analysis highlights a particular area of concern which requires improvement for the future. Also, if a shortcoming is revealed in an issued British Standard concerning wheelchairs or a need for a new standard the unit works with the British Standards Institute (BSI) to make any necessary revisions or assist with the drafting of any new standard.

Jim Dobbin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to increase the budgets for the provision of electric powered indoor/outdoor wheelchairs to health trusts. [42525]

Ms Blears: Funding for wheelchair services is part of health authorities general allocations. It is for health authorities in partnership with Primary Care Groups/ Trusts and other local stakeholders to determine how best to use their funds to meet national and local priorities for improving health, tackling health inequalities and modernising services. Health authority allocations for 2002–03 were announced on 6 December 2001.

Primary Care Trusts

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which PCTs have delayed planned initiatives and new services (a) in 2001–02 and (b) for 2002–03. [45934]

Mr. Hutton [holding answer issued 25 March 2002]: Decisions about local priorities and investment in local services are made by PCTs. The Department does not collect this information centrally.

Delayed Discharges

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average delay for patients with delayed discharges was in the third quarter of 2001–02. [42702]

Jacqui Smith: The Department does not collect information in the detail requested. I refer the hon. Member to the response I gave the hon. Member for Sutton and Cheam (Mr. Burstow), on 18 March, Official Report, column 160W.

It is not possible to calculate an accurate average length of delay from the information collected.

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of all acute beds were occupied due to delayed discharges in each of the last five years. [37484]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 28 February 2002]: Information on the proportion of acute beds occupied due to delayed discharge is collected centrally once a quarter. The information which is available since June 1997 has been on the basis of the proportion of patients aged over 75 occupying an acute bed whose discharge has been delayed. The table below shows this proportion for each quarter since June 1997.

Delayed Discharge—patients aged 75 and over

Per cent.

Collection	Proportion of patients over 75 with a delayed discharge
2001–02 Q3	10.5
2001–02 Q2	12.0

1999–2000 Q3	11.7
1999–2000 Q2	12.8
1999–2000 Q1	13.4
1998–99 Q4	12.4
1998–99 Q3	12.5
1998–99 Q2	14.3
1998–99 Q1	13.4
1997–98 Q4	13.2
1997–98 Q3	13.9
1997–98 Q2	15.7
1997–98 Q1	13.3

Pharmacists

Mr. Stunell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received from pharmacists on the global sum dispensing fee (a) on his original announcement of fee levels for 2002–03 and (b) consequent upon its revision; and if he will make a statement. [42944]

Ms Blears: I have not yet determined the overall level of fees for community pharmacy services for 2002–03. However, pending my decision, the basic dispensing fee from April 2002 will rise from the current level of 91.6p to 94.6p per prescription item.

I agreed in February that officials should work with the Pharmaceutical Services Negotiating Committee (PSNC) to explore ways of improving information about community pharmacy finances as part of a set of measures to inform our discussions on remuneration and on modernising the current NHS contractual framework. This work is under way.

Osteoporosis

Dr. Evan Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans the Department has to investigate the use of (a) ultrasound and (b) biochemical tests in combination with Dexa scanning for identifying osteoporosis in (i) the population and (ii) a sub-set of the population. [42972]

Jacqui Smith: We maintain an interest in the development of all technologies for the investigation or monitoring of patients suspected of being at risk of osteoporosis. We work closely with the National Osteoporosis Society. Dual energy x-ray absorptiometry is currently the preferred method for the assessment of bone mineral density in individuals selected to be at high risk of fracture based on clinical risk factor assessment.

Social Services

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the circumstances in which responsibility for social services would be removed from a local authority; and if he will make a statement. [43235]

Jacqui Smith: It is for local councils with social services responsibilities to meet their statutory obligations and achieve best value for the people they serve. We have agreed a protocol on the use of intervention powers with the Local Government Association. This forms Annex D of the (former) Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions Circular 10/99, which has been placed in the Library. The protocol sets out the framework to discuss policy for the use of the intervention powers set out in the Local Government Act 1999. It states

"Except in cases of serious service failure or unless there is a need for urgent intervention the authority will normally be given the opportunity to make the necessary improvements itself."

My right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State for Health would only use the power "to transfer responsibility to another local authority or third party" when it was necessary to protect the lives of vulnerable children and adults.

Boarding Schools

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to alter the charges proposed for the welfare inspections of boarding schools. [43817]

Jacqui Smith: The fees in respect of boarding schools are set out in the National Care Standards Commission (Fees and Frequency of Inspection) Regulation 2001 (SI 2001 No. 3980). In response to representations made during consultation, the fee levels are now set as a flat rate £250, £15 for the fourth to twenty-ninth pupil, and £7.50 for each subsequent pupil. These fees will not come into force until 1 September 2002. There are no plans to alter these fee levels at present.

Psychiatric Patients

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment has been made of the influence of outdoor open space on the health of psychiatric patients; and if he will make a statement. [43562]

Jacqui Smith: No assessment has been made on the influence of outdoor open space on the health of psychiatric patients.

Medicinal Control

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 4 March 2002, on Medicinal Control, Official Report, columns 130–32W, whether the (a) MCA and (b) CSM have plans to publish articles relating to the inappropriate or overuse of anti-psychotic medication in care settings. [42629]

Ms Blears [holding answer 12 March 2002]: The Medicines Control Agency (MCA) in conjunction with its independent scientific advisory committee, the Committee on Safety of Medicines (CSM) is responsible for monitoring the safety of all marketed medicines to ensure that medicines meet acceptable standards of safety and efficacy. The nature of the clinical setting is not within the scope of CSM advice. However, if the balance of risks and benefits for a medicine when used in a particular indication or population is considered to be unfavourable MCA/CSM will not hesitate to take action to modify its use and to inform prescribers of this action.

For example the balance of risks and benefits for thioridazine in the following indications was considered unfavourable: anxiety, agitation and restlessness in the elderly, moderate to severe psychomotor agitation, violent and dangerously impulsive behaviour, mania/hypomania, and behavioural disorders and epilepsy in children. Upon advice from the CSM, in December 2000 the use of thioridazine was restricted to the second line treatment of schizophrenia in adults. Health professionals were notified of this via a Dear Doctor letter and an article in the drug safety bulletin Current Problems in Pharmacovigilance. A copy of this article has been sent to the Library.

Swindon and Marlborough NHS Trust

Ms Drown: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the longest time is that a hospital consultant at Swindon and Marlborough NHS Trust has been waiting for determination of an appeal against dismissal. [40017]

Ms Blears [holding answer 12 March 2002]: There is currently one consultant appealing against dismissal from Swindon and Marlborough NHS Trust. He was dismissed on 22 March 2001.

Road Accidents

Mrs. May: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what duties the medical services have to carry out before an accident site can be cleared from (a) an A-road and (b) a motorway. [42786]

Ms Blears: The main duties of the emergency medical services would be to assess, treat and remove those patients who were injured in any accident on an A-road or motorway. A decision on when the site may be cleared is usually made by the police.

Alcoholism

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many NHS patients have been treated for (a) alcoholism and (b) alcohol-related disease in each region in the last five years. [42613]

Ms Blears: The information available is shown in the table.

St. George's Hospital, Tooting

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the level of service provided to cancer and non-cancer lymphoedema patients at St. George's Hospital, Tooting. [42755]

Mr. Hutton: A clinic was established at St. George's Healthcare NHS Trust in 1997 to treat non-cancer lymphoedema patients (primary lymphoedema) and cancer patients. While there are other clinics in South West London where cancer patients and lymphoedema are treated, the St. George's service also meets the needs of patients with non-cancer lymphoedema. The St. George's service is a specialist service and receives referrals nationally. The Trust is also one of the few places where academic and epidemiological work is progressing related to lymphoedema. This work includes a recent local study run by the Lymphoedema Epidemiology Project Group.

Asian Women

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what statistics he collates on the rates of depression, self-harm and suicide amongst Asian women; and what services and resources have been made available to tackle this issue in the last three years. [42407]

Jacqui Smith: No national statistics are routinely collected centrally on suicide or self-harm of Asian women.

We are developing a national suicide prevention strategy, which we will launch for public consultation in spring 2002. The strategy will consider the commissioning of further research into suicides amongst Asian women. We will also be looking at this issue further in the Black and Ethnic Minority Mental Health Strategy being developed this year.

Rates of depression in people from black and minority ethnic groups are being established through a national survey of ethnic minority psychiatric illness rates in the community (EMPIRIC). The results of this survey will be published in April 2002.

The Department commissioned a study from the Institute of Psychiatry on "Deliberate self-harm in Asian women: An intervention study". The findings of which have been fed into information leaflets.

There are several projects in England addressing suicide and self-harm amongst Asian women, such as the Newham Asian Women's Project highlighted in the national Service Framework for Mental Health.

The Department has also provided the FPA with funding through the Section 64 scheme for their "JINNA" Sexuality and Self-harm project to identify the causes and develop effective preventative interventions for suicide and self-harm among young Asian women.

Mental Health

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent Government research (a) has been planned and (b) has been conducted into (i) existing mental health services, (ii) take up of existing mental health services by members of Asian, black and ethnic minority communities in the UK and (iii) the future of mental health services. [42394]

Jacqui Smith: The Department has undertaken a number of exercises to inform its future research programme in mental health, in particular to support the National Service Framework (NSF) in mental health. A "Scoping Review of the Effectiveness of Mental Health Services" was conducted by the Centre for Reviews and Dissemination at York University. A thematic review of the National Health Service Research and Development funded mental health research in relation to the NSF for Mental Health was undertaken by the Institute of Psychiatry. The outputs from these reviews will be considered alongside the Strategic Review of NHS R&D on mental health, which is looking at current research in the NHS on this area, to determine future research priorities in mental health.

Further work on mental health services is being commissioned and includes: literature reviews and primary research concerning the effectiveness of post qualification mental health training; occupational outcomes (social inclusion); self help interventions; early intervention in psychosis; services for women; assertive outreach (particularly for black and ethnic minority groups); suicide prevention; models of services to support carers; rehabilitation of people with severe personality disorder and delivery of forensic services.

Future research priorities include: evaluation of alternative models for the introduction of primary care mental health workers; suicide prevention strategy; evidence based management of people with dual diagnosis; development of prison mental health services and a randomised controlled trial for effective management of sex offenders.

Ongoing research on mental health services funded via the Department's Policy Research Programme includes:

processes of disengagement with assertive outreach for African-Caribbean and white British men—St. Bartholomew's and the London School of Medicine and Dentistry;

National Survey of Links between Social Services and Child and Adolescent Mental Health Services—University of Manchester;

a randomised controlled trial to detect benefit from training practice nurses in detection and management of psychiatric morbidity—Institute of Psychiatry (Kings College, London); expert topic papers in mental health (women only)—University of Birmingham; expert topic paper in mental health: early intervention—Victoria University, Manchester; expert topic papers in mental health: Self-help Interventions—University of Bristol; child and adolescent mental health services in primary care—University of Manchester;

inequalities in mental health: a systematic review—University of Cambridge; pathways into care for the adult mentally ill from various ethnic communities—Institute of Psychiatry (Kings College London); development of culturally appropriate child mental health services: perceptions and use of services'—United Medical and Dental School (Kings College London).

The Department's Health Technology Assessment and Service Delivery and Organisation Programmes are also funding a number of projects in mental health, including:

cost utility of the latest anti-psychotics in severe schizophrenia (CUtLASS): a multi-centre, randomised controlled trial; long-term outcome of cognitive behaviour therapy clinical trials in central Scotland;

a randomised controlled trial to compare the cost-effectiveness of trycyclic antidepressants, selective serotonin re-uptake inhibitors (SSRIs) and lofepramine; measurement of health related quality of life in people with dementia: the development of a new instrument responsive to change and an evaluation of current methodology;

randomised trial of fluoxetine and cognitive behavioural therapy versus fluoxetine alone in adolescents with persistent major depression; cognitive behavioural therapy in chronic fatigue syndrome: a randomised controlled trial of an outpatient group programme;

a randomised controlled multi-centre treatment trial of adolescent anorexia nervosa, including assessment of cost effectiveness and patient acceptability; problem solving by community psychiatric nurses (CPNs) for anxiety, depression and life difficulties among general practice patients;

clinical effectiveness and cost of repetitive transcranial magnetic stimulation versus ECT in severe depression: a multi centre randomised controlled trial and economic analysis;

the clinical effectiveness and cost effectiveness of SSRIs in the treatment of sex offenders;

the clinical effectiveness and cost effectiveness of electro-convulsive therapy; services to support carers for people with mental health problems; effectiveness of counselling, cognitive behavioural therapy and GP care for depression in general practice;

a randomised controlled trial to evaluate the efficacy and cost effectiveness of counselling with patients with chronic depression and anxiety;

a systematic review of randomised and non-randomised intervention studies to examine which of the brief psychological treatments used in primary care lead to improved outcomes; and continuity of care for people with severe mental illness whose needs span primary, secondary and social care.

In July 2001 the National Institute for Mental Health in England (NIMHE) was launched and presents a unique opportunity to reshape services and practice in line with the evidence base. The Institute will bring together the research, development and dissemination functions of the full range of mental health services. NIMHE will be concerned with primary, specialist and tertiary care organisations in both health and social care and recognise the need to integrate service development and mental health legislation. One of the standing programmes of NIMHE will be a mental health research network designed to increase the number of multi-centre research projects in mental health.

The main Government agency for research into the causes of and treatments for disease is the Medical Research Council (MRC) which receives its funding via the Department of Trade and Industry. The MRC are funding a number of research projects looking at mental health services and one project looking specifically at people of Asian origin.

Yellow Card Scheme

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what support his Department has given to Mind in the promotion, operation and analysis of its yellow card scheme. [42393]

Ms Blears: In 1997, the Medicines Control Agency (MCA) performed a detailed analysis of reports received through the Mind patient reporting scheme. Expert advice on this analysis was sought from the Committee on Safety of Medicines. No new drug safety signals were identified, although the results highlighted that patients considered that insufficient information was available to them about their medicines. There was an ongoing programme at that time to ensure that Patient Information Leaflets were authorised for all products and this programme was completed by January 1999.

In March 2001 officials at the MCA met with representatives from Mind to discuss the relaunch of their reporting scheme. MCA will be reviewing the results of Mind's analysis of the reports received through this scheme.

NICE

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many drugs are being assessed by the National Institute for Clinical Excellence; what the timescale is for publishing these assessments; and if he will make a statement. [41599]

Ms Blears: The National Institute for Clinical Excellence (NICE) has completed 32 technology appraisals (covering drugs, devices and treatments) and NICE has a further 43 technology appraisals on its work programme. Where NICE has established timescales for individual appraisals, details are given on its website at www.nice.nhs.uk.

Consultants

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what his estimate is of the expenditure on external consultants for each year since 1997, in 2001 prices, for his Department and its agencies; and what the quantified annual cost savings are which such expenditure has resulted in. [41701]

Ms Blears: Expenditure by the Department and its Agencies on external consultants, for each year since 1997 and at 2001 prices, is shown in the table.

	FY 1997–98 £ million	FY 1998–99 £ million	FY 1999–2000 £ million	FY 2000–01 £ million	FY 2001–02 £ million*
Department	12.694	7.332	8.132	6.531	4.400
Agencies	1.634	1.575	3.190	4.047	0.411

* Reported spend as of February 2002, based on information currently available.

The Department does not centrally report or record the quantified annual cost savings resulting from expenditure on consultants therefore the final part of this question could only be answered at disproportionate cost.

Medical Negligence

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what his estimate is of the outstanding liabilities of the NHS in respect of medical negligence claims. [41703]

Ms Blears: According to the National Audit Office in their report entitled "Handling Clinical Negligence Claims in England", which was published on 3 May 2001, it was estimated that a total of £3.9 billion represents the outstanding liabilities of the NHS for clinical negligence claims.

This figure includes £2.6 billion for all outstanding claims if they were settled straight away, and £1.3 billion for all incidents that have been incurred but not reported.

Women's Hospitals

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received concerning the proposals to re-locate the maternity services located at Aintree University Hospital to the Liverpool Women's Hospital; and if he will list them. [41407]

Yvette Cooper: Ministers have received one letter in October 2001 about maternity services in Liverpool and Sefton from another hon. Member, as well as this representation from my hon. Friend.

Variant-CJD

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he has taken to produce a new risk model to predict the number of potential exposures to v-CJD through poor decontamination practice before 2001; and if he will publicise the result using this model. [41806]

Yvette Cooper: "Risk Assessment for transmission of vCJD via Surgical Instruments: A Modelling Approach and Numerical Scenarios", published by the Department on 16 March 2001, set out a methodology for assessing the risk of transmission of vCJD through the re-use of surgical instruments. A new risk assessment model is unnecessary since there is no significantly new scientific evidence to warrant revising the structure or assumptions of the current model.

Because of the multiple uncertainties surrounding this issue, it was not considered feasible to make a straightforward prediction of potential secondary infections from surgery. The Risk Assessment therefore did not predict the scale of any secondary epidemic of vCJD, instead, it developed different scenarios to address the various uncertainties—including the standard of decontamination—and gaps in our knowledge about vCJD.

The advice we had from Spongiform Encephalopathy Advisory Committee was that good decontamination is key in reducing the risk of person to person transmission of vCJD via surgical instruments. This was confirmed by the Risk Assessment. As a result of the work we did last year on improving decontamination, all NHS hospitals in England have access to decontamination services of an acceptable standard.

Pre-School Services

Mrs. Ellman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much funding has been made available to provide services for under-fives in Liverpool in each year since 1997. [41123]

Jacqui Smith: Data on funding to provide services specifically for children under 5 who are resident in Liverpool is not available. However, the following table provides details of total recurrent contract income and additional cash increases received over the last four years by the Royal Liverpool Children's NHS Trust from Liverpool Health Authority for the care and treatment of the authority's resident child population. Approximately 30 per cent of the child population in Liverpool are under 5 years old. The figures exclude paediatric intensive care and special assistance funding.

	Total Recurrent Contract	Recurrent Increase	Non-Recurrent Increase	Total Increase
1998–99	21,587,170	731,357	817,360	1,548,717
1999–2000	23,157,553	1,570,383	948,743	2,519,126
2000–01	24,885,218	1,727,665	572,609	2,300,274
2001–02	27,166,523	2,281,305	1,584,990	3,866,295

Teenage Magazines

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what contact his Department has had with the publishers of magazines aimed at teenagers in the past two years. [40876]

Ms Blears: Routine contacts between press and magazines are not recorded centrally by the Department's press office.

In the past two years my Department has worked in partnership with teenage magazines to highlight issues around teenage pregnancy and sexually transmitted infections and provide information about where young people may access further information and professional advice. Advertising has been placed in these magazines to enable those young people who are sexually active to have easy access to high quality contraceptive advice and to provide young people with information and advice to enable them to develop the skills to resist peer pressure to have early sex.

Last autumn, an agency contracted by the Department also contacted journalists at magazines aimed at teenagers to generate coverage for "Smokescreen", the Department's peer to peer youth tobacco education project.

In January, February and March 2001, as part of a campaign designed to raise awareness of the dangers of smoking during pregnancy amongst 16–24 year olds, advertising was placed in magazines aimed at a teenage audience.

Medical Practices Committee

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what advice his Department issues to health authorities and primary care trusts on the arrangements to take effect after the abolition of the Medical Practices Committee on 31 March. [37940]

Mr. Hutton: Advice was issued to Primary Care Trusts and other interested parties on 13 March 2002.

Dental Services

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what criteria are used to decide whether to open dental access centres. [45464]

Ms Blears [holding answer 25 March 2002]: Dental access centres (DACs) are pilot schemes established as part of the Personal Dental Services initiative. They provide access to National Health Service dentistry in areas where other sources of treatment do not meet demand. The location of DACs was determined by combining several sources of information on availability and access problems: statistical data, in particular registration figures and expenditure changes; self reporting by health authorities; and the local knowledge of regional offices.

Orthodontists

Gillian Merron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what plans he has to tackle shortage of orthodontists in (a) Lincolnshire and (b) England; [42536]

(2) what the shortfall of NHS orthodontists is in (a) Lincolnshire and (b) England. [42535]

Ms Blears: The number of orthodontists and the amount of orthodontic work in the General Dental Service has increased significantly since 1996–97 in both Lincolnshire and England as a whole. Additional clinics have been set up in Lincolnshire and by the end of March 2002, it is envisaged that there will be no over 26-week waits for orthodontic appointments in Lincolnshire. An additional consultant orthodontist post has been funded and concerted efforts are being made to recruit to this post.

The number of principal dentists performing 100 or more orthodontic claims a year in (a) Lincolnshire Health Authority (HA) and (b) England is shown in the table for the years 1996–97 and 2000–01 together with the number per 100,000 population.

The table also shows the number of orthodontic appliance claims in 1996–97 and 2000–01. These went up by 28 per cent. for Lincolnshire HA during the period shown, compared to an increase of 14 per cent. for England.

General Dental Service: Number of orthodontists, orthodontists per 100,000 population and total number of orthodontic appliance claims in 1996–97 and 2000–01

	(a) Lincolnshire	(b) England[2]
Number of orthodontists
1996–97	7	679
2000–01	10	869
Number of orthodontists[1] per 100,000 population[3]
1996–97	1.1	1.4
2000–01	1.6	1.7
Number of orthodontic appliance claims
1996–97	1,200	217,000
2000–01	1,600	247,100

[1] An orthodontist is defined as a principal dentist who submitted one hundred or more orthodontic claims in a year.

[2] Some dentists have contracts in more than one Health Authority. These dentists have been counted only once, in the HA which they hold their main contract.

[3] ONS 1996 and 2000 mid year population estimates based on the 1991 census.

NHS Direct

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what discussions he has had with GP bodies about the safety of advice offered by NHS Direct; [42352]

(2) what representations he has received from general practitioners expressing concern about the standard of advice offered by NHS Direct; [42353]

(3) what plans he has to achieve greater co-operation between NHS Direct and general practitioners. [42354]

Ms Blears [holding answer 11 March 2002]: During the implementation of NHS Direct, the Department had regular meetings with general practitioners bodies, including the General Practitioners Committee of the British Medical Association and the National Association of GP Co-operatives, to discuss ways in which NHS Direct and GPs could work collaboratively to improve patient care. Bodies representing GPs are also represented on the NHS Clinical Assessment System Clinical Reference Group, a national group that ensures the system used by NHS Direct is safe and reflects evidence-based best practice.

Independent evaluation by the National Audit Office and Sheffield University found evidence that NHS Direct has a good safety record, is as safe as other entry points into the NHS, and that serious adverse clinical outcomes associated with the service are likely to be rare.

Cancer

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many patients of (a) Brighton Health Care NHS Trust and (b) Worthing and Southlands NHS Trust have received treatment for cancer of the (i) breast, (ii) uterus, (iii) cervix, (iv) bladder, (v) prostate, (vi) non Hodgkin's lymphoma, (vii) bowel, (viii) all leukaemias, (ix) ovary, (x) stomach, (xi) lung, (xii) pancreas, (xiii) oesophagus and (xiv) other cancers in each of the last five years; and how many patients are currently awaiting these operations; [42271]

(2) how many patients are awaiting referrals to consultants in the oncology department in the Brighton Health Care NHS Trust. [42277]

Ms Blears [holding answer 11 March 2002]: Information on the number of patients awaiting referral to Brighton Health Care NHS Trust and the number awaiting operations is not collected centrally. The information collected centrally on cancer waiting times at Brighton Health Care NHS Trust and Worthing and Southlands Hospitals NHS Trust has been placed in the Library.

Patient Complaints

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what assessment has been made about the cost to (a) individual NHS trusts and (b) his Department of requiring trusts to compile data about the ethnicity of patients making complaints; and how many staff are involved; [42210]

(2) what proportion of patients requested to give details about their ethnicity subsequent to making a complaint about treatment by an NHS trust have returned their survey form having ticked the decline to state box; [42206]

(3) which NHS trusts have been instructed to compile data about the ethnicity of patients making complaints; [42209]

(4) if he proposes to publish the findings of his Department's instructions to NHS trusts to compile data regarding the ethnicity of patients making complaints; [42204]

(5) what the purpose is of the instructions from his Department to NHS trusts requiring complaint departments to compile data about the ethnicity of persons making a complaint since April 2001; [42208]

(6) how he proposes to use the data collected from NHS trusts regarding the ethnicity of patients making complaints. [42205]

Ms Blears [holding answer 11 March 2002]: The cost of the implementation of ethnic category data has only been estimated in terms of staff-days. It is estimated that up to two staff-days will be needed in each health authority and trust to extract the information from their existing systems in order to complete the two returns KO41A and B. In addition, it is expected that each Primary Care Trust will require up to two staff-days in total to complete the new KO41C central return.

The collection of ethnic category data on written complaints will be valuable in gauging fair and equal access to health care across ethnic groups. Where monitoring shows unequal outcomes between different minority ethnic groups, public authorities will be required to take action to promote greater equality and to prevent discrimination whether direct or indirect. In the longer term, data collected on written complaints will be used to inform service improvements as well as give practice managers and the service as a whole more qualitative information around access to health care services.

All trusts and health authorities have been asked to complete ethnic category details of complainants and staff complained against for the first time in the 2001–02 annual NHS Complaints Monitoring Collection.

The Department publishes the results of its annual complaints monitoring exercise every year in "Handling complaints: monitoring the NHS complaints procedures". The 2001–02 data, which will include ethnic data, should be published in late autumn 2002.

Stolen Equipment

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 7 February 2002, Official Report, columns 1160–64W, on stolen equipment, what criminal proceedings have been undertaken for cases of theft against his Department, stating in each case (a) whether the proceedings (i) led to a criminal conviction and (ii) were unsuccessful, (b) the cost incurred by his Department in pursuing a conviction and (c) the value of items recovered; and if he will make a statement. [41508]

Ms Blears [holding answer 18 March 2002]: All losses are investigated by the Department and stolen equipment has been recovered on some occasions to the value of about £5,000. Losses over £500 are reported to the police. It has not been possible to bring criminal proceedings in any one case mainly due to a lack of evidence. We have progressively put in place a series of measures to combat our losses from both organised and opportunistic theft. We take seriously the theft and loss of our assets. We recognise the importance of safeguarding our equipment both inside and outside the office.

Special Advisers

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many special advisers were employed by him (a) between 1 May and 31 December 1997 and (b) in each year from 1998 to 2001 inclusive; and what the total amount spent on special advisers by the Department was in each of those years. [41251]

Ms Blears: The information requested is shown in the tables.

Year	Numbers	Cost (£)
1997–98	2	see note[1]

Year	Numbers	Cost (£)
1998–99	2	see note[1]
1999–2000	2	see note[1]
2000–01	2	see note[1]

[1] Details of costs for Special Advisors within the individual departments are not given, in order to protect the privacy of the small number of individuals concerned.

Press Office

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many staff in his Department's press office have received (a) termination and (b) redundancy payments in each of the last four years. [41078]

Ms Blears: No staff in the Department of Health Press Office have received (a) termination and (b) redundancy payments in each of the last four years.

Press and Public Relations

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the annual budget for communications activities, including press, public relations, marketing and internal communications, was for his Department for each financial year from 1997–98 to 2001–02. [39916]

Ms Blears: Expenditure on Communications activities comes under two headings as shown in the table below:

£000

Year	Running costs	Programme
1997–98	4,661	14,954
1998–99	4,806	21,810
1999–2000[1]	6,814	28,995
2000–01[2]	7,969	45,746
2001–02[3]	8,582	49,737

[1] The Department's Press and Publicity Division and NHS Communication Unit amalgamated on 1 April 1999.

[2] The Department took on direct control for a number of public Health Campaigns with the closure of the Health Education Authority on 3 March 2000.

[3] 2001–02 figures are latest estimates.

Correspondence

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he will reply to the letter of 9 January from the hon. Member for Fareham, concerning Claire Bayliss. [45803]

Ms Blears: A reply was sent on 27 March.

Free Prescriptions

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what estimate he has made of the number of under-25 year olds residing in England receiving free prescriptions in Wales since 1 April 2001; [41621]

(2) what assessment he has made of the savings made by his Department since 1 April 2001 in relation to under-25 year olds residing in England receiving free prescriptions in Wales. [41622]

Ms Blears [holding answer 12 March 2002]: Information about cross-border dispensing does not include information about the age of individual patients. The information available about cross-border dispensing is in the table.

Endometriosis

Helen Southworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when national standards will be set for the treatment of endometriosis. [42670]

Yvette Cooper: We have no plans to produce national standards for endometriosis. The Royal College of Obstetricians and Gynaecologists has produced clinical guidelines on "The Investigation and Management of Endometriosis". These bring together the latest evidence-based knowledge and best practice on the diagnosis and treatment of endometriosis, and examine options for treatment in the light of the presenting symptoms. The guidelines have been distributed to all of the Royal College's Fellows and Members.

Helen Southworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what his estimate is of the number of women with endometriosis in (a) Warrington, South and (b) North Cheshire; and how many women have been diagnosed with endometriosis in those areas in the last five years. [42669]

Yvette Cooper: The information requested is not available centrally in the form requested. However, the table shows the number of consultant episodes for women resident in North Cheshire Health Authority area who were admitted to hospital with endometriosis recorded as their primary diagnosis, for each of the past five years:

	Number
1996–97	129
1997–98	127
1998–99	128
1999–2000	123
2000–01	136

Drug Abuse Services

Gillian Merron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the level of health authority spending was, per 1,000 of the population, on drug abuse services in (a) Lincolnshire Health Authority and (b) other health authorities in England in the last three years. [42550]

Ms Blears: The level of health authority spending in the last three years in Lincolnshire was, per 1,000 of the population:

Health Authority	Spending on drug abuse services per 1,000 of population 2001–02	2000–01	1999–2000
Lincolnshire	3,000	2,500	1,750

The following tables provide information allocations to Lincolnshire Health Authority and other Health Authorities in England per 1,000 population in relation to drug treatment services. Information about expenditure by Health Authorities against these allocations is not collected centrally.

Notes:

1. Figures for 2000–01 are not comparable with those for later years which are for pooled Department of Health and Home Office funding.
2. N/A denotes data not available due to Health Authority merge.

Gillian Merron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to ensure equal access to treatment and support for drug abusers in England. [42549]

Ms Blears: The National Treatment Agency for Substance Misuse (NTA) is promoting models of service delivery, which will improve the quality of treatment and accessibility to treatment for everyone who wants treatment, irrespective of their background. This will ensure effective access to all services, particularly substitute prescribing and residential rehabilitation services. The NTA are working towards achieving the national target of:

"Increasing the participation of problem drug users in drug treatment programme by 55 per cent. by 2004, 66 per cent. by 2005 and 100 per cent. by 2008."

Gillian Merron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to ensure that drug abusers can access help from general practitioners when necessary. [42548]

Ms Blears: Drug misusers are entitled to access general practitioners (GPs) in the same way that any other member of the population is.

I would refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave her today for information on the specific work that the Department is funding in order to equip GPs with the specialist skills required when working with drug misusers.

Gillian Merron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what investigations he has made into the number of drug abusers refused treatment by general practitioners; and if he will make a statement. [42547]

Ms Blears: Information is not available on the numbers of drug misusers who have been refused treatment by general practitioners (GPs).

However, we do recognise that GPs have a crucial role to play in our overall strategy of increasing the availability of treatment to drug users. The Department made available £1.8 million to the Royal College of General Practitioners for the development and implementation of an accredited training programme to give GPs the skills they need when working with drug misusers. Since its launch in October 2001 more than 400 GPs have taken part in the programme.

Accountancy Contracts

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the contracts agreed by his Department with the five largest accountancy firms since May 1997; and what was the total value of contracts with each. [42102]

Ms Blears: The Department does not centrally hold a record of individual contracts. However our financial records, for the period April 1997 to date, show the Department (excluding Agencies) made highest payments for all professional services (including consultancy and accountancy services) to the following five companies and in the amounts shown:

	FY 1997–98 Value £000	FY 1998–99 Value £000	FY 1999–2000 Value £000	FY 2000–01 Value £000	FY 2001–02 Value £000

Flexible Working

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many and what proportion of the staff of his Department are (a) job sharing, (b) term working and (c) engaged in another form of flexible working. [42422]

Ms Blears: Employees working on job-share contracts or term-working are recorded as "part-time" workers. It is therefore not possible to identify the number of staff employed specifically on a job-share/term working contract. The Department currently has 496 staff (9.5 per cent.) working part time.

As other forms of flexible working are arranged locally between staff and their managers, we do not centrally record this information.

Staff Numbers

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many staff have been employed by his Department in each of the last 10 years. [42469]

Ms Blears: I refer the hon. Member to the central answer provided by my right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister.

Energy Costs

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on energy costs incurred by his Department in each of the last 10 years. [42449]

Ms Blears: The hon. Member is referred to the answer provided by my right hon. Friend the Minister for State at the Department of Environment Food and Rural Affairs, the Member for Cardiff South and Penarth (Alun Michael) on 19 March 2002, Official Report, column 268W, which includes information on energy costs incurred by the Department of Health.

Job Sharing

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the extent of job sharing in his Department. [41040]

Ms Blears: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for Twickenham (Mr. Cable) on 28 February 2002.

Gender Pay Gap

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the extent of the gender pay gap amongst staff in his Department. [40996]

Ms Blears: We are committed to review our pay systems in response to the Equal Opportunities Commission (EOC) Task Force "Just Pay" report, in which the Government has committed departments and agencies to review their pay systems by April 2003 and prepare action plans to close any equal pay gaps.

Relocation Expenses

Mr. Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what his policy is on the payment of relocation expenses to staff in his Department. [41022]

Ms Blears: Payment of relocation expenses is made to staff when their transfer to another location is in the interests of the Department, for example, a compulsory transfer or bulk transfer of work or exceptionally for new recruits on appointment.

Official Visits

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will list the official visits to (a) Paris and (b) Brussels made by each Minister in his Department in 2001 and the mode of travel used; and what guidance is provided to Ministers in his Department on the choice of mode of travel for such visits; [38150]

(2) if he will list the official visits within the UK outside London made by each Minister in his Department in 2001, giving for each (a) the origin and destination and (b) the mode of travel used; and what guidance is provided to Ministers in his Department on choice of mode of travel for official visits. [38186]

Ms Blears: All travel is undertaken fully in accordance with the rules set out in the Ministerial Code and Travel by Ministers, copies of which are available in the Library.

The additional detailed information requested in respect of UK travel is not held centrally and could only be provided at disproportionate cost.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Policing Costs (Commonwealth Games)

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussions he has had with the Greater Manchester Police in respect of the policing costs of the 2002 Commonwealth Games; what estimate he has made of the costs of (a) policing and (b) other security measures related to the Commonwealth

Games; and what proposals he has made to ensure that the policing and other security costs are appropriately funded. [27126]

Mr. Denham: I have had discussions with the Chief Constable of Greater Manchester Police (David Wilmot) about the policing costs of the games. On 30 January 2002, I announced that my right hon. Friend, the Home Secretary (Mr. Blunkett) had approved a special grant of £3 million. We have asked officials with Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Constabulary to look closely at the total additional costs estimated by the Chief Constable. On the basis of their further assessment we will consider whether any further grant would be justified.

Other security costs fall to the organisers of the Commonwealth Games, who are confident that they can be met from existing budgets.

Class A Drugs

Mr. Hawkins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent analysis his Department has made of the number of offenders whose offences were related to their addiction to Class A drugs who had previously taken cannabis. [44976]

Mr. Bob Ainsworth [holding answer 21 March 2002]: On 23 October last year, my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary (Mr. Blunkett) asked the Advisory Council on the Misuse of Drugs to review the scientific literature on cannabis, including the so-called "gateway theory". Their analysis of this theory can be found in section 4.6 of their Report, "The classification of cannabis under the Misuse of Drugs Act 1971", which was published on 14 March 2002. The Report says that it is not possible to state, with certainty, whether or not cannabis use predisposes users to dependence on Class A drugs. Nevertheless, the risks (if any) are small and less than those associated with the use of tobacco or alcohol.

There is a link between Class A drugs and crime. Preliminary findings from the drug testing programme, currently being piloted in Staffordshire, Nottingham and Hackney, show that 55 per cent. of offenders arrested for trigger offences (property crime, robbery and Class A drugs offences) tested positive for heroin and/or cocaine (including crack cocaine). The number who previously used cannabis is not known.

Correspondence

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when his Department intends to reply to the letter of 6 December 2001 from the hon. Member for Aylesbury about case reference B 1087668. [45143]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 21 March 2002]: I wrote to the hon. Member on 26 March 2002. I am sorry for the delay in replying.

Visas (Slovakia)

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will remove the visa requirement for residents visiting the UK from Slovakia. [45147]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 21 March 2002]: I have no plans at present to lift the visa requirement for Slovakian nationals.

Rami Mehsen

Mr. Colman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will make a decision on the case of Mr. Rami Mehsen (ref. GAT/37568), a constituent of the hon. Member for Putney. [45261]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 25 March 2002]: I wrote to my hon. Friend on 26 March 2002 about this matter.

Human Rights Act Compliance

Mr. Woodward: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what training has been provided by the Government to assist (a) charitable organisations and (b) Citizens Advice Bureaux in ensuring that their activities comply with the Human Rights Act 1998. [45385]

Angela Eagle [holding answer 25 March 2002]: No training has been provided by the Home Office to assist (a) charitable organisations and (b) Citizens Advice Bureaux (CAB) with the Human Rights Act 1998.

Fair Trade

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 16 November 2001, Official Report, column 970W, on fair trade goods, if he will review and increase the amount of fairly traded goods purchased by her Department during Fair Trade Fortnight. [35922]

Angela Eagle: We fully support ethical trading in mainstream business and fair trade products will be purchased where they meet the criteria on Procurement of Goods and Services.

The Home Department will be raising awareness of fair trade products through:

publishing an article in the department's purchasing periodical "Purchasing Matters"; holding a purchasing symposium on fair trade on 15 April 2002.

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what fairly traded products, other than tea and coffee, have been purchased by his Department in each of the last five years; and what was their value. [17563]

Angela Eagle: The Home Department is not aware of any other fairly traded products purchased in the past five years. The department fully supports ethical trading in mainstream business and Fair Trade products will be purchased where they meet the criteria of value for money principles, which includes quality, fitness for purpose and delivery against price.

The Home Office will be publishing an article on fair trade in the next edition of "Purchasing Matters", an internal periodical for all procurement staff which will help raise awareness of fair trade products. In addition the Home Office will be holding a purchasing symposium on the issue of Fair Trade in April 2002. I hope these measures will enable greater purchasing of fair trade products.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Lazarowicz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what procedures are in place to take account, when deciding asylum claims, of (a) an applicant's treatment in detention abroad and (b) medical evidence of torture; and in what proportion of cases such information is actively sought at interview by interviewing officers. [44254]

Angela Eagle: All information provided by an asylum applicant is fully considered in light of the known country situation in the country from which the applicant is claiming asylum. Any claim to have been maltreated whilst in detention abroad is fully considered by the caseworker. Caseworkers have access to various sources of information, including country assessments prepared by the Country Information and Policy Unit (CIPU) of the Home Office which often provide information on the prison conditions in a particular country. CIPU have access to a wide variety of further information and have links with the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, as well as other organisations who are able to assist with specific requests.

If, during the course of an interview or in other written representations, an applicant claims to have been tortured, caseworkers ask the applicant whether a medical examination has taken place. If so, the applicant is asked to submit a copy of the report. Where the applicant has raised torture and the caseworker feels it would be useful, the applicant may be invited to submit a medical report.

However, it is for the applicant to decide whether they wish to undertake a medical examination to establish that torture has taken place. The Immigration and Nationality Directorate does not insist that a medical report is submitted when torture has been alleged. Not all forms of torture result in physical scars or injuries which could be identified during a medical examination.

Any medical report provided is fully considered in the light of the country situation and alongside any other information provided by the applicant. Information on the number of medical reports sought is not routinely collected.

Mr. Lazarowicz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if, when an applicant for asylum has provided evidence of torture, he will ensure that any letter of refusal states whether the evidence has been accepted. [44256]

Angela Eagle: The Immigration and Nationality Directorate's Asylum Policy Instructions state that where a caseworker has decided to refuse an application for which a medical report has been submitted, the Reasons for Refusal Letter (RFRL) should explain how the medical report has been considered, and whether this evidence has been accepted or not.

Any other evidence of torture which might be provided by the applicant would be considered in accordance with guidance issued to caseworkers which states that, following the Court of Appeal case of Karanakaran, caseworkers are generally expected to set out in any RFRL what they accept as true, what they reject as untrue and what elements of a persons claim they are uncertain about.

These instructions were issued in July 2001 and are available on the Home Office Immigration and Nationality Directorate website.

Mr. Malins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the average time taken from application to the final decision for asylum applications has been in the last 12 months for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [44729]

Angela Eagle: The average time between application and initial decision was 13 months for initial decisions made in the 12 months to December 2001, compared with 20 months for April 1997. This has been calculated using all cases for which data are available, including older cases decided as part of the reduction of the backlog, as well as new cases (see table).

Average time[1] between application and initial decision, for cases decided in 2001

	Average time in months[2]	Number of cases[2,3]
All Applications	13	119,190 of which
Application pre 1996[4]	87	1,835
Application 1996	59	1,685
Application 1997	46	3,015
Application 1998	32	9,975
Application 1999	21	21,715
Application 2000	9	32,335
Application 2001	2	48,630

[1] Calculated using all available data from the date the application is lodged to the date of the initial decision.

[2] These data are still subject to revision following quality checking.

[3] Figures are provisional and rounded to the nearest five. The number of cases quoted differs from published figures due to uncertainty concerning date of application in a small minority of cases.

[4] Cases decided as part of the backlog clearance exercise, as part of measures outlined in the July 1998 White Paper entitled "Fairer, Faster and Firmer—A Modern Approach to Immigration and Asylum".

Information on final decisions is not readily available and would only be obtained by examination of individual case files to obtain information on the outcomes of inital decisions, of subsequent appeals to the Immigration Appellate Authority and the Tribunal, and of cases which have been reconsidered, which would incur disproportionate cost.

Dr. Evan Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to increase the numbers of asylum-seeking families and children in detention; and if he will make a statement. [45476]

Angela Eagle: Our White Paper "Secure Borders, Safe Haven" made it clear that there are occasions when it is necessary to hold families, including those with children, in removal centres. As part of our expansion programme for removal centres we shall consider what additional provision for family accommodation might be needed. No decisions have been taken as yet.

Mr. Leigh: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussions he has had with the Department of Transport, Local Government and the Regions about the suitability of siting an Accommodation Centre on the A631. [44640]

Angela Eagle: We have had no discussions with the Department of Transport, Local Government and the Regions about the suitability of any potential accommodation centre sites. Site specific issues are local issues which we will take into account as part of the planning process. At every site a range of factors, including transport links, will be taken into account before final decisions are made.

Mr. Leigh: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what consultations took place with the relevant local authorities, the Intervention Board the Department for Environment Food and Rural Affairs and the Ministry of Defence before the announcement that Hemswell Cliff was a proposed site for an Asylum Seekers Accommodation Centre. [44650]

Angela Eagle: No consultation took place with these bodies prior to the announcement of the potential sites for trial Accommodation Centres. A range of factors, including environmental, health and safety issues, will be taken into account at every site before final decisions are made.

Yarl's Wood

Alistair Burt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if the Riot Act 1881 was read at Yarl's Wood Remand Centre on the evening of 14 February. [38780]

Angela Eagle: I understand that it was not read.

INDEX TO THE

PARLIAMENTARY DEBATES

OFFICIAL REPORT

SIXTH SERIES — VOLUME 382

SESSION 2001–2002

18th March—3rd April 2002

Printed indexes to Hansard

The volume index is one of three printed indexes to Commons Hansard produced from the House of Commons Library's Parliamentary On-Line Indexing Service (POLIS). It contains references to material in the bound volumes of Hansard. The other indexes produced are:

- The fortnightly index to Hansard. This covers the same date range as the volume index but references are to the column numbering in the daily parts and weekly edition of Hansard.
- The sessional index to Hansard. This contains references to material in the bound volumes for a whole session.

Indexes on the Parliamentary website

Fortnightly, volume and sessional indexes covering material from the beginning of the 1999/2000 session will also appear on the Parliamentary website at http://www.parliament.uk with links to the full text of Hansard.

SCOPE

The indexes include entries covering:

- The content of all material recorded in Hansard, including debates, procedural motions and questions.
- The names of all Members contributing to the Parliamentary business recorded in Hansard.
- The names of some types of Parliamentary business whenever they occur in Hansard. These are 'Ministerial statements', 'Business statements', 'Opposition days' and 'Estimates days'.

ARRANGEMENT

- All headings are in one word-by-word alphabetical sequence, with Members' contribution entries distinguished from other entries by italics.
- Where a Member contributes to Parliamentary business and is the subject of Parliamentary business there are separate contribution and subject entries, the subject entry coming first.
- Entries beginning 'Mac' and 'Mc' are sorted in one sequence as 'Mac'.
- 'St', when abbreviated for Saint, is filed as 'Saint'.
- Numbers are filed as if spelt out, e.g. '10 Downing Street' as if 'Ten Downing Street'.

HEADINGS

Choice of headings

- Specificity—Entries summarise the overall content of a debate or question as specifically as the various POLIS thesauruses allow. For example, Education, Higher education, Universities or the name of a particular university is used depending on the breadth of the item.
- Name headings—Specific entries are included for the names of people, places, institutions, organisations, committees, programmes, initiatives, publications and legislation when these constitute the overall subject of an item.
- Organisations and subjects—Organisation entries are preferred for material about the general performance, administration and staffing of an organisation (for example, United Kingdom Passports Agency, Standards). Subject entries are preferred for what organisations do as part of their duties (for example, Passports, Fees and charges).

Geographical coverage

- Subject headings—Subject headings are assumed to refer to the whole of England, Great Britain or the United Kingdom unless otherwise stated.
- Scotland, Northern Ireland and Wales—Material relating to the whole of Scotland, Northern Ireland and Wales is indexed under these headings.
- Places within the UK—Material about specific towns, areas and institutions is entered under the name of the specific town, area or institution.
- Foreign countries—Most material relating to foreign countries is collected under the name of that country. Some additional material may be found under the names of—groups of countries, areas within countries, geographical features, place names associated with particular issues, politicians and heads of state, international bodies, and institutions and companies operating in those countries.
- EC/EU material—General material about the European Communities and European institutions as bodies is entered under 'European Communities' and 'EC institutions'. Organisational material about specific communities and institutions is entered under the name of the body, for example 'European Coal and Steel Community' or 'European Parliament'. Material about what the Communities and institutions are doing or propose to do is entered under various subject headings beginning 'EC' such as 'EC environmental policy'.

Parliamentary material and business

- Material about Parliament—This is indexed under 'Parliament', the names of the two Houses, the 'Palace of Westminster' and parts of the Parliamentary estate (such as 'Portcullis House').
- Committees—Material about committees is indexed under 'Committees', types of committee (such as 'Select committees') and the names of individual committees (such as 'Home Affairs Select Committee').
- Parliamentary proceedings/procedures—Material discussing these is indexed under the specific type of proceeding (such as 'Parliamentary questions' or 'Oral questions'), procedure (such as 'Calling of Members') or issue (such as 'Unparliamentary expressions').
- Legislation—Entries for Parliamentary proceedings on bills and statutory instruments are entered under their titles. Where the lead word of the bill or statutory instrument does not provide a full or clear indication of the subject there are additional subject entries when the bill or instrument is debated. For example, debates on the 'Child Support Pensions and Social Security Bill' have entries under 'Pensions' and 'Social security benefits' as well as under the title of the Bill.
- Members' names—These are given in the form by which the Member prefers to be known.
- Speaker and Chair—Contributions by the Speaker and deputies are brought together under the heading 'Speaker and deputies'. Contributions from the chair during Committees of the Whole House are brought together under 'Chairman of Committee of the Whole House'. Significant rulings and statements (as opposed to routine comments) are indicated by the sub-heading 'Rulings and statements' in both cases.

Guidance on headings

- Cross references—'See' references indicate all the material has been entered under another heading. 'See also' references indicate that additional information may be found under another heading.
- Concept thesaurus—A copy of the subject thesaurus to POLIS, listing the concept entries used in the index, is available on the Parliamentary website. A hard copy is available from the Head of the POLIS Unit, House of Commons Library, 1 Derby Gate, London, SW1A 2DG (020 7219 6456).

REFERENCES

- References in the indexes are to columns rather than pages.
- References to debates, but not questions, are accompanied by the date of the item.
- There are separate sequences in Hansard for the material taken on the floor of the House, Westminster Hall sittings and written questions:
  - References consisting of a number by itself indicate material taken on the floor of the House.
  - References ending in 'wh' indicate Westminster Hall sittings.
  - References ending in 'w' indicate written questions.
- References under all headings except the names of Members contributing to Parliamentary business and the titles of legislation are listed in one numerical sequence irrespective of whether the material is taken on the floor of the House, is discussed at a Westminster Hall sitting or is a written question.
- References under the names of Members contributing to Parliamentary business and the titles of legislation are listed in numerical sequence under the following headings:
  - Debates etc. (which includes interventions and points of order as well as significant contributions to debates);
  - Sittings in Westminster Hall (covering all debates held as part of the Westminster Hall sittings); and
  - Questions (which includes written, oral and private notice questions).

ABBREVIATIONS

The following abbreviations are used in connection with the progress of bills:

- 1R=First reading
- 2R=Second reading
- Com=Committee stage
- Rep=Report stage
- 3R=Third reading
- res=resolution
- amendt(s)=amendment(s)
- *=matter taken formally without debate or division.
